Yeltsin fires reformist before volatile meeting

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris N. Yeltsin of Russia on Thursday fired Yegor Gaidar, the chief architect of his free-market reforms, just days before hostile lawmakers convene to consider whether to strip Yeltsin of some powers.

Public criticism of Gaidar had been building for weeks and his ouster as finance minister was the first sign of a response from the Yeltsin government. But it appeared unlikely to signal a major shift in Russia's painful drive toward a market economy.

Yeltsin could be trying to defuse criticism before Monday's opening session of parliament, which could rescind his powers to issue economic decrees. In this way, Gaidar would be the fall guy for the unpopular reforms.

Choice dissatisfaction spawns low turnout

WASHINGTON (AP) — Voters dissatisfied with the presidential candidates and the tone of the campaign are staying home in record numbers this year.

"People just aren't excited about the choices being offered to them," said University of Georgia political scientist Charles Bullock, pointing to a Democratic turnout that has been down almost everywhere this year.

Among Republicans, turnout has most often been similar to the 1988 levels. Where it has dropped sharply — Connecticut, Texas and South Carolina — analysts say the disinterest stems from the foregone conclusion that President Bush is guaranteed renomination.

New Hampshire voters of both parties, after witnessing an up-close, lengthy campaign, turned out in record highs for the nation's first primary. But that was an exception.

In Connecticut, only 26 percent of registered Democrats bothered to vote — a record low.

Morales begins tougher look at Tilton's ministry

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Dan Morales on Thursday stepped up his inquiry into TV evangelist Robert Tilton, launching a criminal investigation and saying he will give information to federal authorities.

Morales, locked in a legal battle with Tilton, said he is moving on several fronts to investigate the Farmers Branch-based ministry. "No one is above the law in our state. Doctors are not. Lawyers are not. Elected officials are not above the law. Not even preachers are above the law," Morales said. "If Robert Tilton believes we are going to back down in this investigation, he is sorely mistaken. And if Robert Tilton believes he can flout the law and operate in some fashion with immunity from state criminal and civil statutes, he is sorely mistaken," Morales said.

MASO funded; Laird says he will veto bill

by STEPHEN ARMOUR
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Despite the Mexican-American Student Organization receiving funding for $700 from the Texas Tech Student Senate Thursday night, Student Association President Russell Laird said he would still veto the 1992-93 Student Organization Funding Bill because the funds for Beta Alpha Psi were not reduced to his specified amounts.

The senate did not carry a motion proposed by Heather Bunkley, a senator from the College of Agricultural Sciences, that would cut the funds for Beta Alpha Psi to $1,200 and use the remaining $3,014 to fund other organizations that would come up for funding at the meeting.

"If no other organizations are funded, this money would be distributed across the board to the remaining funded organizations after the cuts proposed tonight have been made," she said.

"Even if we cut this money from Beta Alpha Psi and fund them for $1,200, they are still receiving an increase of $307.15. They have a spending trend of 75 percent of their budget. We should give the money to the Mexican-American Student Organization and Phi Sigma Tau."

Joe Johnston, a senator from the College of Arts and Sciences, said Beta Alpha Psi should not be penalized just because it was funded for a large sum of money.

"This is a vital organization to the university," he said.

"We should not cut their funds because the Student Association senate goes on a witch hunt. This is one of the superior chapters in the nation."

Nick Federspiel, the chairman of the senate committee on budget and finance, said he believed in the cut to Beta Alpha Psi's funds, although he wanted to know which organizations would receive the remaining funds.

"We shouldn't sprinkle it across the board," he said. "We need to divide it among specific groups."

Before MASO was funded, Federspiel proposed an amendment to the bill to fund them for $750 by taking the money from Beta Alpha Psi.

"MASO is open to everyone and is a coordinating body for all of the Hispanic organizations on campus," said Michelle Sutton, a senator from the College of Arts and Sciences. "It is a really important group and is not restrictive despite the word 'Hispanic' in its title."

However, Chip Adams, a senator from the College of Business Administration, disagreed.

"You are cutting $3,000 from Beta Alpha Psi to fund other organizations, and there is no reason to do this," he said.

"Every organization that met with the budget and finance committee asked for a hell of a lot more money than they got and a hell of a lot more money than they deserved. Beta Alpha Psi is the most important group in Business Administration."

Federspiel said the argument was pointless.

"We are talking reality," he said. "We have to move on and get this budget approved by the Student Association president. We don't need to go into a veto battle over this."

