MOORE or Less

By Johnnie Moore

Here's another installment of "Parson Jones." Hope you enjoy it. We've had a lot of good comments on the new column and we'd like to hear from you on it.

Dear Mr. Publisher:

This is the ole Parson a coming into your midst to set a spell and chew the "lean" awhile. (I never could stand "fat") Well, the news out this way is that we're drawing up plans for our new church building.

I shore hope the Lord didn't have as much trouble planning the world as we are our little Church with the high steeple. (That's what we're gonna call our Church, Mr. Publisher, cause our steeple is gonna be 3 feet higher than any other church in our community. So, if you want to send any mail out this way just address it to "The Little Church with the High Steeple".

About the only thing we've been able to agree on so far is that our steeple oughta be higher than anybody else's. Hezekiah wants a one story building and Amos wants two stories. Bon Twist wants a modern Church and Rufe wants a ole timey one. Ellie Nicklessinger says the Church oughta be built outa wood and Rufe's wife wears it oughta be brick. The men of the Church say our new building should be painted white, and the women are holding out for baby blue. The young folks think it oughta be pokey-dot.

Well sir, Mr. Publisher, you can imagine what kinda mess this left me in, I feel like a pore little rabbit with a pack a hound dogs on my tail. I come up with a bright idea though, I told 'em we'd be democratic and put all these things everybody wanted into the building.

I pointed out that we could make the inside modern and the outside ole timey. We could build a split level Church and have the side where the men sit two stories high and the place where the women folks sit just one story. Seems like we could make one side outa' brick and the other side outa wood. (And if the three little pigs happen to come a long we could make one room outa straw.) The colors wouldn't be much trouble--we'd paint the ceiling white, the walls baby blue and the floor pokey-dot.

I thought this suggestion sounded pretty good, but they wouldn't go along with it, all of 'em said they wouldn't budge an inch. It had to be built their way or not at all. Now what would you do Mr. Publisher? I only see three ways out, build a separate church for each member, shoot myself, or go into the twilight zone.

Well, I've got to run along Mr. Publisher. I was just thinking, if we can run across some material as tough as my members we can build a Church that will be standing on judgment day.

I shore is a good thing the Lord made the world and then made man, 'cause if he had created man first and had him vote on what the world would be like we'd a been walking on air yet.

Yours truly,
Parson Jones

On May 18, according to Imogene F. Nicholson, clerk of the local draft board located in Brownfield, will move from its present location to the basement of the Post Office Building in Brownfield.

City Council Favors Ordinance

In their regular meeting, held last week, the members of the Plains City Council took up the matter that has been the subject of a great deal of discussion among Plains businessmen.

Subject under discussion is the possibility of putting into effect an ordinance in Plains, which would in effect, levy a tax of a realistic nature on retail peddlers and van salesmen who come into Plains selling their wares.

This, of course, would not affect the sale of goods to retailers by wholesalers, but, would be aimed primarily at the dispensers of retail goods and services who do not maintain business establishments in the City of Plains.

It was pointed out that several area cities already have this type ordinance in operation and that they report very satisfactory results.

Littlefield has such an ordinance and Morton has just recently enacted one.

The local City Council, in their deliberations, has stated that they are in favor of such a move here and will proceed in passing such an ordinance when all the legal technicalities have been gone into.

Time for the big game is 8 p. m.

Contestants for the match will be one team from the graduating senior boys versus a team made up of the high school teachers.

Admission prices for the big game have been set at $1 for adults and 50 cents for students.

Recently elected cheerleaders for next year are:

Brenda Hickman, Peggy Ettridge, Sarah Field, Carolyn Crutcher and Sarah Hunt.

Wheat Vote Set Tuesday

Polling places for the May 21 referendum on marketing quotas for the 1964 crop of wheat were announced today by Mr. Ray Bearden, chairman Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation County Committee. Ballots may be cast by eligible voters from 7:00 a. m. to 7:00 p. m., on Tuesday, May 21, at the following places: The Old Courthouse, Plains, Texas.

The Chairman explains that wheat growers eligible to vote in the referendum include (1) all producers of 15 acres or more who have an interest in a 1964 farm wheat acreage allotment, and (2) those farm operators (and other wheat growers on their farms) with allotments of less than 15 acres who elected by May 13 to participate as an allotment grower in the 1964 wheat program.

Such an election (was made by signing in the space provided on the back of the allotment notice for the farm and filing the notice at the ASCS County Office. Farmers that will be away on the Referendum day may obtain ballots and vote by mail.

