Debate over amendment reaches city

By Donald Gillilan

The University Daily

The Balanced Budget Amendment is on its way to the Senate for approval after the House of Representatives accepted the amendment Thursday.

The House received the necessary two-thirds vote to approve the amendment that will require Congress to balance the budget by the year 2002, or two years after its ratification by three-fourths of the states, whichever happens first.

Rep. Larry Combest, R-Texas, said he is pleased with the amendment.

"When the folks from our region first sent me to Congress, I fulfilled my promise to fight for a Balanced Budget Amendment," Combest said.

"Every family and every small business I know accept the fact that they must live within their budgets," he said.

Keith Williams, Combest's press secretary, said 80 percent of the American people are in favor of the amendment.

"That percent is maybe higher in the Lubbock area," Williams said.

Clarke Cochran, Tech political science professor, said he does not agree with the way the House is handling the proposed amendment.

"The Balanced Budget Amendment is a mistake, and it looks like it's going to happen," Cochran said. "At least in Congress it (the amendment) does, whether the states will ratify it or not I don't know."

Cochran said there are definite reasons the amendment should not be approved.

"The idea that Congress should balance their budget every year is not necessarily a good idea," he said. "Sometimes it's more healthy for the economy for Congress to run a deficit in order to stimulate the economy."

Cochran said it is a fallacy to believe everyone should have a balanced budget, because no one has a balanced budget. Families, businesses and states also are in debt, he said.

"The federal accounting system is not the one to accommodate a balanced budget," he said. "Congress does not have a capital budget."

Cochran said the amendment is a gimmick, and Congress can easily get around it, even if it is a constitutional amendment.

"They (Congress) can fool around with the income and expense estimates," he said.

Mark Harmon, Lubbock County Democratic Party chairman, said he also believes the proposed amendment is a gimmick.

"Congress is going to write a Balance Budget Amendment into the Constitution without having the honesty to tell the American people where the cuts will come from and what taxes would be raised," Harmon said.

Americans have ignored the fact that the federal deficit has been decreasing for three years, Harmon said.

The deficit has been at its lowest level of gross domestic product since 1979, he said.

"Clinton has not received credit for that," Harmon said. "He deserves credit."

Officials ask pedestrians to be alert

By Shannon Murphy

The University Daily

With two accidents occurring on the Texas Tech campus within the last week, Tech officials are warning students to become competent pedestrians.

Tech assistant English professor Elizabeth Ceniza was struck by a Chevrolet Cavalier Monday afternoon and remained listed in critical condition Tuesday at University Medical Center. She sustained severe head injuries.

In a similar accident, Tech freshman Robin Wallace was crossing the center lane of Fourth Street near campus and was struck by a 1964 Chevrolet Camaro.

Wallace died because of severe body trauma Jan. 25.

"Personal safety is everyone's personal responsibility," said Margaret Lutherer, Tech director of news and publications. "Students must pay attention to their surroundings and be alert to what is going on."

"There is an illusion on campus that pedestrians always have the right of way, but according to the Tech traffic and parking regulations, pedestrians will always have the right of way only in crosswalks."

Crossing the streets at the crosswalks is the best option for students and it is an extremely safe thing to do, Lutherer said.

"Since the accident at Fourth and Boston, I have seen so many students walking around with headphones on, and they are either singing or looking down," she said. "It is difficult to stay alert when people are doing other things while walking across campus."

The speed limit in campus parking lots is 10 mph, according to Tech traffic and parking regulations. The speed limit on campus streets is 20 mph.

Students should observe these regulations and not exceed speed limits, Lutherer said. At one time or another, students and faculty both are drivers and pedestrians, she said.

"Students and faculty both get into daily routines where we are used to traveling in the same ways to certain places," said Jo Hutcherson, chairwoman of Tech's personal safety awareness committee. "We think we're safe, and we don't pay attention."

Tech agriculture graduates use fire training to control cotton insects

By Jamie McDonald

The University Daily

Controlled fires may lessen the effect boll weevils have on cotton yields in West Texas.