Tate Elliott, a senator from the College of Business Administration, said there was a mistake made by the committee in not funding MASO, although there was no mistake in funding Beta Alpha Psi for the amount it was given.

Keith becomes first woman in Tech's Mass Comm Hall of Fame

by DAWN TRAVIS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech School of Mass Communications will induct the first woman ever into its Hall of Fame during a luncheon today at the Lubbock Inn.

For the past 21 years, mass communications has inducted members into its Hall of Fame to recognize Tech alumni who have distinguished themselves in the field of mass communications.

Camille Keith, a former Tech student and vice president of special marketing for Southwest Airlines, is being honored for her contributions to society.

Keith was the first non-journalist woman to become president of the Dallas Press Club and was one of only two females to become president of the Dallas Advertising League.

She became involved in social issues and community service when faced with problems presented after her father was diagnosed with Alzheimer's.

Keith said she was appalled by how hard it was for her to find assistance and information on the disease. She said that even as a former reporter, it was extremely difficult to find the information and realized how much more dif-icult it would be for the general public.

As a result, Keith headed the beginning of a Southwest Airlines program designed to bring senior citizens on low and fixed incomes "Home for the Holidays." During 1990, the program also was extended to Indian reservations.

Keith won a presidential citation for her work with the senior program.

Qualifications for consideration into the Hall of Fame are being an ex-student who has been out of school for at least five years.

Jerry Hudson, director and a professor in the School of Mass Communications, said the award features a 16 by 20 inch color portrait of the recipient that is hung in the Hall of Fame Corridor in the mass communications building. The Hall of Fame luncheon will cap off the week's activities.

"The week is an exciting time for the students as they plan and organize the activities, seeing that everything goes smoothly," Hudson said.

Terry Riley, a public relations major and chairman of the mass communications week committee, said he has gained a lot of practical experience from serving on the committee.

"I couldn't trade the experience I've gained for the world. Everything from learning time management to oral communication skills," Riley said.

Deadline today for Freshman Who's Who

by CATHERINE DUNN
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Freshman Who's Who awards are not only for freshmen who have academically excelled, but for freshmen who also are actively involved in campus organizations.

Friday marks the last day Texas Tech freshmen can apply for the award. Applications are available in the Student Association Office and must be returned to the office by 5 p.m. Friday.

"Their grades have to be good, but that's not the main emphasis," said Dani Okonek, a freshman communications studies major and co-chair of the Freshmen Council.

"Basically it's a combination of academics and activities, with more emphasis on activities. There are other organizations that give honors just for academics."

A panel of judges comprised of student and administrative campus leaders will select the top freshmen students according to their first-semester GPAs and campus involvement. Awards will be presented during the Student Association Awards and Installation Banquet April 16, and letters will be mailed to the parents of the recipients.

About 10 to 15 freshmen are chosen each year, said Student Senate President Michael Catt.

"During the freshman year, students go through a lot of changes," he said. "It is important to recognize those students who adjust well so they will continue to be involved. When students are involved in various activities, they're contributing to the university."

Okonek said the award recognizes students who want to exceed academically and are interested in the university and the community. Okonek said it is important for students to be involved in university activities.

"(Organizations) are what makes this university run," she said. "If (students) get involved, it's going to help progress what they want on campus."

Bratton named La Ventana editor

by KENDRA CASEY
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Student Publications Committee selected Jori Bratton as the 1992-93 La Ventana editor Thursday night. Bratton is a junior journalism major from Paducah.

She said her interest in journalism began in high school where she worked on the yearbook staff for four years and the journalism staff for two years.

Bratton, a three-year member of La Ventana staff, joined as a freshman when she started as a copy writer. Since then she has served as copy editor.

"The book is already a good book," Bratton said. "I'm hoping to make the book a better one in terms of accuracy and consistency."

Bratton also said she plans to increase yearbook sales by targeting potential students as well as alumni and older students.

She said she wants to produce a quality yearbook that students will want to purchase and not feel obligated to buy.

"I felt that applying was a challenge," Bratton said.

"There were two other applicants that were really qualified, and I hope they decide to stay on staff," she said.

Beth Rash, a junior from Texarkana, and Charles Griffin, a sophomore from Fort Worth, also were considered for the position.

Bratton said being editor would be a challenge, and that she does not expect everything to be easy.

"That is why I applied," Bratton said.

Bratton said she is looking forward to assuming her duties as editor.

She said the opportunity will be beneficial to her in the future.

"It will be a good experience," Bratton said.

