Assistant coach indicted for aggravated assault

James Walker
The University Daily

A grand jury indicted Texas Tech assistant men's basketball coach Greg Pinkney for aggravated assault Wednesday after an incident last month that left Tech medical student Doug Cochran with a broken arm.

The incident occurred at Whaler's Bay Restaurant and Raw Bar, 410 Frankford Ave., May 22. Cochran told police he had just finished having dinner with his girlfriend and was smoking a cigarette when a man and two women walked by and said something he could not understand.

Cochran said he heard the man say something about a girlfriend, and thought he was complimenting him on his girlfriend. As he exhaled from his cigarette, the man poured beer on his face, Cochran told police.

Cochran told police he then tried to push the man's hand away, and the man attacked him, hitting him in the head with his beer glass. Cochran said the man knocked him to the floor and attacked him until he was pulled away by employees of the restaurant.

The officer who arrived on the scene said he was told by emergency medical services personnel that Cochran's arm appeared to be broken. The suspect was gone when the officer arrived, police said.

The woman who was with Cochran told police that the man and two women happened to walk by as Cochran was exhaling smoke from his cigarette.

The woman told police she heard the man say, "Do you think you're impressing your girlfriend by blowing your smoke like that?"

He went on to say, "If you blow smoke again, I'm going to pour beer on you," she said.

The woman said when Cochran exhaled, the man began pouring beer on his face. When Cochran tried to push the man's hand away, the man knocked him to the ground, and Cochran's arm was injured.

Pinkney said he was at the restaurant alone, and that he had not been drinking, although he said Cochran appeared to be intoxicated.

"I'm not able to talk about the whole incident, but the gentleman attacked me, and I responded by hitting him one time," Pinkney said. "I feel confident that I will be found innocent when there is a trial."

Tech head basketball coach James Dickey said he believes Cochran will be exonerated.

"I feel bad for Greg and his family, and I know this is a difficult time for them," Dickey said.

Pinkney, 32, was hired by Dickey in 1992. He is in his second year as Dickey's top assistant and coordinator of recruiting efforts.

Pinkney coached at Howard College, Chipola Junior College and West Texas A&M before coming to Tech.

Freeman standoff ends without violence

JORDAN, Mont. (AP) — All 16 remaining members of the Freeman extremist group surrendered to the FBI and left their ranch Thursday, ending the 81-day standoff without bloodshed.

An FBI vehicle following two vans and one sedan carrying the Freeman waved an American flag out the window as it drove away from the compound in Montana.

The convoy of vehicles was heading for a church to gather before driving 175 miles to Billings, where 12 of the antigovernment fugitives were to face criminal charges, including circulating millions of dollars in bogus checks and threatening to kill a federal judge.

U.S. Attorney Sherry Scheel Matteucci and FBI Agent Thomas T. Kubic announced that all the members of the group still on the property had been safely removed. They said the Freeman voluntarily turned themselves over to authorities without incident.

Earlier in the day, an FBI agent, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the four who were not charged would be free to go but would not be allowed to return to the 960-acre ranch, the agent said.

Myers named interim AD

Brent Ross
The University Daily

Texas Tech Associate Athletic Director Gerald Myers was named interim athletic director by Tech interim President Donald Haragan Tuesday. Haragan said the search for a new AD will not begin until the Board of Regents selects a new president.

Myers takes over the position vacated by Bob Bockrath, who accepted the AD position at the University of Alabama June 7. Myers will assume the AD responsibilities immediately, with Bockrath remaining at Tech through June 21 in an advisory capacity, said Haragan in making the announcement.

"Gerald Myers has contributed years of outstanding service to Texas Tech and brings a great deal of experience and familiarity to the position," said Haragan in a prepared statement. "I have the utmost confidence in Gerald's ability to lead Texas Tech's athletics program into the Big 12 this year.

"We have known each other for 26 years, and I look forward to this new opportunity to work together."

Myers said the process of Tech AD Bob Bockrath accepting the AD position at Alabama and his own appointment as interim AD at Tech was swift.

"This thing happened really fast," he said. "Haragan called me in Tuesday morning and offered me the position, and I accepted."

The Texas Tech College of Engineering team returned June 7 with a fifth place overall finish from the 1996 Propane Vehicle Challenge.

