Reagan breaks silence, admits he erred in affair

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan said Wednesday he was "mad as a hornet" about damage to his administration from the Iran-Contra affair but acknowledged that he erred in being "stubborn in my pursuit of a policy that went astray."

In a speech from the Oval Office, Reagan noted that John Poindexter had testified he kept the president in the dark about the diversion of Iran arms-sale money. However, Reagan said "no president should ever be protected from the truth. No operation is so secret that it must be kept from the commander-in-chief."

"I had the right, the obligation to make my own decision," Reagan said.

The president said Poindexter and fired White House aide Oliver North "believed they were doing what I would have wanted done" in secretly supplying money to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Without saying directly whether he would have condoned or squelched the diversion, Reagan said, "I believed then and I believe now in preventing the Soviets from establishing a beachhead in Central America."

He repeated his contention that he did not know about the diversion of funds and said he had not even been aware that there were excess funds from the arms sales.

Reagan did not deal directly with a host of questions that have been raised by lawmakers about possible violations of U.S. laws in connection with the arms-to-Iran scheme. Nor did he say whether he would pardon North and Poindexter, who have acknowledged being under criminal investigation.

The president said the past nine months since the affair broke into the news "have been confusing and painful ones for the country."

Reagan said that over time he realized he had not been fully informed about what was happening in his White House and tried to find the answers.

"Some of the answers I don't like," Reagan said.

Reagan said Poindexter was wrong when he said the buck stops with him. "It stops with me," he said. "I am the one who is ultimately accountable to the American people."

The president said someone asked the other day why he wasn't outraged.

"Well, at times I've been mad as a hornet. Anyone would be — just look at the damage that's been done and the time that's been lost. But I've always found that the best therapy for outrage and anger is action."

Reagan said he has changed "both the system and the people who operate it."