Children run for fun in CDRC competition

by SANDRA PULLEY
 THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Runners of all ages and abilities can participate in the Texas Tech Child Development Research Center Race for Kids on Saturday morning at the Broadway entrance of Memorial Circle.
 "We want to encourage mass participation in a sport considered elitist," said Marjory Stuart, race director. "Everyone can come out and enjoy a fun race."
 The competitive five kilometer race, sanctioned by the West Texas Running Club, begins at 10 a.m. Participants will be divided into seven age group categories. Medals will be given to male and female winners in each division.
 At 10:30 a.m. four relay events for company teams, Tech groups, stroller brigades and inter-generational families begin. Tech teams can represent academic departments, fraternities or sororities, sports teams or student organizations.
 The inter-generational race, called the three bears relay, consists of a grandparent, parent, a child and two other team members. At least one child must be a member of each relay team.
 The entry fee for the individual race is $10, and the team event costs

 Participants can register for the race at 9 a.m. Saturday in El Centro, located in the home economics building.

A trip for four to Dallas from Southwest Airlines and Premier Travel will be given away as the grand prize for the event. All participants in all events will be eligible to win the trip as well as merchandise prizes from vendors.

During the race, Raider Red, the Masked Rider and Midnight and a group of Tech athletes and cheerleaders will make guest appearances.

Profits from the race will buy a new infant/toddler playground set and handicapped play set for the CDRC. The new equipment will cost approximately $3,000 to $15,000.

Although the center receives building and maintenance support from Tech and tuition from parents, there is not enough money left in the budget for new playground equipment, said Cathy Nathan, director of the CDRC. The center is acquiring the sets to accommodate four physically challenged children that participate in the CDRC program.

"The CDRC focuses on quality for the children," Nathan said. "A lot of good people try to do a good job in child care, but they don't understand how things should be done."

Engineering department to honor outstanding engineers

by DAWN TRAVIS
 THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech engineering department will honor four outstanding engineers at its 26th annual Distinguished Engineer Awards Luncheon, at 11:45 a.m. Friday in the McInturff Conference Center.

The annual program recognizes graduates who have made significant contributions to society and who have brought credit to the College of Engineering.

The College of Engineering's 1992

Distinguished Engineers are Jack Byrd, from petroleum engineering, F. Max Merrell, from chemical engineering, James Renfro, from electrical engineering, and R.D. Cash, from industrial engineering.

"The faculty and administrators at Tech realize that the public's perception of the college depends upon the achievement of these alumni and the positions they have earned for themselves in their communities and their careers," said Mason Somerville, dean of the college. "So these awards are given for outstanding achievement both inside and outside of the engineering profession."

Byrd, a native of Miles, is the chairman and majority owner of Lacy & Byrd Inc., an independent oil and gas company based in Midland. He is a 36-year member of the Society of Petroleum Engineers.

Merrell joined the Mobil Corp. after graduating in 1957, and now is president of Mobil Mining and Minerals Co. in Richmond, Va. He is responsible for all of Mobil's phosphate and coal operations.

Renfro joined the Northrop Corp.

in Anaheim, Calif., following his graduation, and has devoted his career to the Submarine Launched Fleet Ballistic Missile Program.

In 1990, President Bush honored Renfro with the rank of Distinguished Executive in the Senior Executive Service, the nation's highest civil service award.

Cash is chairman of the board, chief executive officer and president of the Questar Corp., in Salt Lake City, Utah. He was also appointed by the secretary of energy to the National Petroleum Council.

Nicotine patch helping tobacco users kick habit

by JULIE COLLINS
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

A report from the Surgeon General's Office confirms what smokers and non-smokers have been saying about cigarettes for years.

Nicotine found in cigarettes is addictive, and the report states that this addiction can be compared to that of heroin and cocaine addictions.

The report estimates about 45 million Americans are addicted to nicotine found in cigarettes and other tobacco products.

Dr. Eugene Stalnaker, a staff physician at Texas Tech's Student Health Center, said that while it may be hard to quit smoking and dipping, it is extremely easy to pick up those habits.

He also said individuals may start out smoking only a few cigarettes a day and then claim that they can quit at any time. However, smokers soon discover that they cannot control their habit because once nicotine gets into the body, it wants to stay there.

"Worldwide, smoking is increasing among third world nations, and lung cancer is now the third leading cause of death for women behind breast and ovarian cancer," Stalnaker said.

He also said the political as well as social liberty given to women during the early part of this century caused many women to turn to cigarettes to help establish their new freedom.