The challenge was held in Windsor and Toronto, Ontario,

Canada, with Tech one of 12 universities selected by the Department of Energy to attend.

The challenge evaluated each school's conversion of a 1996 Chrysler minivan from a gasoline fuel system to a propane-powered engine.

In search of loyalty...

KIRK BAIRD

Loyalty. It's a simple term. But its simplicity seems to escape some members of the administration, and the people responsible for hiring them.

First, former Texas Tech President Robert Lawless leaves Tech, and now Athletic Director Bob Bockrath. If their positions are not the two most important at Tech, certainly they are two of the more visible. Both posts act as captains:

while not involved in the daily grunt work of Tech, they plot a course for the university and see to it the personnel are in place to get it there.

So what happens when the ship is without a captain? Tech is learning first hand. And what a time.

Just as Tech enters into what is arguably the best athletic conference in the nation, the AD decides to take a job with the University of Alabama. Sure, the Tech athletic program is in its best state in recent memory if not ever. But why should Bockrath leave now? Why put in all that work to build the ship only to the leave just as it sets off on its biggest voyage to date?

A look at Bockrath's history provides some answers. Bockrath hasn't sat still since his 17 years at the University of Arizona, three of which he spent as assistant athletic director. He served as AD of the University of California at Berkeley for two years before he came to Tech. Now, almost three years later, he leaves Tech for another AD position.

It's not so much that he took the job at Alabama. The position is more prestigious, with Alabama's national recognition as an athletic powerhouse. It's more that while at Tech, he interviewed at least two times for AD positions at other universities. This certainly brings up the question whether he was truly interested in improving Tech's athletics out of loyalty or whether to improve his resumé.

Lawless is a different story. Arriving in 1989, his goal was to make Tech the institution of choice in Texas by 2000. He left his goal for the University of Tulsa four years too soon.

Lawless' sudden resignation and the way he left the university so quickly made it seem as if the Board of Regents were doing him a favor by letting him go to his new job before the end of the spring semester. I wonder if he took the time to turn out the lights in his office?

What does all this mean for Tech?

It means the fall semester is rolling around with the Board of Regents dragging its heels on hiring: (1) someone to permanently take the helm as university chancellor and (2) presidents for the Texas Tech main campus and for the Health Sciences Center.

It means Tech is headed into the Big 12, where it will face its most difficult athletic competition yet, without a permanent athletic director.

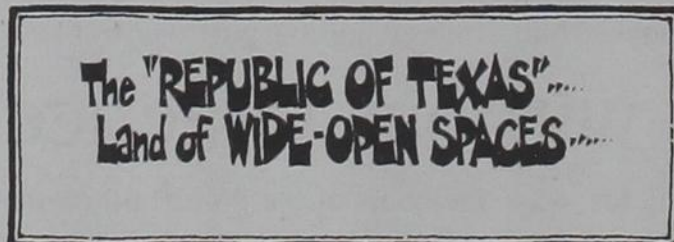

It means Tech is a ship cruising at full speed headed into uncharted waters with only interim captains to make decisions on its destination and the route it will take to get there.

Even the captain of the Titanic went down with his ship.

Tech prepares incoming freshmen with orientation

"I was very appreciative of his confidence in me to serve in that position," he said.

Myers said he did not anticipate himself being named the interim AD, but felt it would be best to choose someone within the department.

"We needed to keep the continuity and stability in the department," he said. "We could keep it going better by appointing someone internally and not externally."

Myers, who applied for the Tech AD position in 1993 along with Bockrath, said he has not considered whether this will become a permanent position for him.

"I've been so busy that I haven't really thought about that," he said. "My main focus is the job at hand, getting things ready for the Big 12."

Even though the job was abruptly thrust upon him, Myers said he does not expect any difficulties in performing the duties required.

"I don't feel overwhelmed at all," he said. "I feel comfortable because of working with Bob."

Another thing Myers pointed to was the overall competence of the administrators in the athletic department and how they will be invaluable in helping him make the transition.

"All of our administrators will help in that respect," he said. "I've got a lot of help and certainly will depend on that help."

Tech basketball coach James Dickey said he is excited about Myers appointment and feels confident in his abilities.

