Senate hears president's concerns

By Linda Carriger

The University Daily

Texas Tech President Robert Lawless urged students to be pedestrian-conscious, condemned tortilla tossing and asked for student input during the state's financing process.

The Tech president made the comments during a Student Senate meeting Thursday night.

Lawless said he is concerned that students are not aware of the traffic hazards on and around campus.

Two students and one faculty member were hit by cars within the last two weeks.

"All these accidents happening over here are very serious," he said. "I don't care how tough you are—you're not going to win. You're going to get hurt."

In light of the accidents, Lawless asked senators to develop a pedestrian safety program.

"Somehow we have to raise a sensitivity that there are cars moving around here," he said. "We've got to all pay attention because we are losing people."

Another concern the president had was tortilla tossing.

For at least the last three seasons, students have been tossing flour tortillas onto the football field during Red Raider football games, causing the Dallas Morning News to tag the university as 'Tortilla Tech.'

"The image of Texas Tech needs to be what Texas Tech really is—and that is quality education," Lawless said. "I get hurt quite a bit when we get referred to as 'Tortilla Tech.'"

The nickname affects more than Tech's image, Lawless said. The tradition has the potential to hamper fund-raising efforts.

"Most of the people who have money and are willing to give it are not impressed by the tortilla tossing," he said.

Lawless asked senators to end the tortilla-tossing tradition.

"I'd appreciate anything you could do,"

he said. "I know if I say 'do not throw tortillas,' there won't be enough (tortillas) made in this country."

Lawless included Tech's plans to develop a large fund-raising drive.

He said he hopes to raise $250 to $350 million for Tech's endowment fund.

Tech also is taking on fund-raising efforts in Austin.

Currently, the Texas Legislature is deciding how to finance higher education.

Commission approves new motels for city

By Shannon Murphy

The University Daily

Lubbock residents voiced no opposition to the addition of three new motels to the area, following approval by the Lubbock Planning and Zoning Commission Thursday.

The Lubbock City Council will decide in three weeks whether the motels will be built.

When the motel proposals were initiated, the KingsPark Neighborhood Association had some concerns, including excess traffic in the area, property lighting and the position of motel windows, said Don Evanson, a Tharaldson Enterprises representative.

Tharaldson Enterprises, a firm based in Fargo, N.D., proposed three of the six motels that were approved by the commission.

Evanson presented an overview of the proposed motels to the commission and neighborhood association members.

"We have worked completely with the neighborhood to ensure their satisfaction," Evanson said.

Rick Austin, Lubbock resident and KingsPark Neighborhood Association member, said the organization was in favor of the motels.

"We have a signed affidavit by the Tharaldson group," Austin said. "They worked with us and helped to make improvements on the proposed property."

The three motels that were approved by the commission include:

- Courtyard by Marriott, a three-story, 78-unit facility, east of the Ashmore Inn & Suites

- Fairfield Inn, a three-story facility, just east of the Marriott along South Loop 289

- Hampton Inn, a three-story, 81-unit facility, just east of the Fairfield Inn along South Loop 289

In January, ground also was broken for a new Super 8 Motel to be built along the I-27 corridor.

Evanson said Tharaldson Enterprises sees Lubbock as a city with a promising future.

"Lubbock is a good market, and it needs more quality rooms," he said.

"When we research, we look for places like Lubbock to expand in," Evanson said.

He said the Lubbock economy is good, and the company is planning for the city's future.

"We don't put $8 to $10 million into something if we don't feel confident in the project," he said. "We will not be building a 100- to 200-room hotel where the occupancy rate has the chance of being low. We want to build three separate motels, three stories each."

Evanson said there will be an 8-foot brick wall built along the south property line to ensure privacy for Lubbock residents and motel visitors.

"There will also be a number of 25-foot evergreen trees built on one side of the wall," he said. "This will help make it more aesthetically pleasing for everyone."

No motel window will face the south and lighting will be placed away from neighborhood areas, he said.

Congress passes mandate reform act

By Donald Gillilan

The University Daily

The Republican Congress made another step toward completing its Contract with America Wednesday by approving the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act.

The proposed bill will now make its way to President Clinton for approval.

The bill will restrict the federal government's ability to impose unfunded mandates on the states and will require Congress to pay for programs it imposes on state and local government.

"Unfunded mandates from Washington rob the folks at home by dictating the use of their local tax money on the thing the federal government in Washington says must be taken care of first," said Rep. Larry Combest, a Republican from Lubbock. "My vote means Washington either puts money where its mouth is or keeps its mouth shut."

Keith Williams, Combest's press secretary, said the bill will now go to a conference committee and will be reviewed by appointed senators and representatives.

"They will go in there and hammer out the differences in the bill," Williams said. "The bills are very similar to each other, so it won't take that long."

He said it might take a week for the bill to be sent to Clinton.

Mark Harmon, Lubbock County Democrat Party chairman, said he hopes some important mandates will not be deleted.

"Many of our unfunded mandate laws deal with health, safety and the environment," Harmon said. "I hope they review the mandates before they try to get rid of them."

When the federal government issues an unfunded mandate, the city usually has to raise taxes or cut back on funds, Harmon said.

"We should find away to save the most valuable laws, and not just scrap all the laws just because they are unfunded," he said. "I don't want to see this unfunded mandates bill become an excuse for us to just throw away important mandates."

Robert Beach, president of Tech's College Republicans, said he is in support of passage of the unfunded mandate bill.

"If we can keep the federal government from imposing unfunded mandates, it will make life a lot easier," Beach said.

He said he believes if the government stops putting unfunded mandates on businesses, it won't change any mandates that are important.

Shuttle blasts to space today

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — After a day's delay, NASA's first female space shuttle pilot and her five crewmates prepared for an early morning liftoff today on an unprecedented rendezvous with the Russian space station.

NASA had five minutes to send Discovery on the most fuel-efficient route to the orbiting Mir station. It was the shortest shuttle launch window in 10 years.

To improve its chances of getting off on time, NASA got an early start Thursday pumping a half-million gallons of fuel into Discovery's external tank.

Among NASA's first female pilot, Discovery's crew includes Texas Tech regent Bernard Harris.

Discovery was supposed to fly Thursday, but NASA delayed liftoff to replace a failed navigation unit.

This is the first of eight shuttle trips planned to Russia's orbiting station through 1997. After that, NASA expects to build an international space station with Russia and other countries. The last time U.S. and Russian spacecraft met in orbit was in 1975 when the Apollo and Soyuz ships docked.

New Depot District theater shines with 1930 aura

By Amy Osmulski

The University Daily

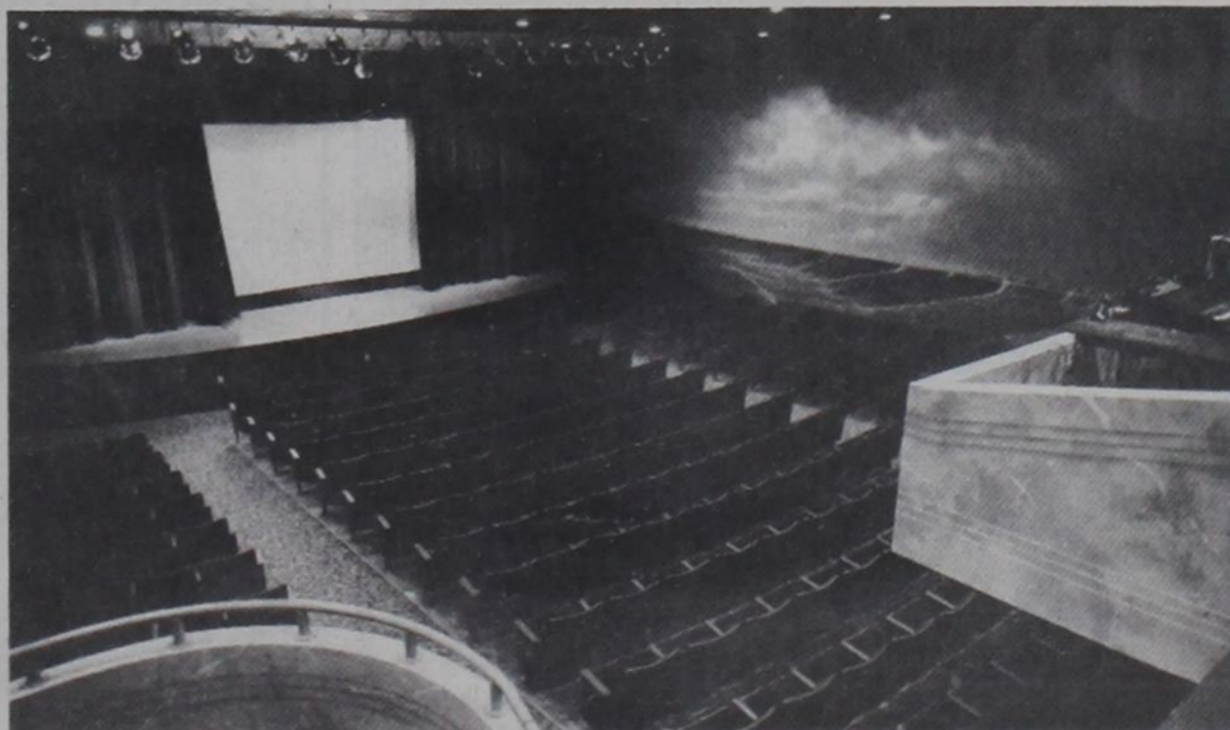

Walking into the Cactus Theater means stepping into a world of Model T's, top hats and phonographs.

