Congress OKs hefty pay increase for legislators

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congress allowed itself a $12,100 pay raise, at least temporarily, when the House let pass at midnight Tuesday the deadline for rejecting the hefty pay increase.

Democratic leaders said the House would pass Senate-approved legislation today that gives $50 million to the homeless and also disapproves the pay raise.

But House Democratic Whip Tony Coelho of California said it was unclear whether that action would, in fact, repeal the pay raise because the vote would take place after the midnight Tuesday deadline.

Still Coelho said, "There's still going to be a vote" later to repeal the pay raise. "Don't create the impression that we've voided all opportunity" for a repeal, he told reporters.

House leaders deliberately delayed action on the pay raise by adjourning for the day in early afternoon. When Majority Leader Thomas Foley, D-Wash., motioned for adjournment, opponents quickly called for a vote but lost 221-17.

The maneuver brought a firestorm of protest to an issue that is always a nightmare for lawmakers who want a pay raise but are fearful of the political consequences of voting for one.

Rep. Connie Mack, R-Fla., called the adjournment maneuver a cleverly designed smokescreen. "We've lost credibility" with the back-door move, he said.

"The House leadership acted like a thief in the night, skulking away with its ill-gotten gains," added Rep. Tom Petri, R-Wis.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader said the maneuver "added treachery to their arrogant and avaricious behavior," and warned that the public outcry would force Congress to relent.

In addition to elevating congressional pay to $89,500 from the current $77,400, substantial raises were in line for 3,000 high-ranking federal officials and judges.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, acknowledged that pay increases for the federal judiciary were a stickier issue because the Constitution forbids rescission of a judge's pay raise.

The Senate turned down the pay raises last week, leaving the politically sensitive issue squarely in the House's corner and raising the hackles of some representatives.

Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., said the senators were trying to "look like heroes and then run for home. That's how I feel about their gentlemanly conduct."

Rep. Vic Fazio, D-Calif., said many senators are millionaires and don't need the raise, while most House members are not independently wealthy.

But many House members said now is not the time for what they called "extravagant" pay raises.

"I myself find it difficult to maintain mortgages on two homes. I also have a son who is attending a private university with expensive tuition payments," said Rep. Howard Nielson, R-Utah. "However, is it appropriate to give ourselves a massive increase in salary at a time when we are having to reduce a looming national deficit?"

Rep. Clyde Holloway, R-La., noted his state's high unemployment and said, "Those people who are fortunate enough to have jobs have a tough time figuring out how members of Congress, making $77,000 a year, are underpaid."

President Reagan made the pay recommendations last month, based on even higher suggestions from a special salary commission. The Senate and House had 30 days to disapprove the raises, or they automatically went into effect.

Other recommendations included setting the pay for federal district judges at $89,500; Cabinet secretaries at $99,500; Supreme Court associate justices at $110,000; and the vice president's salary at $115,000. The cost of the increases has been estimated at about $40 million this year.

Ships storm closer to Lebanon

By The Associated Press

BEIRUT, Lebanon — U.S. warships were reported within 50 miles of Lebanon Tuesday, and official sources in Cyprus said civilian aircraft flying near the ships were ordered by radio to veer off.

The warships of the 6th Fleet were in international waters.

The sources in Cyprus, which lies 100 miles northwest of Beirut, spoke on condition of anonymity.

The United States marshaled a strong battle group in the eastern Mediterranean over the past week in response to rising tension in the Middle East and following a spate of kidnappings of foreigners in Lebanon.

The kidnapers, and Moslem leaders in Lebanon, warned that any military action by the United States would mean death for the captives.

Pentagon sources stressed in Washington on Tuesday that the U.S. battle groups had received no orders to prepare for any military operation.

The sources, who demanded anonymity, said the carriers Kennedy and Nimitz and a Mediterranean Amphibious Ready Group of roughly 1,900 Marines were steaming on a "routine patrol pattern" in the southeastern Mediterranean, south of Cyprus and relatively close to Lebanon.

The force consists of about 22 warships, and 1,900 more Marines were moved out of Spain Tuesday to join the battle fleet.

Also Tuesday, Iran's Foreign Ministry denied reports that Anglican Church hostage negotiator Terry Waite was being held by Iranian Revolutionary Guards in Lebanon.

The fate of Waite, 47, remained a mystery. The 6-foot-7 emissary has not been seen since he left his hotel in Moslem west Beirut Jan. 20, apparently for a meeting with the Shiite Moslem kidnapers of two Americans held since 1985.

Lebanon's justice minister, Nabih Berri, said in Damascus, Syria, Monday that Waite had been "arrested" by the kidnapers. He did not elaborate.

Unconfirmed reports last week said Waite was spotted in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley, a Shiite stronghold and base for about 400 Iranian Revolutionary Guards.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, quoted a Foreign Ministry spokesman in Tehran as denying a U.S. news media report that Waite was in the hands of the Revolutionary Guards in the Bekaa.

The spokesman said the report was "fabricated by imperialist news media" and stressed that Iran never sanctioned kidnapping foreigners in Lebanon.

The two Americans Waite seeks to free — Terry Anderson, 39, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, and educator Thomas Sutherland, 55 — are held by Islamic Jihad. The group is believed made up of Shiite fundamentalists loyal to Iran.

South African journalist says Americans can help stop apartheid

By SCOTT BRUMLEY
News Staff Writer

Americans can play a major role in ending apartheid in South Africa through voter pressure on members of Congress, said South African journalist Dumisani Kumalo Tuesday.

Kumalo, speaking at a reception before his lecture at the University Center Allen Theater, said Americans should push the U.S. government to impose tougher measures on the South African government to end the system of legal racial separation.

Several avenues of pressure are available to send a message to Pretoria that the United States no longer will tolerate discriminatory racial policies, Kumalo said.

"More than 100 colleges and 20 states, Texas not being one of them, have voted to divest themselves of South African interests," he said.

Informing people of what apartheid is and what its effects are is another important tool in bringing about change, he said.

"I'm trying to offer students an opportunity to see what it is like to live under apartheid," Kumalo said.

American students, he said, tend to concentrate little on world events. Kumalo said he is encouraged that, when American students become informed about a subject, they generally take action effectively.

Kumalo criticized the Reagan administration for its lax treatment of the white-dominated South African government.

