'TWO BITS WORTH'

BY JOHNNY VALENTINE

An editorial in the Farm Bureau News -- the official newsletter of the American Farm Bureau Federation -- carries some startling facts. The Farm Bureau is the largest farm organization in the U.S., representing in excess of 2 million member families. The editorial reviews late studies by the U.S. Department of Agriculture on rising farm productivity. They reflect an achievement that, as the editorial points out, equals and in some ways surpasses "... the much publicized space exploration."

To start with, farm output per man in 1970 was 357 per cent of 1950. In 1971 one U.S. farm-worker produced enough for 47 other people -- seven of whom lived abroad. This contrasts with enough output by one U.S. farmer for himself and 15 other people in 1950. How have these great boosts in farm productivity been accomplished?

According to the Farm Bureau News, "Improved and larger planting equipment, along with mechanical harvesting, reduced the man hours required to produce 100 bushels of corn from 40 hours in 1950 to seven in 1971."

Livestock labor efficiency also benefited during the two decades. Total hours of labor to produce milk, meat, and eggs fell from 5.5 billion in 1950 to 2.3 billion in 1971. Poultry and egg production doubled while labor needs in the poultry industry declined more than two thirds.

If it had not been for the soaring productivity of U.S. agriculture, the food outlook for this country and the world today would be anything but cheerful -- to say nothing of prices. How many of us realize that this abundance is solely the product of the private property, free market, free enterprise system -- a system that much of the world depends upon and yet is scorned in our own country and in most other countries by the advocates of statism.

CEASE FIRE TO END WAR

PEACE PACT WILL BE EFFECTIVE SAT.

WASHINGTON — Agreement has been reached to end the Vietnam war — the longest in America's history — with a cease-fire effective Saturday night and complete U. S. withdrawal coinciding with release of all war prisoners, President Nixon told the nation Tuesday night.

Nixon said it is a just and fair peace — an honorable way to end a grim, decade-long war that left nearly 350,000 Americans dead and wounded and caused an unprecedented upheaval at home.

Presidential adviser Henry Kissinger and Hanoi's Le Duc Tho initiated the agreement Tuesday in Paris and it will be formally signed Saturday, Nixon said.

Major points of the agreement he outlined:

• An internationally supervised cease-fire to go into effect at 4 p.m. CST Saturday.

• The release of all Americans "held prisoners of war (Background On 'The Longest War,' Pages 4-5, Sec. A) throughout Indochina within 60 days.

• The withdrawal of the remaining 24,000 U.S. troops in South Vietnam within the same time frame.

• "The fullest possible accounting" for all those missing in action.

• A guarantee that the people of South Vietnam will have "the right to determine their own future without outside interference."

Nixon did not mention either Laos or Cambodia by name, but his statement that the agreement would bring peace "in Southeast Asia" seemed to include Vietnam's two neighboring nations.

The President recalled that he had outlined conditions for such a cease-fire during his speech last May 8.

His conditions met "All the conditions that I laid down then have been met," Nixon said.

In the 11-minute address, Nixon said the protocols explaining the settlement will be issued today. A similar announcement was issued simultaneously in Hanoi and Saigon.

The President did not go into the details about the cease-fire for the political settlement between Saigon, Hanoi and the Viet Cong.

However, he said the United States will continue to recognize the current Saigon regime as the legitimate government of South Vietnam.

The latest count shows 587 American prisoners being held in Indochina with another 1,335 listed as missing. Nixon said Hanoi would provide the "fullest possible accounting" of all the missing Americans.

Nixon's speech from the Oval Office—perhaps the most dramatic of his years in the White House—came later but conferred with his full Cabinet and with six top congressional leaders. He scheduled an early morning meeting today with a broader range of congressional leaders.

Nixon said the agreement "meets the goals and has the full support of President Nguyen Van Thieu and the government of South Vietnam."

Terms Must Be Followed But he warned that the terms of the agreement "must be scrupulously adhered to." He said the United States will abide by the terms and expects North Vietnam to do the same.

He said the agreement recognizes the Thieu government "as the sole legitimate government of South Vietnam." The United States, the President declared, will continue to aid that government militarily.

"Ending the war is only the first step toward building the peace," he declared.

Silence Defended The President defended his refusal to discuss his war and peace policy during the closing months of the four-year-old negotiations. He said too much talk could have wrecked the agreement.

"The important thing was not to talk about peace but to get peace," Nixon said. "This we have done."

Nixon addressed himself directly to the people and government of South Vietnam. "By your courage, by your sacrifice," he said, "you have won the precious right to determine your own future." He said Saigon was strong enough to protect itself in the future.

He then addressed the leaders of North Vietnam.