It at least two-thirds of the growers voting in the referendum approve quotas for 1964 crop wheat, price support will be available to growers participating in the wheat program at national averages of $2 per bushel (on "certificated" wheat, 80 percent of the normal yield of the planted acres) and $1.30 per bushel on other (non-certificated) wheat grown within the allotment; and program payments will be made for diverting wheat acreage to an approved conserving use. Marketing quota penalties will apply to farms with allotments of less than 15 acres whose operators did not choose them to become allotment farms by May 13. If the wheat acreage exceeds the small farm base,

If the quotas are not approved by the necessary two-thirds of the growers voting there will be no quotas, no marketing penalties, no diversion payments, and no "certificated" for the 1964 crop of wheat. Price support to growers who keep within their wheat acreage allotments would drop to 50 percent of parity.

Proclamation of wheat marketing quotas is directed by legislation whenever it is determined that the supply of wheat likely would be excessive in the absence of wheat marketing quotas. The supply of wheat for the 1964-65 marketing year, without quotas, has been estimated to be 2.835 billion bushels, more than double the estimated domestic disappearance and exports.

Marketing quotas have been in effect continuously for the past ten wheat crops, as approved by growers voting in referendums held annually on the question, lection to name trustees for the College. The elected trustees are responsible for the location of the College within the District.

Another meeting will be held in the near future at Seagraves. Mr. Musgraves plans to attend and the date will be set to coincide with his schedule.

C. COURT MINUTES

Yoakum County Commissioners in their regular session this week, set a board of equalization for personal and property taxes for June 3 and 4.

The sessions will be held on each of the two days in the court room in Plains, and will begin each morning at 10 a. m.

Consideration of tax adjustments will be made and actual taxes will be set.

In other business, the court refused all bids on the sale of a 1960 model automobile.

It was also voted to amend the present county budget to the extent of allowing District Judge Ledbetter a $75 a month expense account.

In a final note of business, Jack Pierce was officially rehired to manage the county swimming pool in Plains again this year.

Boy Scouts Sweep Camporee

Members of Plains Scout Troop No. 778, for the second year in a row, swept all honors in the District Camporee.

The Camporee, an annual competitive event, held on a comparison basis in scouting skills, was held this year over last Friday afternoon and Saturday in the Gaines County Park, mid-way between Seagraves and Seminole.

Troops from the entire Quanah-Parker District, taking in Plains, Denver City, Seagraves, Seminole, O'Donnell, Brownfield and Lamesa, took part in the events.

The Plains troop, in receiving 590 out of a possible 600 points on troop camping, cooking and such things as scout spirit and teamwork, was named first place troop, as it was last year.

In the various scouting skills events, all four patrols of the troop were blue ribbon winners and Plains was honored to have the first and second place patrols in these events.

It is reported that the boys got a great many compliments on their appearance and their conduct while at the contest.

700,000 Jobs Needed For Nation's Youth

By Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy

A lost generation of unemployed young people is growing up in our country.

There are 700,000 of them so far and the number is growing. They are out of school and out of work. They have no skills and little hope. They turn, in some cases, to crime to get the things other youngsters earn by study and hard work. They live in all parts of the country and their plight is one of our most serious internal problems.

These young people would be the beneficiaries of the Administration's Youth Employment bill. Youth employment has become an increasingly severe problem as our once-rural nation has become urban and industrial. The opportunities to work are as great and challenging today as ever, but to get the same opportunity today requires greater knowledge and greater skill.

The problem is intensifying every year. In 1962, youth between 16 and 21 made up 7 per cent of our labor force yet accounted for 18 per cent of the unemployed. In the 1950's, 19 million young people entered the labor force. In the 1960's, the figure will rise to 26 million.

Of these, 7.5 million will not finish high school. They will not have learned the necessary skills, and will not be prepared for the work our society will need most.

The result will be double damage to our country.

First, the country will lose an incalculable amount of talent. A recent study in New York has demonstrated that poor children, when given special instruction and counseling showed IQ gains ranging from 11 to 60 points. In how many other cases today would such new opportunities unlock the door to buried talent?

Second, the lack of such opportunity, whether in school or in employment, bears even more bitter fruit. Crime and delinquency are common among youths frustrated in their search for success in customary channels.

In my work as Chairman of the President's Committee on Juvenile Delinquency and Youth Crime, I have been impressed by the need to see such crime, youth unemployment and school failure as related, though different, reactions to the lack of opportunity.