"The last three years he has been over the basketball program and has done an excellent job," Dickey said. "He'll have complete support from the entire department."

Myers, 59, was promoted from assistant athletic director in February, a position he had been in for four years. Before that, he was Tech's head basketball coach for 20 years.

One of the most recognizable names in Tech athletics, Myers has the distinction of being Tech's first All-Southwest Conference athlete in any sport. An honor he received in 1958 as a member of the Red Raider basketball team.

After receiving his degree in education from Tech, Myers coached at Lubbock Monterey and Houston Baptist before returning to Tech as an assistant basketball coach in 1970.

In mid-season, he was named head coach and went on to compile the best record of any Tech coach in history, 326-261.

The first freshmen orientation session began when the Big 12 Bus picked up new students from the airport Wednesday morning.

This session, the first of 10 orientation sessions scheduled before the beginning of the fall semester, is designed for students in the Honors Program and recipients of the President's Scholarship.

"The purpose of the orientation program is to help students adjust to the college environment and to prepare them for the fall semester," said Keith Abbott, head of the Raider Aiders.

The freshmen are staying at Hulen/Clement Residence Hall.

Freshmen took CLEP and math placement tests Wednesday, Abbott said.

After dinner, freshmen and their parents heard a local jazz band and watched the movie "Mr. Holland's Opus," starring Richard Dreyfuss and Glenna Headly.

Thursday students received CLEP and math placement test scores and visited with advisers, Abbott said.

The Dean of Students office held special information sessions for minority students and students interested in the Greek system.

Interim President Donald Haragan addressed honor students and presidential scholars Thursday at a special session not included in other orientation dates.

Parents went to a presentation by Dean of Students Michael Shonrock Thursday night.

Meanwhile students tried out the student recreation center in an event similar to the Rec Center All-Nighter scheduled each fall and spring semester, Abbott said.

Today the students register for classes for the fall semester before taking the bus back to the airport.

Incoming freshman Kylie Thomas from Lubbock said she got a lot out of the orientation sessions.

Thomas, who will major in agribusiness, said she suffered an injury while skiing and is attending Texas Tech to stay close to her doctors.

Allison, who has not chosen a major, said she loves the campus and the Lubbock community.

"I don't want to say that Tech was my second choice, but I applied to several universities and was accepted at Tech," said Phillip Gibson, an incoming freshman from Houston who will major in business.

"I talked to a lot of people who said Tech was an excellent school."

Gibson said he is looking forward to attending Tech in the fall.

String of church fires strikes Oklahoma

ENID, Okla. (AP) — A lone blackened cross could be seen amid the buckled siding, broken windows and collapsed roof of another church destroyed by fire Thursday, the latest in a string of suspicious fires at black churches around the nation.

Part of the congregation stood bleary-eyed, shaking their heads as they stared at the charred remains of the First Missionary Baptist Church.

Others shuddered with the fear that racial hate may have targeted their community.

"We were taught church starts with your heart. It's just going to build us up and make us stronger," said Mary Hegwood, a 16-year-old member of the church's youth group.

She gathered with other church members in the bright sunshine, hours after the fire destroyed the church that had been home to the 103-year-old, 200-member congregation since 1961.

Investigators were trying to determine whether arson was involved in the fire.

The Rev. Alfred Baldwin said firefighters told him it appeared a rear window had been broken out and an accelerant such as gasoline used.

But investigators cautioned as the day wore on that they weren't sure if an accelerant had been used, or how windows in the brick structure broke.

"Attacking a church is the ultimate obscenity and I hope the local authorities and the state fire marshal can get to the bottom of this as quick as possible," Gov. Frank Keating said.

About 75 members of the federal task force, including top officials investigating each of the 34 unsolved fires at black churches, met Thursday to discuss their methods and progress at FBI headquarters in Washington.

"This is not business as usual; this is something that requires and will receive a special kind of attention," explained Associate Attorney General John Schmidt, the Justice Department's No. 3 official.

He said investigators were told to be aggressive, and that "they are expected to request additional resources if they need them."

Schmidt also said he did not find it reassuring that no national conspiracy to burn churches has been found thus far.

"If instead what you have is a situation where people in various places sort of on their own seem to be motivated by such a degree of racial animosity or anger that they burn churches, I think that's a very disturbing thing," Schmidt said.