From the old-time marquee to the vintage flowery carpet, the theater screams 1930s.

Located in the Depot District at 1214 Ave. H, the Cactus Theater will once again open as a movie theater today at 7 p.m. — with one little catch. The theater will only show classic movies, beginning with "Casablanca."

"Casablanca" will run for one night only at 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. Admission costs $5 for adults and $3 for children 11 and under.

"One of the goals of the board of directors of the Cactus was to run classic movies," said David Murrah, board member and director of Texas Tech's Southwest Collection. "We wanted the Cactus to offer Lubbock residents the opportunity to experience movie-going as it was in the 1930s and 1940s.

The Cactus Theatre

Sam W. Magee: The University Daily

"If people will support these movies, we plan to offer a Classic Cinema Series in the spring," Murrah said. "We will solicit nominations for showings from patrons at the 'Casablanca' showing."

The Cactus Theater was built in 1938 as a second-run movie theater. Its completion symbolized Lubbock's recovery from the crippling Depression of the 1930s and reflected the city's need for a family-oriented theater, Murrah said.

The theater's first movie was "Wings over Honolulu," starring Wendy Barrie and Ray Milland. Admission was 20 cents for adults and 10 cents for children.

April 6, 1958, the Cactus Theater closed its doors. Later, the building was stripped of all movie equipment and became a store.

"The guy right next door bought the place, pulled everything out and used it as a storage area for his pipes," said Gary Belshaw, traffic manager of the Cactus Theater.

In January 1993, Lubbock musician and businessman Don Caldwell began making his dream of refurbishing the theater reality.

"When I first started thinking about it, I knew what we could do with the place," Caldwell said. "It had such a great stage and excellent sound."

Caldwell organized Cactus Theater, Inc., a group of 25 investors interested in helping restore the theater, and they began working. The focus of the new Cactus Theater was to be live musical and dramatic entertainment, and classic movies, Caldwell said.

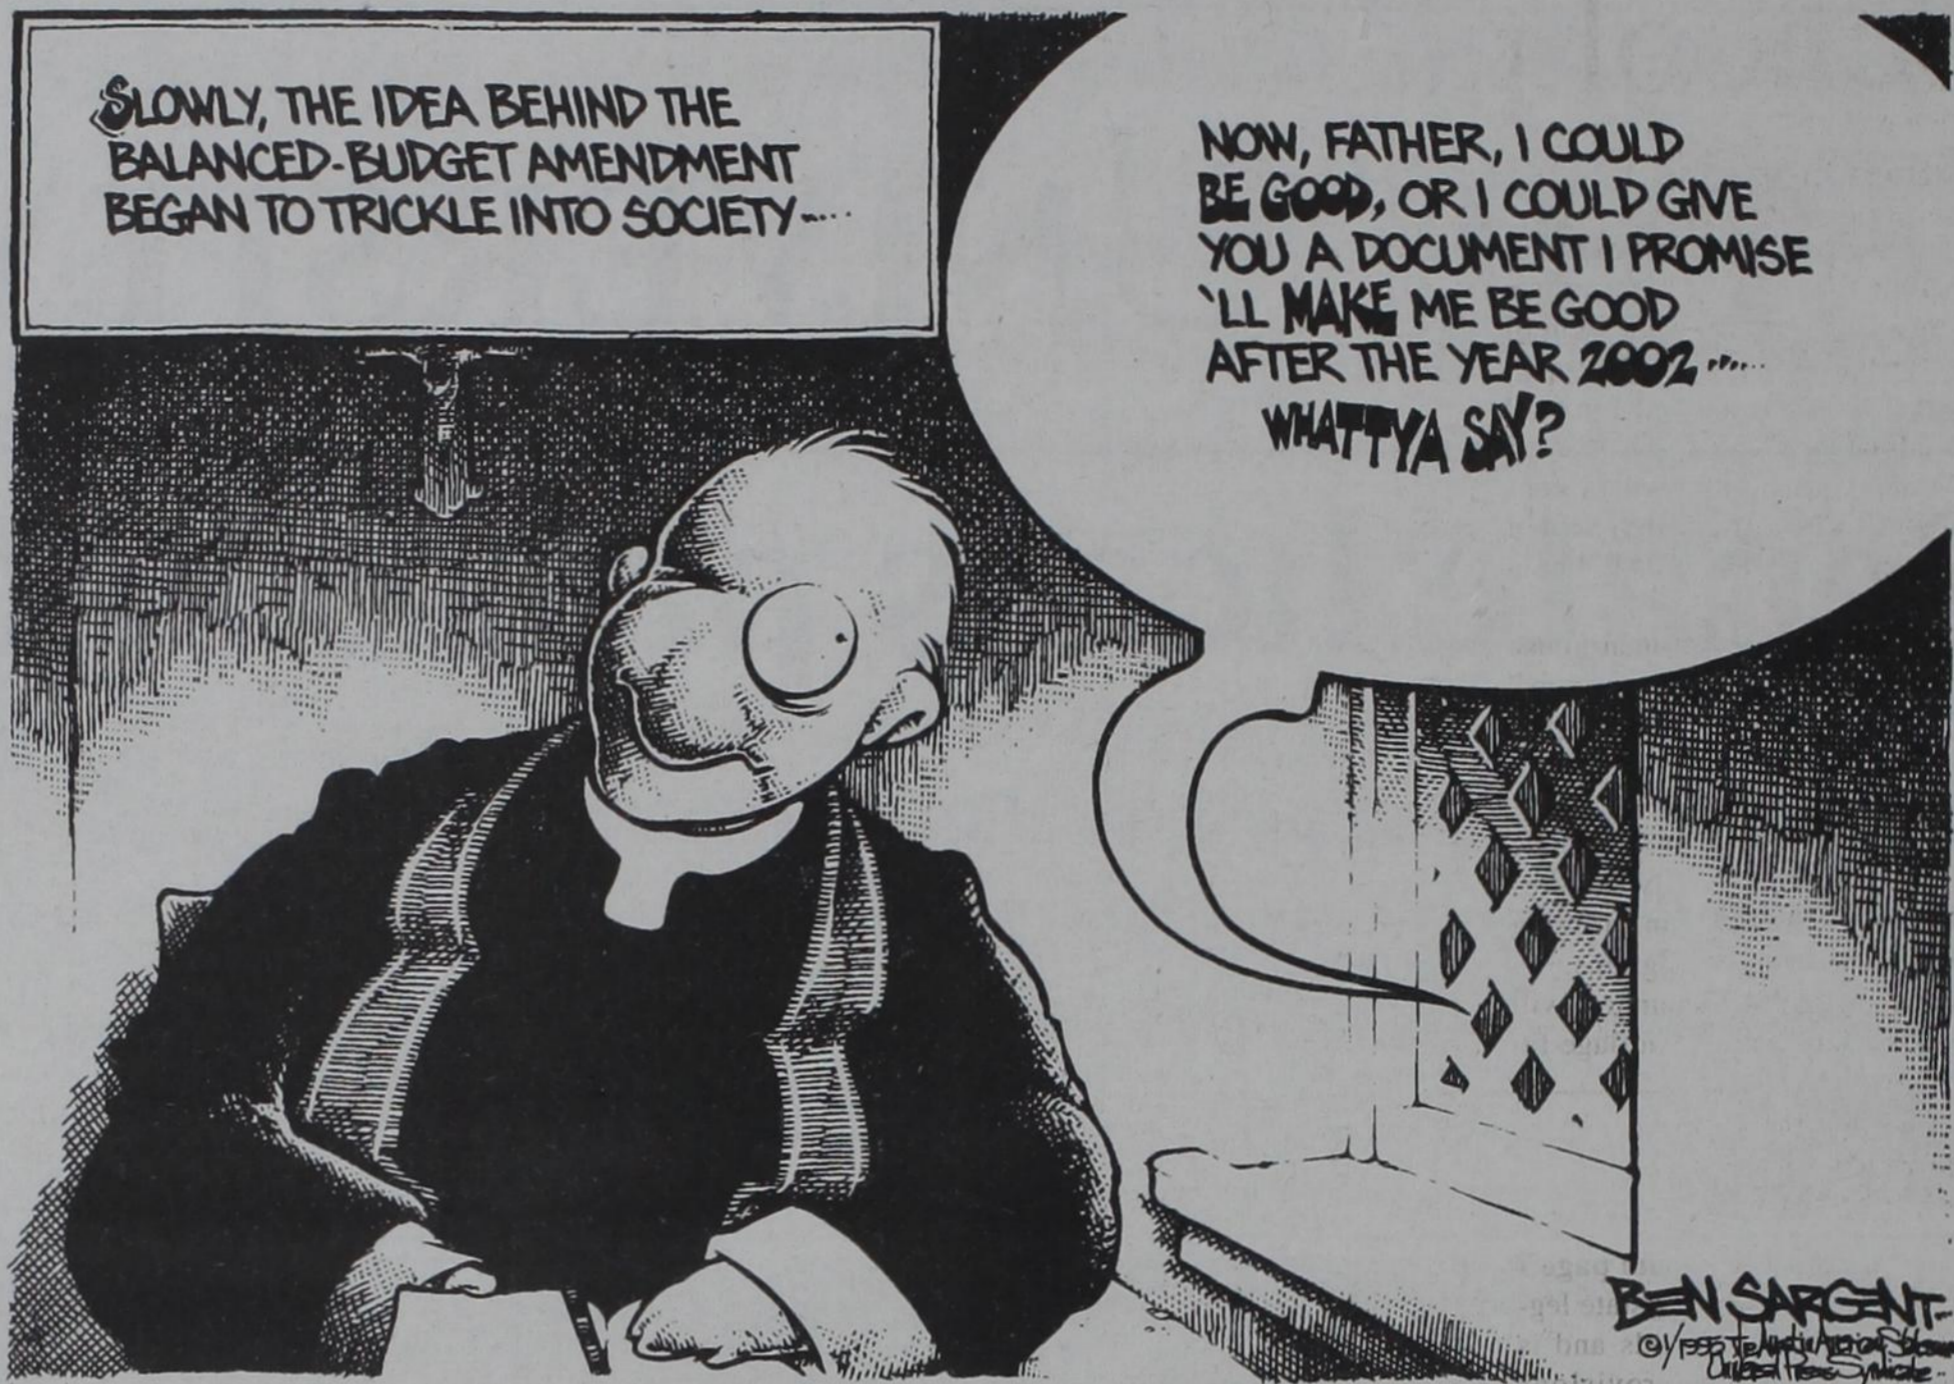

The theater offers live musical nostalgia nights, live acting and dancing, music reviews and, of course, the old black and white movies time can never forget.