Dealing with these related problems means a broad attack on the underlying conditions from which they spring. In some cases it means remedial education and vocational training, to improve job skills. In other cases it may mean breaking down the obstacles created by discriminatory hiring practices.

These are among the goals of the Administration's Youth Employment bill.

In New York City, a major program called Mobilization for Youth, assisted with federal funds, is demonstrating how effective the Youth Employment bill could be.

A central youth employment agency was met with instantaneous success.

During this training period, the inexperienced youth tries several types of work to determine which is best for him. He works from 9 to 4, punches a time clock and earns 75 cents an hour. Jobs include masonry, woodworking and other building work, clerical work, or serving as hospital aides or in food service.

Such programs demonstrate what can be done. That is why the Youth Employment bill is so important. It can make a major difference for many young men and women. If we enact this bill, we can show them that we have hope for them and an interest in their future.

SILENCE

SOMEONE has written that if all the world were music, we long for one sweet strain of silence to break the endless song. And I saw a poem years ago that glorified silence and its great place in the fitness of things. And if you can remember any time of silence in your life. You may also remember the healing that came upon you with the touch of an infinite calm.

But if you can find the place and time of silence, fortunate indeed you are. For out my way there does not seem to be any place or time of silence. When I congratulated myself that I was living in a quiet residence with little passing in front, I soon found there was a back street where the roar of traffic never ceases until about midnight, and the rest of the time until daylight is taken by the garbage truck in front and some other things.

And if I decide in the early morning to go to town, as I venture out our resident place I at once find that I am somewhat like the man who charged in the Light Brigade, with cannon all around them and in front of them volleying and thundering, except that the cannon about me travel almost as fast as the cannonballs of the Crimean War and the cars are larger than the balls or the guns that shot them forth. "Be still and know that I am God."

JUST A THOUGHT:

All of us can do much today to eliminate prejudice if we will just remember that none of us were born with this affliction.

Soil Stewardship Week May 19-26

"Today, with our population rapidly increasing, we must recognize the indispensability of soil, water and plants as the major sources of food and fiber for our people and raw products for industrial processing and handling," so said Governor John Connally in proclaiming the week of May 19-26 as Soil Stewardship Week in Texas.

