Beware Job Seekers Better Business Bureau Alert

As the time nears for the start of construction on a second Alaska pipeline—this one for gas—advertisements have begun to appear in numerous magazines and newspapers offering employment on the project at high salaries. The Bureau has learned that many of these offers provide job seekers—for a fee of $10 to $20—useless job applications or only vague information on employment.

While it is true that the new gas pipeline is the largest privately financed project in history and, at its construction peak, may employ over 10,000 persons, anyone interested in pipeline work should be aware that the two companies handling the project are not currently accepting applications for construction jobs, and do not expect to do any significant hiring until at least 1982.

The companies, Northwest Alaskan Pipeline Company of Salt Lake City, Utah, and Fluor Engineers and Constructors based in Irvine, CA, and the execution contractors, who are not yet chosen will do most of the hiring for the pipeline work. When project contracts are awarded, announcements will be placed in the press and trade or labor organization

“Stinker” Part II

The misadventures of “Stinker” at the Borden Co. Courthouse might cause some to wonder which direction he took after he completed business in Gail. There are residents on top who suspect he headed northwest of Gail.

Being a lonely journey, one can't blame Stinker for picking up a few flowery cousins for the trip. It must have been around 10:00 p.m. when the guests arrived; weary from the days transactions and in no mood to be turned out, while seeking room and board. Smokey and the Bandit were a LITTLE aroused when the bright, beady eyed night stalkers, scuttled up. The chase and barking and BARKING was on!!

Now the head of the inn was a quiet, patient man who can take natures toll some time. It was the four, feline critters within his four walls that sent him out into the cold dark of midnight to oust the new tenants.

His problems had only just begun. The longhaired, smelly visitors had made their bed right at the front door. Man or dogs were not successful in moving these injury travelers.

Around 3:00 a.m. this gentle man was driven to violence and took his shotgun, cleared the doorway, from the inside, of his helpful little family; went outside—took aim—fired—missed—repeated task quickly and got two stinkers—and a hole in the storm door!!!

Alas, ends spring's adventure with a nice entry into our home for summer's crawling, rattling creatures!

Borden Wins Literary Meet

Overcoming the stiff competition of twenty-one other schools, Borden County captured the sweepstakes trophy at the Lubbock-Cooper U.I.L. Championship Contest.

It was the first tournament win of the year for Borden and, when the overall victor was announced, U.I.L. Sponsor, Mrs. Kay Hopper led her students in arousing cheers of joy.

Receiving points toward that astounding victory were: Glynda Burkett—first in ready writing, Heather McPhaul—first in prose reading, Ben Murphy—first in feature writing, Janna

Love—third in editorial writing, and Jennifer Wilson—third in poetry interpretation.

Others who performed admirably at this rigid contest were Mark Walker, who placed fourth in persuasive speaking; Karen Williams, who placed

Letter To Editor

Dear Editor,

I appreciate Mr. Bruce Pearson's letter about this Windfall Profit Tax so very much! But I feel so helpless. I wish something like "Paul Revere's Ride" could happen and clear it all up! Of courses, that didn't at that time either, but it DID wake people up.

If one would write to every congressman in Washington it would only be one person, doing it and would not stir anybody to do ANYTHING, I'm afraid.

Sincerely,
Mrs. J. E. Sorrells

You have surely noticed the proliferation of pieces under this byline about the excise tax on the oil and gas industry (mis-named windfall profits tax). Up until a couple of weeks ago, our reason for informing you about this bad piece of legislation was merely a vent for our frustrations. But now that we are heady with our influential impact and with the assumption that the Borden Star's readership surpasses our imagination, we are hopeful that these pieces will turn the tide and this legislation will be defeated. It will be an uphill fight tho because it is common knowledge that cattle producers are smarter than members of Congress.

And it is Congress that aroused members of the oil and gas industry are taking on this week in Washington. Caravans of men and women from oil producing states are in Washington focusing attention on their plight. Not just the big producers and drillers, but the little guys and gals too--the small royalty owners are more effected by this legislation than the major oil companies. As a matter of fact, what government defines as obscene profits made by the majors won't be taxed at all.

In most cases the majors have made by their profits on oil produced in OPEC nations--not domestic production (because of controls). And imported oil won't be taxed.

That is what this anti-windfall profits tax protest hopes to accomplish--to educate those members of Congress who could be a swing vote. The task force will tell all who will give them an audience that, 1. this is the first time in the history of US that one industry has been singled out to be destroyed, 2. that the consumer will be the loser, 3. that an excise tax will make US more dependent upon imported oil and gas;

4. that the OPEC nations would rather leave their oil in the ground than accept U.S. dollars; 5. that there is nothing wrong with profits as long as they are re-invested in THIS country. With this education, the task force hopes at the least to restore the 1,000 barrel per day exclusion and at the most to kill the bill in its entirety.

But one thing bothered me. I have always supported not only the oil industry but the agriculture industry too. Yet I disagreed in principal with the Farmers' Movement and their march on Washington. So I asked, "How can I support this task force descending upon D.C.?" The answer was simple and logical. The farmers were asking government to leave them alone--let them produce. Therein lies a big difference. A subsidy is government--a tax is government. The oilers want less government and more energy.

Not all are convinced even so that this move on Washington is prudent. There is a feeling that the whole thing could boomerang--that it will be equated with the ill fated farmers protest. Some will accuse the industry of using those "obscene" profits to buy off Congress, when they would be better spent finding energy. True, true--but the point is, if this tax passes, there won't be anything left to find more energy. So we better use whatever influence we have while we can still afford to go to Washington.

Are you satisfied with the present USDA conservation programs? Do you feel they should be changed, revised, or completely eliminated? Do you want other program benefits, such as commodity price support programs and commodity loans, tied to soil & water conservation programs? How about the federal government offering to purchase erosion reduction?

How about you as a land user being fined or taxed, or being required to reimburse the government for cost-sharing and technical assistance? Do you want State and Local government to take over on planning and implementing soil and water conservation on your farm? Do you want to be told by someone what land you can use to produce crops--and in the same respect, what land you

"Sometimes we get more government than we really want."

Reviewing a list of legislative "ripoffs" in the last session of the Texas Legislature, Larry Shaw cites a property tax break given to East Texas timber giants, fourteen separate House votes to escalate interest rates, the weakening of the Consumer Protection Act, the $25.00 new car documentary fee (which will take millions of dollars out of Texans' pockets each year) and other items.

This legislation favors lenders and vendors. It works against those in the middle incomes.

It could never pass except for the help it receives from legislators in league with lobbyists all across the state. Some of this strikes awfully close to home.

Larry Shaw says it's time to remember the people of the 63rd Legislative District. The special interest that interests him . . . is you.

PUBLIC NOTICES

The Gail Water System collected 4 bacteriological samples during the month of December. The results of the coliform bacteriological samples exceeded the Texas Department of Health's "Drinking Water Standards", which were promulgated as required by the "Safe Drinking Water Act", Public Law 93-523. Drinking water containing coliform bacteria in excess of the standard may constitute a potential threat to public health. Your water system has collected accitional check samples as required by the "Drinking Water Standards", resulting in good report.

Coliform organisms are common to the intestinal tract of man and animals. Their presence in water is an indicator of bacteriological contamination of the sample either from the water system or from a sampling error.

Increased monitoring and customer notification of the public when the standards are exceeded are required by law as a means of keeping the public informed.