Texas Tech College of Agriculture and Natural Resources graduates are preparing to use their training in fire ecology to keep the insect from ruining cotton crops, said Carlton Britton, a Tech professor of range management.

"They are working with cotton farmers to assist them in burning fields because the boll weevil is in the fields," Britton said. "They (the boll weevils) would have a devastating effect on the cotton yield. They stay warm enough to survive because of the past three warm winters."

Fires are preferred to spraying insecticide because of cost, he said.

"Fire is not expensive," he said. "These graduates have organized themselves into a company to help the farmers. They

Tech traffic controllers handle irate motorists, hear excuses

By Tara McQueen

The University Daily

The first impression most people get of Texas Tech may be the navy and white uniforms of the Tech traffic controllers.

The traffic controllers spend day after day in small booths bordering the Tech campus, greeting visitors and directing traffic.

Traffic controller Michi Hernandez has worked at Tech for five years.

"I like working and talking to people all day," Hernandez said. "I enjoy meeting people and making a lot of friends."

Hernandez said she does not get bored because traffic controllers are allowed to listen to the radio and occasionally catch a few pages in a book, but televisions are not allowed.

Wanda Suggs, also a traffic controller, has worked at Tech for the past 16 years. She describes her job as rewarding.

"I help students with questions about buildings and give visitors maps, but every day is different," Suggs said.

Suggs said if people do not stop their cars, the traffic controllers call other stations to alert them. The car can then be stopped and fined $25.

Hernandez said the least favorite part of her job is heavy traffic. It tends to give her a lot of tension and headaches.

"But we deal with it," she said. "It's part of our job."

Hernandez said another part of her job involves listening to excuses.

"Everyone uses the excuse that their girlfriend's ankle is broken," Hernandez said, laughing. "There are a lot of injured people on this campus. People out here, have broken ankles several times a day."

Hernandez said a co-worker told her about an unusual excuse involving a rabbit. A student said he needed to go to the biology building because he had a two-headed rabbit.

"My friend didn't see the rabbit," she said. "But she let him through."

Suggs said one pregnant woman claimed she was about to have her baby and needed to speak with her professor.

"If that woman was really having a baby, the last thing she would care about is seeing her professor," Suggs said.

Hernandez said she has never been physically assaulted, but one student got out of her car and tried to argue.

"She stood at the door and demanded that I talk to her," Hernandez said. "I told her she could talk to my supervisor but that I wouldn't argue with her."

Suggs said motorists get irritated when she can't produce parking places. "The ones that get jolted may call me a bitch," Suggs said. "I tell them I am only doing my job."

To keep morale high, Hernandez said all the traffic controllers meet together once a month to discuss problems and questions.

"We also celebrate Christmas and birthdays at our meetings," she said. "We all bring food for a potluck dinner."

Drivers, pedestrians need to pay attention

In the past week, two members of the Texas Tech community have been injured, one fatally, after being struck by automobiles.

While the blame in such accidents could be placed on the driver of the vehicle or the pedestrian, it's time to remember what we learned from parents and in driver's education.

For pedestrians, look both ways, and for drivers, look up at the road ahead.

The death of student Robin Wallace and the serious injury to Tech English professor Sherry Ceniza should let people know one thing — if you have the right of way or not, you are not invincible.

When a person and a moving vehicle meet, the vehicle usually wins.

Using common sense

What should we do then? Build elevated walkways? Ban cars from driving on campus? The answer is simple — use common sense.

When crossing the street, use a crosswalk. If one isn't there, cross in a safe place, not the geometrically correct place.

Be aware that the people in cars are trying to get somewhere just as fast as you are on foot.

When driving on campus, even in the parking lots, take the time to make sure there are no people around when you are changing the radio station or looking for a place to park. Points values are not assigned for hitting people — this is not Deathrace 2000.

This is a community of 25,000 people. Being five minutes late to class doesn't give drivers the excuse to ignore the rules of the road.

