LIBRARY

At their Annual meeting this past Tuesday, The Friends of the Library, elected their new slate of Officers for the coming year.

Mrs. Charlotte Golemon, presided over the meeting, that reviewed the progress of the past year. For a Library with such limited funds the progress and new facilities that are offered are astounding.

The nominating committee proposed the following slate of officers: Mrs. Jo Kent, President; Tommy Seargeant, Vice President; Mrs. Allen Breaux, Secretary-Treasurer.

Mrs. Kent was elected President acclamation.

On a nomination from the floor Mr. George Loos nominated Mr. Allen Breaux for Vice President. Mr. Breaux was elected by a vote of 10 to 2 over Mr. Seargeant.

Mrs. Breaux was elected Secretary-Treasurer by acclamation.

If you are interested in becoming a member, please contact Nina Pena, Genell Hobbs, or Laura Latham. Membership dues will also be collected at the next meeting October 14, 1975 at 3:45 p.m. in the High School Auditorium.

BUILDINGS.....

Brackettville's biggest draw back to future growth boils down to one simple thing BUILDINGS. I am speaking of Office, Store and places for people to live. This shortage has already stunted the growth of the community and has recently become more acute..

Until such time that there are adequate facilities for businesses and families--- Brackettville can kiss its growth good-bye.

THE SAGEBRUSH

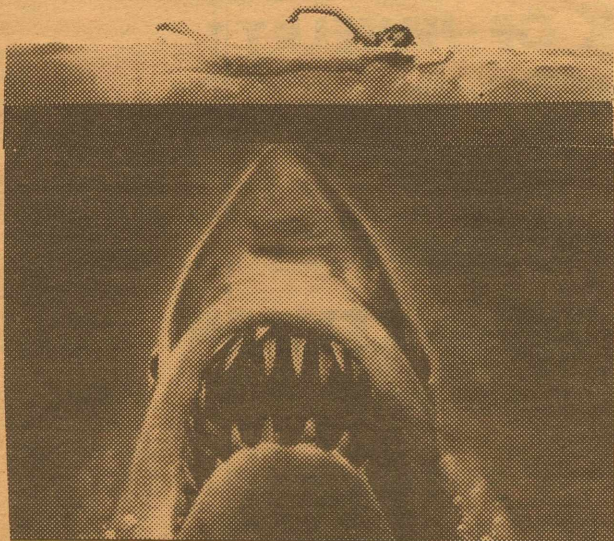

It's the time of the year when an invasion of bugs into houses occurs. After all, bugs like to come in our of the cold too. The best way to keep out ants, spiders and many other insects is to spray the outside of the house. You should particularly spray heavily at ground level and under the eaves. There are available good insecticides that, where sprayed properly, leave a residual that continues to kill insects for a good long time, after the spraying is done.

Now is the time for such spraying. Care should be taken also to close every possible hole to the outside to prevent mice coming into the house. They can soon make a small, small large enough to go through and find their way in and soon the hole becomes a freeway for others. With fall in the air even mice are sensitive to the approach of winter and will be looking for a warm house where they can feed on high priced groceries bought for family use.

Between Us

BY: JOE TOWNSEND

I like to hear birds. Whether the mating song, the warning cry or just the chatter--I just like to hear the birds.

While deer hunting high in the Sierra Nevada mountains we always found lots of blue jays to be there during hunting season. When on the move it seemed there always was a jay nearby. They seemed to have eyes like eagles and always flew or perched not far away and kept up a constant raucous. Nerve shattering fuss at the invader of their mountain domain. I felt as though they were the "early warning system" for the deer and bear we were hunting. It came to be a most irritating thing. It almost made one want to turn his gun on the bird.

One hot afternoon I was taking a breather sitting under a lonsome pine tree by the side a a trail through the deep mansanita that covered the side of the mountain. When the air fairly turned blue with the warning cry of the Blue Jay. I was certain he had not seen me so felt there must be another hunter coming. I knew no one from our camp was in the area and though we were hunting in an area too difficult to reach for most hunters I nevertheless became quite wary, of all the things I've ever wanted none has been a desire to be shot for a deer. I soon was in for the surprise of my life when I saw a big mountain buck coming down the trail I was sitting by. After I killed the buck I realized the blue jay was not fussing at a human being, but rather at the deer. Being sensitive to the fussing of the bird made it possible for me to kill a nice buck. It taught me something too. I learned that the blue jay treated every invader the same.