Clinton needs to stay out of baseball strike

It's Day 175. And still no baseball. Major league owners offered another proposal to players Wednesday in an attempt to heal the 5-month-old wound that festered because of a proposed salary cap. Owners pledged to eliminate the cap and any other adjustments that would restrict players' salaries to 50 percent of their total revenue. Teams also would be able to set their own payrolls and be able to provide a proposed two-threshold luxury tax plan. Players also would receive unlimited service time on disabled lists and an opportunity to be involved in decisions concerning inter-league play. But the players turned the proposal down and will wait for further negotiations. Owners said they expected a counterproposal, the first since November, from players today. But now President Clinton wants to be involved in the baseball salary scuffle. Clinton said if negotiations or movement toward an agreement are not settled by Monday, legislative action will be taken. What's up, Bill? Will backing the Mexican peso be too boring for you by Monday? Maybe baseball needs a little presidential helping hand. Or maybe not. Last time anyone checked, Clinton still had a country to run, not a baseball game to play or watch. Federal interest rates are on the rise, the national deficit situation has not improved much, the country's murder rate remains the same as it was six years ago, the welfare system lacks reform, and AIDS and other social issues need to be focused on. The list of national woes could fill this page and more. But maybe Bill would rather take himself out to the ball game and forget about the duties he promised to concern himself with when he became president two years ago. Heck, watching White Sox first baseman Frank Thomas make a possible 500-foot home run is enough to make anyone forget their troubles. But Clinton shouldn't be worried about what his leisure time activities include. Unionized business or not, baseball shouldn't be receiving the focus of Clinton's attention. After all, basketball season is still in full swing. The seven-member editorial board voted 4-3 on this issue.

Have you ever wished Ma Bell listened? You will

Chris Walters
 And the company that will make you wish this is AT&T. No, it's Sprint. No, it's MCI. No, we said AT&T and we meant AT&T—here, take this free portable telephone. No, it's MCI and we'll prove it by giving you two and a half years of free long distance to a single phone number in a state at least three states away from your own. I don't like to think of myself as a paranoid person, but lately I've had this strange suspicion that all the long distance companies are working together to terrorize me. In the past year, I've switched my long distance service five times. I realize no one's held a gun to my head and forced me to make these switches, but I can't help myself—every time a long distance company calls me, they offer a "savings" I can't resist. Being a young consumer, I feel a deep responsibility to get the best deal possible. No, that's a lie, I don't really; if there's any truth at all to market research, it's that part about my age group having the largest amount of disposable income. Even my tuition fees, I realize each semester when I get my grades, are disposable. But I like to pretend I'm frugal, so I keep saying, "Okay, sure," to every operator who calls me, because they all have proof (which they recite right there over the phone) that their rates are absolutely the best on the planet. The problem with these great savings is that they're encoded in plans, which, in long distance company terminology, means "a largely arbitrary set of conditions which must be fully met before any of those rates we told you so much about will be applied to your bill." Otherwise, the secret, this-is-what-all-the-competitors-base-their-savings-on, rate is used. There is an upside to being a casualty in the long distance war: you get free stuff. During the summer, I was mailed two checks from AT&T—one for $30 and one for $25—which I could cash at my bank. All I had to do was switch. I switched. I don't know who or what they had me confused with to think I was worth $55, but who cares? Sure, it was three months before they started seeing a profit (and I switched again shortly after that), but that's their problem. I don't think they care, though. I think, by this point, they just do it to spite each other—they know it costs more than it's worth to lure customers away from one another, but it's just so darn much fun. I keep switching back to AT&T not because they have the best rates (how would you know?), but because they bribe the best. That sounds so materialistic, though, so my official stance on the issue is that I want to give my money to AT&T to help fund all those great science-fiction products they keep promising in their commercials; when I watch them, I dance around like a little kid and daydream about what I'll do with my very own transporter beam (with an AT&T logo on it, of course). But I'm beginning to cringe whenever I see a "You Will" ad. It may be my imagination, but there seems to be a tone of menace to the voice-over, as if I'm being threatened in some vague, indefinable way. Most of the gadget-saturated citizens of America still can't program a VCR or use a microwave to cook a real meal. And if we can't even make modern technology efficient, do we really need to be able to give birth via satellite or attend board meetings without ever leaving the bathroom? I'm waiting for the commercial that says, "Have you ever understood what the service-industry worker at a fast-food drive-up speaker was saying? You Will." Chris Walters is a junior sociology major. His column appears Friday.

serve students running across 19th Street, dodging rush hour traffic, or stepping into traffic yards away from a crosswalk, my stomach knots and I wonder if they feel a false sense of security. I urge every person who walks or drives on or around our campus to be ever mindful and alert to other cars and pedestrians. The split second required to change a radio station or turn to speak to a friend could be all the time necessary for a terrible tragedy to occur. In our busy lives we must take time to be conscious of personal safety and to remember that assuring our safe passage is, above all, our personal responsibility. In any encounter between person and vehicle, regardless of fault, the person is in jeopardy of serious injury. Texas Tech Traffic and Parking

Regulations state that pedestrians have the right of way at all times in campus crosswalks. Drivers must note the many crosswalks marked clearly with white paint. Pedestrians should be sure their routes across streets include crosswalks. I extend my most sincere personal sympathy to the family and friends of Robin Wallace, and I know you all join me in praying for the recovery of Dr. Sherry Ceniza so that she may return to the classroom where her excellent teaching skills are well-known. Likewise, we pray for the full recovery of graduate student James Culhane. As we all feel the stunning sorrow of the death of a student and the grave injury of a popular teacher and another student, let us stop to assess how fragile life can be and yet how we can preserve its continuance by observing the rules of personal safety dictated by common sense

Solutions to increase pedestrian safety

To the editor: Recently, one of our students tragically lost her life as she attempted to cross Fourth Street. The other day one of our faculty was severely injured by a car as she walked across campus. How are we, as members of the Texas Tech community, going to address the issue of public safety to our students, staff, and faculty as they walk through and to campus? In the hope of initiating a community response to these recent events, I offer several suggestions:

- 1) We need to examine the crosswalks and crossing lights on the corner of 19th and University Avenue to ensure that they are functioning properly.
- 2) We need a crosswalk and a crossing light on the corner of Fourth and Boston. There are none!!! I cross this street every day and I know first hand what it is like to run the gauntlet while trying to get to campus.
- 3) We should begin the process of constructing footbridges that will span University Avenue, 19th Street, and Fourth Street. These bridges should be built as soon as possible.
- 4) We could even encourage staff, faculty, and students to ride the bus and constant alert behavior. Robert W. Lawless President TTU/TTUHS

Public transportation does work well. In fact, the University of Massachusetts has a free bus service that runs every 10 minutes during the peak periods of the day. This bus service runs by the larger apartment complexes in the town of Amherst and it travels to four other college campuses (Amherst College, Smith College, Hampshire College, and Mount Holyoke College) located in a 40-mile area surrounding the UMass campus. If it can work there, it can certainly work in Lubbock. Quality of life and safety on campus is a prime concern to all of us. Often we are powerless to make a difference. In this case, I think we can make a difference. We can ensure the safety of the students, faculty, and staff who walk to campus by providing them with the means necessary for safely walking across the 12-lane highway (19th street) that surrounds the Texas Tech Campus. Robert R. Paine

Accidents show importance of safety

To the editor: The three terrible auto-pedestrian accidents in the last ten days that resulted in the death of a Texas Tech student and seriously injured a faculty member and a graduate student must signal an alarm to the Texas

Tech community. We are all pedestrians at some time during the day on the campus. Many of us walk across busy city streets to reach the campus and many others walk through parking lots as well as across campus streets. When I ob-

Memories of M*A*S*H School plans open house meeting

By Terri Lowrance

The medical and Reserve Officer Training Corps magnet programs offered at Estacado High School will be the emphasis of an open house meeting scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Monday.

Booths and activities will be conducted in the Estacado High School gymnasium located at 1504 E. Itasca St.

"We are having the open house to showcase our magnet program," said Polly Kiker, who leads the magnet program.

Teachers and PTA members invite community residents to visit the school's event, especially families with children interested in enrolling in one of the magnet programs.

