"We have many unresolved problems such as public school finance and judicial reform which probably will come up in special sessions later this Spring," Rudd said.

From The Superintendent's Desk

Dean Andrews

One of the questions that I am frequently asked about school and teaching is "How do you teach a child to think?" I have addressed this question before, but since it is asked so often, I would like to address it again this week.

There are several methods and techniques used to teach our students how to think competently. We are all aware of the importance of being a competent thinker, to be able to analyze facts, solve problems, and defend opinions. The following are some of the methods used to teach our students these important skills.

When new information is taught, students should compare that information with facts already known. "Matching" can categorize words for pre-schoolers. Matching up such words as duck and hen with the word bird, is a good example. High school students might categorize war time figures such as Hitler and Napoleon according to personality traits.

Another way to encourage competent thinking is to give students a way to evaluate information. Asking such questions as: "Is it unusual? Is it common knowledge? If it isn't common knowledge, is there proof? Is there enough proof to prove reliable?" can teach the student to evaluate and categorize items and thoughts.

It is important to help students to develop a good problem-solving framework. Students should learn to first understand the problem, then design a plan to solve it, carry out the plan, and then evaluate and decide if the plan worked.

Another good way to encourage students is to use "guided imagery". This method is often used to teach children important or hard to group information. In guided imagery, the student imagines an event or an experience. Also it is helpful to teach a child to elaborate, to extend circumstances of things read or seen. Imagination can play an important part in a child's learning experiences.

Encourage students to set goals. Ask them to decide what they think they should achieve within a time frame. Encourage your child to write down their goals and then evaluate them periodically to see if they are "on target".

The most important step in developing a competent thinker is to practice what you are teaching, to be consistent, and to encourage each learner.

Delegate Dan Wall Attends TFU Convention In Dallas

Following the theme of "A Tradition of Pride and Accomplishment for Rural Texans", the Texas Farmers Union completed a three day convention setting a course for restoring prosperity for family farmers and ranchers and all of rural Texas. "If we are to return our state to a point of equal opportunity for all Texans, then we must formulate new and innovative policies which will provide a real return on the investment of time, capital and hard work that every family farmer and rancher provides on a daily basis," said Dan Wall, a delegate at the convention.

The delegates representing farmers and ranchers from across the state heard Texas Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower call for a new coalition of urban and rural interests to protect the family farm system. Because farmers and ranchers now represent only two percent of the state's population, producers must work together with consumers to provide a safe and adequate food supply at a price which will enable the farmer to make a living for themselves and their families.

Four candidates for governor addressed the convention: Democrats Ann Richards, Mark White and Jim Mattox and Republican Jack Rains. Comptroller Bob Bullock, the Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor also spoke to the TFU delegates.

Joe Rankin, a cotton farmer from Crosby County, was re-elected as President of TFU. Robert Green, a grain producer from Hartley County, was re-elected as Vice-President. Tim Curtis of Caldwell County, was re-elected as District Director. New directors are Norbert Schlegel, Wheeler County; Walter Todd, Ft. Bend County; B.R. Parham, McClennan County and Donald Smith, Cottle-King County.

Also attending from Yoakum County were Delegate Melvin Lowrey and wife, Linda; Carl and Marie Lowrey, Tracy Lowrey and Linda Wall.

Immunization Clinic Slated

Trees & Power Lines DON'T MIX

Trees can help cool your home by blocking sunlight or keep it warm by blocking strong winds. Trees also add beauty and color to your yard, and can even provide fruit for eating.

But we want you to know that trees can also cause problems.

The little seedlings you plant now will someday have big branches. If those branches fall or bend in a storm, they could break power lines. That means you and your neighbors could be without electric service for several hours.

When you plant trees, select a type that won't grow tall enough to interfere with overhead power lines. By planning ahead when you plant, we can all enjoy the beauty of trees, without the possibility of interrupted electric service.