Often times, women have a tougher time quitting smoking than men. Women find that smoking cigarettes is a psychological, social and chemical addiction, he said.

Three companies have introduced nicotine patches that come in varying degrees of nicotine content. Patches come in 30mg per day, 21mg per day and 14mg per day.

Choosing which patch to use should be left up to a physician, Stalnaker said.

The patch is applied to different areas of the body including the torso and the arm. The nicotine passes through the skin and enters the blood stream. It then travels to the brain and provides a form of nicotine replacement therapy for smokers who want to quit.

"The nicotine patch is not a cure-all, but it does help a smoker's nicotine urge," Stalnaker said.

He said the programs can be costly, especially if a person smokes less than two packs of cigarettes per week.

"Some people will find the patch expensive because they don't smoke and subsequently spend too much money on cigarettes, while some smokers could actually save money because their cigarette addiction was costly to begin with," Stalnaker said.

The cost of one patch is $4, and the program can last between six and 10 weeks, depending upon the severity of one's nicotine addiction.

Individuals using the patch cannot smoke during the cessation program because it can cause dangerous levels of nicotine to collect in the body.

Prison inmates preach prevention

by JENNIFER SANDER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Warnings against drug use have been plastered on billboards nationwide, and advertised on television and radio for years. But closer to home, a different approach to prevention is being taken. Former drug abusers who are now in prison speak to Lubbock youths about their trials with drug abuse.

Through a unique program, five inmates from the Lubbock County Jail speak daily to children of all ages about how they got involved with drugs and crime, and the final punishment they have been led to via drugs.

"This program is designed to help students see first-hand what jail is really like and what it is to live behind bars because you do drugs," said Gaylynn Jackson, deputy with Lubbock County Sheriff's department. "The inmates that talk to them are in jail because of their drug abuse or because of crimes they committed to support their habit."

The five inmates who volunteered to speak to children were chosen from a group of 700 inmates. Jackson said the inmates receive no special treatment, extra credit or early time out for their volunteer work.

"The inmates use this as a treatment for themselves," she said. "The more you talk about a problem, the faster the healing comes."

Jackson said the children receive a serious message about prison life when they see the inmates because while they speak, they are confined in leg-chains and handcuffs.

"We allow the children to write to the inmates, and that is how we find out how much of an impact the inmates had on the students," said Deputy J.R. Vasquez. "Their letters let us know what is going on in their heads. They will write and tell us of someone they helped because they learned something from the inmates experiences."

These kids see the kind of life drugs and alcohol can lead to.

Vasquez said there are no "extreme" examples of inmates. Most have had "typical drug and drug crime-related problems," he said. Vasquez added that the inmates usually do not fabricate their stories. He said there have only been a few instances in the past when he thought the inmates were not telling the truth.

He said that one of the inmates has been in the state penitentiary four times and is about to enter for the fifth time. He has been in for crimes to support his heroine habit.

Jackson said the program is emotional at times, depending on the crowd and the inmates' feelings at the time. She said it is not rare to see an inmate or student cry during inmates' speeches.

"These kids see the kind of life drugs and alcohol can lead to," she said. "Sometimes these programs really hit home for some people. This is a battle with so many people."

Jackson said the program also gives school administrators a better insight on drug abuse.

The program tries to reach the kids at an early age. Jackson said once a child reaches the junior high and high school level, they have already made many of their choices and have their own attitudes about drugs.

"Once you are hooked, it is really hard to quit," Vasquez said. "Drug abuse usually comes from a problem from childhood, such as child abuse, neglect or a bad home life, so we try to reach them at a young age."

Jackson said the program was implemented by a recommendation from Lubbock Sheriff D.L. "Sonny" Keese. She said that because there are so many programs with this similar format for adults, Keese wanted to find a way to target the kids.

Speaking out

Thomas Postell, a 41-year-old inmate at the Lubbock County Jail, tells his story to a group of kids at Our Lady of Grace Catholic Church. The inmates participating in the program encouraged the kids to stay away from drugs. The program was created by a recommendation from the Lubbock Sheriff.

Othello
Michael Endy (Othello) holds Lisa Peterson (Desdemona) in the murder scene from "Othello," which runs through next weekend.

'Othello' opens at University Theatre

by HEATHER PARKER
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

The Texas Tech University Theatre's mainstage production of Shakespeare's "Othello" opened Thursday and performances continue tonight at 8 p.m. in the University Theatre.

The play will run through Sunday and April 9 through 12.