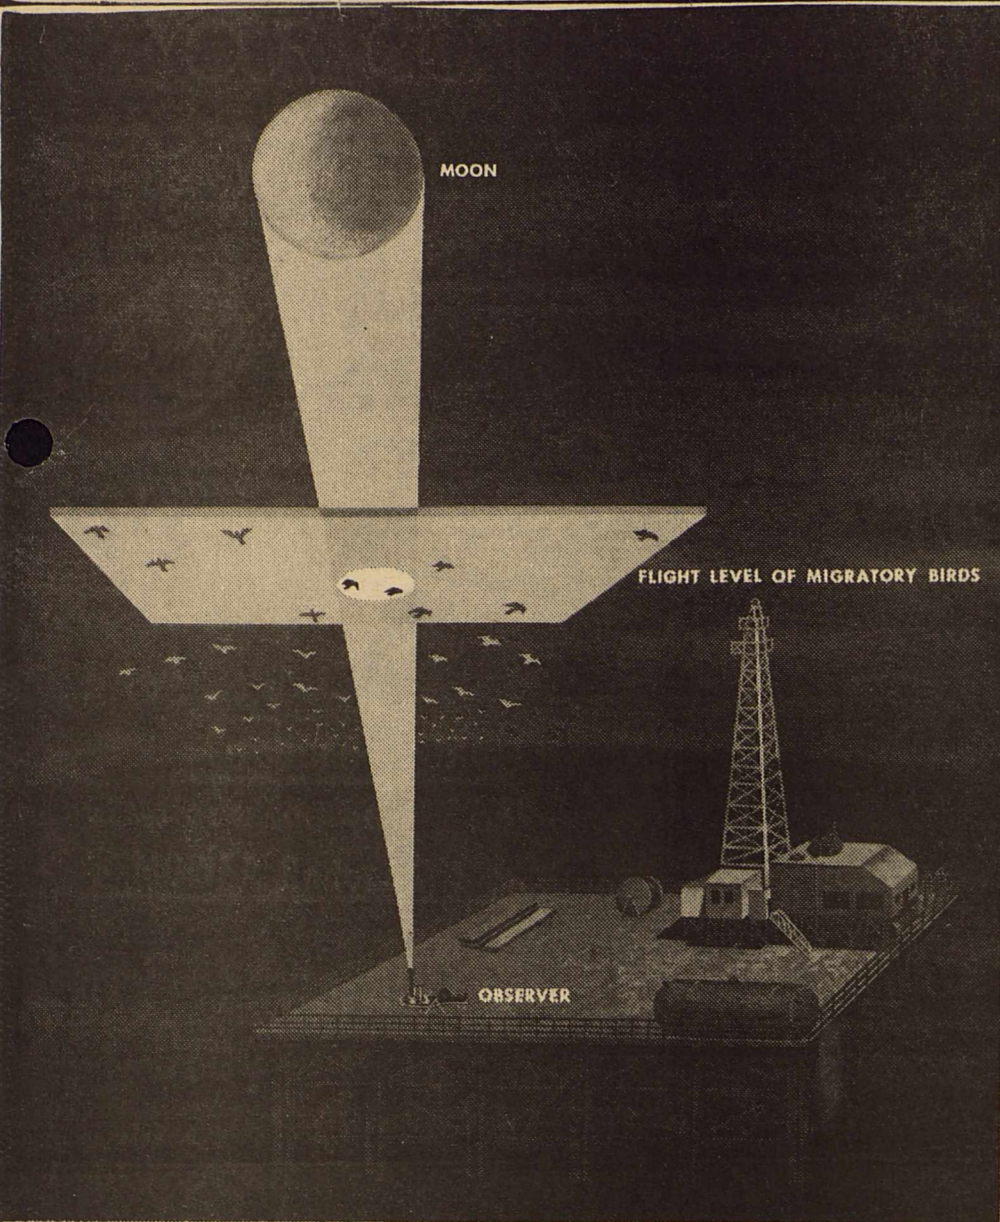

portant of alkhe soil and water will be continued in its lasting service to men of future generations as a God-given trust," he continued.

George Holekamp, chairman of the Soil Stewardship Committee, Association of Texas Soil Conservation Districts, Kerrville, and Lynn Pittard, soil and water conservation specialist, Texas Agricultural Extension Service reported interest in this year's observance at a high pitch. They added that churches throughout Texas are planning special services during the observance and invite all citizens to attend and participate in them.

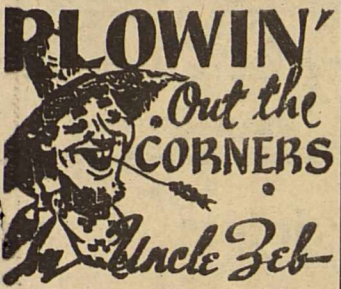

Many of the state's soil conservation districts are also planning tours, special meetings and recognition for achievements in their districts. The theme for the 1963 observance is "Eyes to the Future." Soil Stewardship Week is sponsored nationally by the National Association of Soil Conservation Districts.

Local ministers, along with a few ministers from Denver City who missed the tour held there last week, will meet at Alma's for breakfast at 7:30 on Tuesday morning and go from there on their annual tour for this year.

HERE COME THE BIRDS - Teams of ornithologists from Louisiana State University are plotting ultra-high level bird migrations during May - some of them 30 miles out in the Gulf of Mexico aboard Humble Oil & Refining Company offshore drilling platforms. Results of the round-the-clock telescopic observations will be significant to health, air safety, and conservation groups.

After making a rush trip to Austin we were really convinced that the state capitol should be nearer the Panhandle. From some spots in the northern tip it would be closer to Pierre, South Dakota than to Austin. . . . Well, almost.

anyway. . . . While visiting with one of our brother-in-laws, who now resides in this city, we had the pleasure of attending the church of their choice, which was the Grace Methodist Church. This church is located near the State School for the Deaf. Several from the school were in attendance and we were moved all the more by the service as we watched a very impressive man translate to them in sign language the words of the message as well as the songs. The Word of God, the songs, and the preacher's message seemed to bring the same joy to their hearts from the expressions of his hands as would have happened if they had been able to hear. It made one all the more thankful for every blessing that comes from God. And especially were we thankful that this blessing could come to them.

home with us one such thought. He reminded us how we look into a physical mirror in order to see if we are physically altogether before coming to church, and that we should look into the Bible as a spiritual mirror in order to determine whether we are spiritually altogether. . . . We left the service pondering this thought. . . . The thought still stays in our mind. . . . It had been some half dozen years since we had visited the Capitol City. It is hard to believe that a city could grow so much in that time. Even the Internal Revenue is setting up more than a block of offices there.