It is hard to find fault with the person who treats every person alike, regardless, of race, creed, color, social standing or political persuasion. No person of integrity appreciates favoritism, however, rendered, by whom ever rendered or what benefits may accrue. The price of that much loss of self-respect by the recipient is a price too high to pay.

Senator Lloyd Bentsen Watching Washington

I have consistently opposed the compulsory busing of school-children since coming to the Senate. And for good reason.

I've voted against it 37 times. And, today, as the issue is disrupting the educational process in northern and southern communities alike, I am more convinced than ever that it simply does not work.

Others are now coming to that conclusion. This past week, for the first time, the Senate approved anti-busing legislation as an amendment to the Health, Education and Welfare appropriations bill.

I co-sponsored this measure and I am pleased that it passed. It is not a final solution. It will not affect court-ordered busing plans in Texas cities. But it is a very encouraging sign of the change in attitude by the Senate.

I intend to take new legislative initiatives in the coming weeks and months to stop compulsory busing of school-children to achieve racial balance. I will support either statutory changes or a constitutional amendment directed at that end. And I am hopeful that, now, we can persuade the solid majority in Congress who previously defeated every effort to prohibit forced busing that it is wrong.

Compulsory busing was partially intended as an instrument of social change, for bringing people of different races together. This is an admirable goal. But should our educational system bear the burden of bringing about social change? I think not. And, even if this were desirable, there is ample evidence that busing is not the instrument to do the job.

Busing was also meant to insure quality education for all young Americans, regardless of color. But, to the contrary, it has proved counter-productive to the overall goal of providing quality education for all our children--rich and poor, white and black and brown. It has divided communities. It has created bitterness. And caught in the middle of the strife are those very students we are supposedly trying to help.

One very solid solution would be to insure that public school financing is based on the wealth of individual states, rather than of school districts. The Senate last year approved my bill to encourage states to move in this direction, and I have reintroduced it in this Congress.

Basically, it provides incentive grants to those states taking steps to insure that state wealth and not local district wealth determines educational quality.

Far from penalizing wealthier school districts by levelling them down to the plane of poorer districts, it encourages states to bring up the level of education in school districts without an adequate tax base.

There is unquestionably growing sentiment to stop the compulsory busing of school-children, in the North now as well as in the South. The amendment I co-sponsored is clear evidence of that.

But, at the same time, that doesn't mean we're going to abandon our goal of quality education for all children. That doesn't mean we will stop seeking solutions--such as my legislation--that will be much more workable than busing ever could be.

Soil Conservation

by: Howard Ragsdale

Conservation programs ultimately benefit everyone, but farmers, ranchers and other rural landowners are the principal caretakers of natural resources.

"Their stewardship will continue," Edward E. Thomas, head of the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Soil Conservation Service in Texas, said, "because most of our natural resources--soil, grass, trees, and our watersheds--are under private, rural ownership. Towns and cities occupy a very small portion of our available space.

"This means the individual farmer or rancher who cooperates with a soil and water conservation district, and who is carrying out a conservation plan on his property, is the backbone of America's conservation programs.

"For the farmer, the conservation plan means preserving basic raw materials--the stuff of which farms are made--and using them in such a way as to maintain a long-term profitable operation," Thomas said.

"For the non-farmer, the conservation plan means a more stable supply of food, meat, milk, grain, and non-food necessities such as wood and fiber. Benefits of conservation farming are evident and easy for the entire community to see.

"We have been asked why, if farmers and ranchers are the backbone of our conservation programs, does the Department of Agriculture emphasize urban conservation," Thomas said. "In response to this question, I think the clearest way to answer would be to list some of our reasons:

"In the first place, we do urban conservation because as a Federal Agency, we must serve all the people. This is done in harmony with the programs of the locally-governed soil and water conservation districts, and the wishes of their directors.

"Secondly, we do urban conservation because we have found conservation practices and principles that have been tested for 40 years on rural areas will work in towns, too.

"And we must remember that although urban areas are small, percentage-wise they contain most of the people, and in comparatively congested conditions. Therefore, a land use mistake in an urban area can hurt a lot of people and can cost a lot of money. To express it another way, following good conservation planning in an urban area can bring benefits to a large number of people all at once."

"The foundation of our work with urban interests or farmers is the soil survey," Thomas said. "Interpretive maps made from these surveys can show community planners features about the soil--overflow areas, shallow soils, areas where foundations must be strengthened to withstand soil pressure, and other soil and water-related problems. Soil surveys are prepared by the Soil Conservation Service in cooperation with the Texas Agriculture Experiment Station."

Farmers and ranchers use the soil surveys and similar interpretive maps to help in the planning the best use of their land.