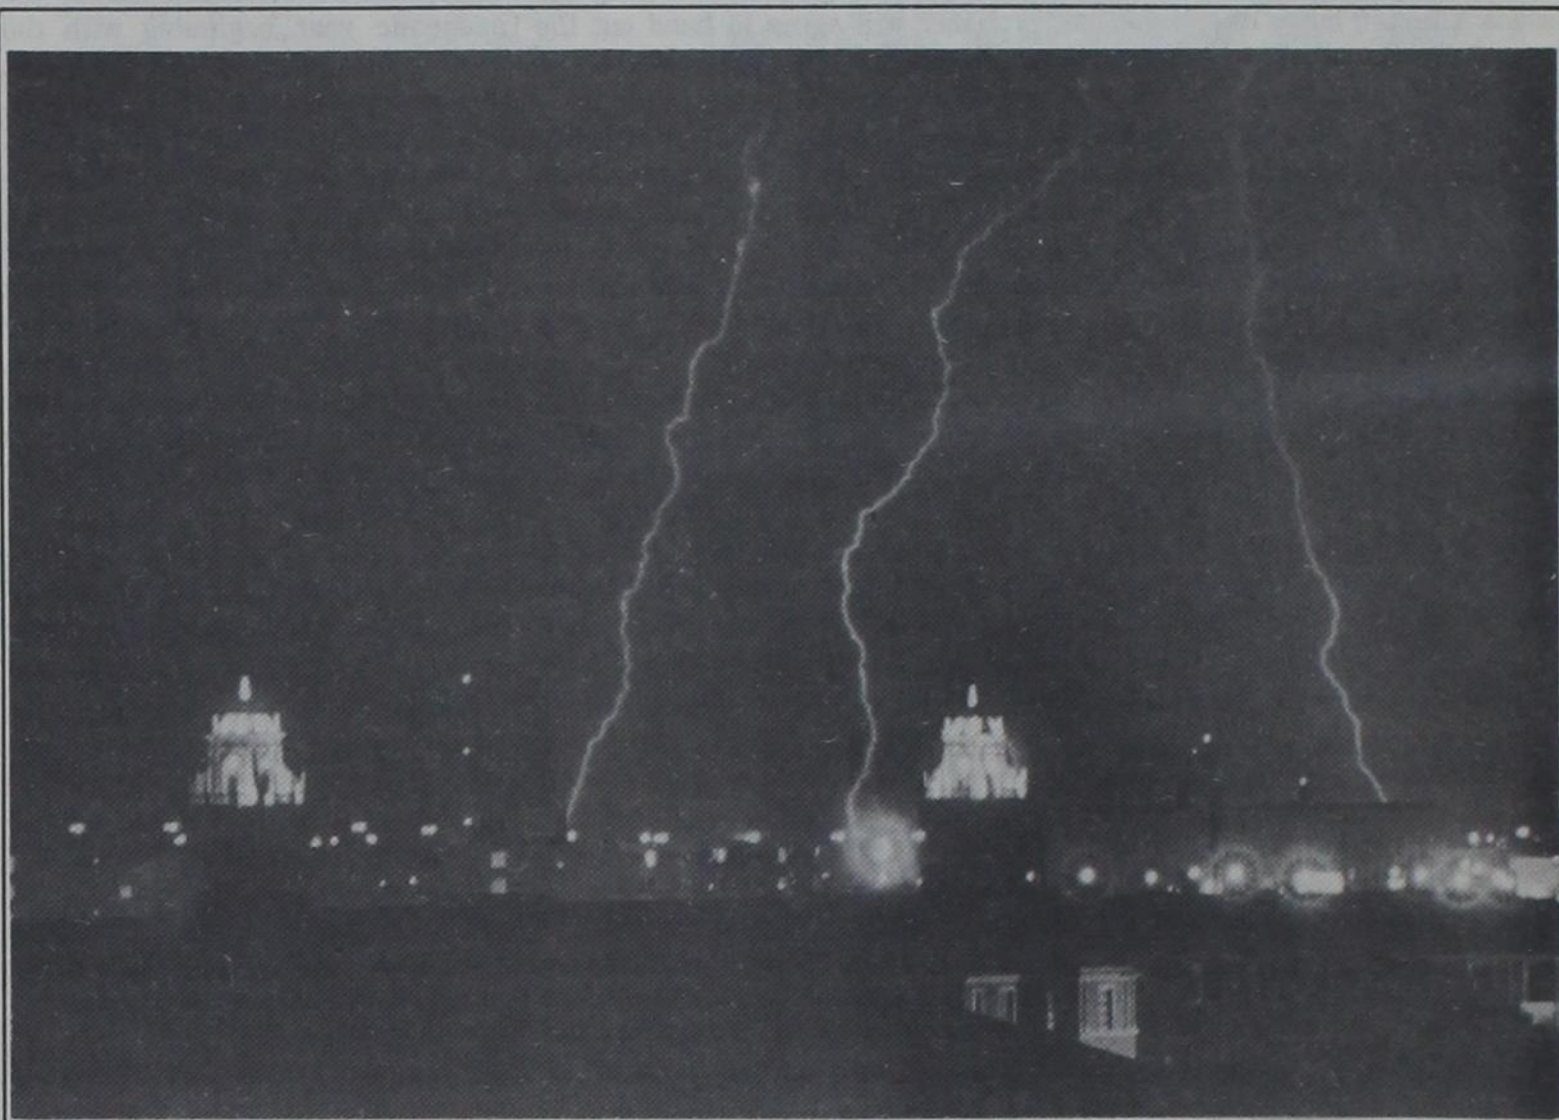

He acknowledged anew that his top Cabinet aides were right when they said his initiative with Iran would be perceived as "an arms for hostages deal and nothing more." But he said the image of American captives being held in chains "burdened my thoughts. This was a mistake."

Reagan said he had pondered how to explain to the nation what he had hoped to accomplish, "but I respect you too much to make excuses."

"The fact of the matter is that there's nothing I can say that will make the situation right."

"I was stubborn in my pursuit of a policy that went astray."

The speech — Reagan's third major address on the subject since last November — did not go into detail about the story of deceit, discord and possible criminal wrongdoing that was outlined in 11 weeks of congressional testimony.

Sweeping team finds fifth mine

By The Associated Press

MANAMA, Bahrain — A fifth floating mine has been found in a busy anchorage just south of the Persian Gulf where one blew a hole in an American-operated super-tanker two days ago, officials said Wednesday.

Iran said the decision by Britain and France to send minesweepers to the gulf, where it has been at war with Iraq since September 1980, showed support for the United States "in the various aggressions it has committed."

