An unknown editor-hero is said to have published the following somewhere, sometime, "You'll notice that there are mistakes in this week's paper just as there were in last week's, and as there will be next week's. They are there for a purpose. We try to print something for everyone, and there are people who are always looking for mistakes".

SEEDS FROM THE SOWER

By Michael A. Guido, Metter, Georgia

Jimmy broke his bicycle. He tried to fix it, but he could not. He asked his father for help, and together they repaired it.

"Dad," he said, "when I try to do things by myself, they go wrong. But when you and I work together, they turn out just fine!"

Do you have a problem you have failed to solve, or a load you have not been able to lift, or a need that has been impossible to meet? Why don't you take it to your heavenly Father.

The Bible teaches us that God loves, God knows, God cares, and God can do great things for us. There is no common concern, no matter of food or clothing, no problem or pressure, no temptation or trouble, that He is not interested in and is not at hand to help.

He is all-wise. He knows everything. He is all-wealthy. He can give anything. He is all-powerful. With Him all things are possible. What a loving provider and protector He is!

He is ever-present, never-failing, and all sufficient.

If you're the owner of a cast iron skillet, after washing and towel drying, place it in a warm oven to complete drying. Moisture is its worst enemy.

The average American family has an annual income of around $25,000.

WEEK OF JULY 25, 1986.

Summertime!!! Remember how it used to be? Walking barefoot down a country road, kicking rocks and smelling the good smells of summer. Fresh cut hay, wild flowers, and other mysterious, unidentifiable scents that came drifting by.

Boy, what a relief it was to be FREE for the next three months. The days were long and there were so many fun things to do. Always looking for any excuse to keep from having to get all cleaned up on Saturday to go to town with mom. But once every excuse was used up (all to no avail) and the past week's accumulation of good clean dirt was washed off and clean clothes put on, the excitement of going to town started to build.

The walks down through town, up one side of main street, then down the other, running from shade to shade on the hot sidewalks to cool the bottoms of our bare feet, begging mom for a quarter so that we could go to the corner drugstore get a cherry coke, taking in all the good smells and listening to the talk of the local people that sounded so strange to us since we hadn't heard anyone talking for the past week but mom and dad. Then we would stroll over to the variety store and walk up and down the aisles trying to make up our minds on whether to spend our remaining 15 cents on a toy or to go to the picture show (10 cents to get in and a nickle for a bag of popcorn). Most of the time we just couldn't resist the picture show, kinda gave us a reckless, carefree feeling to spend our money on the pleasures of the picture show and popcorn instead of being more conservative and buying something that would still be with us the next week. Most of the time after the show was over we would stroll back through the variety store wishing that we had used our head instead of our heart and bought the addition of a horse or cow or other toy animal to add to our ranch set collection or some other item that we had wanted so badly. At least we would still have had them and now the picture show and popcorn were gone.

Later on in the summer our job was to ride in a trailer pulled by a little Farmall tractor down the rows of dried corn and keep the ears of corn kicked down evenly as dad and some bigger boys from town "pulled" the ears off the stalks and threw them into the trailer. As the ears stacked up we would soon be riding precariously on top, bouncing along to the corn crib where it would be our job to kick all the corn out once the tailgate of the trailer was removed. This was hot, dusty work and it sure was a great feeling to go jump into the cool waters of the stock tank out by the barn after we finished for the day. The cold water felt good as it washed off the chaff, dust, and dirt from the day's labor.

Then quiet often, long about sundown, we would gather up our old cane pole, dig a few worms from the worm bed by the barn, and drift off to the creek to catch a few perch for supper. Don't remember ever coming back empty handed and every once in awhile we would hook a 2 or 3 pound bass. UMM - UMM, GOOD EATING!!!! And we sometimes got an added treat when one of those big old bullfrogs came drifting up from the bottom like a submarine rising to periscope depth to peer around with those big bug-eyes. We would take the big end of our fishing pole and wait quietly until he drifted into range and then pop him. Some of them got away, but those that didn't sure tasted good after mom rolled them in cornmeal and fried them up. Oh, she would squeal and fuss a little about how they crawled around in the hot pan, but she always served'em up kinda special for us.

And those summer rains that came, boy we would head for the barn and climb up in the hay as high as we could to get close to that old tin roof and lie there listening to the sound of the raindrops hitting that tin. No other sound in the world like that and no other smells like those of the fresh washed countryside after the showers had passed.