"The administration's current course has failed," Kumalo said. "Congress' override of the president's veto (of sanctions against Pretoria) was a signal of this failure.

"The administration is being nice to South Africa."

The major problem with Reagan's handling of the apartheid issue, Kumalo said, is that he has relegated it to secondary importance.

"The problem is that South Africa is not among the United States' top 10 priorities," he said.

Kumalo said there are similarities between racial strife in South Africa and recent tensions between blacks and whites in the United States. The major difference is that discrimination is illegal in the United States, he said.

"Racism is institutionalized in South Africa, and that's what is crucial," Kumalo said.

He said he hopes to see a peaceful resolution of the apartheid issue, but such change may not be possible.

"I don't wish for any more people to die," Kumalo said, "but if things don't change, it's going to blow up."

Kumalo worked as a journalist in South Africa until he fled the country in 1977. He said he left because of constant police harassment.

"I was harassed and beaten by the police whenever I wrote stories about bad subjects," Kumalo said. "It came to be an almost normal occurrence."

Combust hopes his 65 mph bill meets speedy approval

By TREY BARKER
News Staff Writer

After 12 years of driving 55 mph, American drivers may be allowed to pick up the speed slightly on some of the nation's highways if a bill introduced by Lubbock Congressman Larry Combust last week meets congressional approval.

The Combust-sponsored bill would allow speed limits to be raised to 65 mph on four-lane and rural interstate highways. The bill would give to state governors the authority to raise speed limits. Combust's legislation requires that a safety study be conducted by each governor to analyze the potential risks involved with an increase in the speed limit.

"There are pieces of legislation similar to mine, but my bill takes it a little farther," Combust said. "The (safety) study would determine the merits of raising the speed limit to 65 mph."

Another major provision of the bill would relieve governors of the requirement to obtain authorization from the Department of Transportation in order to increase the state speed limit. After completing the required safety study, governors would have to submit their findings to the transportation secretary at least 150 days before they wanted to change the law.

The secretary of transportation would review the governor's report and prepare recommendations to send to the governor. After receiving the secretary's recommendations, the individual governors would have the option whether to incorporate them into the new speed limit law.

Combust said his bill is different from other speed limit legislation because it raises the speed limit on rural interstates as well as on four-lane highways.

Senate says yes to higher speed limit

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Senate voted Tuesday to let states raise speed limits along sparsely settled stretches of interstate highways to 65 mph, setting up a clash with the House that could delay distribution of billions of dollars of federal transportation aid.

The speed limit increase, approved 65-33, was an amendment to the $52.4 billion highway bill, which would provide assistance to road and bridge projects in the states for the next four years. A $10.8 billion package of mass transit assistance is expected to be added to the highway bill.

The Senate also approved by voice vote a four-year extension of the federal fuel taxes that are accumulated in a trust fund and dispersed to states and communities for road and mass transit improvements.

Other amendments also were expected to the highway bill, which Senate leaders said could be debated all week.

A $91 billion highway and transit bill passed by the House last month would retain the current 55 mph speed limit, and Rep. James Howard, D-N.J., chairman of the House Public Works and Transportation Committee, has said he favors 55 mph.

Thus, the two chambers could be heading toward a replay of last fall's standoff, when a highway and transit aid package died in a Senate-House conference committee. One reason was that senators on the conference committee insisted on the higher speed limit while representatives refused.

"I want to get the bill passed, and I want to get it through conference and get it on the president's desk," Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said before Tuesday's speed limit vote. "I voted against the higher speed limit (last year). I don't want to see it hung up over that."

The Senate approved an identical 65 mph measure last year by a 56-36 vote.

Most support for increasing the limit came from Western legislators, who argued that higher speeds should be allowed on long, isolated sections of road.

"There is a growing feeling in the House and the Senate to increase the speed limit in rural areas," he said.

Most of the support for the bill probably will come from the western and southern states, where the highways are not as dense as in the North and East, he said.

Combust introduced a similar piece of legislation at the end of last year's congressional session. In that vote, Combust's bill failed to pass in the House by 20 votes.

In Senate votes on a speed limit increase last year and Tuesday, a resolution passed by a margin of about two to one.

Trudi Lewis, Combust's press secretary, said because the bill was introduced only last week, it has not yet been scheduled for House debate and has not yet been co-sponsored.

"There are no co-sponsors for it because no one knows about it yet. But there will be some (co-sponsors) later," she said.

In a Monday press release, Combust said, "My bill would allow us to retain the major benefits of the national speed limit, while providing some flexibility and state input over our highways."

Regents should fight for Tech in Austin

To the outsider, a meeting of the Texas Tech Board of Regents may appear to be little more than a rubber-stamping ritual lacking substantive debate. Among the more popular arguments put forth by critics of the nine-member governing board is that the group storms through its meetings, "aye-ing" its way to adjournment.

Recently appointed board chairman Wendell Mayes Jr., during a question-and-answer session with The University Daily Editorial Board last week, said the regents often are maligned for the lack of discussion during their quarterly meetings. Mayes said the board is informed of the upcoming proposals well ahead of time and that much of the "hashing out" on various recommendations is completed before the gavel ever falls to call a meeting to order. The Tech Board of Regents, like many other deliberative bodies, does most of its work during committee meetings the day before the meetings. Although the committee meetings are open to the public, the regents can close their meetings to discuss sensitive matters.

After last week's meeting with Mayes, however, The University Daily Editorial Board has surmised that much of the energy spent by the regents in "hashing out" various in-house proposals could be redirected and channeled into more constructive and advantageous avenues. With Tech's head on the chopping block at the hands of the Select Committee on Higher Education, the Tech Board of Regents, in regard to the committee's proposals, has taken a "wait-and-see" attitude.

Tech has not received a fair end of the deal since Larry Temple's Select Committee on Higher Education began its look into the state's university and college system two years ago. During the course of the committee's review of the state's higher education system, proposals have surfaced that would have merged Tech with several other institutions or placed Tech on the second rung of a multi-tiered system. Currently, the proposal being batted around in Austin would have Tech governed by a "Super Board." The Super Board also would govern the activities of three more universities, which are in the Dallas/Fort Worth area 300 miles away.

All the while, Texas A&M University and the University of Texas have remained unscathed. The ability of these two powerhouse universities to come out on top in the committee's recommendations is glaring testimony to the fact that the regents of those two institutions have been flexing their political muscle.