A Tehran radio commentary threatened a repeat of terrorist bomb attacks that killed about 300 U.S. and French military personnel in Beirut in 1983.

The United States accused Iran of obstructing U.N. peace efforts and said the world body should impose sanctions quickly if the "negative" attitude does not change. Iran said Tuesday it neither accepts nor rejects the Security Council's unanimous call July 20 for a cease-fire.

One of the five mines off the United Arab Emirates port of Fujairah was exploded by gunfire from a helicopter and divers defused another after retrieving it, Emirates officials in Abu Dhabi reported. They said the mines were found by disposal teams operating from coast guard patrol boats.

Tankers transship cargo and take on supplies at the anchorage, where 50 or more ships often can found at one time. It also is used for assembling convoys of reflagged Kuwaiti tankers and U.S. warships for trips up the gulf.

Mines appear to be turning up in "clusters" in an area about four miles in diameter, nine miles northeast of Fujairah, shipping sources reported.

Officials in Abu Dhabi said a patrol boat found the fifth mine in that area, near where the 274,347-ton Texaco Caribbean was damaged by a mine Monday. Sightings of the other four were reported Tuesday.

Three Kuwaiti tankers were in Kuwait's oil-loading port at the head of the gulf Wednesday to take on cargoes for the return trip with a U.S. Navy escort down the 500-mile-long waterway and through the narrow Strait of Hormuz.

No problems were reported on their trip up the gulf with four U.S. warships, the second of the convoys.

Montford says legislators sideswiped

By MICHELLE BLEIBERG
News Staff Writer

State Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, said Tuesday Gov. Bill Clements sideswiped legislators by exercising his constitutional line item veto power, which eliminated state funding for the Museum of Texas Tech University and the Ranching Heritage Center (RHC) effective in 1989.

"We worked hard to fight for Texas Tech ... Clements sideswiped us," Montford said.

Clements, in a press conference Monday, said Tech officials are able to transfer funds from other areas to support the museum and that the facility will remain open. Funds totaling $418,000 were cut from the museum, and $40,797 was cut from the RHC.

Montford said he knows Tech does not have the funds available to transfer to the museum but said he is working to try to find funding.

Montford was in Lubbock Tuesday to attend a League of Women Voters' press conference at which the date for a Montford roast was announced.

The roast will be at 6:30 p.m. Sept. 11 at Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. It will be the third annual roast presented by the League of Women Voters of Lubbock to raise money for the organization.

Guest roasters will include Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, state Treasurer Ann Richards and state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower.

Combest to show Contra slides in UC

U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, R-Lubbock, will present the slides that Lt. Col. Oliver North referred to during last month's Iran-Contra hearings at 7 p.m. today in the University Center Allen Theater.

The slide presentation will culminate a day-long slate of activities by the Lubbock congressman on the Texas Tech campus. Combest is touring the home district for about three weeks.

Combest will be present at a public meeting at 10:30 a.m. today and will take a tour of Tech at 1 p.m.

Touring with Combest is U.S. Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Mission, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee and co-sponsor of Combest's bill for a new plant stress and water conservation research laboratory to be housed at Tech.

The two congressmen will tour the plant stress research lab and meet with Tech students and faculty of the College of Agricultural Sciences. They also will view the site where construction of the laboratory will take place. The land for the lab is north of Fourth Street, across from the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

Midland sheriff says terrorist camps exist in Mexico

By The Associated Press

MIDLAND — Sheriff Gary Painter said Wednesday federal authorities have ignored his warning that five terrorist training camps are operating in Mexico.

The Midland County sheriff said he got the tip from a reliable informant in Mexico who had previously given him accurate information about narcotics traffic from that country to the United States, including the Permian Basin.

With or without Bush

Houston may host first GOP debate

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — The first 1988 Republican presidential candidate televised debate may be held in Vice President George Bush's hometown, but it's uncertain whether he will take part, the show's producer says.

The vice president, who is registered to vote in Houston, still doesn't know if he will participate, said Warren Steibel, producer of the Oct. 28 special edition of the Public Broadcast Service "Firing Line." Bush's campaign strategists and Steibel met Tuesday in New York.

"I'm not trying to embarrass the vice president by doing it in Houston, but it probably will be embarrassing for him if he doesn't come," Steibel said. "This is one source who gave me the information," he said. "I don't know how many sources he had."