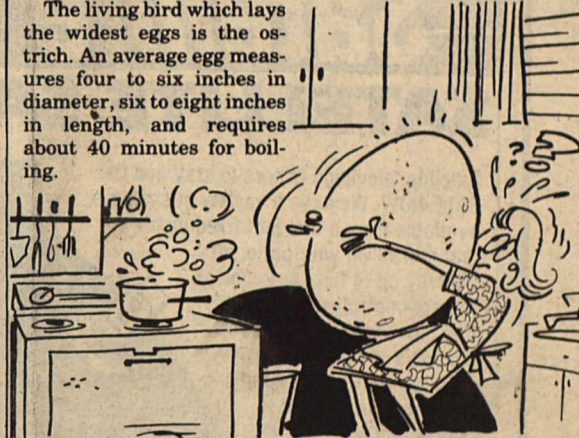

Summertime, nothing like it. At the end of the day we would sit out on the front porch watching the different patterns made by clouds as the sun set behind them and later would crawl into bed, exhausted, but excited about the coming day when it would start all over again. Some folks say that Christmas is for kids and I guess maybe in some ways it is, but I kinda think that summertime is the best time for kids, and you know what? Ain't too bad for adults either. I guess some of us just never quite grow up. I kinda like it that way.

Keep Cool And Save

Air conditioning doesn't always work the way people think it does. The very action many think will make them cooler may only make them hot under the collar when it's time to pay their electricity bills.

Learning how to operate your thermostat to get the most from your air conditioner could help you keep your cool when it comes to electricity bills.

To get cooler, faster, many people jam the thermostat level way down to make the air conditioner send out colder air at a faster rate. Yet air conditioners don't provide more cool air or cool faster if you set the thermostat temperature level lower than the the temperature wanted.

Such pitfalls can be avoided if you follow energy conserving, money-saving tips from the Air-Conditioning and Refrigeration Institute.

A new, free ARI pamphlet, "How to Keep Your Cool and Save Cold Cash," answers 27 questions that consumers frequently ask.

For a free copy, send a stamped, self-addressed business envelope to ARI, Dept. U-7, PO Box 37700, Washington, DC 20013.

Making Family Life More Fun

INVOLVE CHILDREN IN PLANNING FOR TRIP

A family vacation is a great way to spend time together, and if you travel by motor home, you can take advantage of the space and facilities offered to make your trip more enjoyable.

To help increase your children's involvement and interest in the trip, Winnebago Industries, Inc., a leading motor home manufacturer, suggests these ideas to let the kids share in both the preparation and responsibilities while on the road:

- Choose your vacation trip as a family. Make a list of possible vacation trips after looking through brochures, travel guides and clippings from magazine and newspaper travel sections.
- Assign each child specific duties for the trip. Before the trip, one child can be responsible for packing games and toys, and another can list all the food and supplies you'll need. At the campsite, one might connect the water and electricity while another sets up lawn chairs.

- Give each child a vacation allowance. Everybody needs a little vacation "mad money," and you can still offer advice on how to spend it. Perhaps you might encourage them to buy a souvenir or two of the trip or a small gift for someone special.
- Plan for stops at regular intervals at tourist attractions or rest areas. Short breaks allow the kids to run off pent-up energy and adults to stretch tired muscles.
- Bring along a tent for the children. Letting them sleep in a tent occasionally not only gives parents and kids more privacy, it adds a little extra adventure to the trip.

Making sure each member of the family plays an important part in the success of the vacation should make your motor home trip more fun and relaxing for adults and children alike.

ELECTRIC COSTS*

Texas Investor-Owned Utilities
Dollars per 1,000 kilowatt-hours

EPEC (El Paso)	$92.86
HLP (Houston)	80.36

SWEPCO (Texarkana)	74.50
TUEC (Dallas)	73.51
CPL	68.28

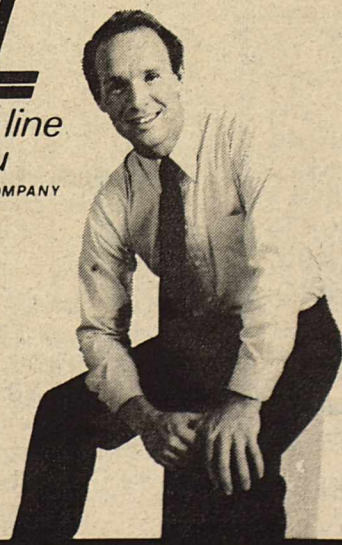

As the chart shows, CPL has the lowest residential electric rates in the state among investor-owned utilities. It was a belt-tightening goal the company set, and then met. How did we do it? Strategic planning. Smart fuel buying. Trimming construction. And dedicated employees.

These rates are also well below the national average. CPL is happy with its low rating and wanted you to know.