Reconciliation Urged "Let us now build a peace of reconciliation," he said, adding that the United States was prepared to make "a major effort" to achieve a reconciliation.

Nixon paid tribute to the late President Lyndon B. Johnson, who died Monday in Texas and who escalated the American involvement in Vietnam.

"There was nothing he cared about more deeply than bringing a lasting peace to the world," Nixon said of Johnson.

Nixon said he remembered the last time he talked with Johnson. "He spoke to me of his concern of bringing peace. I was grateful that once again he expressed his support to my efforts to bring peace."

Relatives Praised Nixon said also he would like to say a word for "some of the bravest" people he has met—the wives and relatives of prisoners.

"You had the courage to stand for the right kind of peace," he said.

"Let us be proud of the 2 1/2 million young Americans who served in Vietnam," he said.

"Let us be proud of those who sacrificed, who gave their lives, so that the people of South Vietnam might live in freedom, so that the world might live in peace."

"To the American people he said: 'Your steadfastness in insisting on peace with honor has made peace with honor possible ...'

"America did not settle for peace that would have abandoned our allies or our prisoners of war," he said.

Nixon said, "To the other major powers that have been involved, even indirectly, now is the time for use of restraint so peace can last."

The official Vietnam News Agency (VNA) monitored in Hanoi Kong simultaneously broadcast a statement by the North Vietnamese Foreign Affairs Ministry saying that the agreement "has been initiated" by Hanoi chief negotiator Le Duc Tho.

The North Vietnamese agency dispatch, also monitored in Saigon, said: "On 12:30 Paris time on Jan. 23, 1973, the agreement on ending the war and restoring peace in Vietnam was initiated by special advisor Le Duc Tho on behalf of the Democratic Republic of Vietnam and Dr. Henry Kissinger on behalf of the United States."

Won't Get Condition In his broadcast to the South Vietnamese people, Thieu said the Communists "have been trying to get a coalition government," he said. "That will never happen."

However, Thieu said the National Liberation Front (Viet Cong) can help work out a peaceful political solution.

"The National Liberation Front can take part in the political activities...as citizens of this country," he said.

"The cease-fire is the first step toward a possible peace," Thieu said, "one that will be a serious and lasting peace." But he declared, "The army and police will never be disbanded."

"The North Vietnamese Communists have realized that they cannot win the country by force. Therefore they have been trying to get coalition government. It will never happen," he said.

"There will never be an abolition of the government of South Vietnam in favor of the Communists or pro-Communist neutrality," Thieu said. "The army and the police will never be disbanded."

The North Vietnam agency said: "The Democratic Republic of Vietnam and the United States express the hope that this agreement will ensure stable peace in Vietnam and contribute to the preservation of lasting peace in Indochina and Southeast Asia."

After Nixon spoke, it was disclosed that Secretary of State William P. Rogers is planning to fly to Paris to sign the peace agreement Saturday with the other parties—North Vietnam, South Vietnam and the Viet Cong.

Brownfield Man Rotary Speaker

The role of off-shore drilling by oil companies in the promotion of marine life was the subject of a talk and film presented at Tahoka Rotary Club last Thursday by Coleman Williams of Brownfield, who is with Amaco Production Co.

The picture was an underwater color film of marine life under oil well platforms in the Gulf of Mexico off the shores of Texas and Louisiana in waters up to 150 feet deep showing how fish are drawn to these sites, a fantastic revelation.

Fish not even native to the area are being drawn from the Gulf stream and even from the Atlantic Ocean to the platform standards. Mr. Williams advised anyone wishing to fish in the Gulf to try their luck around these oil well platforms.

Cap Whorton arranged the program, and Club President Binie White introduced the speaker.

Rep. Short Named To Three Committees

State Representative E.L. Short was named to three committees important to his district Friday by newly-elected Speaker Price Daniel, Jr., in appointments which generally reflected a shift of influence from the rural areas of Texas to major cities, particularly in the Houston-Gulf Coast area.

Under a new rule which gives the Speaker power to choose the Chairman and Vice Chairman of each committee plus half the remaining members, Short, generally regarded as a conservative, still gained membership on the Intergovernmental Affairs, and Vice Chairman of Agriculture and Livestock Committee and by virtue of his seniority received a place on State Affairs, one of the most prestigious committees of the House.

Most chairmanships went to liberal or big city appointees of the Speaker. Of the 21 chairmen appointed, 14 were from counties of over 100,000 population. House committees have been reduced from 46 to 21, so each committee is more powerful and encompass both county and city governmental problems.

"Rep. Short said he considered the State Affairs Committee to be the check and balance of new spending, and he intended to work toward slowing down new expenditures, and thus relieving citizens of additional tax burdens."