Painter said Cubans, Colombians and Libyans are selling drugs to finance their plans to export communism to Mexico and to harass the United States.

But when Painter flew to Washington, D.C., last summer to warn the CIA, FBI, State Department and U.S. Customs about the alleged training camps, all he got was a warning from the FBI that he might have broken several laws by gathering intelligence outside the country, Painter said.

FBI officials declined to comment on Painter's claims, but said they have looked into the matter.

"It's my duty that I make certain someone in authority got this information," the sheriff said. "I don't feel I violated any laws. If it comes down to you can't pass on any information concerning the security of the U.S., then something's wrong."

Painter said Wednesday he could not remember the exact locations of the camps. He said one was southwest of Ciudad Chihuahua in northern Mexico, one was in the vicinity of Hermosilla, near the west coast, two were near Tampico on the Gulf of Mexico and the other was somewhere in southern Mexico.

He said he was unsure who was being trained and what they were being taught, and that he cut off contact with the informant after the FBI told him he might be breaking the law.

A year after he delivered the warning, Painter expressed frustration with federal authorities.

"I know our leadership has been notified," he said, but noted he hasn't had any feedback. "I would feel more comfortable if someone would say, 'Shut up, we're working on it.'"

Bernardo M. Perez, FBI assistant special agent in El Paso, said the bureau looked into the matter, but declined comment on whether Painter's allegations were founded.

"The FBI has jurisdiction for the security of the United States; sheriffs and police chiefs do not," Perez said.

State Department spokesman, Don Hamilton, said the FBI or CIA most likely would investigate.

This 'glutton' is ready to start fall publishing

Linda
Burke
Editor

The summer edition of The University Daily has tried to bring its readers, during study and teaching breaks, some of the summer's hottest issues. The staff hopes its efforts have graced the pages of The UD in a professional manner.

During the summer months some of the stories the newspaper followed included the approval by Gov. Bill Clements of the biggest budget in Texas history after he exercised his line-item veto power to trim $167 million from the record-breaking $38 billion budget.

Along the way, Clements axed state funding beginning in 1989 for Texas Tech's museum and Ranching Heritage Center, among a number of other museums and programs. He also, no matter how ceremoniously, cut from the appropriations bill the "doomsday" clause, which would have made severe cuts in major education and research programs if a tax hike had not been agreed upon.

Tech's bursar's office received a summer-long facelift and reopened just in time to accommodate the influx of students for the fall semester.

Tech also received a token increase in its 1988-89 budget to enable university officials to give faculty and staff members the raise they have so desperately needed. But don't start counting the pennies yet, because rumor is that the Board of Regents probably will agree to hand out the raises on a merit basis instead of across-the-board.

On a downbeat, a three-alarm fire damaged offices and a storage closet in Tech's mass communications building after an unattended appliance shorted out. Repairs are being made to restore the fire- and smoke-damaged offices.

Also this summer, a new rule was introduced by the Office of Traffic and Parking that will prohibit students, faculty and staff members from stacking parking permits. Beginning the first day of school, citations will be issued for vehicles that have more than the current year's parking permit on the windshield. So much for displaying prestige or upperclassmanship.

If summer is any indication of the news flow the newspaper hopes to pass on to its readers, then those of you who are diligent to pick up your copy of The UD each morning will be getting daily diaries of what's happening on campus, in the city, in the state, in the nation and in the world.

Some of the changes in format and coverage The UD has instituted, such as Tip of the Week and Across the State, will be continued during the academic year beginning with the paper's first issue Aug. 31 — the first day of school.

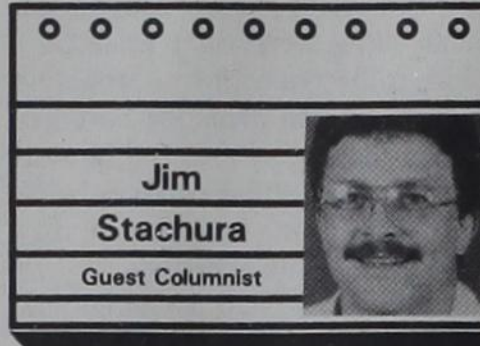

Ah, yes, the summer is almost over. In the past, summer editors have used this forum in the last issue of the summer paper to reflect upon their college careers, what they liked, what they didn't, what they'll remember and what they hope to soon forget. Since my graduation date still is nine months away, I will be back in the fall and spring to serve as the editor of your newspaper.