Teachers and PTA members will dress in scrubs and camouflage fatigues to dramatize the MASH 1504 open house theme.

"We're dressing up like Hot Lips, Hawkeye and the other characters from the M*A*S*H 4077 show," Kiker said.

Booths with popcorn, balloons, blood pressure checks and information will be arranged under Army hospital type tents.

Estacado has four medical magnet programs including sports medicine, medical administration, anatomy and physiology and health occupations, Kiker said.

Brenda Devault, Estacado activities assistant principal, said display boards about the medical aspects of the program will be posted.

"The displays will address medical terminology, medical transcription, medical illustration, anatomy and physiology, the health sciences lab and co-op, and sports medicine," she said.

Devault said each school department also will have a booth.

"The English department will be in the recreation hall and will have 16 mm films set up," she said. "The history department will be the debriefing tent. Science will be the swamp."

"The vocational departments joined together to form the high tech and mess hall."

The math department will have a supplies tent and will make dog-tags.

The operating room will be provided by the business, physical education and health departments.

Devault said Army, Navy and Marine recruiting officers and the Tech Air Force ROTC will attend the open house.

The Estacado ROTC Drill Team will perform and a helicopter will be on location, Kiker said.

Devault said other participants include EMS, Medical Explorer Troop, South Plains College, University Medical Center, Methodist Hospital and St. Mary Hospital.

LifeGift Organization, Total Home Healthcare and Tech Prep also will participate in events.

These organizations will offer students a look at avenues of opportunity after graduation, Devault said.

PTA members will provide food refreshments and serve punch from a Hawkeye-type-homemade distillery designed by the Estacado science department.

Estacado personnel will be available to answer questions about the magnet programs.

Tech student, professor improve

Jim Culhane, a Texas Tech graduate student, was listed in satisfactory condition at University Medical Center Thursday.

Culhane was struck by a car early Tuesday morning while crossing 19th Street.

He sustained a broken left arm, shoulder and leg, UMC officials said.

Sherry Ceniza, a Tech assistant English professor who was struck by a car behind the English building Monday afternoon, is now listed in serious condition at UMC.

Tech honored with four new HUD scholarships

By Darrin Cook

The University Daily

Four graduate students, one who was a Texas Tech undergraduate, were awarded two-year scholarships to Tech's Master of Public Administration program.

The four new Housing and Urban Development scholarships totaled $114,000.

Tech is the only Texas university to receive four fellowships in each of the past two years and one of five universities in the country to receive four fellowships this year.

Mark Somma, director of the Master of Public Administration program at Tech, said students are chosen from the Tech public service center.

"Students have to apply for graduate school at Tech, and from there, we receive information on who applied for the Master of Public Administration."

"From there, we look over the students' grades and other accomplishments and decide who to give the awards to," Somma said.

Benjamin Conley is the sole Tech graduate to receive the scholarship which was also awarded to Harvard University graduate Michelle Martinez-Salazar, Arizona State University graduate Kira Cubberly, and Wayland Baptist University graduate Lee Prince.

Somma said the HUD fellowship is sought by graduate programs nationwide. Since some of the students receiving the scholarships have degrees from different universities, the scholarship includes travel money as well as tuition and books, Somma said.

The program targets disadvantaged students in a competitive selection process in awarding its fellowships, he said.

The HUD scholars were chosen by the Center for Public Service on the basis of academic record and professional commitment to public service, Somma said. Each student also will work a two-year internship with municipal and state agencies located in Lubbock.

Carolyn Aliamus, director of the City of Lubbock's Division of Culture and Leisure Services, said the internships allow the award winners to do hard-core research as well as get hands-on training.

"These interns learn the real world and are a big part of what is happening at our office," Aliamus said.

This scholarship is a great benefit to the Hub City as well as the Tech campus, she said. Somma said the scholarship is also a form of recruitment.

"We use the HUD fellowship partly as recruitment for the Master of Public Administration graduate program," Somma said.

Senate

Lawless is pushing state legislators for more funds and is lobbying against provisions which would hurt Tech in the House appropriations bill.

To present a better case to legislators and to get a better feel for what the university needs, Lawless said Tech students should voice their opinions on state financing.

"You can provide us input on what you think, where we are and what you think about tuition and fees," Lawless said. "We have to find out what the student input is."

After the president's speech, Tech senators sent a resolution to committee which may speed up the loan disbursement process in the Bursar's Office.

English department Senator Brooks Heise said the lines at the Bursar's Office were too long this semester.

"There's no way that building can handle that number of people," Heise said. "You remember freshmen registration? That line (at the Bursar's Office) was twice as bad."

Students have been complaining about the lack of efficiency in the office, several senators said.

"I have heard a lot of complaints from students about financial aid distribution and the way it's done," said Ken Trimble, an at-large senator who wrote the bill. "The university knows this is going to happen every semester, why don't they prepare for it?"

During the beginning of each semester, temporary offices could be set up across campus to make the disbursement of loans easier, Trimble said. These offices, Trimble said, could be staffed by student volunteers.

Members of the Student Services Committee will present an efficiency report about the loan disbursement process to the senate in March.

Senators also agreed to purchase a set of silver spurs. The spurs will be awarded to the winner of every Tech vs. University of Texas football game.

The yearly swap is designed to "promote friendly competition and enhance relations with UT," the bill states.

Student Association presidents of both schools will set rules for the spur swap at a later date, the bill states.

Arts and Sciences Senator Homer Hensley and Business Administration Senator Russell Thomasson will attend the Conference of Student Government Associations Feb. 18 in College Station. The Student Senate allocated $750 to the pair from the Student Senate Contingency Fund for the trip. The fund, which is the senate's only source of spending money, has $1,401.47.

Senators also set Monday to Feb. 10 as Agriculture and Natural Resources Awareness Week.

Jones Stadium has 576 lights situated on 12 poles. The Lubbock Municipal Coliseum uses 54 lights above the playing surface.

Father acquitted of manslaughter charges

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — The father who unhooked his premature baby from a respirator was acquitted Thursday of manslaughter in a case that examined the rights of parents in determining treatment for their children. Dr. Gregory Messenger showed little emotion other than a smile when the jury returned its verdict.

Agriculture, Natural Resources Awareness Week kicks off Monday

By Jamie McDonald
The University Daily

A week dedicated to agriculture and natural resources will showcase events, programs and studies involving the Texas Tech College of Agricultural Sciences and Natural Resources.

The college will host Agriculture and Natural Resources Awareness Week Monday through Feb. 10 to inform the community about the present and future in agriculture, said Bryan Daniel, coordinator of the college's student and alumni programs.

"The week is extremely important because agriculture and the use of natural resources affects everyone worldwide," Daniel said. "It is the food we eat and the material we use in our clothes. Maybe people want to know about the future cost of these things as consumers, or maybe they are interested in a future job. It is information you can put to good use."

The week is designed to help the community learn about the college and its programs, he said.

"The purpose is to provide information in hopes that all of the campus and community will attend," he said. "It is also to give some direction as to where agriculture is heading in the future."

The community should consider itself invited, Daniel said.

"We have put up posters to let people know about the speakers," he said. "Consider that an open invite. We hope they will feel welcome and will take advantage of what we have here."

Students benefit from the event because they can learn more about the agriculture industry, he said.

"While they are in college, they looking forward to the events.

"I am very optimistic about the lineup," Cepica said. "It is the best scheduling of activities we've ever had. There is a significant activity everyday of the week."

The college has sponsored an awareness week for the past five years, Daniel said.

Rape, sexual-assault victim support volunteer training session available

By Guy Priel
The University Daily

The Lubbock Rape Crisis Center is conducting a three-week long training session for Texas Tech students interested in volunteering support for rape and sexual-assault victims.

"Tech students have always been real supportive of the center and have proven to be the strongest volunteers we have," said Kelly Whitman, Lubbock Rape Crisis Center assistant director.

Tech students are fairly close in age to the typical victim of assault, so they can be strong supporters, she said.

The training sessions will begin Tuesday from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays and from 9 a.m. to noon on Saturdays.

"Volunteers are an important part of the work we perform at the center," Whitman said.

The volunteers at the center help run the 24-hour hotline and meet one-to-one with the victims. "It takes a special person to volunteer here," Whitman said.

When the volunteers complete the training sessions, they sign up for 12 volunteer hours a month, she said.

"Students can easily work around their class schedule because it is not like a full-time job," Whitman said. "Volunteers are asked to come in whenever it is convenient for them."

The center counsels 20 to 24 victims per month from Lubbock and the surrounding towns, she said.

"The reporting rate for rape and other sexual assault in Lubbock is high because victims are constantly being encouraged to report," she said.

Tech officials work closely with the Rape Crisis Center by referring sexual assault victims directly to the center after being examined by doctors, said Robin Brewton, director of health education at Student Health Services.

Whitman said victims are not the only ones who benefit from the center.

"Everyone who volunteers will grow from the opportunity to help people overcome a major crisis in their lives and the lives of their family members," she said.

Whitman said there is a growing importance to have volunteers at the center to listen to the victims.

"The trauma felt by the victims when they come to the center can be relieved as long as there is someone there to lend an ear," Whitman said.

Both men and women are needed as volunteers, she said.

"About 5 percent of the victims at the center are males and having another male to talk to can help ease the distress," she said.

The male volunteers not only deal with children victims but also can provide support for male family members of the female victims, Whitman said.

She said there is no charge for the training.

The Lubbock Rape Crisis Center is a combined service of the Lubbock Police Department, the Texas Department of Health and the Lubbock United Way.