Who has the right-of-way?

Some people believe that at any given time and at any given place, pedestrians have the right of way on campus.

While it may be true on campus, this is not true once you step off campus. Cross where there is no crosswalk, and you risk being ticketed.

It's called jaywalking, and the pedestrian risks injuring himself and others.

But this just doesn't affect pedestrians — it is a two-way street.

In driver's education and in defensive driving, people are taught to observe all that is around them. When in the car, there are rules that need to be followed at all times.

For example, drivers should always follow at a safe distance so they don't hit the car in front of them. This rule applies to automobile-dominated traffic, and is usually followed because drivers are aware.

This same awareness should be applied in pedestrian-dominated traffic. The times of the two person-vehicle accidents occurred at peak times when cars and people are together.

If driver and pedestrian took the time to use caution, these tragedies would have been avoided. So when on campus, be smart and safe. It's a tough world out there, let's just be a little more careful.

The seven-member editorial board voted 7-0 on this issue.

Liberal media promotes Democratic agenda

Eric Sanchez

He sat silently. After years of contemplation, he decided to end the world. But, he wouldn't just tell one person as he did before. He would announce his message of doom to four major newspapers. God reached for the nearest phone and called The New York Times.

"New York Times," answered the reporter.

"Yeah, this is God. I'm going to make this short and sweet. I'm tired of this world and I'm going to start from scratch. Basically, I'm going to destroy the world."

The reporter was shocked and excited. "Wow, can I have an exclusive?" God replied, "No, but I am only going to announce my message to four other newspapers, including yours."

"What other newspapers?" inquired the reporter.

"The Wall Street Journal, USA Today, and The Washington Post."

"Great. Thanks for the story," and the reporter hung up the phone.

The next day God looked at the headlines. The New York Times read, "World to be destroyed by God! See exclusive page 1D." The Wall Street Journal read, "World to end! Markets close early."

USA Today read, "We're gone!" Finally, God looked at the headlines of The Washington Post. It read, "God destroys world. Minorities and women affected most!"

I heard this joke a few months ago when I was listening to Rush Limbaugh criticize liberal journalists and media personalities on the radio. Let me ask you, does Rush have a foot to stand on when he criticizes the media for their "liberal bias?" In some ways, I think he does.

For example, immediately after George Bush was elected President in 1988, Nebraska Sen. Bob Kerry stated, "If George Bush gets assassinated, the Secret Service should shoot Dan Quayle." Depending on your party affiliation, this joke might seem funny. But only three newspapers picked up the story, two papers in London and one in the United States. Kerry later retracted his remark and nothing else was heard. Why?

After the GOP's victory last November, Newt Gingrich appeared on NBC's "Meet the Press" and gave a 45-minute interview with the show's host Tim Russert.

During the interview, Newt thoroughly explained the goals of the Republican's "Contract With America."

But the only part of his interview to make the headlines was his name calling of Bill and Hillary Clinton as "liberal counter-culture McGovernites." Why was this?

A day before Newt Gingrich assumed position of Speaker of the House, CBS leaked an excerpt of their news program "Eye to Eye." Connie Chung asked Gingrich's mother what Newt thought of Hillary Clinton. Well, we all know what the response was.

Since when did the media start running approval ratings of House Speakers? I don't remember an approval rating for Tom Foley, Jim Wright or Tip O'Neil. I ask you, do journalists and media types have an agenda? Remember, during the past three presidential elections, journalists have voted 85 percent Democratic.

This is my point. I believe that Rush Limbaugh and other conservative talk show hosts have gained popularity because many people are sick and tired of the liberal slant that is presented by major news networks and print. Rush Limbaugh uses the same tactics news networks use. He isolates a certain comment or phrase made by an individual, presents the quote and gives a witty commentary. I believe as long as the media continue to pursue a liberal bias toward news events, Rush Limbaugh will still be around. I might not agree with everything Rush says, but then again I don't believe everything Bill Clinton, Jim Hightower, or Cokie Roberts says either.

