FLIGHT FOR LIFE TO SERVE BORDEN COUNTY

An January 5, 1987 St. Mary of the Plains Hospital initiated Flight for Life, its new medical helicopter service. The inception of this program will provide hospital-based medical helicopter service for what is the largest geographic area in Texas currently not served by such a program.

Manning the helicopter will be an experienced helicopter pilot, a paramedic and a flight nurse. The medical personnel on board will have advanced life support training as well as considerable expertise in the area of trauma care, the care of a cardiacpatients, the care of neonates and other areas

Borden traveled to Dawson Friday night and pulled out their 15th win of the year by a score of 54-46. Texas State Teachers Association

Austin-- Texas State Teacher Association President Charles N. Beard Jr. on Wednesday said it is time that Texas teachers were given a greater voice in setting the standards for their profession.

Speaking at a Capitol news conference, Beard urged the State Board of Education to establish procedures to involve teachers in the development and implementation of all aspects of the appraisal system by which their job performance is evaluated. Beard also recommended that the State Board carry out a series of hearings to receive teacher input into the Texas Teacher Appraisal System implemented this fall, and that a panel of teachers be appointed by either the governor or the State Board to prepare comprehensive recommendations for revisions and improvements to the TTAS, which has caused much frustration on the part of teachers.

"The time has come in Texas to stop doing things to teachers and to start to do things with them," Beard said.

TSTA has been closely monitoring the implementation of the appraisal system. Earlier this week, TSTA submitted the State Board a report on problems it has observed in the implementation of the appraisal system and a list of 14 recommendations for correcting those problems. The State Board a report on problems it has observed in the implementation of the appraisal system and a list of 14 recommendations for correcting those problems. The State Board is meeting this week to consider possible revisions to the TTAS.

"Our monitoring of the system and input from hundred of teachers across the state lead to one conclusion--several major problems with the system must be addressed if the TTAS is to achieve its intended purpose of improving the quality of instruction for the school children of this state," Beard said.

Among problems cited by TSTA were the lack of an adequate definition of exceptional quality points and a lack of understanding by appraisers of how to recognize "exceptional quality" and give credit for it; misinterpretation of the appraisal instrument by local school districts; inconsistent application of the appraisal process from district to district and from campus to campus; and lack of competent appraisers.

"Unless the problems with the appraisal system are corrected and soon the TTAS will not result in the improvement of instruction being delivered to our school children but will be another reason to impel our best teachers out of the classroom and into other professions," Beard said.

Beard said teachers must be involved in finding long-term solutions to the appraisal problems. He cited several recent national studies, including those by the Carnegie Task Force on Teaching as a Profession and the National Governors Association, which concluded that real educational progress cannot be achieved unless teachers are made equal partners in the decision-making process.

"TSTA has been, and remains, a strong proponent of a fair and equitable evaluation system as the best method for measuring and improving a teacher's classroom performance," he said.

"However, the TTAS, as it is being implemented, is seriously flawed and might well be causing as much harm as good among teachers and in classrooms throughout the state."

Other TSTA recommendations to the State Board include:

--Establishing at the local district level advisory committees composed of teachers and administrators selected by their peers to explore the subject of teaching excellence, and to establish specific local district guidelines for rewarding of "exceptional quality" points.

--Conducting a comprehensive review of the merits of the present system of awarding EQ points as part of the appraisal process.

--Adopting an appraisal scoring system that set realistic and achievable standards.

--Providing appraisers more intensive training, particularly in writing professional growth plans.

--Developing guidelines to define the roles and responsibilities for educators' professional growth so that the growth plans will provide real help to teachers in improving their professional skills.

--Turning over the local teachers planning for professional development activities at the local level.

--Developing and implementing a workable appeals process for teachers to use in appealing appraisal decisions.

GAIL BAPTIST HAPPENINGS

Last Saturday night, January 10 at 7 p.m., 23 young people met in Borden School Conference Room for one of the best gatherings yet, mostly due to surprise special guest, Ricky Carstensen, 24 year old youth minister from Lubbock.

Ricky told of his high school days as a football player for Klondike and of his directionless life in college before he asked Jesus Christ to be Lord of his life. Since Ricky has received his new born-again life, he has experienced God's Love in a magnificent way. He told how God taught him new things and led him into service.