In lieu of rubbing elbows with the people who have a say about the future of this institution, the Tech regents are hammering out construction proposals and approving contracts to have video games placed in dormitories.

Unfortunately, these no longer are the days of sitting back, waiting and seeing what the Legislature can do to Tech. These are not the days of gambling on the chances that the Select Committee's outlandish proposals will not meet legislative approval. The time has come for Tech's voice to be heard in Austin, and the regents COULD be leading the way.

And so, while we recognize that the regents attract a great deal of undue criticism for an apathetic appearance, we believe that much more "hashing out" needs to be done by the regents. But rather than donating the bulk of time to in-house projects and resolutions, the proposals and work should be directed at Tech's greatest source of harm at present: Austin.

Pets require constant, loving care from owners

Michelle Bleiberg
News Staff Writer

One commercial that evokes emotion in me concerns a dog. It's the commercial where the innocent-looking dog is sitting outside in the cold chained to a pole while he listens to his family inside telling friends that he's too big to be let inside.

Many people buy or adopt pets without realizing the responsibility that comes along with the new furry member of the family. Having a pet, whether it be a dog or cat, is almost like raising a baby. The difference between the two is that when a baby grows up the child becomes more independent. The child learns to feed himself, dress himself and is able to come in doors when it gets cold.

A dog or cat, however, is at the mercy of his owner from the day he is born to the day he dies. He can't let himself in the house when he gets cold. He can't open a can of dog food when he's hungry. He can't help himself to a glass of water.

Many pet owners don't realize how helpless a pet is until it's too late, however. Cruelty to animals always has been a problem in society. Puppies and kittens are so adorable, but when they grow up, they become nuisances to the owner so the owners neglect them or give them away. That abuse can have a traumatic effect on the animal.

Such pet owners should put themselves in the place of the animal. How would they like it if once they grew out of infancy their parents just let them fend for themselves on busy roads and abandoned lots? How would they find food and protection?

Abandoned animals also are a menace to society. Stray dogs and cats can contract rabies and attack people. The animals also could ravage garbage cans, terrorize children and carry fleas. Think of how much money cities could save if there was no need for city pounds because pet owners took responsibility for their animals.

Animals need lots of tender, loving care from their owners. Pets need to be treated as if they were a part of the family. If they get sick, they should be taken to a doctor, just as a child.

People need to realize what they are getting into when they take on the responsibility of a pet. If owners treat pets in an inhumane way, then they need to be treated in an inhumane way themselves.

Real Catholics

To the editor:

In regard to Trey Barker's editorial regarding Pope John Paul II, I would like to express my wholehearted agreement with his statement that the values of secular society in America and those taught by the Catholic Church cannot be reconciled. This is precisely the reason that Father Curran and others have been in conflict with Rome. He and others have been trying in various ways to combine the two opposing sets of values under the guise of "compassion" and the "right to dissent."

However, Mr. Barker displays his lack of understanding of the Catholic Church when he labels the reprimands given by Pope John Paul II as "persecution." What he and many other Americans have trouble understanding is that the church is not a democracy and never will be. The reason for this is not that the Pope and the hierarchy are power-hungry men who want to control 840 million people. The purpose of the hierarchy is not to satisfy the majority, or to appease minorities, but to preserve and proclaim the truth as revealed by Jesus Christ. A democracy cannot serve this purpose.

Father Curran and those like him have the right under the U.S. Constitution to say whatever they want to. But they do not have the right to claim to speak in the name of the church, when in fact they do not. In order to shepherd his flock, the pope has to make sure that there is no confusion about what Catholic teaching is.

Mr. Barker also is mistaken in thinking that American Catholics love the pope but don't really listen to him. I can guarantee that there is not one single Catholic in America who does not accept all the teachings of the church. This is simply because those who do not are not Catholics in reality. The small number of people who do speak out against the authority of Rome should consider why they insist on using the name Catholic for themselves. Perhaps the term is fashionable these days. It certainly helps get them into the news.

Of course, this definition of a Catholic probably drastically reduces the estimated 840 million membership of the church, but we are not interested in maintaining our status as the largest Christian church, but in knowing and proclaiming the truth, who is Jesus Christ. It would be a tragedy if, as Mr. Barker suggests, yet another schismatic church were to be formed in America, but regardless of what a few or even many people may do, God never changes, and neither will his church.

Support women's team

To the editor:

I share Mary Owens' concern for support of athletics for women on the Texas Tech campus. In the beginning, games were played in the women's gym with limited space for fans. Now, thanks to increased interest, the games are played in the beautiful Student Recreation Center or the Municipal Coliseum.

For 11 years High Riders have been promoting spirit while enjoying supporting our women's teams and having fun together. The bigger the crowd, the more exciting the game.

Thanks, Court Jesters, for coming to the game Jan. 28 and keeping things lively. Our cheerleaders are at every game, so come help them cheer these hard-working young ladies and inspire them to victory. We want to hear those victory bells ring, and with everyone's encouragement, we will

Addressing prisons

To the editor:

A federal judge has started closing prisons to new inmates. A West Texas sheriff has threatened to handcuff prisoners to fences if prisoners are not accepted. Most prisoners are released from prisons after serving one-third of their prison term. A prisoner who had been released early from a Texas prison has killed a police officer in West Texas. What is happening to the prison and judicial system in this country?

A criminal in the United States has little or no fear of the laws or threat of prison. For example, in The New York Times, March 1, 1984, it was reported that only 19.4 percent of all felony arrests resulted in felony convictions. The vast majority of arrests were plea-bargained into misdemeanor charges. The chance for a jail term for any felony arrest was less than 1 percent according to a Jan. 4, 1981, issue of this same paper. It is possible that these rates are representative of the United States as a whole.

At the same time, countries like Japan and Great Britain have very low crime rates. In Japan, there is a 99.5 percent conviction rate for violent crime. In Great Britain, there is an 83.5 percent conviction rate for murder and an 87.5 percent conviction rate for other violent crimes.

It is unfortunate that the same guarantees of the accused are not like those of the United States, but it is even more unfortunate that the U.S. prison system is not like those countries. There, a person convicted of a crime is not afforded parole, time off for "good behavior," or many of the things that prisoners are afforded in the United States. As a result of the high conviction rate and the strict prison sentences, potential criminals are deterred by the risks involved in committing a crime.