Thursday through Saturday performances begin at 8 p.m. and Sunday shows start at 2 p.m. Tickets cost $3 for Tech students.

For the general public, Thursday and Sunday performances are $8. Friday and Saturday's performances are $10.

Shakespeare's story of prejudice and revenge comes alive on stage through the performance of Michael J. Endy (Othello) and John King (Iago). Endy is a doctoral candidate who performed in "Lend Me a Tenor" and "Cloud Nine." "Othello" is King's first performance at Tech. He is from Chicago and is a master's of fine arts candidate.

Senior Lisa Peterson and sophomore Elyse West have the leading female roles. Peterson, who portrays Othello's wife, Desdemona, also appeared in "What Do You Hear Dear Jane." She has also performed in productions at the Deadwood Theatre. West has the role of Iago's wife, Emilia, and has been seen in productions such as "Christmas Carol" and "You Can't Take It With Youth."

Cassio is played by Trampas Thompson. He was recently seen in the lab theatre production of "King Stag."

Other actors and characters include Andrew Thayer as Roderigo; Clay Grizzle portrays Brabantio and Oliver McCrae as Montano.

Iago carries extreme hate for Othello, a Moor, and is resolved to destroy him. Driven by revenge, Iago tells Brabantio that Othello has stolen his daughter, Desdemona.

Iago draws Cassio into his plot of revenge by staging a love affair between Desdemona and Cassio.

This production of "Othello" is directed by Dr. Janet Cooper.

Wynette recovering

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Country music star Tammy Wynette was discharged from a hospital Tuesday, three days after collapsing for the second time on her Australian tour.

Wynette, 49, left Royal Perth Hospital with a doctor who was to accompany her on a flight Wednesday to Sydney and possibly to her home in Nashville.

Wally Bishop, her Australian tour coordinator, said he didn't know her exact condition, but that she still was not well.

Wynette has a current chart-topping hit "Justified and Ancient," with British funk group The KLF.

Bad weather gives hunters, fishermen chance to check equipment

MIKE HEWLETT

Rainy days and the pursuit of the outdoors rarely go together.

Unless of course you're in search of pin tail or mallard ducks.

Inlement weather does offer us the chance to give our guns and fishing gear a good looking over.

If you're like me, while at school, you don't have the ideal set up for gun storage and more than likely your fishing tackle rests in some dark recess of your garage or closet.

Even if you took the utmost care when cleaning your gun before putting your favorite meat-getter in limbo for another off-season, dust bunnies and particles somehow can still find their way into your gun's mechanism.

The exact origin for this funky stuff isn't known but some sportsmen think it's some kind of germ warfare sponsored by members of the more active "activists".

I did some local checking on the best method to store a rifle/rod and reel for a significant period of non-use and received some good tips from a number of our local merchants.

Bob Everett of the Gun Shack recommends that you should first give your rifle a thorough cleaning using a brass bristle brush on the end of a cleaning rod, and then a good swabbing out with cotton cloth soaked with gun oil or a silicone lubricant.

After this, you should place your gun in a fabric gun sack that is treated with an anti-rust agent (usually silicone) and then place it in a hard sided gun case or if available a wooden gun cabinet.

"I know hunters who use the gun sacks even when they have sealed gun safes," Everett said.

"If you don't want to go to the expense of buying the gun sacks I've known guys to cut the legs off an old pair of Levi's, spray them with silicon and then put them up."

Everett pointed out that if you simply leave your gun exposed under your bed or store in a vinyl gun case it will definitely rust and could actually, in the case of the exposed fire arm, adhere to the carpet fibers.

Everett pointed out shot guns can build up plastic fragments from the waddings and that specific care should be spent in removing these to ensure proper performance for the next use.

He said if you follow these time consuming but simple steps you can avoid these types of problems and Charles Rowan at Fisherman's Headquarters said one thing that can happen to fishing gear while in garage storage is they collect bugs and various things that would present significant problems.

"The first thing I would tell anybody is not to leave their fishing tackle in the garage," Rowan said. "With the extremes in temperature your line and mechanisms can become fouled and you lose the strength and elasticity of your line."

Rowan recommends replacing your fishing line every year, keeping your fishing equipment inside in a dry interior closet, and protecting your reel with a reel cover to keep out unwanted guests.

He also cautioned would be fishing equipment do-it-yourselfers in regards to tackling a job they can't handle.

"We see a lot of rigs come in here with what started out as minor problems having been turned into huge messes because someone tried to fix it themselves or manhandle it too much," Rowan said.