Programming directed at specific audience

To the editor:
 This letter is in regards to PBS column, "It may be 'TV worth watching,' but is anyone watching?" Mr. Walters is correct, I don't think anyone consistently watches PBS, and this is why I think it is so.

To start off, for someone to enjoy every show on PBS you would have to be a two-year-old, quilting, frugal and cajun cooking, Wall Street broking, political commentating, house remodeling, landscape painting, science studying, country-jazz-classical-opera music listener with many other vast and faceted interests.

You've got to understand that PBS programs target a specific audience.

Audiences will pick and choose programs for what suits their particular interest. Something that is educational, cultured, political, or entertaining instead of these network brain pacifiers.

Commercial networks tend to overgeneralize the viewing audience and put out hyped-up brassy shows that you most likely will not remember two hours after the punch.

Commercial programming hooks you and keeps your interest just to let you sit and rot while they fill your brains with by-products from the sponsors and raise the popularity of overrated TV entertainers. Whereas, I don't think that PBS expects the viewer to couch potato on PBS programming.

Now let's talk a little about funding. If you totally took away the funding of PBS programs they would not collapse or suffer. Most of the programs are funded by major corporations such as Chevron, Lockheed, Chrysler, and "the annual support of viewers like you." The ones to suffer would be the individual small stations such as our very significant KTXT.

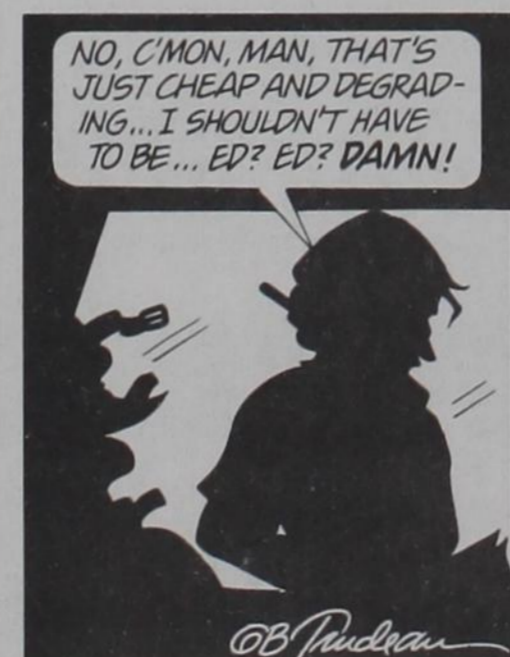

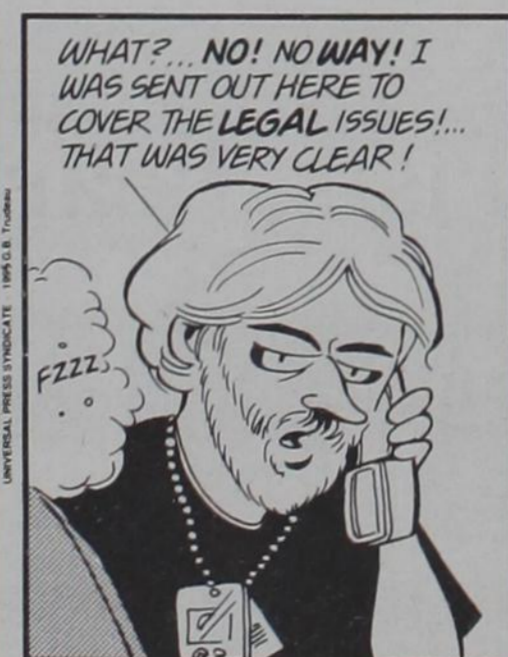

Sure PBS is saturated with shows that don't appeal to everyone. I think people need to get off their keisters, get out a little more, and let their brains develop instead of squander.

One last thing. Why is it that people have to slam Barney?

Of course, most college students will not find him interesting. Barney and friends are not really intended for double-digit age groups. Just as I'm sure my two-year-old wouldn't care too much for the entertainment of Seinfeld or enjoy the real humor of The Simpsons. Besides a big purple tyrannosaurus rex with an overtly friendly disposition is much too easy a target.