Some say I'm a glutton for punishment. I choose to think of being editor as practice for survival in "the real world."

Parting reflections

Faculty too fragmented to stand together, fight

Jim
Stachura
Guest Columnist

"Today I received a contract offer for a position at another university." The wording and circumstances may be different. The message is the same: I quit. I am leaving the faculty of Texas Tech.

I tried to think of a good analogy. Divorce? No, I am not going away mad. I'm just going away. Graduation? No, come September, I will be back in a classroom.

OK, forget analogies. Let's just go with a few reflections. That brings a different problem. As I prepare to leave now at the very end, only the extremes come to mind. The memories are vivid and true, but also selective.

I was so very optimistic when I came to Tech. After teaching for almost a decade at various schools, I finally felt at home. The energy and intellect of my new colleagues excited and challenged me. There seemed to be so much opportunity; I thought I might stay here forever.

My wife and I actually liked Lubbock, maybe even a lot. We were able to rent a huge house. Sometimes, we even talked about B-A-B-I-E-S.

The most vivid (but, again, selective) memories are of students. No other students have ever been, or will ever be, as different from me as "y'all." Yet, you appeared to make extra efforts to get to know me. You went out of your way to show me what was good about Texas Tech.

When I talk about other schools where I have taught, I almost never mention the students. When I do, it usually is in war stories. When I talk about Tech, I think that I will almost always mention the students. I also will end the stories by wondering whatever happened to you. You made me aware of so many new things. I will wonder if you did so for others later in your lives.

Things will be different when I think about the faculty at Tech. The years of faculty abuse by administration took their toll. The most common thing I hear from senior faculty is that they are glad they are not junior faculty. As senior faculty you seem to understand that too many departments at Tech offer little real opportunity at all. I thank you for not making my junior faculty life more miserable.

There were political battles in my department, just as there are in all academic departments. Sometimes they were nasty; sometimes they stemmed from petty things. I suppose that made us normal in a way.

I will remember something else about this faculty, however, which was darker, more sinister. It was what I will call a conspiracy of resignation. You never wanted to fight hard for the larger things. You resigned yourself to the way things are. You reinforced each others' feelings of futility.

I quit a job in law enforcement 10 years ago because it seemed that the only way to survive was to be more and more brutal. It appeared that the only way to survive as faculty at Tech was to be weak and indecisive. Students told me that the administration likes you that way.

A faculty as a group can be only as strong as the individuals that comprise it. I will remember the faculty here as comprised of just that, individuals. The fragmentation extends further upward. Departments and colleges more often work against each other than with each other. It is not like that everywhere else.

I taught at Texas A&M before coming to Tech. A friend cautioned me not to talk about A&M in this forum, because Tech faculty supposedly feel inferior to A&M. Maybe that's the problem. We wish we could be big and strong like A&M but realize that we never will be that big, that strong. So we resign ourselves to being lesser versions of a particular theme.

The key to the future for Tech is to quit trying to follow someone else's example. Instead, "be inflexible and tenacious defenders of your own ideas. If the idea is wrong, no amount of ability or propaganda will save it from extinction. But if the idea is true, neither academic fear of novelty nor legal persecution can stop its final triumph." (Enrico Ferri)

Stachura taught political science at Tech. He will begin teaching in the fall at Central Michigan University.

Are you mobile?

To the editor:

This is in brief response to the remarks of "Name withheld" published in your Aug. 6 issue.

I can readily perceive, Name withheld, your reasons for withholding your name, and in this instance I shall not find fault on that score. But I must in one respect question your understanding of your profession as a university scholar.

You say: "I have worked in many areas of research and produced a number of noteworthy papers." While it is true that zero is a number, and also without doubt that the meaning of "noteworthy" is context-dependent, I presume you to mean that you have produced one or more articles of better-than-average quality.

Such an assertion, however, is simply not for you to make; none of us is entitled to make it on his or her own behalf. The quality of one's work is a matter to be judged by a substantial and technically well-informed audience of scholars with no personal axes to grind.