With these suggestions we can all prolong the lives of our fishing and hunting equipment.

After all, do you want to miss that monster buck or storybook bass because of equipment failure?

First meeting with Ohio State wakes up Fab Five in NCAAs

by OWEN CANFIELD
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Michigan got to the Final Four by beating Ohio State. And by losing to Ohio State.

The Wolverines (24-8) won the Southeast Regional title last weekend by beating Ohio State 78-71 in overtime. It capped an impressive run by the Fab Five freshmen, sending them to the NCAA tournament semifinals Saturday against Cincinnati.

It was Michigan's previous meeting against the Buckeyes, on March 3, that seemed to wake up the marvelously talented youngsters. They haven't dozed off since. In that game, on the road, the Wolverines led with only a few minutes remaining. Then came turnovers and mistakes, and Michigan wound up losing 77-66.

"They grabbed us by the throat and took the lead," coach Steve Fisher said. "You could see afterwards in the kids' eyes what they had been through."

"After that, things changed a little. They got the idea that when the coaches speak, they ought to listen."

They listened in their final three games of the regular season, victories over Indiana, Purdue and Illinois.

They kept listening as the NCAA tournament began, winning early round games against Temple and East Tennessee State. They listened some more in the regional semifinals against Oklahoma State, winning despite the fact Chris Webber scored only 4 points because of foul trouble. In the regional final, against a Buckeyes team that had beaten them twice during the regular season, Michigan listened again.

The Wolverines couldn't help but remember late in the game, when they went scoreless for 6 1/2 minutes, committing turnovers on four of five possessions. During that time, Ohio State turned a 57-50 deficit into a 61-57 lead.

"Every time a team makes a run on us, we always go back to that (Ohio State game) as a reference and say we won't let anyone do that to us again," guard Jalen Rose said.

Rose hit a jumper to make the score 61-59. Then Webber blocked a shot at one end and tied the score at the other with a dunk. After the Buckeyes took a 63-61 lead, Webber's follow shot with 29 seconds left, followed by a defensive stand, sent the game into overtime.

Biggio leads Astros to victory over Expos

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Eric Anthony's eighth-inning sacrifice fly gave the Houston Astros a 4-3 victory over the Montreal Expos Wednesday.

Jeff Biggio drove in a pair of runs for the Astros with a first-inning single and a fielder's choice in the third. The Astros scored another run in the third inning off Montreal starter Dennis Martinez on Anthony's RBI single.