"Rep. Short said he expected many proposed changes relating to farm chemicals and problems of animal health, and thought his position on the Agriculture Committee would prove to be of great importance to his area."

THE RONALD ROBERTS FAMILY

Togetherness Is Key In Mormon Home

How does a religious community, dedicated to family unity, combat juvenile delinquency and today's so-called "new morality"?

Family groups, members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints, more commonly known as Mormons, meet together on a previously designated night. All attention is centered on this prearranged evening for the entire family to meet together. The purpose of such nights is to create a unity which will begin in the home and which will carry over into other relationships. Guidance is provided from the booklet entitled, "Family Home Evening Manual".

It is distributed annually to 700,000 homes. The father of the home, whom Mormons emphasize is the head of the household, takes charge of the meetings. Prayer plays an important part in the home evening program. Everyone is assigned a definite function by the father. Display of talents is included thus providing a means of developing personal ability of each member of the family. A short discussion is held on topics taken from the Family Home Evening Manual. Of prime importance is the fact that this time together be a happy experience. Such an evening provides a ready forum for family discussion whether it is an alarming teenage problem, a formulation of next summer's vacation plans, or to explain where babies come from.

According to President Roberts of the Brownfield ranch children are more likely to turn to a father with their complicated problems when they are older if the father gains the confidence of his children when young.

The question is often asked can't children learn righteous living at Sunday School alone? Harold B. Lee, the prophet and president of the three million Mormons throughout the world explains, "The family is mankind's basic unit. The greater peace and goodwill we seek for all the world to be realized, must begin in the home." The family home evening helps teach some important lessons which President Lee lists as honor, virtue, self control, the value of education, honest work, and the purpose and privilege of life.

Elder Marion D. Hanks, one of the general authorities of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints said, "We do lose some of our boys and girls, but at the age of 21, at least three-fourths of all Mormon young people are still tightly attached to the church."

SOIL CONSERVATION NEWS

BY MAX W. BAKER

SORGHUM SEEDED

Sorghum was seeded in blanks in late July and August to provide protection from wind erosion during winter and early spring.

PARALLEL TERRACES

After construction of parallel terraces, a crop was produced in this lake for the first time in about 20 years.

From the beginning of 1970 through January 1973, Lynn County has experienced some of the severest extremes in weather conditions on record. The recent snow and ice storm was one that will be remembered for years to come. This came on the heels of one of the wettest years on record. Whereas normal rainfall for Lynn County Soil and Water Conservation District is 17.9 inches, a total of 30.6 inches was recorded at Tahoka in 1972. This followed the longest period of no rainfall ever recorded. From Oct. 16, 1970 to April 16, 1971 (182 days) only .25 inches was recorded. Thus, in the last 3 years the land has been subjected to both severe wind and water erosion which has been much more noticeable.

However, erosion occurs every year, gradually eating away at the productivity of the land. One man who has recognized this and has done something about it, is George Baker who farms a section east of Wilson. Baker has just completed a Great Plains Conservation Program contract which was designed to treat the land according to its needs. Part of the needs involved the installation of over 11,000 feet of parallel terraces. These terraces were designed to hold the water where it falls to prevent loss of water for crops and to prevent the loss of the fertile top soil which can never be replaced.

Baker also recognizes the need for a conservation cropping system designed to protect the land from wind erosion and to return organic matter to the soil to maintain fertility and to improve soil structure and water intake. The cropping system implemented by Baker consists of planting a portion of the land to a high residue producing crop such as grain sorghum and small grains each year. The amount of high residue crops needed depends on the soils. Most of the land that Baker farms is Amarillo loam and he plants 1/2 the land to a high residue crop. This has been accomplished a variety of ways. One way is the overseeding of cotton with small grains on the last cultivation. The seeding of grain sorghum has comprised a substantial acreage of high residue crops.

Baker has also taken the lead in developing various patterns of strip cropping. Two years, grain sorghum was seeded on the terraces and a strip of small grains was seeded between the terraces. This provided adequate protection from wind erosion, helped stabilize terraces, and reduced the acreage of high residue needed from 1/2 to one third, the total land.

He has also experimented with various ways to seed the blanks to high residue crops such as sorghums. Baker found that seeding blanks to forage sorghums in late July provided sufficient growth to give protect the land from wind erosion without causing a trash problem at harvest and without taking any appreciable amount of water from the cotton.

Baker has taken the lead in trying new ways to improve his operation with conservation practices to keep the land permanently productive.

Production Credit Loans $46 Million

Amount of money loaned for agricultural production soared in the area served by Lubbock Production Credit Association in 1972, according to H.D. Lusk, vice president of the PCA's Tahoka office.