So, what is the proper way to solve this problem that is plaguing this state and the nation as a whole? First, quit releasing prisoners early. Make them serve the full term they are awarded, without parole or time off "for good behavior." After all, it was their behavior that landed them in prison to begin with.

Second, even if the prisons are too crowded, make do with what they have. Are they not the ones who violated the standards of society? Third, stop plea bargaining and probation for violent criminals. They should not be released back into society. Fourth, for minor crimes that carry jail terms (i.e., shoplifting and solicitation for pandering) have these persons do community service work as an alternative to jail or prison. Just make sure the violent criminals serve their full terms.

If some solution is not found soon, it will be even more dangerous for those of us that have committed no crimes, and we will have to then be forced to insure our own security, as the number of violent types will far outnumber the police.

Republicans thwart Reagan's clean-up bill veto

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The House, with scores of Republicans ignoring a final plea by President Reagan, voted overwhelmingly Tuesday to override the president's veto of $20 billion water quality legislation.

The 401-26 roll-call vote sent the issue to the Senate, which was expected to follow the House's lead today and hand Reagan a defeat in the first big spending confrontation of the 100th Congress.

Several hours before Tuesday's vote, Reagan sent a message to Capitol Hill through Republican leaders that he wanted GOP members to support his position that the legislation is too expensive in times of huge budget deficits.

Except for the 26 Republicans voting to sustain the veto, the plea — which was not accompanied by any heavy White House lobbying — fell on deaf ears. Joining the 254 Democrats voting to override were 147 Republicans.

House GOP Leader Robert Michel of Illinois urged party unity, saying that although he had originally voted for the popular legislation, the veto last Friday "changes the complexion of the situation."

Michel said that with Congress and the White House $6 billion apart on spending, the cleanliness of America's waterways was not the issue — "wise and prudent use of tax dollars, that's the issue."

But Michel's plea was quickly undercut by calls for a veto override by Reps. John Paul Hammerschmidt, R-Ark., and Arlan Stangeland, R-

Minn., two of the key GOP members in the process of drafting the authorization bill.

"I believe President Reagan has listened to the wrong advice," Stangeland said. "This body needs to send a strong message to the president and the American people that this Congress won't tolerate delays in the cleaning up of American waters."

Hammerschmidt said Reagan's argument that the bill is too expensive was reminiscent of the one used in 1972 when President Nixon vetoed the bill creating the clean water program. That veto was also overridden, launching what is considered one of the nation's most successful environmental cleanup efforts.

The dispute between Capitol Hill and the White House centers on $18 billion authorized by the bill to provide assistance to the states through 1994 to construct wastewater and sewage treatment plants.

Reagan, who last year called for $6 billion in state aid, last month unsuccessfully offered Congress a compromise at $12 billion. But his foes say that even $18 billion will leave states far short of the $108 billion the Environmental Protection Agency estimates will be required for plant construction by 2000.

There has been no battle over the other $2 billion in the legislation, including $400 million to help launch the nation's first concerted attack against a major source of polluted water: storm water runoff from streets, farms and mines.

The legislation also seeks to strengthen the clean water effort by focusing attention on large polluted waterways such as the Great Lakes.

Senate sanctions inmate early release bill

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — A Senate committee on Tuesday approved a bill, which has been endorsed by Gov. Bill Clements, to allow possible early release of up to 10,000 non-violent inmates to ease prison overcrowding.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby said the bill would be presented for Senate debate this afternoon.

"The 6-1 committee vote indicates the strong support it has in the Senate," Hobby told reporters afterwards.

Sen. Ted Lyon, D-Rockwall, who was the sole opposing vote, said he likely would try to amend the bill during Senate debate to eliminate some of the inmates that would be eligible for parole.

Sen. Bob McFarland, R-Arlington, told the Senate Criminal Justice Committee the measure had been worked out with the cooperation of Clements, Hobby, the House speaker, attorney general and appropriate agencies in response to federal court demands.

U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice has threatened to fine Texas up to $24 million a month beginning April 1 if it does not make prison improvements ordered by his court.

"This bill increases the pool to 10,000 inmates that could be considered for increased good conduct time credits or parole if the prison system reaches 95 percent," said McFarland.

Under current law, the prison system can accept no more inmates from counties when the 95 percent limit is reached.

A key portion of McFarland's bill would automatically award up to 90 days of good time credit toward possible parole for non-violent inmates serving less than 10 years, if the 95 percent limit is reached.

The attorney general would notify the governor, who would declare an emergency overcrowding situation, and the Texas Department of Corrections would credit each of the eligible inmates with good time.

Rider Scott, general counsel for Clements, said the governor did not advocate early release of inmates.

"However, in this situation with the federal court contempt order, the governor feels that he should shoulder the responsibility to order releases under intense supervision."

Buchanan resigns to take part in right-wing causes

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Patrick Buchanan, President Reagan's combative chief of communications, added his name Tuesday to a growing list of administration resignations, saying he could work for conservative causes more effectively outside the White House.

Buchanan, who announced late last month that he would not run for president, has seemed frustrated in his two-year campaign to get the administration follow a hardline conservative script.

Announcing the resignation, presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Buchanan "feels he can better influence the issues and politics of 1988 and the direction of the conservative movement and Republican Party by speaking and writing from a vantage point outside the White House."

He will leave the $77,400-a-year job March 1, joining an exodus of top administration officials departing with two years left in the administration.

Fitzwater said the turnover was healthy. "You get a lot of new blood in ... It's good to get new energies in for the last drive."

Some people delayed their departure, Fitzwater said, "because of the Iranian situation and didn't want to leave while there was difficulty." He was referring to the controversy over the secret sale of arms to Iran and the diversion of profits to Nicaraguan rebels.

That affair produced a shakeup in Reagan's National Security Council staff and cost the president his national security adviser, John Poindexter — replaced by Frank Carlucci — and a top aide on the NSC, Oliver North.

In addition, Reagan has lost his longtime spokesman, Larry Speakes and his deputy, Peter Roussel; CIA Director William Casey; political adviser Mitchell Daniels; Cabinet secretary Alfred Kingon; drug-abuse adviser Carlton Turner; and the president's doctor, T. Burton Smith.