Those interested should call 763-3232 for more information.

Grad Council approves candidacies, adds course

The Texas Tech Graduate Council approved 27 students for candidacy in the doctoral program Thursday during its fifth meeting of the academic year.

The council also discussed course changes and updates from each graduate program.

A human development and family studies course, a class designed to include supervision of teaching assistants and classroom visits, advice, assistance and review of teaching materials, was added to the catalog.

In other matters, Clyde Hendrick, dean of the graduate school, introduced Troy Johnson as the new director of graduate admissions.

The council will have its next meeting in March.

The council consists of faculty members from each of Tech's graduate programs.

Trading low after interest rate hike

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar was mixed against major foreign currencies Thursday as traders refrained from large moves ahead of the Labor Department's release Friday of important employment data.

The currency lull followed a busy week, including the Federal Reserve's decision Wednesday to raise interest rates and President Clinton's new Mexico rescue plan.

The dollar rose vs. the Japanese yen but fell against the German mark.

"People are waiting for fresh new reasons to trade, especially with all of the events of this week," said Hubert Pedroli, manager of foreign exchange at Credit Suisse in New York.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 99.43 Japanese yen, up from 99.25 yen late Wednesday. In London, the dollar rose to 99.46 yen.

The dollar also was changing hands in New York at 1.5180 German marks, down from 1.5194 marks late Wednesday. In London, the dollar closed at 1.5180 German marks.

The Federal Reserve's

policymaking committee raised short-term rates by a half percentage point to 6 percent, the seventh increase since last February, as part of an effort to thwart inflationary pressure in the expanding economy.

While the decision was largely expected, the dollar weakened because some financial traders were expecting a steeper increase. Higher rates tend to boost the allure of U.S. investments and thus increase demand for dollars.

By Thursday, currency traders already were speculating about the Fed's next potential rate increase.

All-Nighter offers activities for students

By Lisa Ray
The University Daily

From kayaking to hypnotism, the 15th Annual Texas Tech Recreational Sports All-Nighter will encompass many activities for students.

Activities begin at 7 p.m. today and will end about 3 a.m. Saturday in the Student Recreation Center, said Joe MacLean, Tech director of recreational sports.

Various tournaments, activities, contests and demonstrations will be sponsored during the night.

Anyone affiliated with Tech is invited to attend, he said.

Students and faculty who pay the rec center services fee are able to attend for free, he said. Guests will be admitted for $3.

Tom DeLuca, an imaginative hypnotist, will make a special presentation at 11 p.m. DeLuca will make his 11th appearance at a Tech all-nighter.

"The hypnotist had a guy thinking he was an alien and had some people acting like they were 5 years old and eating their favorite cereal," said Rob Draper, a senior corporate fitness major from San Antonio.

Draper said he has attended all-nighters in the past.

Jason Coldiron, a graduate student from Lubbock, also said he has seen DeLuca hypnotize students during two all-nighters.

"He took a group out of the audience and made them act like they were 5 year olds," Coldiron said. "Watching a group of 19-, 20- and 21-year-olds go nuts over Sesame Street was hilarious."

Other activities slated for the all-nighter include tae kwon do and aikido demonstrations, MacLean said.

A casino night also has been scheduled involving blackjack games and a roulette wheel, he said.

The aquatic center will be open for kayaking, water jousting with innertubes and water volleyball, he said. Participants should bring appropriate attire, he said.

Some tournaments require pre-registration, but most tournaments allow registration up until the start of the event, he said. Other activities and demonstrations do not require registration.

MacLean said about 300 people have signed up for tournaments, and he expects about 3,000 people to attend the all-nighter.

All-nighter participants should bring money for refreshments, which will be provided by Cardinal Key and High Riders members.

No food or drinks are allowed to be brought into the rec center, MacLean said.

Participants should not bring any bedding, he said.

"No sleeping allowed," MacLean said. "Everyone is expected to participate in or view the activities."

A staff of nine people organized, promoted and will supervise the activities Friday night, MacLean said.

MacLean said the rec center staff and about 40 student assistants will operate the all-nighter.

Tech receives Coca-Cola donation

Texas Tech was the recipient of a $25,000 donation from the Southwest Coca-Cola Bottling Company Inc. to establish the company's fourth Tech Presidential Endowed Scholarship.

Since 1991, the company has donated $25,000 each year as the principal for a scholarship available to incoming scholars.

The scholarship is given based on leadership and academic abilities.

Southwest Coca-Cola Bottling Company has now donated a total of $100,000 over the past four years to Tech scholars.

Chuck Stephenson, Southwest Coca-Cola Bottling Company Inc. president, said an additional $25,000 will be donated to Tech in September for another scholarship.

"Coca-Cola is an integral part of the community and a major employer in Lubbock," Stephenson said. "Education has been one of our key charitable activities."

There are 249 established Presidential Endowed Scholarships at Tech, and 137 students attend Tech as presidential scholars.

Clinton to ask for minimum wage increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton will ask Congress for a 90-cent increase in the minimum wage — to $5.15 an hour — over a two-year period, congressional sources said Thursday.

Details were to be revealed today by the White House. But the congressional sources, speaking on the condition of anonymity, said Clinton will propose a 45-cent increase to the current $4.25 per hour minimum wage upon enactment and another 45-cent increase the following year.

In his State of the Union address, Clinton said an increase was necessary but avoided specifying then what he would recommend. The last increase, 45 cents an hour, was in 1991.

White House spokeswoman Ginny Terzano said, "The president thinks that an increase in the minimum wage will be good for our workers, and they need more to live on than $4.25 an hour."

Chances of Congress passing an increase are considered poor because of opposition from Republican leaders.

Jurors learn about history of O.J., Nicole's history

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The jurors in the O.J. Simpson case Thursday were shown items from the safe-deposit box in which Nicole Brown Simpson documented her 1989 beating through photos, newspaper clippings and letters from Simpson that asked, "How I got so crazy?"

"Let me start by expressing to you how wrong I was for hurting you," Simpson wrote to his then-wife.

"There is no excusable excuse for what I did."

Authorities found the evidence — three letters, photos of her bruised body, her will, newspaper stories about the beating and other items — when they drilled opened the box in December, six months after Ms. Simpson and her friend

Ronald Goldman were stabbed to death.

Prosecutors contend her murder was the culmination of years of abuse from an jealous, obsessive Simpson.

"It appears to us what Nicole Brown was doing was leaving a trail for us of what happened in 1989," Deputy District Attorney Christopher Darden said.

The handwritten letters were projected page by page on a large courtroom screen.

Each page was held there briefly for the jurors to read.

The judge didn't allow the newspaper articles to be entered as evidence, and the jurors weren't immediately shown the photos.

Simpson pleaded no contest to wife beating in the incident and was placed on probation.

Prosecutors turned their attention to the safe-deposit box after completing questioning of former policeman Ronald Shipp, who fought off defense attempts to portray him as a liar and a starstruck wannabe friend who lusted after Ms. Simpson.

Under a second day of cross-examination, Shipp said he once had a serious drinking problem and acknowledged he was treated by a psychiatrist. He said he then left the police department because he was "burned out."

But he stood by his account that the day after the June 12 murders, Simpson confided in him that he had had dreams of killing his ex-wife.

He also insisted that the former football star had regarded him as a friend.

"I got drunk at O.J.'s wedding and made a fool out of myself," Shipp offered as proof, "and he accepted it and made a joke about it later on."

Before he left the stand, Shipp said he saw Simpson throughout the week after his ex-wife's slaying and didn't detect any signs of grief.

"Did he ever express any sadness or sense of loss because Nicole was gone?" Darden asked.

"I didn't see it because of Nicole, no," Shipp replied.

In fact, Shipp said, Simpson seemed angry as he watched TV news reports about the slayings.

"I saw anger at the news coverage that he was actually being accused of murdering" them, the witness said.

During a break in questioning, Shipp mouthed to Simpson across the room: "Tell the truth." Simpson appeared not to notice. Judge Lance Ito sternly cautioned jurors to disregard any such remarks.

In another development, defense jury consultant Jo-Ellan Dimitrius said there have been reports of possible juror misconduct.

"It's serious enough that the judge has thought that it needs to be evaluated by another agency," she said without elaborating.

Shipp has said that on June 13, Simpson said he didn't want to take a lie-detector test because he had had dreams of killing his ex-wife.

Sea predator arrives on South Plains

Tara McQueen

Sharks have been spotted on Lubbock's dry land.