Baldwin said that by the time he arrived at his church Thursday morning, all he could do was stand about 15 feet away and watch.

"My heart's broken. I'm hurting," Baldwin said. "I knew my congregation is hurting but I also knew we could overcome this."

Firefighters received a call about 4 a.m. of smoke coming from the church.

Flames were shooting 40 feet into the air when crews arrived, police Sgt. David Gibson said.

It took two hours to bring the fire under control, and no injuries were reported.

Investigators want answers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Whitewater Committee said Thursday it has obtained last-minute accusations of greater involvement by Hillary Clinton in a controversial real estate transaction a decade ago and asked her to submit to written questions.

Clinton

The committee's year-long probe, which is set to end Monday, took a new twist when it obtained a report of an interview by federal regulators with an Arkansas savings and loan executive who has assisted Whitewater prosecutors.

The White House called the Senate request "an act of utter, complete desperation" by the "failed"

Whitewater panel. An administration official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the White House was considering whether or not the first lady should respond.

Don Denton, who worked for the S&L at the heart of the Whitewater investigation, told regulators that he cautioned Mrs. Clinton in the spring of 1986 about a possibly improper loan deal in the Castle Grande real estate venture but that the first lady "summarily dismissed" his advice.

Propane

Competition goals were to develop advanced propane vehicle technology, achieve ultra-low exhaust emission, drive a minimum distance of 250 miles and demonstrate performance equal to or better than gasoline-powered vehicles.

Tech placed first in the acceleration category and the slalom course, said Timothy Maxwell, associate professor of mechanical engineering.

"Our minivan went 0-70 mph in 11.5 seconds," he said. "And we finished in the fastest time in the slalom course."

Two Tech students, Richard Howlett and Don Nuckels, drove the minivan through the slalom course trying to avoid all orange pylons, Maxwell said.

At a designated point, the driver must exchange places with the passenger and complete the course.

Other categories students were judged in were exhaust emission, noise, range and fuel economy. In addition, students made an oral presentation and a written report was presented to the officials.

In October 1995, Tech students learned they were chosen for the challenge and began preparations, Maxwell said.

The minivan arrived in early January.

Maxwell said the fuel system was the first thing they replaced and worked their way to pulling the entire engine.

Once the engine and fuel systems were converted, the on-board computer in the minivan was "fooled," he said.

"We were able to fool the stock computer by adjusting the oxygen sensor to correctly mix the right amounts of fuel and air," Maxwell said.

The main problem the team faced was cold starting the minivan.

Propane tanks are part liquid, part vapor. As the air cools, pressure drops, causing the minivan to die or not start, he said.

Joe Vara, co-captain of Tech's team, said the placement is not important.

"We feel very fortunate to gain this type of exposure and knowledge," Vara said. "This competition allowed us to demonstrate our knowledge and see other team's ideas."

Summer reading list provides movie alternative

Emily Elsen
The UD contributing writer

Once again those lazy days of summer inspire one to conjure up visions of lounging by the swimming pool, cool drink in hand and a nearby book to offer luxurious freedom from Lubbock and the 20th century.

Here, then, is a list of 10 books every bookworm should keep nearby to get them through the long, hot days of summer.

10. "The Big Sleep" by Raymond Chandler: You'll want to stay awake through this turn-of-the-century thriller which is probably the most famous portrayal of the private dick, Philip Marlowe.

The characters are amusing, the setting is pure 1920s California, and besides that, who can resist gamblers and gun chasers.

9. "How Stella Got Her Groove Back" — Terri McMillan's newest release.

If you liked "Waiting to Exhale" and "Mama," you may not like this one.

Loosely autobiographical and kind of a romance minus the Danielle Steele mush we've seen so many times on the New York Times best seller list.

8. "Ten Little Indians" by Agatha Christie: The grand dame of mystery can never be left off of any must read list.

This psycho-thriller takes you through the minds of 10 people who have been mish-mashed together for the purpose of evil mind games by a killer with revenge on the brain.

If you like this one, try "What Mrs. McGillicuddy Saw," "Evil Under the Sun," "A Pocket Full of Rye" and "Death on the Nile." Also, check out the Tommy and Tuppence books — adventure, murder and mayhem guaranteed. Not even the hottest summer blockbuster can promise that.