Reception slated to assist students

By Lisa Ray
The University Daily

Texas Tech students are invited to attend the Hispanic Student Reception Thursday from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. in the University Center Ballroom.

Various Hispanic-oriented organizations, campus-support groups, the Tech Counseling Center, Financial Aid Office and the Career Planning and Placement Center will send representatives to explain services available to students.

The reception provides any interested student an opportunity to get together and meet other Hispanics involved at Tech, said Frank Newton, co-coordinator and counseling psychologist at the Tech Counseling

Reception

Who: any student interested
What: Hispanic Student Reception
When: Thursday, 7 p.m. to 10 p.m.
Where: UC Ballroom
Why: can meet Hispanic faculty and staff, get familiar with various Hispanic-oriented organizations
How: just go, cookies and punch served, casual dress

Center. "The reception offers students information about opportunities at Tech and provides students points of contact for organizations," Silvas said.

Students also can meet other minority faculty and staff members, he said. Tech President Robert Lawless will present the introduction of the reception.

Each year, about 300 students attend the once-a-semester receptions, Silvas said.

"Mostly freshmen attend the reception because they feel they are the only Hispanics on campus," he said. "When they leave Tech, they realize they are not the only ones."

At the reception, tables will be set up to display various organizations. Students can sign-up for an organization or have the organization mail them information, said Sergio Fernandez, Hispanic Student Society president.

Fernandez will present a short speech about what the Hispanic Student Society offers and what services the society performs, he said.

Silvas said cookies and punch will be served and attire is casual.

Foreign schools offer travel, cultural exchange

By Terri Lowrance
The University Daily

The EF International Language Schools can offer Tech students language, cross-cultural and travel programs required for many academic and professional opportunities.

With 30 years of experience in language training and cultural exchange, EF provides year-round European language courses in addition to summer programs in the countries of Germany, Italy, Spain and France.

"As the world goes global, programs like ours are becoming more important for all students," said Lynne Kadela, EF admissions officer.

The EF International Language Schools refer to participation in the schools as an educational passport, Kadela said.

Often students have an interest in learning a language, but they or their parents have reservations about traveling abroad to do so, said Frances McLaughlin, EF admissions director.

"Typical concerns include distance, cost, program quality and safety," McLaughlin said.

Students should review many different programs and talk with teachers, advisers or returning students before making a decision, McLaughlin said.

The EF goal is to give students the total immersion experience to accelerate the learning process, he said.

The principal course, offering 24 lessons each week, costs $5,240 for one semester. The intensive course costs $5,880 each semester and includes 30 lessons each week.

The course price includes round-trip flights between New York or Boston and Europe.

The price also includes a shared room, breakfast and dinner on weekdays and all meals on weekends.

The price also pays for weekly lessons, progress tests, sports activities and pre-departure materials.

Those interested in learning more about programs can call EF admissions officers at 1-800-992-1892.

Professor in critical condition

Texas Tech assistant English professor Sherry Ceniza remained in critical condition at University Medical Center Tuesday, UMC officials said.

Ceniza, 56, suffered severe head trauma after being struck by a black Chevrolet Cavalier at 12:50 p.m. Monday on Canton Avenue behind the English building. The University Police Department is continuing its investigation of the accident.

The driver of the Cavalier was arrested Monday afternoon because of outstanding warrants unrelated to Monday's accident, police said.

Fires

Spraying would cost between $30 to $40, depending on how many times they have to spray each acre."

Burning fields also is a more natural way to remove the weevils than insecticides, Britton said.

"Fire is natural," he said. "It is part of the grassland ecosystem. In terms of plants, it's a rejuvenating force. In terms of population, it is smoky, so we stay away from towns."

Despite the smoke, burning fields reduces accumulated litter and triples the yield of cotton growth, Britton said.