Before the testimony, the movie "Greater Than Gold" was shown. It was a very dramatic story made by a Christian Film Company about God's precious gift of life.

Also a short teaching film was shown, by Rich Wilkerson entitled God's Wartime Instruction, based on Matthew Chapter 10, verses 7 and 8.

Reggie Vaughn, a Christian singer from Lamesa was scheduled to give a concert for January 10, but came down with Tiawan Flu!! Her concert will be rescheduled for a later date.

Watch this column for the Borden Star for further developments.

The night concluded with fellowship and refreshments served by very special friends of the youth group. Many thanks to them!

Included in the refreshments was a homemade, beautifully decorated birthday cake for Randi Woodward. The cake was devoured.

Please watch for upcoming movie and special events in the paper. Much has been planned. We encourage those young people in and between 6 and 12th grades to come join us. It has been so much fun!!

Free Bike?

South Plains consumers are presently receiving a rather attractive offer from a company called Continental Marketing of Marina del Rey, California. The company offers consumers "free" Kamasura 250 VRX motor cycle. The letter includes the consumer's "Title". The BBB of Los Angeles has found out that although the name of the motorcycle would infer that it has a 250 cc size engine; in fact, the motorcycle is a motor bike that legally can only be used off the road. The big "catch" is that when consumers all to claim their motorcycle, they find that they must pay $334 for transportation and insurance. Consumers are urged to be cautious about accepting this offer.

Extension Home Economics Report

By: Kandy K. McWhorter,

BEEF

Beef. Good news for people who eat! That is the message the Texas Beef Industry Council will proclaim February 1-8 during National Meat Week, an industry wide promotional effort sponsored by the American Meat Institute.

TBIC works with AMI every year during National Meat Week to help distribute the facts about red meat and encourage consumers to incorporate beef into their diet. This year TBIC's plans for national meat week are the most comprehensive ever. A variety of activities have been planned including a media blitz consisting of a series of articles on timely topics such as fat, calories and cholesterol. Matching public service announcements will be broadcast on radio stations. Breakfasts of sliced roast beef with bagels, cream cheese and grapefruit will be hand delivered to approximately 60 select weathermen on early morning radio and television programs. In addition to these visits in 18 Texas cities, special media appearances are also planned to coincide with the festivities.

Retailers will be offered promotional materials to distribute during meat week and food service establishments will receive beef recipe booklets specially tailored to their use.

while the programs of national meat week are multifaceted, the overall aim is to position red meat in a favorable light to consumers and the media. Anne Anderson, executive director of the Texas Beef Industry Council, says that much of the negative publicity beef has received has been a direct result of outdated information. Beef is a healthy, nutritious component of the diet and falls well within the limits recommended by such groups as the American Heart Association and the National Academy of Sciences.

This year National Meat Week follows the kickoff of the most extensive advertising campaign ever launched by the Beef Industry Council. The campaign began January 12 and will reach an estimated 95 percent of consumers between the ages of 25 and 54. The advertising effort is the first visible result for the beef industry which began its $1 per head checkoff program last October.

Anderson says that the TBIC is very excited about the new ad campaign. It will clear up some of the misconceptions that have plagued the beef industry for the last few years. National Meat Week is a perfect way to kickoff the good news!

COUNTY AG-AGENT REPORT DENNIS POOLE VARIETY SELECTION KEY TO COTTON PROFITS

What should Texas cotton producers consider when choosing from the multitude of variety must have good yielding ability. Earliness and disease and insect resistance also are important traits. And stormproof bolls are important in stripper varieties.

High quality fiber that meets the end-use needs of the textile industry also is highly important. Cotton varieties should have adequate length, micronaire and strength to be competitive in the market place. Cotton grade is another factor. Grade is determined by color, trash and preparation. Varieties with smooth leaves will have less trash and will clean up better at the gin to produce higher grades.

Information on the best performing varieties for particular regions can be obtained from several sources, including seed company tests, Texas Agricultural demonstration handbooks. Each county extension office publishes an annual handbook on crop varieties and cultural practices.

Producers should consider varieties that produce consistent yield over a period of years. This means a good performing variety should be in the upper third of tests each year. Several years of evaluation are usually necessary to determine relative performance of a variety.

Variety selection should center around traits that offer some help in reducing certain production hazards. For example, if a farm has a Fusarium or Verticillium wilt problem, then disease resistance becomes the primary concern in variety selection.