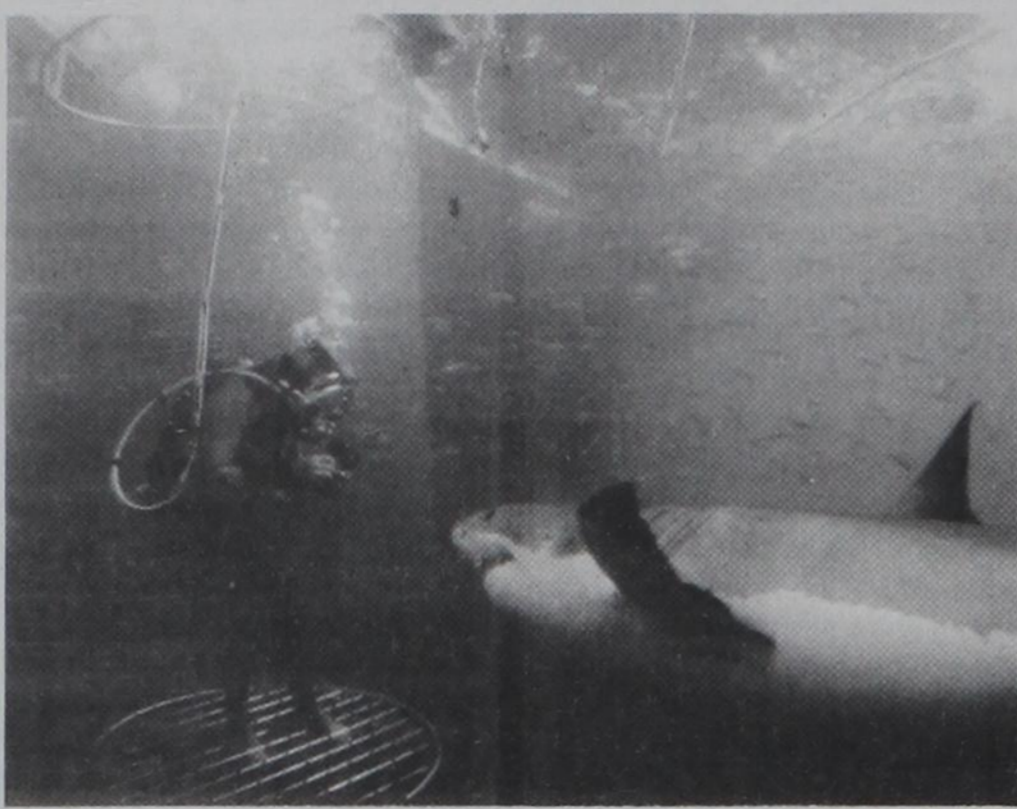

"Search for the Great Sharks" will open at 4 p.m. Saturday at the Omnimax Theater, 2579 S. Loop 289.

After the successful film shoot of the "Ring of Fire," the Sakurajima volcano in Japan, producers George Casey and Mike Day decided to go from fire to water. They began directing "Sharks" in 1990.

Rodney Fox, an Australian dedicated to the preservation of great white sharks, was part of the crew. Despite 462 stitches from a shark attack in 1963, Fox continues to study the animals.

Eugenie Clark, a marine biologist and shark expert, also worked on the project. Clark, who is in her seventies, teaches at the University of Maryland.

She knew from the time she was a 9-year-old that she wanted to spend her life swimming with sharks.

"It never occurred to me that they might hurt me," Clark said.

During the film, Clark, nicknamed "The Shark Lady," and Fox dive off the Catalina Channel to test a new shark repellent.

Submerged in a clear Lexan tube, Fox faces his fears and serves as bait.

Seated beneath a domed screen the audience feels like they are scuba diving with the crew. During the film, viewers will see several shark attacks including one by a 17-foot great white shark who devours a 60-pound tuna.

Be prepared to sit on the edge of your seat as sharks circle the screen amid seaweed and water.

The music adds to the dramatic effect. A few tense moments with tangled oxygen lines and ineffective shark repellent make this film action-packed. This is definitely a movie for everyone more than 10 years of age, and it's the perfect date movie if you want a reason to put your arm around your date.

I never thought an educational film could be so much fun to watch. "Sharks" kept my attention, which is hard to do. I would recommend the movie to anyone who likes fish, fear and the front row.

Clark said she doesn't believe sharks are the cold, mechanical predators many people make them out to be.

Viewers will have to decide this for themselves.

Tickets cost $5.50 for adults and $4.50 for students and seniors.

Tara McQueen is a features reporter at The University Daily.

Wild horse roundup begins on Army range

WHITE SANDS MISSILE RANGE, N.M. (AP) — A second batch of wild horses is to be rounded up Monday on White Sands Missile Range as part of an effort to reduce a herd that is too large for the food supply on the Army range.

The roundup will take place in the Malpais Springs area.

The area is the same site in the middle of the range where the first roundup occurred Tuesday, said Larry Furrow, White Sands chief of public affair.

Tuesday's roundup was the first since 122 wild horses settled on the parched range last summer.

It netted 79 horses.

The horse removal program has a maximum price tag of $90,000, Furrow said.

Officials are awaiting the results of blood tests on the 79 horses for equine anemia before the animals are transported to Oklahoma, Furrow said.

There are an estimated 1,300 to 1,500 feral horses living on the 3,000-square-mile southern New Mexico installation.

The animals are descendants of horses that lived there when the government took over the range in the 1940s.

A preliminary environmental impact statement said the range could adequately sustain about 200 horses.

Horses that died on the range last summer suffered from dehydration and starvation brought on by drought and overpopulation.

The roundups must be conducted before the peak foaling season begins in late winter and before next summer, when high temperatures might trigger more horse deaths, Furrow said.

Comedian, author of 'Men Are Sluts' speaks out

WACO — Insult men as hormone-driven creatures of limited intelligence and even less sensitivity and you won't bother comic Steven McFarlin. In fact, he probably can top your put-down with dozens of his own.

It's a dirty job, but it's his living. In the highly competitive world of stand-up comedy, McFarlin, best known by his stage name Spanky, is enjoying considerable attention for his latest comic theme: Men are sluts.

The phrase serves as a handy quiver for dozens of barbs, from broad sexual stereotypes to real-world pickup lines employed by brain-dead would-be Lotharios.

Spanky's packaged this material, largely condensed from his live show, into a book titled "Men Are Sluts" and a cassette tape that blends cuts from his stand-up routine with bits recorded in a sound studio, complete with an underlying music track.

Women are like cow patties: the older they are, the easier they are to pick up.

The Dallas native, who performed recently in Waco, terms himself a reformed slut and says he speaks from personal experience when he says things like:

There are two kinds of men: Those who want to have sex all of the time and those who are dead.

Or, men will sleep with someone they'd never THINK of dating while women will date men they'd never think of sleeping with.

Then there are the pick-up lines like, "Do you believe in the hereafter? Then you know what I'm here after."

Or one-liners attributed to his father, like, "Women are like cow patties. The older they are, the easier they are to pick up."

It all finds a ready audience, Spanky is discovering in sales of the book and cassette, plus radio airplay in cities in which he performs.

Some radio stations, in fact, have aired a daily "Men Are Sluts" moment for their listeners, the comic said.

"It ended up being a bigger project than I envisioned," he said. "I'm pretty pleased at the way it turned out."

Success has come after a decade of hard work from the open microphone up.

McFarlin edged into stand-up in the early 1980s, juggling his comedy with his work in a Dallas design studio.

Rather than risk his clients finding out that he dabbled in stand-up on the side, McFarlin adopted his stage name "Little Rascals" star Spanky McFarland. Then, within a year, his career in stand-up soon overtook his other work and McFarlin found himself stuck with a new name.

"In many ways, I've come to regret it," he admitted. "In relationships, it's hard to take someone seriously named Spanky."

Then there are the fans who read another meaning into Spanky.

"You can see from the glint in their eye when they ask about the name that they think it's some kinda S & M, kinky bondage type thing," he said.

"Then I tell them it's Spanky, after Spanky McFarland of the "Little Rascals." They seem so disappointed."

With more than 20 television appearances to his credit, Spanky definitely has name recognition at this stage of his career.

While times are hard for many up-and-coming comedians with more and more comedy clubs closing their doors, Spanky continues to find plenty of work. He also keeps busy finding new avenues for his comedy.

There's his Spanky merchandise — Spanky T-shirts, his "Men Are Sluts" book and tape, Spanky caps and Spanky boxer shorts — peddled after his performances.

There's a script he wrote for "Seinfeld" and one for a sports show he aims to pitch at Fox Television Network. Plus the possibility of a cable television series spun off from "Men Are Sluts."

Not to mention a board game aimed at emphasizing the contributions made by ethnic Americans to America history and culture.

The latter reflects a new-found desire to use his name and comedy to make a difference, he said.

That came after Texas comic Bill Hicks, a rules-breaking comedian that Spanky called a mentor, died from cancer in 1994.

Watching the way Hicks faced his death and remembering how he tackled many social issues in his work prodded Spanky into seeing a new dimension to his work and celebrity. "I realized I needed to be a little more courageous onstage," he admitted.

Don't expect his material to become political or news-driven, however. Politics just aren't the thing a male slut spends time on. "My character is so far out you wouldn't expect him to be well-read," he explained.

He also has been spending some time in Los Angeles, where stand-up comedians have been a hot property for television casting directors: TV stars Roseanne, Tim Allen, Ellen DeGeneres, Paul Reiser and Brett Butler all boast stand-up experience.

Spanky wouldn't mind appearing on a studio set instead of a comedy club stage, but won't cover his typewriter if that phone call from a producer never comes.

"People still need to laugh — now more than ever," he said.

Couple spends retirement in Haiti

KILLEEN — In his journeys, Harry Campbell has seen the aftermath of floods, earthquakes, tornadoes and most recently, political upheaval in Haiti.

Those unacquainted with him might suggest Campbell use a different travel agent, but, in fact, he's chosen disaster as his life's work.

Last year, the 54-year-old retired soldier and his wife, Nancy, decided she would quit her job and they would devote their lives to being modern-day crusaders. The Killeen couple delivers a Christian message not of words, but through their deeds — sacrificing their retirement years for others.

For the last two months, the Campbells have helped feed malnourished Haitians who live in the rows of stone houses in and around Port-au-Prince, Haiti's capital and largest city. They arrived in Haiti Nov. 30 on the island of Hispaniola, with its magnificent mountains edging miles of blue coastline, contrasted by a depressed economy and an uncertain political future. Their possessions totaled 280 pounds.