Tower Hits Cuban Policy

Senator John Tower Wednesday accused the Kennedy Administration of casting aside "the traditions of this Nation" in permitting the Communist takeover of Cuba.

In a VE day speech before the Senate Tower said the international standing of the United States because of Cuba "has slipped low indeed."

"In permitting what has happened in Cuba," the Senator said, "we have cast aside the traditions of this Nation as embodied in the Monroe Doctrine and have reneged on carrying out our solemn obligation under the Rio, Caracas and Bogota treaties. We have done violence to the Charter of the Organization of American States, which binds member states to assist each other to defend their sovereignty, their territorial integrity and their independence. We have demoralized and discouraged those Latin American Republics who, threatened by Communist subversion, have urged us to take tough and decisive steps to purge Soviet colonialism from this hemisphere."

"This," said Tower, "is quite different from the speed with which the late, great John Foster Dulles had the Red regime broken in Guatemala."

"On VE Day," Tower told the Senate, "The United States stood on a pinnacle, universally respected and triumphant. To day our international standing has slipped low indeed. The reasons may be summed up in one short word, Cuba."

"Every American knows what Cuba means, hard as that little group of theorists clustered around 1800 Pennsylvania Avenue try to twist it. Cuba means that we have endangered our children's future by getting that vigilance is the eternal price of freedom. Cuba means we have abandoned our Christian neighbors next-door to atheistic terrorists."

"Worldwide," he said "Cuba invokes an image of a weak and wavering United States."

Tower said that, because of proximity, the relations between Cuba and America have been "something special" throughout history. Americans have always, said the Senator stood by its Cuba in defense of its freedom and liberty.

He noted that "President Kennedy himself" stood in 1960 "upon a Democratic party platform which unequivocally declared:

"The new Democratic Administration will also reaffirm our historic policy of opposition to the establishment anywhere in the Americas of governments dominated by foreign powers, a policy now being undermined by Soviet threats to the freedom and independence of Cuba."

"Never the less, we have followed a policy more fit for a Byzantine Emperor than a great modern world power, and a straight forward world power like the United States."

"On this VE Day," said Tower, "I would recall to the Presidents mind the further pledge of his platform: 'The Government of the United States under a Democratic Administration will not be deterred from fulfilling its obligations and solemn responsibilities under its treaties and agreements with the nations of the Western Hemisphere. Nor will the United States, in conformity with its treaty obligations permit the establishment of a regime dominated by international atheistic Communism.'"

"I ask, along with the American people, why this pledge has not been kept."

Thomas Carlyle said: "An educated man stands, as it were, in the midst of a boundless arsenal and magazine, filled with all the weapons and engine which man's skill has been able to devise from the earliest time."

Applying these words to the American scene they become more important than when written. More than ever before in the world's history, it is the educated man and woman, the trained young people, who will find themselves working and participating members of an exciting society in the next few decades.

If you take advantage of the opportunities offered young people today, you will, as Carlyle indicated, stand in a boundless arsenal, equipped to meet the problem of the future as an individual.

That is why your graduation is so important. You have completed a part of your education and training, but it must not stop. You must seek more education and training if you are to find a place for yourself in the era of great technological change now taking place in this country.

We urge you to prepare yourself to the full degree of your ability.

And now we join your family, friends and the entire community in wishing each of you well in whatever endeavor you may plan for the future.

Opportunities Unlimited In Teaching Field

What opportunities are likely to present themselves to the high school graduate who intends to go on to college in order to qualify for a career in the teaching field?

Many teachers begin at the elementary or secondary level as soon as they complete requirements for a teaching certificate, and continue to work on their Master's or Ph.D. requirements during school vacations.

The graduate who can qualify for a college or university teaching staff has a good chance of making the "home" team. According to a recent study, one college teacher in five teaches at his undergraduate alma mater.

College level instructors in agriculture, chemistry, dentistry, economics, engineering, English, math, physics, and medicine headed personnel demands registered by foreign institutions at The University of Michigan placement office during the 1959-60 school year. Some 312 requests were received for personnel to fill college positions overseas. Iraq, Lebanon, and Turkey placed most of the requests.

ON ALERT:

Industry Actively Seeking Graduates

The high school graduate who does not plan to go on to college may face what he considers a difficult task—the problem of "finding a job."

Jobs don't "grow on trees" as the expression goes but, although some graduates don't realize the fact, industry is actually eager to find qualified and capable high school graduates to fill immediate positions—or to enter training programs.