Clements to offer budget to Legislature

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements, who campaigned on a "scrub the budget" theme, will present his budget plan to the Legislature in his State of the State address today.

The 30-minute speech and an accompanying 65-page budget document will outline the Republican's plans for operating state government and coping with a budget deficit projected at up to $6 billion over the next 30 months, aides said.

"He's going to touch on what he feels are the key points in the budget proposals he's putting before the Legislature," said Reggie Bashur, the governor's press secretary.

"You'll have exactly what he's proposing for the major categories of spending, for the major agencies," Bashur said, adding, "It's a balanced budget."

Officials urge AIDS testing in hospitals

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal health officials, worried by an increase in AIDS among heterosexuals, said Tuesday they may recommend that AIDS blood tests be mandatory for all patients admitted to hospitals and even couples applying for marriage licenses.

The test for antibodies to the AIDS virus now is required only for blood donors.

Large cocaine bust starts investigation

MARFA (AP) — Two people were arrested and 663 pounds of cocaine was confiscated in the second-largest drug seizure in West Texas, officials said Tuesday.

"You're dealing with a large-scale Colombia-Mexico-United States network," said Phil Jordan, special agent in charge of the DEA in Dallas. "As far as this case is concerned, the investigation is just beginning."

Flight for Life crew puts experience in the skies

By DAWNA JARVIS
News Staff Writer

Flight For Life, an area air medical service provided by Lubbock's St. Mary of the Plains Hospital, was created through the generosity of a group of nuns in California.

Last October, the Sisters of Orange, Calif., donated money to the Lubbock hospital in order to allow the hospital to lease a helicopter and buy the equipment necessary to get the Flight For Life program off the ground.

After receiving the money from the sisters in California, hospital personnel began laying the groundwork for the service. After eight weeks of planning and hiring, the program began on Jan. 5 with newly hired chief flight nurse Bill Holland at the helm.

Holland said Flight for Life is one of about 150 such services in the country and the only one in the West Plains area. The Allouette III helicopter, used by the crew, has been named Spirit One and is the same type of aircraft used in the Swiss Alps for emergency situations, he said. The service includes Lubbock and the area within a 150-mile radius.

The program primarily serves trauma and cardiac patients but has the capability of assisting obstetric, burn and neonatal patients as well, Holland said.

"The patient can be taken to an emergency room or operating room within two minutes after landing," he said. "The crew can be ready and airborne within five minutes of the emergency call."

Holland said Spirit One can fly to the patient's location at a speed of 120 mph. The crew consists of a pilot, a paramedic and a registered nurse.

To qualify as a crew member, a person must have worked extensively in the emergency field and have knowledge of paramedic medicine as well as nursing.

"The pilots are veterans of the Vietnam War and have a combined flying time of 25,000 hours," he said. "The work can be stressful. Three hours of flying is equal to eight hours of a regular work day."

Holland said Spirit One can carry two patients at a time in addition to the three crew members. A full life support system along with an intensive care unit bag is carried aboard the craft.

The flight crews help train ground crews. Sheriff's department officers, paramedics and doctors in the area are considered to be ground crews.

Flight crews also perform public relations work for the area towns, showing them the helicopter and the equipment on board. Additionally, they must work in the emergency room, intensive care unit, cardiac care unit and labor and delivery to maintain their medical skills.

Crew members make daily visits to all the patients they bring in and keep up with them after they have left the hospital. The crew takes great pride in helping the patients they work with and enjoy seeing them go home, Holland said.

"Seeing the people go home is the most rewarding part of the job," said paramedic Richard Pope.

Pope has been a paramedic for 12 years in the Lubbock area and considers his work with Flight for Life his best job to date.

"The work is fast-paced and extremely enjoyable," he said. "The crew works together like a family and does a lot of kidding to one another on the ground."

Each of the crew members complements each other with their different areas of expertise, Pope said. The nurse has the clinical knowledge while the paramedic has the field knowledge, he said.

Mindy Eyre has been nursing for 10 years and also considers Flight For Life her best job to date.

"Everyone is supportive and appreciative of the work we do," she said. "The emergency and critical work combined with the PR make for an enjoyable job."

Spirit One pilot John Campos has been flying for 19 years, including flying during the Vietnam War. He said the training he received in Vietnam was excellent training and recommended such training for anyone interested in similar work.

Campos is employed by Evergreen

He said when he found out about Flight for Life, he knew the Lubbock area needed such a service, so he immediately applied for the position. He said he does not consider the job stressful because he considers flying to be second nature. Campos said he also visits the patients.

Tech career service to offer camp job fair

By CINDY PANDOLFO
News Staff Writer

The Texas Tech Career Planning and Placement Service will kick off next week's Sixth Annual Summer Camp Job Fair with three seminars designed to help students improve job-hunting skills.

"Students just don't realize that now is the time to begin looking for summer jobs and internships," said Sandy Sites, a career counselor. "Most students don't even think about summer jobs until spring break is here, and that's just too late."

The job fair will begin with a seminar Thursday on finding a summer job, followed by a resume-writing workshop Friday. A seminar Monday will explore interviewing techniques. All seminars will be conducted in 356 West Hall.

The summer camp job fair will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday in the University Center ballroom. More than 30 representatives from camps in Texas will be present to discuss summer employment opportunities and to accept applications.

Sites said the summer camp positions offer students an opportunity to develop many job-related skills and can be a valuable and interesting addition to a resume.

"Students have the chance to develop skills, such as leadership and organization, that employers look for in applicants," Sites explained. "Counselors must be able to communicate on an interpersonal level, which demonstrates another important skill."

Students from any major can benefit personally from the experience as well as professionally, she said, and students have an opportunity to make money while having a great time.

Sites said students who enjoy the outdoors and who like to work with children should consider applying at one of the many summer camp programs. Camp representatives will be accepting applications for positions such as program directors, counselors, business managers, nurses, housekeepers and recreation instructors. Positions are also available for creative art instructors, chefs, cooks and hotel assistants.

Students interested in career-oriented summer positions should visit the Career Planning and Placement Service. Information is available for positions across the United States.

Summer employment opportunities and internships are limited, so students should complete application requirements as soon as possible.

For more information about summer jobs, students can call 742-2210 or visit the Career Planning and Placement Service at 335 West Hall.