7. "Ceremony": Leslie Marmon Silko's rendition of the healing forces within the Laguna Pueblo Indians presents an accurate account of life for the American Indians after World War II.

Silko's work embodies a beautiful painting, where all the chants and incantations weave the patchwork of a quilt. The symbolism is enchanting and the sexual scenes are enriching. Enough said.

6. "Madame Bovary": This book by Gustave Flaubert is the symphony of all literary works insofar as the language is rich and all techniques of writing have been employed to flavor the plot.

Another must-read, especially for aspiring writers, editors, English teachers and West Texans wanting to get married. This one may change your mind.

5. "Flying Into Love" by D.M. Thomas: The most unusual on the list because it is written by a Brit about the assassination of President John F. Kennedy from the perspective of a Catholic Texas nun.

A nun experiences traumatic flashbacks with sexual undertones after the assassination of Kennedy. This book recounts in vivid detail the days before and after the murder.

Yes, this book is awesome and yes, yes, yes it is amusing, but more than that it is better than almost anything I've read in a long time.

4. "The Heart is a Lonely Hunter" by Carson McCullers: Read this, and you will know the true story of Jesus Christ or how to find angels.

A poignant look at the life of an adolescent and her encounter with Jesus/life. After reading this, you will listen to Mozart in a new way — read and find out.

3. "Woman Hollering Creek" by Sandra Cisneros: Yes, there is a Texan on the list. Maybe not born and bred, but a Texas professor nonetheless.

Cisneros' claim to fame is a love of Mexican men, but a misunderstanding of why they marry white women (see "Never Marry a Mexican").

You'll find stories related to or about living in Texas and short vignettes with loaded, loud language so easy to pick up and put down when dipping into the pool. Don't lend this one out, you'll never get it back.

2. "Disclosure" by Michael Crichton: Some don't like this one, but I do simply because it's fast, the language is easy and it's not mushy. You can read it easily pool side.

1. "A Prayer for Owen Meany": John Irving's best and my favorite of all time.

I usually like my books serious, but this one takes the cake for tickling my innards so hard that I couldn't help crying. Remember the class clown? Ever wondered what happened to him? Read this and you'll find out.

If you read these, you'll be transported to other places. Promise.

Mr. Rogers' beach not so neighborly

NANTUCKET, Mass. (AP) — Mr. Rogers' real neighborhood is not nearly as friendly as his television one.

The father of two young boys who were ordered off a private beach in front of Rogers' summer home says he wants to take the property by eminent domain.

"I'm sick of this not-in-my-backyard mentality," Selectman Tim Soverino said Thursday. "Nantucket is a gorgeous island, and everyone should be able to enjoy it.

It was a relative of Rogers' who told Soverino's boys, aged 3 and 5, to get off the beach known as Smith Point.

Residents of the area claim granting public access would harm wildlife, including endangered bird species.

But many townspeople say the homeowners just want to keep the beach to themselves.

Rogers, the host of the children's show "Mr. Rogers Neighborhood," lives in Pittsburgh most of the year.

He was unavailable for comment.

Attention, incoming freshmen: Everything you wanted to know about Tech, then some

PETER WILKINS

Arts & Entertainment Editor

As Texas Tech students have no doubt noticed, our fair campus has been inundated as of late with a vast horde of fresh-faced, eager young lads and lasses scurrying about during freshman orientation. And 'though they are sure to receive naught but the best advice at the hands of our trusted university advisers, there are certain li'l tidbits of information that can only be dispensed by, shall we say, more informal outlets.

To that end, The UD hereby provides answers to some frequently asked questions in a manner befitting a student newspaper.

Q. How do I make sense of the student catalog? They told me to fill out my schedule, and I can't make heads or tails of it. Help!

A. Well, if that isn't typical. Doesn't that just piss you off? It doesn't surprise me at all. They just say, "Here you are, kid! You're on your own! Good luck!" and send you on your merry way. If that doesn't just beat all.

Q. What is my "student fees" money used for? It seems like an awful lot of money on my bill, and I don't even know where it's going.

