HANDLE PLAINS CHAMBER OF COMMERCE.

Board of Directors of the Plains Chamber of Commerce recently convened in the offices of Secretary, expressed a determination to plunge immediately into an effort to co-ordinate the efforts of the entire Panhandle and the eyes of the world on this do of the plains of Texas. Operations in every county will be executed as speedily as possible so the entire territory may stand as one.

Object in attracting the home to this country is to make him a satisfied and prosperous citizen and to place him in advance to his competition information that will contribute to the above condition. There are a thousand and one things that come before this organization does on, but the first great principle that of sound and sane cooperation upon which the construction Association will be erected.

quote for each county decided at the recent meeting of the Board of Directors for the financial of this Commercial body has placed as one-sixth of a mill on the dollar which is deemed to be sufficient for the promotion of the interests of the territory for the current year.

offices of the Secretary are located in the Northwest corner of the Hall situated on the West 4th. in the City of Amarillo, where we will come and make ourselves known and be informed as to the that is being done from this organization.

MOBILE GARAGE CHANGES

Along the garage changes this are the temporary closing of the workshop and part of their have gone to the harvest field. J. A. Covey is running a tractor. J. A. Covey and Bob Towns and Bennett have taken charge of Covey workshop. Ralph Chisum an engine in the harvest field.

MY AIM.

For those who love me, whose hearts are kind and true; whose heaven that smiles above me, and awaits my spirit, too; all human ties that bind me, the tasks by god assigned me, the bright homes left behind me, and the good that I can do. To learn their story, to have suffered for my sake, to imitate their glory; to follow in their wake; to, patriots, martyrs, sages, noble of all ages, to deeds crown history's pages, and time's great volume make. To hold communion with all that is divine; to feel there is a union with nature's heart and mine; to profit by affliction, to learn truth from fields of fiction, to be wiser from conviction, to fulfill each grand design. To hail that season, to gifted minds foretold, to a man shall live by reason, to not alone by gold; to a man to man united, to every wrong thing righted, to whole world shall be lighted, to Eden was of old. For those who love me, for those who know me true; whose heaven that smiles above me, and awaits my spirit, too; the cause that lacks assistance, to the wrong that needs resistance, to the future in the distance, and the good that I can do.

HARVEST IS IN FULL BLAST.

The people of the rural communities are mighty busy just now. The big wheat harvest we have all been looking forward to is on and for the next three weeks everybody on the farms will be working night and day. The cry for help is going out and any willing worker can get a job. There is no parleying over the price of wages either. Within 30 days the threshers will also be going and the wheat will be coming to market. Farmers are not going to hold their wheat this year, because with the $2 price on there is no incentive for holding, and not only that, but the sooner it can commence moving the better, because the transportation companies are going to be taxed for cars to the utmost anyway. Elevators and granaries are making all preparations for the handling of the grain and it is going to be a busy season from now until Christmas time to handle the products. Never before in the history of this country has such a crop been raised and the jingle of money this fall will be like shaking it from the trees. Miami, Roberts county, and all Western Texas as a consequence are going to boom and a general business for the business man and tradesman in volume will be the greatest ever known. Miami has begun to reap the benefits already in the purchase of harvest supplies, and the prospects of the farmer also getting his has put things to going like there was a real life in the whole country. For once we are coming out on top and let us make the best of it from the experience we have already had. A much brighter day is ahead of us.

AGED MAN DIES OF PARALYSIS.

Will Stewart, an uncle to J. A. Meade died Monday morning at the Meade ranch, following an attack of paralysis. The remains were buried in the Miami Cemetery Monday afternoon, the funeral services were held at the Cemetery by Rev. J. W. Whitley. Mr. Stewart was getting well up in years, and has been in poor health for some time. He has been making his home at the Meade ranch for the past several years.

BAPTIST CHURCH

During the month of July we hope to maintain as high a standard as possible in the attendance of both Sunday School and church services. With harvest on in full blast and vacation season on, July and August are the months when we need to put forth a greater effort than ever to maintain the services of the church. Services at the usual hours next Sunday. A cordial invitation is extended to all to worship with us. E. G. Pennington, Pastor.

To the People of the 29th Senatorial District:

Through the death of Senator Bell the people of West Texas have lost a faithful friend, and all of Texas has lost an able public citizen. The Governor has called a special election to elect a successor to Senator Bell on the 14th of July, 1919. I am a candidate to succeed Senator Bell as State Senator and I will appreciate your favorable consideration of my candidacy. If elected to the State Senate I will work faithfully for the best interests of the people of West Texas. Very respectfully, Wellington, Texas R. L. Templeton July 25th, 1919. After July 15th, all of our business will be cash. If you owe us an account, please settle up, for we need the money. Duniven Bros.

THE HOME PROGRESS CLUB.

The Home Progress Club met on June 26th at the home of Mrs. Jim Johnston, with the Pres. Mrs. Ewing, in the chair. Many important business questions were discussed. It was found that there was in the Treasury $252.74 in cash and $200.00 in Liberty Bonds toward the Manual Training fund. This money will be kept for no other purpose, than that which the Club, with the hearty co-operation of the School patrons, have earnestly worked, should the effort fail to install the course for the coming school term. Remember the Club motto is: "TO FIND A WAY OR MAKE ONE."