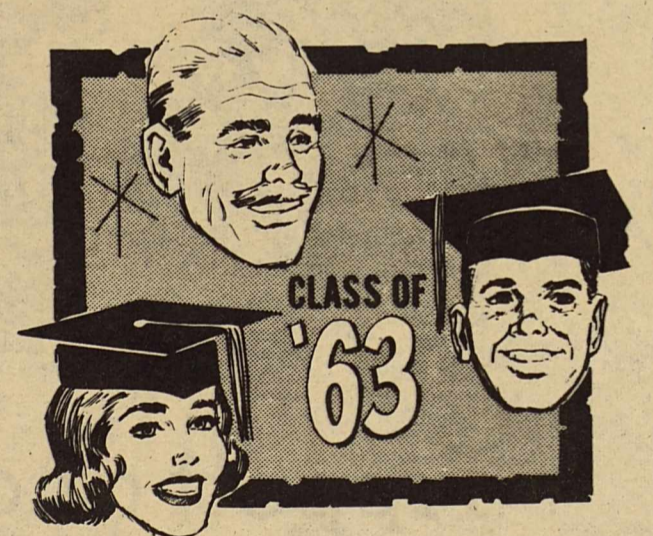

Some industries have established career guidance committees. Through distribution of press releases and information booklets, these committees inform junior and senior high students of job opportunities and requirements, colleges offering specialized training, and companies which offer scholarship and financial aid programs.

For example, a 24-page booklet, "Grow with an Exciting Business," describes opportunities in the paper industry in such major areas as accounting, engineering, marketing and science. It also lists colleges which offer special-

Which Is Right Choice For High School Grad?

ABOUT GOING TO COLLEGE

Question: Should I go to college?

Answer: Yes—if your high school grades were good enough; if you can pass an entrance examination; if you can afford it.

Question: Why should I go to college?

Answer: To continue your education and place yourself in a better position in your chosen field.

Question: Will a college degree guarantee me a job and a high income?

Answer: A college degree certifies that you have completed a specified course of education. You still have to get out and get yourself a job, just as a high school graduate does. And you have to "earn" your way to the top.

Question: Then, why shouldn't I go ahead and get a job right now?

Answer: You can get a job right now—but a job that requires no more than a high school education will not pay as much as a job which sets a college degree as a requirement. As we said earlier, a college degree puts you into a position to realize a higher salary for your services.

Question: If I start now, with some good company, isn't it possible I might receive several promotions in four years, and by then have a good start on a career?

Answer: It's possible. It's also possible that four years from now you will discover that a co-worker, with a similar salary and similar pay, is fresh out of college—and you must compete with him for future promotions.

Question: Is a college education really so important in getting a "good" job and is it such a factor in company promotions?

Answer: Simply stated, the best jobs go to college graduates because employers believe the college graduate is better qualified to accept a position of responsibility. If a high school graduate has outstanding qualifications, he may do well in any field; but another individual, with equal qualifications, plus the added recommendation of a college diploma, is certain to do better. As to the matter of promotions in business, put yourself in an employer's position: If you had two men of equal ability and talents, except that one had a college education, which man would you promote?

Question: Should I go on to college even though I have not yet chosen a career?

Answer: Certainly. The college of your choice will appoint an advisor to chart a course of general study and lend counsel to guide you to the choice of a career for which you are suited.

GETTING A JOB NOW

Question: I don't want to go to college. I want to get a job right away. How do I go about it?

Answer: Decide the type of job you would like to have . . . factory work, office work, selling, etc. Once you have chosen the type of work you wish to do, make a list of the companies in your community which might hire you. Visit the personnel office of each and fill out an application for employment.

Question: Is that all there is to it? I just go around and make an application?

Answer: That is the beginning. When you make application for employment, you let a prospective employer know that you are available. He may not need you today or tomorrow. Next week, however, an opening may arise and he will be looking through the job applications filed with the personnel office to see if a likely candidate for the job is available.

Question: Then, if I am suited for the job, they call me and tell me when to report to work?

Answer: Not exactly. The job application that you fill out at a company personnel office does not always tell an employer all that he would like to know about you. The job application provides general information. If you are considered for employment, you will be asked to come in for a job interview at which time more specific questions will be asked.

Question: What preparations should I make for a job interview?

Answer: You should be prepared to "sell" yourself—to convince your interviewer that you are "the man for the job."

Employers want neat, intelligent, and efficient employees.

The first impression you make is through appearance. Dress neatly, be well manicured and polished, but don't overdo it. If your clothes are flashy, you might be considered too flashy for the job.