"It takes away old growth and litter," he said. "It makes the soil warm up faster which makes for a better growing environment in the spring when it is still cool."

Tech graduate student Kevin Mote said if all farmers were to burn their fields on the first nice day, there would be too much smoke in the air.

"Plains Cotton Growers knew they had a problem with weevils," Mote said. "They needed a small, experienced group to burn small bits every day."

Britton said experience means that fire ecologists know when not to burn fields.

"There are red-flag conditions when the wind is over 20 miles per hour, air temperature is over 80 degrees or humidity is under 20 percent," he said. "Another bad condition is when there is a cold front expected within 12 hours because the wind picks up, and the wind direction changes."

Prescribed Burning Technology is the company Tech students formed to control burning land, Mote said.

"There are so many people that are afraid of fire, don't understand fire or haven't been around it enough," he said. "This job is not for the faint at heart. If you are really afraid of fire you want to turn and run. When flames are 20-feet high and heat is higher than flesh can handle it, you still have to do your job."

Mote said Tech has been doing a good job in getting people educated about fire ecology.

"The more people we can educate, the better job we can do in protecting our natural resources," he said.

Soulhat returns to rock at Depot

By Amy Osmulski
The University Daily

A veteran drummer with a distinctive rhythmic drive plus three college kids with a love for rock 'n' roll equals a band on its way to the top.

Soulhat will return to Lubbock Saturday at midnight for a rockin' performance at the Depot Warehouse. Passenger and Black Tooth Grin will open the show at 9:30 p.m. Tickets cost $8.50 in advance and $10 at the door.

"Soulhat played here in October, and it was a great show," Depot music director Lane Arnold said. "They brought about 900 people out, and I bet there is an even bigger turnout Saturday."

Some people may remember Soulhat from its two years on Austin's infamous Sixth Street. They played twice-a-week, three-hour long gigs at the Black Cat Lounge.

Their first album, "Live at the Black Cat," was self distributed and reminiscent of the Sixth Street days. The band's second album, "Outdebox," was recorded last year, and later released on Epic.

Their third album, "Good to Be Gone," is the first album recorded specifically for a major label.

"This was 10 times better to make than the last record," guitarist and singer Bill Cassis said. "We had a great time in the studio — no holds barred, creatively."

The majority of the latest album was written by singer and guitarist Kevin McKinney in a "feverish burst of creativity."

"We were just having some fun and trying to ruffle some feathers," guitarist and singer Kevin McKinney said. "It's fun to rock out and play out loud. It was something we all felt we needed and wanted to do."

The album shows a new lyrical attitude, and songs about trying to survive in a stressed-out world, and "a guy wiggin' out."

"The world's kind of frustrating," McKinney said. "There's not a lot of happy stuff to sing about unless you're in love, and I'm not."

"You travel around, and you start to see all these things, and I guess it rubs off on you," he said. "It's just what I'm faced with every day. But don't get me wrong, there are good things, too."

Cassis, and fellow band members McKinney and Brian Walsh, formed the group four years ago while attending college in Texas.

The band's drummer, the legendary Barry E. "Frosty" Smith, later joined the band.

The band was named "Rock Band of the Year" in the 1993 Austin Music Awards, and was runner-up for "Austin Band of the Year."

"That kind of sums it all up," McKinney said. "When you are freaking on the world, you just have to sit back and chill out."

Lockhart named replacement

BOSTON (AP) — Keith Lockhart, associate conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony and Cincinnati Pops orchestras, will succeed John Williams as conductor of the renowned Boston Pops, The Boston Globe reported Tuesday.

Lockhart, 35, will conduct the opening of the Boston Pops season May 10, the newspaper said. Boston Symphony Orchestra Inc., which runs the Pops, said no appointment had been made.

But spokeswoman Bernadette Horgan acknowledged that Lockhart was a top choice for the post. An announcement is expected in about two weeks, she said.

He would be the 20th conductor of the Pops, which has played music for 110 years.