"For 27 years I wore a green uniform serving bombs and bullets and now I'm in a blue uniform serving beans and bread," Campbell said in a recent telephone interview from Haiti. "Some people are better at preaching and some are better at feeding. It's all part of the message — whether you stand at a pulpit or stand in a warehouse amidst flour dust shoveling flour into bags."

For the first 10 days, they had no electricity. During the holidays, power was restored for about 20 hours per day, but a recent fire at a power plant caused the power supply to be cut to two hours a day, Campbell said.

Despite reports of violence in the politically volatile country, Campbell said he rarely hears gunfire and most Haitians he's encountered are peaceful.

"We feel that we are safer here than in most cities in the States doing the same thing," Campbell said. "The average man on the street thinks things are improving. Everybody here is very upbeat and positive."

American soldiers are in Haiti to keep the peace and to help the country through its political transition from a military regime to a democratic form of government. Campbell said he's seen signs hand-painted by Haitians which read "U.S. for 50 years."

"They're saying they want us here for 50 years," Campbell said. "They're used to a different type of military and police force than we have here now. But just because the Marines are here doesn't mean things are much better."

Campbell said there are still occasional gatherings of unemployed Haitians that American soldiers try to disperse peacefully before tensions mount and violence erupts.

"I have observed our soldiers using the softest methods of crowd control I've ever seen," Campbell said.

Red Raiders begin season in Arizona

By Jared Parcell
The University Daily

Despite the major league baseball strike, the Texas Tech baseball team will start its 1995 regular season at 3:30 p.m. today against Arizona State University (in a three-game series) in Tempe, Ariz.

Workouts for the team started Jan. 14, and the team is ready to get under way. Right-handed senior Travis Smith, who posted an 8-1 record and a 3.15 ERA last year, said the first road trip is important. "ASU is a tough team," Smith said. "Last year we opened 0-3, so this will be a test for us. It can help build our confidence or hurt us."

Tech coach Larry Hays, who has guided the Red Raiders to an overall mark of 83-32 the last two seasons, said depth among the ranks will play a vital role.

"We have a lot of talent and good depth, being two deep at every spot," Hays said. "Last year we were thin in the infield, but this season we are a little deeper."

If everything falls into place, the team hopes to accomplish its pre-season goals of a conference championship, a regional berth and a possible trip to Omaha.

Junior third baseman Clint Bryant, who hit .300 last season with five home runs and 34 runs batted in, said this is the best team he's seen since he arrived at Tech in 1991.

"If we have good pitching, hit the ball well and play defense, there is no telling what we can do," Bryant said. "We just want to go out and compete hard every day."

Team members agreed that pitching is one of the keys to a successful season.

"We have good quality pitching, and that's where it all starts," Bryant said. "Pitching, if it's not very good, you won't go very far."

Hays said there are seven pitchers vying for a spot in the starting rotation. Smith, sophomores Jimmy Frush (1-0 and 2.39 ERA), Matt Miller (2-2 and 4.71 ERA) and Jeff Peck (2-2 and 5.17 ERA) and transfers Mike McCreary and Brandon Kolb are the Red Raiders looking to climb the hill at the start of a game.

Another key is the shortstop position, Hays said.

"We have two JUCO transfers at the position," he explained. "(Dion) Ruecker had a good fall, and (Dominic) Hernandez played for a national championship with Galveston Junior College. They both come with good credentials."

Hays said he is looking forward to the upcoming season.

"This could be a good team if the chemistry comes around, and we reach a comfort zone," Hays said.

Team depends on bench for strong 1995 season

By Jared Parcell
The University Daily

The 1995 Texas Tech Red Raider baseball team will find out this season what role a deep bench will play.

Senior left fielder Marshall Bennett and senior pitcher Jason Whittle are being redshirted because of different injuries. Bennett is out with tendinitis in both of his knees.

"He (Bennett) has patellar tendinitis, which is tendinitis just below the knee cap," head trainer Paul Krawietz said. "There is inflammation in the area. He had these symptoms at the start of the season, and our team physicians decided, in order to get his full potential, we would redshirt him and let him heal."

Last season, Bennett hit .285 with six home runs and 31 runs driven in. In the field, he finished with a fielding percentage of 93.6 percent. Head coach Larry Hays said Bennett will be missed this year.

"Bennett is an experienced guy who had a good year last year," Hays said. "He hasn't been sound since Christmas break. He wants to get well, but it wouldn't be worth it to rush his rehab."

Right-hander Travis Smith said Bennett's position on the team may be easier to fill because of a deep bench, but his leadership will be missed.

"Bennett was a leader who knew what to expect," Smith said. "We are deep in the outfield, so his position may be easier to fill."

Krawietz said Whittle, a right-handed pitcher, will be out from six to eight weeks. He has been diagnosed with having an avulsion fracture.

"The ligament connecting the upper and lower arm pulled a piece of the bone off in the elbow," Krawietz said. "He is being redshirted and is going through rehab and therapy now."

Pitching coach Frank Anderson said Saturday that Whittle did not pitch because he had broken a bone in his pitching arm last Wednesday.

"He was one of our top guys," Anderson said. "With him being a senior, we lose some leadership. We need someone to step up and make the most out of the opportunity. We have quite a few guys who can do that."

Whittle said he has not lost the desire to play and will be at every game, cheering on his teammates.

"It's disappointing, but there is nothing I can do," Whittle said. "This might be a blessing in disguise. During the season, I am going to get my grades up, work out, run and get into better shape and have my arm ready by next season. I'll come back better next year."

Whittle finished last season with a record of 8-5, posting a 3.25 ERA, and fanning 89 in 74 2/3 innings. Hays said his numbers will be missed, but there are people on the team ready to take charge.

"With Whittle, we lose a lot of innings and eight wins," Hays said. "He and Smith combined for 16 wins, and when you take that out, we need someone else to fill the hole. We have a lot of cannons and guys who can fill the hole."

Outfielder Scott Pfeifer said the team cannot afford to look back at the injuries.

"We need to pick up the slack," Pfeifer said. "It's too bad, but we can't look back in the past. We need to go on."

Hays said nothing has changed because of the injuries to the two players.

"We are still in the same boat," Hays said. "We have good depth which we are going to call on to come through."

The team will start its season with a three-game series beginning Friday against Arizona State in Tempe, Ariz.

Men's tennis team opens home schedule with Hogs

By Jared Parcell
The University Daily

Former Southwest Conference foe Arkansas will be at Texas Tech this weekend to take on the men's tennis team in a match scheduled to start at 1 p.m. Sunday in the Athletic Training Center.

The Red Raiders enter Sunday's match with an overall record of 0-2, after dropping two matches to New Mexico and Kansas last weekend, but Tech coach Tim Siegel said the team remains confident and focused.

"It's not the losses we look at," Siegel said. "I don't gauge a team on the losses because we are going to have our share because of our schedule and our youth.

"The important thing is keeping the guys upbeat.

"Because our team is young we have to learn more. When you are willing to learn more you can bounce back quickly."

Siegel, who played collegiality at Arkansas, said the Razorbacks are always a threat on the court.

"They are a threat every year because they come to play hard," Siegel said. "They don't give you anything — you really have to beat them. The teams don't matter, because we know we have tough matches almost every time we get on the court. If we are real strong mentally and come ready to play, anything is possible. We proved that this weekend."

Siegel had praise for his team as it prepared Thursday for the No. 31 Razorbacks.

"I think certain players are playing great tennis," Siegel said. "(Freshman) Tylir Jimenez is playing like a senior. (Sophomore transfer) Dieter Schwendinger had a good weekend. I was pleased with (senior) Erick Guzman who played No. 1. And I thought (freshman) Marcello Borelli fought really hard."

Jimenez, who won a singles match against the Lobos' Chris Brown, 6-4, 6-2 and a doubles match with senior teammate Clint Graf 8-2, said he is ready for the match against the Razorbacks after his first collegiate match last weekend.

(Last weekend) gives me a little confidence builder," Jimenez said. "I won't be as nervous as I was down there. I think I'll be a little more relaxed."

He said that a win would help the team's confidence.

"We know we are a good team, but if we happen to win, it would give us a big confidence builder going into other matches," Jimenez said.

Raider owner Davis fires coach Shell, hires White

EL SEGUNDO, Calif. (AP) — Saying he wants to win the Super Bowl and needs a new coach to do so, Los Angeles Raiders owner Al Davis fired coach Art Shell on Thursday and replaced him with Mike White.

Shell, a member of the Raiders organization for 27 years and the Pro Football Hall of Fame, had been the coach since 1989, becoming the first black head coach in pro football's modern era.

Shell's dismissal was anticipated when the Raiders failed to make the playoffs after being dubbed preseason favorites to win the AFC.

They finished 9-7, a 19-9 loss to Kansas City on Dec. 24 ending their playoff hopes.

"We want to win the Super Bowl," said Davis, whose team was the last AFC team to accomplish the feat in 1984. "I felt if we were going to get there, we would have to change the environment. I offered this job to no one else.

"I've known about Mike White for 40 years. I watched him grow, become an assistant coach.

"His history, his records, are tremendously unique. I think he comes extremely qualified, he has a vibrant personality."

Davis wouldn't divulge terms of White's contract, saying only, "It's not for one year and not for five."

Clinton calls for strike settlement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Seeing only slight progress toward settling the baseball strike, the White House sent players and owners another strong message Thursday: Speed it up.