Lusk said his association loaned more than $46 million to farmers and ranchers in a nine county area, an increase of almost 37 percent over the $33.9 million recorded by the PCA in 1971.

Lubbock PCA is one of 33 similar Texas associations which collectively in 1972 extended more than $1 billion in short and intermediate term credit to more than 16,500 stockholders. This was the first time in PAC's 40-year history that the associations surpassed the $1 billion in one year Lusk pointed out.

Lubbock PCA makes loans in Cochran, Crosby, Gaines, Garza, Hockley, Lubbock, Lynn, Terry, and Yoakum counties. The organization is owned and operated by local farmers and ranchers who are member-stockholders.

Federal Crop Insurance Now Available

With production costs rising and the margin of profit growing smaller, the business of farming is becoming more rather than less risky. Each year, with each crop, there is more at stake.

Even in good years, some farmers have serious crop losses taking away a prime source of income and forcing their farming operations deeper in debt or digging into past profits.
Mr. Mike Custer, field representative for the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation from the county office at Lubbock, says insurance protection is now available on 1973 cotton and grain sorghum in Crosby County and cotton only in Lynn County to help guarantee a cash return at harvest.

In 1971, insured farmers in Crosby and Lynn Counties received more than $215,000 in crop losses. The losses that were paid were due to freeze. Insured farmers receiving the money were greatly assisted in meeting their financial obligations despite losing their crops.

Farmers are using Federal Crop Insurance not only to protect crop investment dollars, but to strengthen credit, to reduce specialization risks, to aid in long-term financing of expansion programs and to allow maximum use of operating capital.

Complete details about the insurance program, sponsored by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, may be obtained at no obligation by contacting Mr. Custer. He may be reached through the Federal Crop Insurance County Office, 1205 Texas Avenue, Room 214, in Lubbock or by calling 806-747-3711, Ext. 627 or 628.

Through a similar percentage of the total harvest, cotton from the 1972 High Plains cotton crop is proving superior to 1971 crop cotton in grade, staple and micronaire, but a decline is being recorded in the fiber strength category, according to officials of Plains Cotton Growers, Inc., Lubbock.

PCG's conclusions are drawn from the 25-county producer organization's first season report on area cotton quality, covering the first 1,250,000 bales classed, about 62 percent of an expected 2,012,000 bale harvest. The first report of 1971, used for comparison, included an analysis of the first 780,000 bales or about 61 percent of that year's final 1,279,000 bale output.

In grade, "early season" cotton from the 1972 crop ran 52.5 percent white, 33.3 percent light spot and 16.8 percent spot. Corresponding figures the previous year were 16.9, 63.5 and 17.6, respectively.

Staple length for 1972, at 31.7 thirty-seconds of an inch, is well ahead of the 30.4 thirty-seconds average for the first six-tenths of the 1971 crop. Also, almost 52 percent of 1972 cotton has staple of an inch or longer, compared to only a little over 46 percent of those staples in 1971.

Micronaire readings from the current season so far, although disappointing to many farmers, are still outstripping the sorry record of 1971. Average for the crop so far has been 3.3, compared to a 3.0 average at this stage of the harvest last season, and over 30 percent of this year's crop has fallen in the most desirable 3.5 to 4.9 range, as opposed to a bare 7 percent in 1971.

Micronaire generally is considered a measurement of cotton's maturity, reflected by the shape and diameter of individual fibers. Immature fibers are thin, flat or oval shaped. Mature fibers are "fatter" and more nearly round. The "mike" measurement is made by determining the air flow through a 50-gram sample subjected to an exact amount of pressure. Cotton registering below 3.5 on the micronaire "machine" is penalized in price because of its expected below par spinning and dyeing performance. Ordinarily mike readings are expected to be satisfactory when all or most of the bolls on stalks in the field are open before harvest begins. This season, however, some cotton which appeared mature had a much lower mike than was expected. Cotton technologists are attributing this fact to lower than normal temperatures and inadequate sunshine in the early stages of boll development last summer.

Pressley, or breaking strength of the 1972 crop has been disappointing also, with an average of only 75,870 pounds per square inch and only about 55 percent above 75,000 pounds. The first 780,000 bales last year averaged 80,300 pounds with 69 percent above the 75,000 mark.

The drop in strength of this season's cotton is also related to the cool, cloudy weather of last August and September which adversely affected micronaire. But of even greater significance in determining fiber strength was the abnormally high moisture available to plants during fiber development. And this same moisture was responsible for most of the 1.3 thirty-seconds increase in fiber length, which in terms of spinning performance and the ultimate quality and strength of yarns produced, more than offsets the loss of fiber strength, PCG points out.