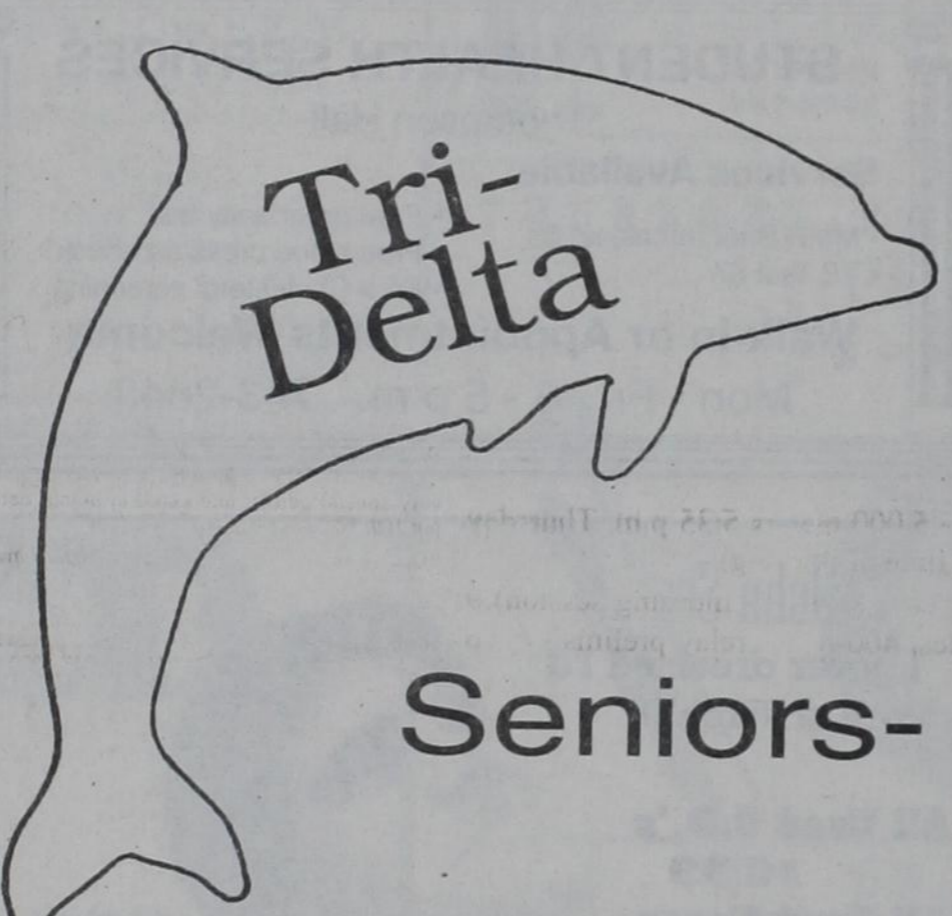

Larry Walker and Ivan Calderon hit solo home runs for the Expos, who pulled into a 3-3 tie in the sixth on an RBI single by Delino DeShields.

Bill Landrum, the former Pittsburgh Pirates reliever signed by Montreal last week, made his debut with the Expos, retiring all six batters he faced.

Raiders looking to avenge sweep against Texas A&M

by JOSEPH HAYES
THE UNIVERSITY DAILY

Although the Texas Tech baseball team is only one win behind the Texas A&M Aggies, it's the Red Raiders four additional losses that separate the two teams between second and fourth place.

This weekend will offer Tech a chance to close the gap, as the Raiders will host the Aggies in a three-game series this weekend at Dan Law Field.

Because of weather conditions, tonight's game has been postponed to Sunday, with Saturday's doubleheader still scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. In the 79 prior contests between the two teams, the Aggies hold a 57-22 advantage as Tech was swept three games earlier this season in College Station. Since being swept, Raider coach Larry Hays said he thinks his offense has improved, but he still expects a tough pitching performance from the Aggies. "Last time we played, they had two good left handers who gave up only two runs," Hays said.

"I hope it wasn't just their pitching, but where we were offensively. If they sweep us again, I'll know it's them."

One of those good left handers Hays mentioned was sophomore pitcher Jeff Granger. The last time the Tech offense faced Granger, he put together a nine-inning, one-run performance that included 14 strikeouts.

"They (A&M) told us that he's had two good outings, one against Florida State, and one against us," Hays said. "I'm sure he'll come in here feeling pretty confident because of what happened in the last series."

Senior pitcher Mark Brandenburg, who is the probable starter for Sunday's game, said he does not see Tech being swept again, especially since the series is at home.

"I think they (A&M) played as good as they possibly could have, as far as playing error free and hitting," Brandenburg said. "The Aggies are one of the better hitting teams in the conference, but playing at home will be to our advantage."

The two other starters for the Raiders are question mark, but Hays said he feels confident with the talent they have.

"We'll probably go with Brandenburg and (junior J.J.) Varney. We'll also use (junior John) Macatee or (junior Mike) Copple. There are pluses either way," Hays said.

The Raiders will travel to Fort Worth next week to take on Texas Christian for the second time this season, before returning home the following week to face Cameron University

Men's and women's golf teams hit road for weekend

The Texas Tech men's and women's golf teams will be in action this weekend.

The men will be traveling to West Lafayette, Ind. to compete in the Purdue Invitational this Saturday and Sunday. The last tournament the Red Raiders played in was the Louisiana Classics Tournament in which they finished fourth out of 12 teams.

The tournament will be played at the Purdue South Golf Course, with each team bringing five players. The tournament is 54 holes, with 36 being played on Saturday and 18 on Sunday.

The women will travel to Dallas to participate in the 10th Annual Earl Stewart Lady Mustang Golf Tournament, which is the second tourney of the year for the women. The 54-hole tournament will begin Sunday and conclude on Thursday, with 18 holes being played each day.

LSU's O'Neal likely to take game to pros next season

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Shaquille O'Neal, the 7-foot-1 center who dominated college basketball during three years at Louisiana State, is expected to take his game to the pros next season.

O'Neal called a news conference for 2 p.m. EST Friday at Fort Sam Houston, the U.S. Army base in Texas where his father is stationed. He is expected to announce that he will bypass his senior year at LSU and enter the NBA draft.

The Times-Picayune and ESPN have both cited unidentified sources in saying that O'Neal is likely to turn pro. LSU coach Dale Brown wouldn't give his opinion.

"I've had my own feeling, which I don't want to express to you now," Brown told the Times-Picayune Wednesday. "I've had this feeling for some time. I just don't want to say anything at all ..."