Moments after talks began, mediator W.J. Usery was summoned from the negotiating table to the Cabinet Room.

When he returned from meeting with Labor Secretary Robert Reich and other administration officials, Usery did not say whether he had spoken directly to President Clinton. But he made it altogether clear Clinton wanted more action, and soon.

"He emphasized in extremely strong language that the president expects this to be resolved," union head Donald Fehr said.

Clinton has set a Monday deadline for making substantial progress. He has threatened to ask that Usery propose terms of a settlement.

"My understanding is that it is heavy," management's lead negotiator and Boston Red Sox chairman John Harrington, said of the deadline.

Harrington said Usery did not detail whom he spoke to, or what about. But those at the meeting said there clearly was pressure from the president and his aides.

"Obviously, they're not happy," Kansas City pitcher David Cone said.

Exactly two weeks from the start of spring training, the sides met for about four hours.

The discussion, however, was all about side issues such as international play, not the main economic sticking points.

Fehr said players hoped to make a counterproposal Friday or Saturday to the plan that owners presented Wednesday.

Owners dropped their call for a salary cap, but included a tax on big payrolls that players say is too high.

"In one sense, the adjustment mechanism was not there. That's helpful," Fehr said. "But I don't want to kid anybody — the taxes they have suggested are extraordinarily high."

Under the owners' plan, the Detroit Tigers, whose $56.8 million payroll in 1994 was the most in the majors, would've had to pay about $20 million in taxes.

Under the players' latest plan, the Tigers would've paid about $200,000.

"They have clearly suggested that this is not their final offer. That's good," Fehr said.

Raiders battle TCU for first in SWC

By Jonathan Harris

The University Daily

The Texas Tech men's basketball team will return home at noon Saturday to play the Southwest Conference-leading TCU Horned Frogs in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

TCU, at 13-5 overall and 5-1 in league play, has been a surprise this season under the direction of coach Billy Tubbs.

Tubbs is in his first season in Fort Worth after coaching Oklahoma for 14 seasons.

While at OU, Tubbs led the Sooners to 13 consecutive winning seasons and compiled a 333-133 record, including four Big Eight Coach of the Year honors.

Tech coach James Dickey said he is impressed with the way TCU has played this season under Tubbs.

"Billy has given them great confidence, and they have responded to his system very well," Dickey said. "He has maximized (senior center Kurt) Thomas' abilities and got him the ball and made everyone better around him."

TCU at Texas Tech

Time: 12 p.m. Date: Saturday
Place: Lubbock Municipal Coliseum

1994-95 records:
Tech 10-7, 4-2
TCU 13-6, 5-1

Last Meeting: Tech won 94-90 March 2, 1994 in Fort Worth.
Series record: Tech leads 62-38
Radio/TV: KFYO-AM 790/ KJTV-34 (Cox Cable 10)
Notes: The Bud Light Daredevils will perform at halftime

Thomas averaged 20.7 points last season and is leading the nation in scoring and rebounding this year, averaging 28.8 points and 13 rebounds a game.

Tech senior guard Lance Hughes said the key to defending Thomas will be to keep a fresh player on him.

"I think all of our inside guys will have take turns guarding him," Hughes said. "So he won't be accustomed to one person guarding him and won't get into a groove against one person."

Dickey said although the Raiders will not be able to shut Thomas out, they must contain him.

"We have to minimize the opportunities Thomas gets because you won't stop him," Dickey said. "We need to concentrate on playing solid defense and execute well on defense."

Tech (10-7, 4-2) is coming off a 66-63 win against Rice Wednesday, while TCU is coming off a 72-71 win against Texas A&M Saturday. With Texas' 105-96 loss to Houston Wednesday, a win could put the Raiders back in a tie for first in the conference.

Hughes said this game could provide a big boost for Tech.

"Houston did us a favor against Texas, and if we play like we are capable of, we could put ourselves back into the race," Hughes said. "We need to take care of our business and not rely on anybody else."

Junior forward Jason Sasser said Tech needs to continue to concentrate on the same fundamentals it has since the beginning of the season.

"It's the same thing we have been talking about all season, and that is cut down on turnovers and execute," Sasser said. "If we lose, it will be because we beat ourselves."

Dickey said he thinks this is a huge game for Tech because it is at home and is key in the SWC race.

"This game is the most important game in the first round," Dickey said. "Plus it's a home game, and it will give us a chance to get tied for the lead."

Tech recruiting '95: Show me, don't tell me

Bryan Adams

Tech's recruiting class looks good on paper, but then so did Sam Bowie when he was drafted ahead of Michael Jordan in 1984.

Hello, McFly. If there is anybody out there who feels we will get by Nebraska, Texas A&M, Colorado, Texas or even Oklahoma or Baylor all in the same year (any year), I also have some beach property in Nebraska I think you might be interested in.

Yes, the recruiting class is bigger than Tech has ever had and, yes, Tech did fill some obviously weak areas, but what they filled those areas with could be cream filling.

Even though this class "could" be the best Tech's ever had, it still ranks only fourth best in Texas. Way behind A&M, a little behind Texas and even behind Baylor.

The Aggies are stacked. They picked up FOUR of the top quarterbacks in the nation. They also picked up the best running back in the state of Texas, Parade All-American D'Andre Hardeman, and the second-best running back in California, Sirr Parker.

Tech needed guys on both sides of the trenches because they lost three on the offensive side and everybody on the defensive side. Curtis Lowery, a 6-5, 300-pound offensive lineman, might be the only sure thing the Raiders scraped up. Tech picked up three other offensive linemen and three defensive linemen, all with size. Just because a guy can eat 20 hamburgers in one sitting, chug a 12-pack and bench a Volkswagen doesn't mean he can play the game. Remember Tony Mandarin.

Tony Daniels, DE, Zach Thomas, MLB, and Shawn Banks, WLB, should be the only ones on defense to return to their position. Signee Montae Reagor, a defensive end from Waxahachie, better fill in quick and live up to his potential because Tech is about as deep as a kiddie pool in the defensive line. Verone McKinley should step up and start at cornerback to replace Cat Adams. The Raiders' impression of Dallas playing San Francisco, in the Cotton Bowl, made people realize Tech needed help at corner. Tracy Hart, a 6-0, 190-pound DB from Crandall, should give the Raiders the size they've lacked at corner in the past.

Robert Johnson, who had a great year at linebacker, should beg coach Dykes to move him back to Raider and let Marcus Coleman play free safety. Anthony Armour is back from a knee injury and has a little more size than Johnson.

I have to give Tech credit for going after a quarterback with size for the second year in a row. Matt Tittle, a 6-3, 200-pound redshirt last year, gives Tech an added dimension Zebbie Lethridge doesn't have — size and calm feat. Tech signed Rob Peters, a 6-2, 200-pounder from Katy to follow in Tittle's footsteps.

Byron Hanspard is the future of Tech's offense. Why Phillip Hayes, a RB from Carrollton Newman Smith, wants to sweep up after Hanspard is beyond me. His best bet is to move to wide receiver.

Tech did improve its team, but compared to other schools in the future Big 12 or even just the five other schools supposed to be in the South division, Tech has a mountain to climb bigger than Dolly Parton.

Lady Raiders face challenge from young Frogs

By Bryan Adams

The University Daily

To sweep the first round of Southwest Conference play, Texas Tech only needs to beat 1-16 Texas Christian at 7 p.m. Saturday in Fort Worth's Daniel Meyer Coliseum.

The sixth-ranked Lady Raiders will try to improve their record to 21-2 against a TCU team that has never beaten Tech.

Since the series began in 1982, Tech is 30-0 against the Lady Frogs and has racked up more than 100 points six times, including a 103-55 romping in the last meeting.

"TCU is extremely young, and they are starting a lot of freshmen," coach Marsha Sharp said. "Over half their team is freshmen. They really have struggled and taken some lumps lately.

"I think they are getting a little bit better as they go. You certainly have to guard against any kind of a letdown. It's important that we finish that first round out really well."

Tech, which goes on the road for only the third time in conference play this season, will play only three of its remaining eight games at home. Despite shooting 45.9 percent on the road, Tech is winning by an average score of 75-63 compared to an 84-57 difference at home.

"We hope we can set ourselves up nice for the second round which is going to be a very difficult race for us because we go on the road four times against teams that play really well on home courts," Sharp said.

During Tech's 17-game win streak, currently second best in the nation, it is outscoring the opposition by more than 25 points a game. The Lady Raiders are shooting almost 50 percent from the field compared to 34 percent by adversaries.

Tech is showing no sign of slowing down. For the first time in history the Lady Raiders went undefeated in January and after Wednesday night's game, all five starters are averaging better than 10 points a game.

"They really feel good about the way they are playing and the chemistry," Sharp said. "The sense I get from them is that they feel really confident in each other. Not only do they feel like individually they are doing some things, but more important than that is as a team they really feel good about how they are playing.

They really have no thoughts about individually what they are getting done. I've never heard any of them talk about individual goals. The only thing that seems to be a factor to them is how many rebounding a little bit and (Tabitha) Truesdale is always concerned with how many assists versus turnovers she had."

Leah Garcia, a redshirt freshman guard from Houston Lamar, is the only TCU player averaging in double digits with 11.6 points per game.

Garcia is eighth in the conference with 2.9 assists per game, but also leads in turnovers with 5.6 a game.

Junior guard Kim Altman, daughter of TCU assistant coach Gary Altman, could be designated as TCU's three-point sharpshooter.