Women's studies involves varied academic topics

By ANN McBRIDE
News Staff Writer

Although women's studies is new to the academic curricula, program coordinator Laurie Churchill, assistant professor for classical and romance languages, hopes the new program eventually will have an impact on the cultural imperatives and societal structures that are affecting women of past and present.

Churchill said women's studies is an interdisciplinary field including law, history, sociology, anthropology, humanities, the arts and also draws information from the natural sciences.

She said the rapidly changing character of gender roles in society is one reason why women's studies has become an important field and the changing arena of gender roles and responsibilities has in turn had a profound impact on many academic disciplines.

Churchill said enrolling in women's studies courses allow students to be introduced into this new field of study.

Both men and women have the opportunity to benefit from participation in women's studies courses, she said. However, at present there are no males enrolled in the women's studies seminar which Churchill is teaching this spring.

This semester's seminar "Gender and Interpretation: The Impact of Feminism on the Academy" will present women from various professional and career fields with a focus on feminist scholarship.

Women's studies courses are electives open to all students. An interdisciplinary undergraduate minor also is available.

Churchill said the courses can be beneficial to students because as a result of their participation in the program, they can develop an awareness of career opportunities with a special focus on women's concerns.

Week filled with rockin' events

By JILL JOHNSON
Lifestyles Staff Writer

There's no excuse to sit home this week with all that's happening around town. The weekend promises to be one of true rockin' and boppin' kind of fun. So throw the books aside and take note of all the festivities.

Kicking off the fun, the University Center will feature "Stormy Weather" tonight in continuation of the spring UC Cinematech Film Series. The show, which will begin at 8 p.m. today in the Allen Theater, is $2.50 for general admission and $1.50 with a Texas Tech student ID card.

For a sure thriller, lovers of the grotesque can howl over "Aliens" Friday and Saturday in the UC Allen Theater. Friday's showings are scheduled for 3 p.m., 6 p.m. and 9 p.m. The matinee is priced at $1; other shows cost $1.50 for students. Saturday's showing will begin at 8

HUB CITY HAPPENINGS

Night owls can catch the UC's mid-night movie Saturday — this week's movie being "Animal House." Prices are $1.50 and $1 for Tech students.

A round of wrestlers has hit the Hub this week and will battle for the World Tag Team Title tonight at Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. Wrestlers include Lance von Erich, the Dingo Warrior vs. Al Madril and Brian Adias; Mike von Erich vs. Master Gee; Tony Atlas vs. Matt Borne, alias Black Superman; Steve Simpson vs. Bob the Catman Bradley, and Robert Soto vs. RPM Tommy Lane. The show will begin at 7 p.m. today, and general admission seats cost $8, ringside seats $12 and children 12 and under get in free with an adult. Make it a family affair!

The Liquidators will perform at No Frills Grill Friday and Saturday. The group will perform at 9 p.m. both nights, and the cover will be $3.

The Texas Cafe and Bar will feature Mike Porter, a country/easy listening singer, from noon to 3 p.m. Friday. It's a rare thing, no cover, so better run out and take advantage of it.

The Lone Star Oyster Bar on 34th Street and Flint Avenue has started a "Yacht Club." Lucky members receive a hat, T-shirt and daily food and drink specials. The opportunity to join is not available every day; however, people can climb aboard Saturday, beginning at 4 p.m., and enjoy drink specials until closing. The price to join is $15 per person, and be ready to get your mug taken for a photo ID membership card.

For the diehard rockers, Jam and Stardate concerts present RATT, live, here in Lubbock Saturday night!

The Los Angeles based group, with special guest Queensryche, will begin rocking at 7:30 p.m. at Lubbock Municipal Coliseum. Tickets are on sale at Ralph's Records and Video Expo for $14.50.

Fast and Cool will feature the Austin-based band 14K Sunday night. The band is known for playing popular, current music, and the cover will be $3.

Main Street Saloon will have the ever-popular jam night tonight and Sunday where various local bands jam together. Cover is free at the door. The group Main Frame will perform at 9 p.m. Friday, and the cover will be "two bucks."

Tickets for Eddie Murphy's March performance, sponsored by UC Programs, will cost $14 for Tech students and $16 for others. Monty Python's Graham Chapman, scheduled to appear March 26, has changed his lecture to April 6.

'Stormy Weather'

Andrew Stone's 1943 musical, "Stormy Weather," starring Bill Robinson and Lena Horn, will be shown tonight as part of the University Center Programs Cinematech Film Series. The film pays tribute to entertainer Bill "Bo Jangles" Robinson and features such songs as "Stormy Weather" and "Ain't Misbehavin'." The film starts at 8 p.m. today in the Allen Theater in the UC. Admission is $2.50 and $1.50 for Tech students with an ID.

Broadcast failure shuts down KTXT-FM

By MISSY COSTELLO
Lifestyles Staff Writer

As faithful listeners have noticed, Texas Tech's radio station KTXT-FM 88 is temporarily off the air as of Sunday, making this possibly the longest period it has not broadcast because of technical difficulties.

"If we're off tomorrow (Wednesday), it will be the longest period KTXT has been off the air, at least in the time I've been here," said Clive Kinghorn, KTXT director. Kinghorn has been at Tech since 1970.

KTXT started experiencing broadcast difficulties at 11:20 p.m. Jan. 28, and the station has been on and off the air since that time.

Broadcasting problems have plagued the station since the beginning of the spring semester, said station manager Leigh Parish.

"We had problems signing back on when school started," Parish said. KTXT will resume broadcasting as soon as possible. Parish said anxious classical listeners have been calling the station, wondering what has happened to the mid-morning programming.

Even though the station has been off the air since Sunday, "people are still calling and requesting songs," Parish said, laughing.

The broadcasting problem is in the radio transmitter, which is housed in a building near KTXT-TV, Channel 5, at 1700 Indiana Ave. The 5,000-watt transmitter is more than 20 years old, according to communications engineer Donald Patterson. The transmitter is used 19 hours a day five days a week and 24 hours a day two days a week.

"First it blew a diode," Patterson said. "Then it burnt up a resistor and the rectifier stacks blew out."

In short, "everything works, but it won't work," he said. Patterson and Alvie Ivey, manager of broadcast operations, have been working diligently to find and solve the problem.

Patterson said the station had a similar problem two years ago which caused KTXT to temporarily sign off the air.