Picker-type varieties characterized by indeterminate fruiting habit, later maturity, open-type boll and higher yield potential are used predominately in the Rio Grande Valley, Upper Coast, Winter Garden Region and Brazos River bottom.

Stripper varieties are more rapid fruiting and determinate fruiting types; that is, they tend to cut out quicker. Unlike picker cottons, stripper varieties have stormproof bolls on a much smaller plant.

In recent year, there has been a trend toward using picker-type varieties in traditionally stripper areas. Stripper harvest is a once-over operation in which open bolls are exposed to weather for long periods. At the same time, open picker-type bolls are more susceptible to field loss than stormproof bolls. This becomes especially important during intermittent period of rain and high wind. On the other hand, some producers are willing to risk some field loss and higher cost for insect control to achieve potentially higher lint quality and yield with picker-type cottons.

Variety selection is an important management decision. Producers should stay with proven varieties that have shown a good performance record, but suggests that they evaluate new releases on a limited acreage each year.

Once a producer has decided on a variety, he should make arrangements early to obtain the highest quality seed possible. It's only through good quality seed plus proper cultural management during the season that a variety can express its maximum genetic potential.

TEXAS WATER BOARD EYE WASTE SIGHTS

The Borden Star, Wed. Jan. 14, 1987...7

Austin -- January 6, 1987

The Texas Water Commission today approved 10 hazardous waste sites to be included on the Commission's first state Superfund Registry. The sites are ranked in order of the need for clean-up.

The 69th Legislature directed the Water Commission to conduct a survey to identify for the Registry hazardous waste facilities or areas which may constitute an imminent or substantial danger to public health and safety on the environment.

In July of 1986 following the commission initial survey, Executive Director.

Lary Soward announced the first hazardous waste sites to be considered for the State Superfund Registry. Hearings were subsequently held in August by Commission staff member in several locations across the state on the 14 proposed sites and to obtain information on other possible sites.

As a result of information gathered during the August hearings and subsequent field investigations by staff members from the Commission's State Superfund Unit, four sites originally included are delisted and three new candidate sites are proposed.

the four delisted sites are: Buchanan Dam site (Llano County); Texas A&M FIRE Training School (Brozos County); Texas plastics (San Patricio County); and Trio Mud (Harris County).

the next stop for the State Superfund Program will be to hold hearings to receive comments on the 3 new proposed sites and begin clean-up negotiations with owners operators of the 10 Registry sites.

there are also 26 Federal superfund sites in Texas. The state Registry includes sites which the Water Commission judges to be threats to the public or the environment but for various reasons do not meet federally mandated criteria for inclusion on the national listing.

RULES COMMITTEE MEETING

The 100th Congress is in session and is facing a variety of important issues. Starting his fifth term Frost will continue to serve on the Rules Committee and the Budget Committee and is now eight in seniority out of the 27 members of the Texas delegation. Some of the issues facing the new congress include:

Special select committees of both the House and the Senate will be set up to examine all aspects of the arms sales to Iran, with emphasis on how the proceeds reached the contra rebels in Nicaragua. The resolution establishing the select committee in the House will be heard by the Rules Committee the first week we are in session. The Rules Committee has original jurisdiction over the establishment of any select committee.

The Gramm-Rudman law requires Congress to bring the federal deficit down to $108 billion for Fiscal Year 1988. Current projections are for a deficit in excess of $160 billion, so a number of cuts will have to be included in the budget, as well as possible new revenues.

Our new speaker, Jim Wright, has made it clear that doing something about the Nation's trade deficit will be one of his priority items in the new congress. Congress passed a bill imposing textile import quotas last year, but it was vetoed by the President. Other more comprehensive trade legislation passed the House but was killed in the Senate.

Legislation imposing an import fee on oil from the Middle East was blocked by President Reagan and speaker O'Neil in the last Congress. However, our domestic oil industry still faces serious problems, and both Speaker Wright and Senate Finance Chairman Lloyd Bentsen have expressed support for an import fee, and it should receive full consideration in the new Congress.

HEART ASSOCIATION WARNS ABOUT SECOND HAND SMOKE

(Austin)--The American Heart Association issues a new warning to all Texans: exposure to second-hand smoke may be hazardous to your health.