Williams, a noted composer of theme music for films, retired as Pops conductor last year. He succeeded the late Arthur Fiedler, conductor of the Pops for 50 years, in 1980. Lockhart is touring Europe with the Cincinnati Symphony and did not return telephone messages to his hotel in Vienna.

Lady Raiders face challenge from Rice

By Bryan Adams

The Texas Tech women's basketball team will invite Rice, the surprise in the Southwest Conference this season, to knock them off today at 7 p.m. in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

The second-place Owls, 7-8 overall and 4-1 in the SWC, will try to throw a monkey wrench into several Tech streaks.

The seventh-ranked Lady Raiders (19-2, 5-0) are riding the second-longest winning streak in the NCAA at 16 games. No. 1-ranked Connecticut holds the longest winning streak at 17. Tech has won 11 straight games against Rice and holds an 8-0 record versus Texas schools this year.

"Rice presents a whole different challenge than we've faced before," Tech head coach Marsha Sharp said. "They're an awfully good basketball team. It's not a fluke that they are 4-1 in our conference. They've played well enough to deserve that mark. They have to have gained some confidence along the way."

Rice is led by two three-year letterwinners — senior forward Brenda Conaway and senior forward Lacey Guinn. Conaway leads the Owls with 14.7 points and 7.7 rebounds a game.

Guinn in shooting 49.1 percent from three-point range and averages 10 points a game.

"They may be the best perimeter shooting team that we will play in conference," Sharp said. "Saturday night against Baylor they were eight for nine from the three-point line. You have to be concerned about that particularly when your strong defense is the zone. They're big inside, and they will challenge our shooters in there. There are some things that they really can do to hurt us."

Tech is 11-1 at home this season and has won 56 of the last 58 outings. The Lady Raiders are shooting 50 percent from the field at home this season and have contained their opponents to just a 34.4 field-goal percentage. Tech is outscoring its visitors by an average of 84-57.

The Lady Raiders have averaged 6,592 tickets sold at home games including an all-time high of 10,352 against Texas Saturday.

"I thought it was a great game for us on Saturday," Sharp said. "Mainly because our fans created such a great atmosphere. To be able to play that well in front of them and to create that kind of an atmosphere for women's basketball was really special for me."

"It was a nationally televised game, and a lot of people got to watch our coliseum and all of our fans in action. I thought that was a really special thing for Lubbock."

Men's cagers look to rebound against Owls

By Jonathan Harris

The Texas Tech men's basketball team will continue its two-game road swing when it plays the Rice Owls at 7:35 p.m. today at the Summit in Houston.

Tech, 9-7 overall and 3-2 in Southwest Conference play, is coming off a 82-68 loss against Texas Saturday in Austin.

Rice (9-7, 4-1) is in a two-way tie for second in the SWC with Texas. The Owls are coming off a 90-79 win against Baylor Saturday.

Tech leads the all-time series 58-28. Last year, Tech won both contests, 91-72 in Lubbock and 76-62 in Houston.

Rice returns nine lettermen. The Owls are led by senior guard Adam Peakes, who is averaging 17.5 points and 9.6 rebounds per game. Peakes had a season-high 26 points against Houston.

Rice head coach Willis Wilson is in his third season as the Owls coach, he is 42-31 overall and 21-12 in the SWC. Tech coach James Dickey said he is impressed with the Owls this season.

"Rice is playing well, Willis has done a good job with them this year," Dickey said. "Adam Peakes is really playing well in conference, he's rebounding and scoring well."

Dickey said Rice will be a challenge because of the Owls offensive execution.

He also said this could be one of the biggest weeks for the Raiders because of the conference race.

"This week coming up is critical for us to stay in the league race," Dickey said. "We need to finish 5-2 for the first round of games before Texas A&M comes to town (Tuesday)."

Tech will look to get more production from the scoring trio of seniors Mark Davis, Lance Hughes and junior Jason Sasser. Against Texas, the trio scored a combined 33 points.

Hughes said Tech needs to play like it did prior to the Texas game to get back on the winning track.