A. We don't have an official breakdown of where that money goes, but we're pretty sure most of it goes into a legal defense slush fund to defend prominent students and/or administrators. For more info, give the Sports Information Department a call.

Q. What's the significance of the statue of that guy on a horse? Who is he, anyway?

A. That's Flint "Stubby" Plimpton, Tech's first graduate. He graduated back in '26 or so with a degree in Horse Management. He's riding atop Clubber, Tech's second graduate, who graduated with a degree in Hick Carrying.

Q. What is there to do in this desolate wasteland you call a town?

A. Ha! Not a damn thing, as far as we can tell. But if you find something, give us a call.

Q. Why is there a fire hydrant in the middle of nowhere in Memorial Circle?

A. There used to be a building there housing the Southwestern Dung Archives, but it burned to the ground in 1956.

Officials decided they didn't want to take a chance with the same thing happening again, so they put a fire hydrant there, in case someone ever put up another building on the same spot.

Q. Why is the Tech campus so big? It takes me forever to walk across it, and I'm afraid I'll be late for class.

A. Originally, the campus was supposed to be only half its present size, but when they photocopied the plans, someone put the Xerox machine on 200 percent, and before anyone noticed, it was too late.

Q. Do you really get paid to write this schlock?

A. No.

We hope this informal forum has proved useful to all those students who pestered us, and all those who held their tongues as well. Also, stay tuned to this spot for additional valuable information on topics such as medicine, legal matters and advice to the lovelorn. Here at The UD, no problem is too large or small to compound!

Tech baseball players garner more awards

Five Texas Tech baseball players were named to the American Baseball Coaches Association's All-South Central Region first team that was announced Thursday.

Third baseman Clint Bryant, outfielder Matt Kastelic and catcher David Lindstrom were also named All-America by the coaches association. Bryant made the first team, Kastelic the second team and Lindstrom the third team.

Pitchers Jimmy Frush and Matt Miller rounded out Tech's first-round selections. Second baseman Stubby Clapp and shortstop Dion Ruecker were second-team selections.

The South Central Region encompasses 24 Division I schools and the players are nominated by their coaches.

Bonds' power surge sends Astros reeling

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Barry Bonds had four hits, including his first home run in more than a month, and the San Francisco Giants scored six runs in the first inning Thursday and beat the Houston Astros 12-8.

San Francisco, leading 9-0 after the second inning, had to withstand a six-run fifth by the Astros that included a pinch-hit grand slam by Sean Berry.

Bonds' homer, a two-run shot, came in the eighth off Dean Hartgraves and was his first since May 11 when he had his then-major league leading 17th homer at Pittsburgh. The 102 at-bat homerless string was the longest of his career.

Mark Leiter (4-5) struggled through five innings for the win, helping himself with two RBI singles.

He allowed seven runs, only one earned, on seven hits, walked five and struck out seven.

Darryl Kile (6-5) failed to get out of the second inning. He gave up nine hits in 1 2-3 innings, walked two, struck out three, threw two wild pitches and hit a batter.

Kile's undoing was rooted in a 46-pitch first inning in which San Francisco sent up 11 batters, getting a run-scoring groundout from Carreon, a two-run single from Manwaring and RBI singles from Rich Aurilia and Leiter.

Phillips arrested for drunken driving

LOS ANGELES (AP) — St. Louis Rams running back Lawrence Phillips, already on probation for assaulting a former girlfriend, was arrested for drunken driving early Thursday.

Phillips, this year's top draft pick of the Rams, allegedly had a blood-alcohol level twice the legal limit when a California Highway Patrol officer spotted him speeding with a flat tire on the westbound 60 freeway shortly after 2 a.m.

The front left tire of Phillips' 1995 gold Mercedes was smoking as he drove past a CHP patrol car near the 605 freeway interchange, according to CHP Officer Pablo Torres.

"He was driving at a high rate of speed and lane straddling," said CHP Sgt. Ernie Garcia.

The officer pursued Phillips for five miles before pulling him over at the San Gabriel Boulevard exit in Rosemead.

Phillips failed two breath tests at the scene, registering blood alcohol readings of .15 percent and .16 percent, Torres said. California's legal limit is .08 percent.

Phillips' mishaps have continued with the Rams. He overslept for the first day of the team's mini-camp in April.