Tech tests consistency against lowly Rice

By DON WILLIAMS
Associate Sports Editor

Texas Tech Coach Gerald Myers spoke earlier this week of an important ingredient his team has developed over the past month of Southwest Conference play.

The Red Raiders will have an excellent opportunity to test that ingredient when they square off with the Rice Owls at 7:30 p.m. today at Autry Court in Houston.

That's because consistency regularly is put to the test not against the best opponents, but the weakest.

"I think we've improved to the point that we're playing a lot more consistent now that we've got into conference," Myers said. "In December, the roles were unsettled and our depth was unsettled."

Of late, the Raiders have developed and relied heavily on one of the league's deeper benches that includes the 10 points per game contribution of senior guard Wendell Owens and increasing — and important — minutes for freshmen Scott Whillock and Wes Lowe and sophomore Bryan Barriere.

In Saturday's 56-55 win over Houston, Myers went with his youthful bench corps inside to fill in for 6-7 forward Dewayne Chism, who had a rocky start defensively against the Cougars'

Greg Anderson.

The jelling of the rotation has translated into six Tech victories in the last eight outings and the current second-place tie with Baylor at 6-3.

The 1-8 Owls, though, are just the type of team that could leave a bad taste in the mouth that speaks of consistency. And Rice, despite the distraction of Coach Tommy Suits' resignation Friday, is not without its weapons.

Senior guard-forward Greg Hines, who scored only seven points in the Owls' 65-47 loss to Tech in Lubbock, currently is averaging 19.5 points per game.

Sophomore center Andy Gilchrist is contributing a 10.5 scoring norm and is the SWC's eighth leading rebounder at 7.3 per contest. Rice also has been bolstered by the recent return of playmaking guard Mike Cooper from a sprained ankle. Cooper is averaging 7.3 points an outing.

Can Raiders avoid Owl ambush on SWC trail?

Chris Hooten
Sports Staff Writer

Gilchrist converted on the other end to give the Owls a two-point win. In this decade, Tech owns a 9-4 series advantage over Rice, but four of the games have gone into overtime, including a double overtime slugfest.

All the way to its final destination, the Southwest Conference Post-Season Tournament in Dallas, the SWC basketball byway is marked by more warning signs than a two-lane pig trail winding through the New Mexico mountains.

For the Texas Tech Red Raiders, a bright yellow sign just outside Houston (marred with holes from rifle slugs and four-letter words from a spray paint artist) reads CAUTION: RICE AHEAD.

Like an abused road sign, the Rice Owls don't get a whole lot of respect. Many teams and their fans don't so much as take a foot off the accelerator after seeing the warning.

When your average basketball fan looks at the Owls 1-8 conference record, 7-13 overall, he or she would be hard pressed to believe that Rice could be a legitimate threat to the Houston high school favorite.

Less than a week ago, the Owls lost fifth-year head coach Tommy Suits, who resigned, and Sunday they played their hearts out before losing to Texas, 70-69.

The Owls must be ready to fold like a one-egg puddin', right?

Wrong.

History tells us differently. Last season's Tech squad, which eventually won the SWC tournament and represented the conference in the NCAA tourney, could manage only a split with the pesky Owls. The Raiders won 51-50 in Houston but lost 52-50 at home.

In the first meeting, all-SWC guard Tony "Buzzer Beater" Benford hit a shot with only 11 seconds remaining to beat the Owls in Houston. In Lubbock, Tech guard Sean Gay missed a slam dunk late in the game and Rice's Andy

In the first matchup with Rice in the 1980-81 season, Rice won in overtime, 52-50. Both the games in the 1982-83 season went into OT with Tech winning both, 54-50 and 69-67. The first of two meetings in the 1983-84 season went into double overtime, with Tech finally pulling away for a 76-68 decision.

If you take away a 78-54 Tech blowout in 1984-85 and this season's first contest, the games with Rice have been extremely close. In those Tech victories, the Raiders have won by a slim average of 3.5 points.

Maybe the reason the Owls are so dangerous could be explained by Bob Dylan's lyrics to "Like a Rolling Stone." "When you've got nothin', you've got nothin' to lose."

Once more, Rice is close to another no-lose situation when they play Tech tonight. The Owls are battling with SMU for that eighth-place finish in the conference which would guarantee them a spot in the SWC tournament, but realistically they probably won't get that.

The Raiders have much more on the line. Tech is fighting to finish as high as possible in the conference standings with hopes of leaving Reunion Arena with its third consecutive tournament crown.

Although a conference championship is not totally out of reach, the chances of TCU (9-0 in SWC) faltering are slim and none. Thus, so are the championship hopes for the rest of the league's teams.

Tech has gotten off on the right foot for the second half of the conference race with a big 56-55 overtime win over Houston, and the Raiders are sittin' pretty, tied for second place with Baylor at 6-3.

Enter Rice.

The lowly Owls would like nothing

See HOOTEN, page 7

Logsdon, Koncak guide Raiders past Owls, 77-69

HOUSTON (Special) — Texas Tech guard Lisa Logsdon scored 22 points and post Julia Koncak added 15 to lead the Red Raiders to a 77-69 Southwest Conference win over the Rice Owls Tuesday night at Autry Court.

"I thought Logsdon played very well," Tech Coach Marsha Sharp said. "She hit some big shots, and a lot of those were under extreme pressure."

The Raiders improved their conference record to 6-4 and are 13-8 overall, while the Owls dropped to 5-4 and 12-7.

Rice closed within three points of the Raiders three times in the second half. Tech couldn't shake the Owls until 5:51 left in the game, when reserve guard Janice Davis took a back-court pass and connected on a layup, giving the Raiders a 62-57 lead.

That triggered a nine-point Tech run, and the Raiders hit key free throws down the stretch to eliminate any chance of a Rice comeback.

After the Davis layup and a Rice time-out, Tech reserve post Lynn Killough hit an eight-foot jumper to make the score 64-57 and the Owls were forced to call another time-out.

Rice subsequently committed a turnover and Tech forward Darla Isaacs responded on the other end for the Raiders by connecting on one of two free throws after being fouled by Owl forward Karen Sowada.

Tech continued the scoring on its next possession when Koncak scored from 15 feet to make the count 67-57. After taking its third timeout in a 2½ minute span, the Owls fouled Logsdon, who hit both free throws to give Tech a 12-point lead, 69-57 with 2:30 left to play.