"We need to have a start like we did against SMU and finish like we did against Baylor," Hughes said. "We have to put together a 40-minute game."

Tech also will look to get continued scoring from freshman Cory Carr, who said he enjoys the chance to get more playing time.

"I think the Texas game gave me a lot of confidence because I didn't miss any shots from the field," Carr said.

Super Bowl XXIX not highly rated

NEW YORK (AP) — When it comes to television ratings, the Super Bowl means super numbers. So, while the San Francisco 49ers' lopsided victory over the San Diego Chargers had one of the smallest audiences in the game's history, it still produced the number advertisers Jove — the big 40.

Sunday's game on ABC drew a 41.3 rating and a 63 share

Entertainer Tom DeLuca highlights 15th Annual Rec Center All-Nighter

Campus Entertainer of the Year, Tom DeLuca, will highlight the Rec Center's 15th Annual All-Nighter with an 11 p.m. performance Friday.

DeLuca

DeLuca's hypnosis journey will be one of more than 20 free activities scheduled for students' enjoyment and participation.

Activities begin Friday at 7 p.m. and continue until 5 a.m. Saturday. Sport tournament entries are due Thursday for many of the individual and team events. Slam dunk, table games, arm wrestling, water jousting, human bowling, casino gambling and table tennis all have drop-in registration Friday night. Swimming, kayaking, rappelling, rock climbing, Aikido and Tae Kwon Do are also available for viewing and participation.

Playing blackjack at the casino is one of the many activities students can participate in at the Rec Center's 15th Annual All-Nighter.

Featured entertainer is Tom DeLuca. DeLuca will perform hypnosis on student volunteers, as one hypnotized dancing Tech student demonstrated last year.

Lipid profile, screening
Feb. 9 6:30-8:30 p.m.

This is a total lipid profile and requires a 12-hour fast. Cholesterol screening is $8 and glucose screening is $2. You do not need to be a Rec Center member to have this done.

Triathlon entries due

Ironman Triathlon Challenge Entries Due Feb. 10
Can you do the Ironman distances

— 2.4 mile swim, 112 mile cycle and 26.2 mile run — in 15 days?
Challenge yourself! Call 742-3828 for details.

Weekly Injury Clinics begin tonight

The first in a series of weekly Injury Clinics begins tonight at 7 p.m. in room 201 of the Student Recreation Center. The clinics, which are free, are hosted by Dr. Robert Yost and the Sports Medicine residents from the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center.

Persons with athletic type injuries are encouraged to attend the clinic and have one of the orthopaedic doctors examine the injury. Rehabilitation, referrals and advice on prevention will be discussed with each individual. All exams and discussions are handled in a group setting so those attending are reminded to dress in workout gear if appropriate.

This clinic will meet each Wednesday through April 26. Additional information is available by calling the Rec Sports office at 742-3351.

Rec Center Outdoor Shop rents skis

Downhill and cross country skis can be rented from the Outdoor Shop for a very low cost.

The Outdoor Shop is located in the Student Recreation Center in room 206. All equipment is available for rent to all students, faculty, staff and Rec Center members.

Downhill ski equipment can be rented for $9 per day, including skis, boots, poles and two traveling days.

Cross country skis are $6 per day, including skis, boots and poles. There are a variety of ski racks also for rent; they rent for $6/weekend. The Outdoor Shop also rents snowshoes.

For a complete list of equipment that can be rented, stop by the Outdoor Shop, room 206, or pick up a price list in various locations throughout the Student Recreation Center.

For additional information, call 742-2949.

Rec Center offers weight control class

A weight control class offered by the Rec Center will offer suggestions for those who constantly battle those excess pounds.

Participants will be expected to exercise regularly outside of class time but nutrition, exercise and behavior modifications will be presented.

Class will meet on Tuesdays from Feb. 7 to March 7 from 5:30 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. Cost is $5. Please register by calling 742-3828.

A member of the women's Lacrosse club shoots the ball past a defender during practice. The club is in its inaugural season and will begin competition in February.