"The economic and physical benefits of conservation improvement work to rural landowners, and to their city neighbors, are evident in higher yields, clearer waterways, safer communities, and a better environment," Thomas concluded.

The lull before the storm describes the Brackett Campus this week. Homecoming is in the wind and everyone is making plans for the pep rally and parade. The Homecoming Queen and court will be announced at a later date. Thursday night will witness the traditional bon-fire at Coyote Park, after the Junior High Game.

Last Thursday, BHS Seniors took the Armed Forces Aptitude Test, which is very helpful in planning careers and making vocational decisions. Scores will be back in about a month. Tuesday was also the day for School pictures to be retaken. The first group was ruined in processing.

The Brackett F.F.A. held a meeting Tuesday night, according to President Marcelino Valdez. The program included committee reports and activity plans. The newly elected F.F.A. Sweetheart is Dawn Slubar, Junior, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Slubar.

Donna Rogers, School Nurse, talked to Miss Sheri Foster's Health Class last week about careers in nursing. Miss Rogers emphasized the growing need for workers in the health care fields.

Brackettville was well represented today at the Southwest Texas Junior College Meeting for English teachers by Mr. Thomas Lester, Freshman and Sophomore English teacher. Another BHS teacher offering his services to the community is Mr. Antonio Ramon, who will be teaching a course in conversational Spanish on Tuesday and Thursday nights. Additional information may be obtained by calling the Brackett School Office.

Last week's Spirit Stick was won finally, by the Junior Class. The work involved was evident. Each pep rally is wilder than the last and homecoming promises to be fantastic. The Dad's night activities at the game were particularly poignant because love and pride showed so clearly. The band, as usual, came through in high style and provided a good half-time show.

Belated, but heart felt thanks this week goes to Roland Williams, "Voice" of and announcer for the Brackett Tigers for many years. His broadcasting is one of those things taken for granted but very essential for a Friday night good time.

The Junior class was busy this past week squeezing dollars from fellow students for Homecoming mums for moms, girlfriends, and just nice people. The sale was a blooming success.

It's that time of the year---book reports have been assigned and BHS students are taking advantage of the arrival of new books. These include:

I Heard the Owl Call My Name---
Craven

I Never Loved Your Mind---
Zindel

Moll Flanders----
Defoe

TIGER TALES

Slow starts and exciting finishes have almost become a Tiger trademark and Friday night's game with Nueces Canyon was no exception. Brackett posted it's third win of the season, 26-2, against the Nueces Canyon Panthers. The real story that night however, was defense and spell that with a capital "D". The only Panther score came on a safety in the first quarter. After that, the Brackett defense allowed no points and held the Panthers to a 123 yard rushing tally. Leading the Brackett defensive line was Charlie De La Rosa, Ruben Cervantez and Tony Samaniego.

The Brackett offensive line showed it's smoothest performance yet, though penalties were still a problem. Quarterback Mark Tidwell connected on seven of eleven passes, two of these to his favorite targets, Halfback Tony Samaniego and half-back Buck Smallwood. The first touch down was a pass to Smallwood and Samaniego tacked on the extra point. Raul Cervantez brought in touchdown number two and also the fourth one, late in the fourth quarter. The third came through the air when Samaniego pushed through the Panther line to score. Outstanding plays are made possible by an outstanding line. Particularly impressive this week were linesman Lee Salmon, left tackle, Tony Koch, left guard, and Bill Baxter, Center. Punting responsibilities are handled by Samaniego, who generally kept good field position for the Tigers. Next week's game will be at D'Hanis on Saturday, October 4th.

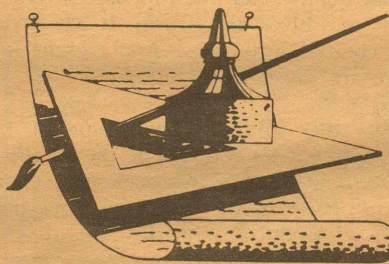

Traveling to Sabinal last Thursday night, the Brackett Junior Varsity lost a hard one, 34-12. Both Brackett touchdowns were made by Eugenio Flores, fullback, on handoffs from quarterback, Arturo Terrazas. Outstanding players for the Jr. Varsity were Steven Kral, End, Donnie Nance, Halfback, and Dennis Roberson, Tackle.

Nelson Payne led his Junior High team to a 26-6 victory at Sabinal. Providing great help in the scoring department were Tommy Meyers, fullback, and David Koch, fullback. Fine line performances were given by Happy Cervantez and Walter Goodloe.