If you do not understand this, your lack of understanding in the matter could well be related to the plight that you describe in your last sentence. On the other hand, if you are right in saying that research at this institution is in general both narrow and shallow, while your own is noteworthy, then surely you possess the golden key to a better life: mobility. EDITOR'S NOTE: Following is one of a continuing series of reports compiled by University Daily staff members covering the top events on college and university campuses in Texas.

A&M grads receive Fulbright grants

TEXAS A&M UNIVERSITY — Three Texas A&M graduates have been awarded Fulbright Grants that will allow them to spend a year in a foreign country researching a problem related to their field of study. Christopher Eugster, a May electrical engineering graduate, will study semi-conductor lasers and diodes in West Germany. Joannie Kleypas, a graduate student, will study the great barrier reef in Australia. Mary Keough, a May agricultural journalism graduate, also will study in West Germany.

Amendment ballot to include legalized gambling referendum

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — The question of legalizing gambling on horse racing will be at the end of this November's statewide election ballot, one that includes the most proposed constitutional amendments in Texas history.

Secretary of State Jack Rains, drawing slips of paper out of a cowboy hat, Wednesday determined the order in which the 25 amendments will be placed before voters Nov. 3.

For the first time, Rains said, two statewide referenda also will go to voters. By law, those follow the constitutional questions, he said.

Gov. Bill Clements on Wednesday issued a proclamation designating the order for the two referenda which had been sent to voters by the Legislature.

The question of whether to maintain the State Board of Education as an appointed — rather than elected — body will be listed ahead of the parimutuel gambling referendum. Currently, the school board is scheduled to return to being an elected group in 1989. The gambling issue was sent to the ballot by legislators in 1986.

Local issues, if any, will follow the statewide questions. At least four counties already have decided to place local-option horse racing elections before their voters Nov. 3.

"There are 25 amendments before the voters, which is the highest number in Texas history ... It is the first time in Texas history that statewide referenda will come before the voters," Rains said before conducting the drawing.

WT renames business school after Pickens

By The Associated Press

CANYON — Regents at West Texas State are naming the university's business school after T. Boone Pickens, an Amarillo oilman who has earned a name for himself as a corporate takeover artist.

The vote to rename the College of Business and Technology to the T. Boone Pickens College of Business came at a meeting Tuesday, in which regents voted to accept a gift of $1.5 million from Pickens and his Mesa Limited Partnership.

Regents said they were honoring Pickens' long-standing support and his success as an entrepreneur in renaming the business school.

"Mr. Pickens has spent literally hundreds of hours in WT classrooms sharing his talents and experiences with the students of our university," said Ed D. Roach, university president.

Roach said Pickens was the university's largest single contributor, and had earmarked the majority of donated funds for student scholarships and faculty enhancements.

"Wherever I go the name of T. Boone Pickens is synonymous with entrepreneurship and outstanding success. And I think that is going to be helpful to West Texas State University," Roach said.

Pickens is personally donating $1 million of the total $1.5 million endowment to the business college, while the balance will be donated by his company.

The gift is pledged as a matching funds gift, Roach said, meaning the university will seek to raise an equal amount of money from other contributors.

Neither Roach nor Pickens would say whether the donation was contingent on getting matching contributions from other sources.

"We believe that we're going to get those dollars," Roach said.

The donation will endow professorships, student scholarships, distinguished visiting professors, executive development programs and a dean's salary supplement, Roach said.

Pickens said he was pleased to make the donation and to see his name on the business college.

have committed suicide since the fall of 1986, according to the Dean of Students Office, Rolf Gordhamer, director and counselor for the University Counseling Center, said Tech's suicide rate is considerably lower than that of other universities across the nation.

suicide, however, are statistically more successful because men tend to hide their emotions, and attention usually is not the reason they attempt to kill themselves. Gordhamer also said men are prone to kill themselves with guns while women shy away from guns and try other methods such as slitting their wrists or overdosing. Drugs and alcohol play a role in suicide, Gordhamer said, because they give a person a clouded perception of reality and can make them more likely to commit suicide while under their influence.

Friends and family should give people who talk about suicide attention because they are having a crisis and need someone to talk to, Gordhamer said. But he said a person's crisis sometimes is more complex than friends and family are able to handle.