The Heart Association's warning matches similar findings released by the U.S. Surgeon General late last year. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, M. D. presented scientific evidence on the harm to non-smokers of breathing exhaled smoke or the smoke coming from the tip of a burning cigarette.

the Heart Association says pregnant women should not smoke, and parents who smoke should avoid exposing their children to the harmful effects of involuntary smoking.

"The evidence on smoking or health has been air-tight for years," says Addison A. Taylor, M. D., president of the Heart Association in Texas. "But recent evidence strongly points to a connection between second-hand smoke and increased risk of heart disease." This is the first time the Heart Association has commented on the risk of cigarette smoke in the air around non-smokers.

"The Surgeon General's report is the most comprehensive collection of the scientific evidence on the hazards of a passive smoke," says Taylor. "The implications are alarming. The health of non-smokers must be protected. The most logical way is to restrict smoking in public places."

The most recent Texas Poll shows an overwhelming majority of the public agrees with the Heart Association position. Legislation to limit smoking in public places was favored by 77 percent of Texans surveyed in November. Asked if employers should be required to establish policies to accommodate nonsmoking workers, 67 percent of Texans said yes. Support on both questions cut across line of education, age, occupation, ethnic background, income, political party, and region.

A statewide coalition of the American Heart Association, the American Cancer Society, the American Lung Association, and others in working to pass a bill to be introduced in the Texas Legislature this month. The Texas Smoke-Free Indoor Air Act would prohibit smoking in public places, except where a sign is posted permitting smoking.

"We want to change the status quo in this state," says Taylor. "Right now, smokers can light up anywhere, unless they see a sign telling them not to. We want smoke-free air to be the norm. Most public places, if smoking is permitted at all, should have specific areas designated for smoking. Then, smokers couldn't light up unless they saw a sign telling them it was okay."

"Smokers jeopardize their own health" according to Taylor, "but they also create a health hazard for non-smokers who breathe second-hand smoke. We need to restrict smoking in our schools, government offices, shopping malls, offices and other public places."

For information on how to support the effort for a stronger smoke-free indoor air law, contact your local office of the American Heart Association listed in the white pages of the phone book.

Chris Anderson still does things the old-fashioned way as he prints up Christmas cards on a vintage printing press at Old City Park in Dallas. The Park is a special museum of restored 19th century structures dedicated to the preservation of the architectural and cultural history of Dallas. In addition to the print shop, there is a restaurant offering authentic North Texas cooking, a restored bank building, log cabin, train depot, and a Victorian band stand. Tx. Tourist Agency photo.

As you can see, there is a lot of work to be accomplished in a short time, so come on in whether you have completed harvest or not. Producer estimates may have to be used in some cases.

If you have a landlord that lives off and you do not have power-of-attorney on file, you need to keep the January 26 deadline in mind.

GAS TAX KEEPS '84 HIGHWAY COMMITMENT

The highway department will have $78 million less to spend on road work next year despite an eight-month, five-cent gas tax increase approved in the special legislative session.

"The state's general budget just ran out of money," Highway Engineer Director Raymond Stotzer Jr. said.

"However, we feel that the Legislature has responded appropriately to the dual responsibilities of maintaining the state's 1984 commitment toward improved transportation systems and addressing the immediate cash shortfalls.

"Since 1984, the department has been involved in a twofold program of rehabilitating and upgrading many miles of rural highways and unclogging the massive congestion problems in the major urban areas. Lack of adequate funding had prevented the department from addressing these problems earlier."

The Legislature, in its recently completed special session, eliminated $269.7 million from the highway department's current funding. The five-cent fuel tax, during its temporary tenure between January and August, will generate an estimated $188.9 million for the department next year. The department will also receive a portion of the sales tax on motor lubricants. The temporary sales tax increase on motor lubricants will produce approximately $2.7 million next year.

The Legislature has redirected funds from transportation to the Department of Public Safety, the state's general revenue fund, and the tuition shortfall fund.

The gas tax increase will put Texas near the middle of the states in cents-per-gallon fuel taxes. Colorado, Delaware, Kentucky, Montana, North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, and Wisconsin have already increased their gas taxes in 1986.

Since 1984, the department has made substantial progress in moving highway improvements from the drafting board to the construction site. Major road improvements are under way throughout the state.

"The loss of funds will require some shifting of the department's work schedule, but we will continue a very active construction program to improve the transportation system in Texas," Stotzer said.