"We really needed to win this one badly," Sharp said. "If we can come back and beat Arkansas (Saturday in Fayetteville), we will have beaten all the teams above us (in the standings) except for Texas."

The Raiders' win also avenged a 65-55 loss to the Owls in the first meeting between the two teams.

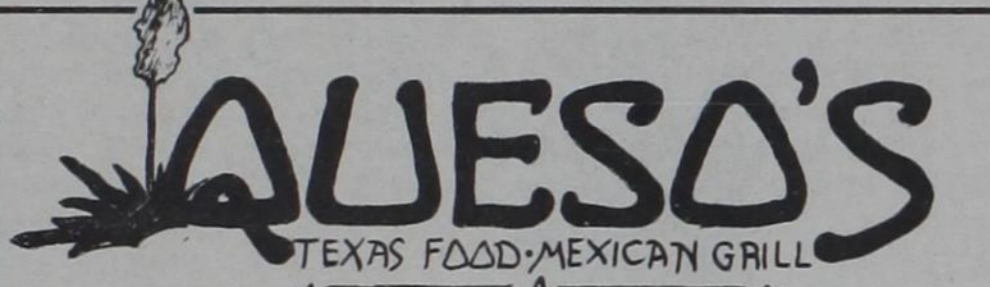

"The difference in this game and the one back in Lubbock was our execution," Sharp said. "We executed pretty well tonight, but in Lubbock we didn't."

Rice got 16 points from forward Holly Jones and 12 from backup Amelia Cooper. Owl guard Angie Phea, a Lubbock Monterey product, was held scoreless after burning the Raiders for 12 points in their first meeting Jan. 7 in Lubbock.

Texas Tech, SMU to have day in court before NCAA Committee on Infractions

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Southern Methodist University officials are expected to be summoned before the NCAA Feb. 13-16 in San Diego for a hearing to decide the fate of the school's football program, according to the school's faculty representative.

Lonnie Kliever said Monday night he expects school officials will be told they will appear before the NCAA Committee on Infractions meeting in San Diego.

"Our expectations have been all along that we would be in San Diego," he said. "I'm certainly optimistic that we will be appearing before the infractions committee, and that's what we've wanted all along. It's been a long, difficult and arduous business but it has been well worthwhile."

Texas Tech's football program, accused by the NCAA of 36 violations, also is scheduled to appear before the committee in San Diego, according to Tech Sports Information Director Joe Hornaday.

NCAA enforcement director David Berst said he couldn't confirm SMU will get a hearing in San Diego, but he said university officials would be notified of the decision Tuesday.

SMU officials declined comment Tuesday to The Associated Press.

SMU officials have postponed hiring a football coach and athletic director while waiting for the committee to rule on allegations against the school.

Berst said last week he did not know if investigators could complete the case in time for presentation in San Diego.

If the case were not completed in time for the San Diego hearing, it would have to be heard at committee hearings scheduled for April 11-12 in Kansas City, Mo., or April 22-24 in

Hilton Head, S.C.

The investigation into SMU's football program began after former linebacker David Stanley said he received $25,000 to sign a national letter of intent with SMU and was paid $750 a month while playing for the school.

Stanley also said he was paid after SMU was placed on probation in August 1985 for recruiting violations.

The football program could be suspended for up to two years if the school is found guilty of additional violations.

NCAA officials also are investigating a report that senior tight end Albert Reese was supplied a rent-free apartment by an SMU booster banned from associating with the football program.

Berst said SMU officials cooperated with the NCAA to try to get the investigation completed in time.

better than to knock off the Raiders. If history repeats itself — and it normally does — Rice could foul up a nice run by the Raiders (four wins in the past five outings going into tonight) and put Tech right back into the middle of the conference pack.

Every game is a must win. Winning at Rice should be easier, but you know it won't be.

Warning signs save lives on America's thoroughfares. Taking the Owls seriously and playing intensely the remainder of the season might save the Raiders the anguish of talking about the could haves and should haves when they reach their final destination.

IM BRIEFS

Valentine's Day Fun Run Scheduled

Enter the Valentine's Day Race, which is approximately two miles, as a couple on Feb. 14 at 10 a.m. by the Student Recreation Center.

Prizes will be compliments of Orlando's Restaurants. These awards include: dinner for two for the co-rec team which has the fastest combined time; dinner for two for the co-rec team which is closest to their total predicted time; and a post race drawing will be held for two Orlando's pizza certificates and two $5 gift certificates for the SRC Sports Shop.

A person does not need a partner to run. Individuals are encouraged to participate.

A $5 fee will be charged for a t-shirt, however, it is not required to run. Shirts will be sold on race day if available.

Entries are due in the SRC Office by 5 p.m. Feb. 13.

Injury Clinic for Semester Begins

Dr. Robert Yost, orthopedic surgeon and head of the sports medicine program at the Texas Tech Health Science Center, will begin his weekly injury clinic at 7 p.m. today in Room 201 of the Student Recreation Center.

The purpose of the weekly clinic is to educate students concerning athletic-type injuries. Also, Dr. Yost will examine and make recommendations to people with athletic or recreational injuries.

All injury clinics are free and open to anyone eligible to enter the SRC. It is a unique opportunity to have Dr. Yost available to students on a regular basis. For further information, contact the Rec Sports Office at 742-3351.

Noon Faculty Fitness Class Set

A faculty-staff stretching and exercise class begins Thursday at 12:10 p.m. in the Mat Room of the Student Recreation Center.

The class runs approximately 30 minutes and will meet the remainder of the semester on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

This class will involve about 20 minutes of stretching and 10 minutes of exercise. It is a great opportunity to maintain and increase the body's flexibility.

Sign-ups are not required, interested people need only show up in the class on Tuesday or Thursday.

For additional information please call Rec Sports at 742-3351.

Ski Maintenance Workshop Arranged

The Recreational Sports Outdoor Program will sponsor a ski maintenance workshop today and Thursday in the North Lobby of the Student Recreation Center.

Personnel from the Outdoor Rental Shop will help you petex and wax skis. They will provide tools, assistance and supplies. Salomon bindings will be adjusted free by a certified technician.

The workshop will be from 2-6 p.m. For more information call the Outdoor Shop at 742-2949.