On July 13, a Tech sophomore was successful in taking his life as he hanged himself from ceiling rafters in his apartment.

Suicide attempts often are a way to get attention, Gordhamer said. It is more common for women who try to commit suicide to be unsuccessful because they are trying to get attention, he said.

Live music highlights activities

By JAY MILLER
News Staff Writer

For some, this weekend may be a source of happiness — the culmination of a productive summer school session. For others, this weekend may be a doomsday — yet another test left to fail. Whether you are celebrating or drowning your sorrows this weekend, there will be plenty to do in the Hub City.

● Main Street Saloon at 2413 Main St. is getting the jump on the weekend live music agenda tonight with a kamikaze party featuring the Lubbock-based band the Buzztones. There is a $2 cover charge for the 9:30 p.m. show. On Friday and Saturday, Main Street will feature the Amarillo-based rock 'n' roll band the Mix. The show starts at 9:30 p.m. each night, and the cover charge is $3.

● No Frills Bar and Grill at 2420 Broadway will feature the locally based band XLR8 at 9:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday. The cover charge will be $3.

● Cowboy's at 7301 University Ave. will feature Nashville-based country and western singer Ricky Van Shelton and Waco-based country and western singer Ronna Reeves tonight. The show starts at 8 p.m., and there is no cover charge. The Maines Brothers and North Carolina-based band Longrider will perform at 8 p.m. Friday at Cowboy's for a $6 cover charge.

● Fast and Cool at 2408 Fourth St. will sponsor an All-Star Blues Revue Sunday with Austin-based W.C. Clark, Jesse Taylor and Mainframe. A free barbecue dinner begins at 6 p.m., and the bands take the stage at sundown. There is a $3 cover charge for the show.

● Texas Cafe and Bar at 3604 50th St. will feature Junior Medlow and the Bad Boys at 9 p.m. today for a $3 cover charge. On Friday and Saturday, Swingshift will take the Texas Cafe stage at 9 p.m. There is a $3 cover charge each night.

Injuries saddle football legend Holub

By The Associated Press

ABILENE — E.J. Holub was an outstanding linebacker in football, earning all-America honors at Texas Tech and all-pro recognition during an 11-year career with the Kansas City Chiefs.

Nowadays, however, Holub spends his time in the saddle, managing a 30,000-acre ranch near Bartlesville, Okla., and competing in cutting horse events instead of chasing down run-ing backs.

That's understandable to anyone who watches him when he gets up to walk.

"I've had 12 surgeries on both knees (including a recent knee replacement) and 17 surgeries in all," Holub said, laughing. "That's a hell of a thing to be put in the Guinness Book of Records, isn't it?"

The 6-3, 215-pound Holub dangled his long legs over the seat in the row in front of him at the Taylor County Coliseum in Abilene as he talked about his career and why so many football players are involved in the cutting horse business.

He had just finished his ride aboard 5-year-old Ima Son O Sugar in the first go-round of the National Cutting Horse Association's Classic and Challenge.

Freshman, walk-on drill workouts helpful, say Tech's newest gridders

By JAY MILLER
News Staff Writer

Two-a-day workouts in the blistering West Texas sun, lengthy team meetings and learning new offensive and defensive systems are endeavors most freshmen entering Texas Tech do not have to endure.

But those seemingly arduous tasks have been the daily regimen for the 1987 freshmen football class since workouts began Monday. More than 50 freshman scholarship and walk-on players reported for the early conditioning workouts and team meetings.

Two of Tech's newest gridders said Wednesday the daily workouts have been a source of excitement as the players move closer to their first game on the college level Sept. 5.

"The workouts have been pretty exciting, and everybody has had a real good attitude about them," said Bobby Rice, a 6-3, 260-pound freshman center from Lufkin. "Doing something you like to do, such as playing football, helps make moving into a new town and a new environment a lot easier.

"Not being around the people and things you've grown up with all your life is the most difficult," Rice said.

King Hodson, a 6-4, 195-pound freshman quarterback from Canyon, agreed with Rice that the new football system will become easier with time. Hodson said his early jitters in making the transition to college have been eased by the quality coaches who head the Tech program.

"Being in a new system can be complicated until you get it down through several repetitions," Hodson said.