Brown didn't return a telephone call Thursday. Brown met Sunday with O'Neal and his family in San Antonio, where the two-time All America is spending his spring semester break.

A few weeks ago, Brown advised O'Neal to turn pro because of what Brown perceived as the undue physical pounding O'Neal has received from opposing teams. However, Brown said he remained neutral during Sunday's meeting.

"I gave them a list of pluses for staying in school and pluses for leaving," Brown said. "I told them whatever their decision is, I'd back them 100 percent. I wasn't going to say, 'Stay,' I wasn't going to say 'Go,' and I won't second-guess their decision."

Brown, who said he had told O'Neal's father, Phillip Harrison, that the news conference should be held at Baton Rouge, said he would not change his plans to attend the Final Four in order to attend Friday's news conference.

Chosen 1990-91 college player of the year, O'Neal, 20, averaged 24.1 points, 14 rebounds and 5.2 blocked shots as a junior last season.

Women's Final Four shows changing times in game

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — Even in these politically correct times, women's basketball coaches say their game still is trying to find its place.

Gone are the days when coaches and players had to carpool to games, and as Tennessee coach Pat Head Summitt remembers, sleep on gym floors because their school would not pay for hotel rooms.

Schools are giving full athletic scholarships, games often feature a faster pace than the men's and attendance and media exposure, while not on the level of the men's, are improving.

Despite the positives, athletic administrators and basketball coaches say the women's game has a long way to go before it truly dents the marketplace.

As the NCAA prepares for its 11th women's Final Four — Saturday and Sunday in Los Angeles — progress can be seen in growing parity and a second consecutive year of live broadcasts of the semifinals and finals.

For the most part, the Final Four participants have been as predictable as a "Rocky" movie. Only six teams have won the NCAA title in its 10-year history and only 15 teams have reached the Final Four. This year, newcomers Western Kentucky and Southwest Missouri State join traditional powers Stanford and Virginia.

"I think you see teams like Western Kentucky and Southwest Missouri State, and it shows more programs are committed," said Stephen F. Austin coach Gary Blair, whose team was ranked as high as

No. 3 this season and lost in the West Regional semifinals. "When I was an assistant at Louisiana Tech, there were about seven or eight programs that could win the national title and 30 that could compete on a national level."

This season there were four Texas schools that broke into the Associated Press Top 25 and later earned spots in the NCAA Tournament.

"Now there are no dominant teams," said Texas coach Jody Conradt, whose teams won the first eight SWC Tournaments but have lost to Texas Tech in the past two. "Early on, if you wanted to go to a program that stressed women's basketball, you picked maybe from 10 schools around the country. Now every region has a program, and the talent is more spread out."

Despite more balanced talent, the women's game is still trying to find acceptance. It cannot offer the above-the-rim play of the men's game. Only one woman, GeorgeAnne Wells of West Virginia, has dunked in a game. Wells, a 6-7 center, did it twice in 1984. That doesn't mean women's basketball is an impossible sell, just a different sell.

Women coaches are quick to point out that their game has a faster pace because its shot clock is 30 seconds, 15 fewer than the men. They also point to a cleaner image than the men's programs.

The women's game rarely runs afoul of the NCAA. Since 1981, when women's basketball became an NCAA-sanctioned sport, only eight programs have been on probation. There have been 62 men's programs on probation during that span. "It is a great thing to look at because it is almost the purest environment in the way that student-athletes are recruited in women's basketball," George Washington coach Joe McKeown said. "When you get feedback from the players, they feel like they were treated very well. There is very little bad-mouthing."

There are success stories, such as the Lady Longhorns, who averaged 5,740 fans and led the nation for the sixth consecutive season. That average was better than seven of the eight men's SWC teams, trailing only the 13,067 of the Texas men. The Texas Tech women averaged 4,201, more than five SWC men's teams.

There were 20,023 fans at the 1991 title game in Knoxville when Stanford defeated Auburn, and an estimated 17,000 jammed Cole Field House in February to watch No. 2 Virginia defeat host No. 1 Maryland, 75-74.

But those are the exceptions. The Lady Longhorns lost at home in the second round of this season's tournament to UCLA, which won its first-round game at home against Notre Dame in front of 441 fans.

The average attendance for a regular-season women's game during the 1990-91 season was 680. Two years ago, Oklahoma dropped its women's program, citing lack of interest, until protests brought the program back.

Four SWC teams averaged fewer than 680. TCU, which does not charge admission, averaged 197 for 11 home games.