The Domestic Science Room is to be furnished with all such equipment as necessary to affiliate the course. The Home Progress Club again true to its name, has under discussion a down town Rest Room, of which the public will hear more later.

The chairman of the program committee turned in the outline of the coming years work, which was accepted by the Club. A ten minute parliamentary drill was given by Mrs. Pitts, the Parliamentarian, at the close of the business. Delicious refreshments of ice cream and cake were served by the hostesses Mrs. Johnston and Misses Severson and George to the following Club members: Mesdames, Pitts, Harry Craig, Newman, Kinney, Baird, Dyer, Ewing, Claude Locke, and Johnston with Miss Willie Fae Newman as guest. The Club will meet on the 4th Thursday in July at the home of Mrs. Harry Craig with Mesdames Craig, Will Davis and Claude Locke as hostesses.

Savings Campaign Is Boon To Women

The average family in Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and New Mexico is not wealthy enough for the "lady of the house" to have all the little conveniences she wants. Through Thrift and War Savings Stamps, however, the Government has provided a way for the housewife to fit up her kitchen, paint the house, furnish her spare room or embellish the parlor. Those women who were so wise as to begin saving systematically early in 1918 have nice little sums invested in War Savings Stamps by this time. Eleven War Savings Stamps, some of which cost as little as $4.12 apiece, will buy a first class kitchen cabinet. In many instances, the housewife would not have saved anything to speak of, had it not been for the War Savings Stamps.

Some of the banner Savings Societies in the Eleventh District are in women's clubs or church societies. Women are quick to grasp the benefits from habits of Thrift. Numerous reports have been received at District Headquarters of the Savings Division at Dallas of women who have started in by putting quarters in Thrift Stamps and who have been enabled to buy desired articles to brighten up their homes. As soon as a War Savings Stamp is bought, it begins earning more money. War Savings Stamps are ready money. They are redeemable with accrued interest at the post-office on ten days' notice, but the longer they are held, the more money they make for their holders.

Have you bought your Thrift Stamp today? W.S.S. Jno. A. Newman made a business trip to Amarillo and returned Tuesday. He purchased a new Chandler car while there.

Scouts Decorated For Selling W.S.S.

JOYCE COX

Every Boy Scout in the Eleventh Federal War Savings District can wear a Treasury Achievement Button, an Ace Medal and have bronze, silver and gold palms on his medal ribbon. If he will do as much as Joyce Cox, a Boy Scout of Cameron, Texas. Joyce had sold almost $6,000 worth of War Savings Stamps up to May 1, 1919. The Achievement Button represents sales of War Savings Stamps to twenty-five individuals. The Ace Medal represents total W. S. S. sales of $250. A bronze palm represents an additional $100, a silver palm an additional $1,000 and a gold palm an additional $5,000 in War Savings Stamps sold. "I'd like to see every Boy Scout in the District wearing gold palms on his medal ribbon by the end of the year," said Frank M. Smith, Federal District Director of the War Loan Organization. "What one boy has done others can do. One of the best War Savings Societies in the District is in the Boy Scout Troop at Tallulah, La. There ought to be a Savings Society in every troop." Have you bought your Thrift Stamp today?

Paternal orders should take an active interest in the 1919 Savings Campaign in the opinion of Pat M. Neff of Waco, Grand Chancellor of the Texas Grand Lodge, Knights of Pythias. Another enthusiast over the Savings Campaign is J. W. Chancellor of Bowie, Grand Master of the Texas Grand Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

"In the Savings Campaign," Mr. Neff said recently, "the Government has placed the stamp of its approval on the fraternal idea. War Savings Societies are not lodges, strictly speaking, but they are next thing to it. Many of the most successful Savings Societies are in the lodges and the Knights of Pythias are doing their share."

"Texas Odd Fellows had a number of strong War Savings Societies last year," Mr. Chancellor said, "and most of them made excellent records. Wherever possible, it would be a fine idea for the members of the lodge to form themselves into a Savings Society again this year, if they have not already done so." Numerous lodges of various orders over the Eleventh Federal District not only have Savings Societies but are securing sinking funds by investing in War Savings Stamps as a lodge. The members of these lodges are also buying W. S. S. individually. Has your lodge been organized?

"Where did you get that wounded hand?" asked the pretty French girl. "I was leaning against a barrage when it lifted, and I overbalanced and fell," answers Doughboy Charlie Chaplin in "Shoulder Arms."

"SHOULDER ARMS" TELLS WAR STORY OF PATHOS, TROUBLE AND GRIEF.

"Shoulder Arms," to be shown at the Pastime Theatre on Sat. July 5 as his second million dollar picture made for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit is a clever intermingling of laugh-provoking burlesque on trench life with deft touches of the drama and pathos of war. Taking the ludicrous happenings in the life of the average doughboy as the embellishing action, the famous comedian has injected into the story of "Shoulder Arms" an occasional suggestion of the tragedy and grief of war in the devastated portions of Northern France. This makes an unusual combination in Chaplin comedy portrayal, and serves to heighten the effect of the humorous situations. The story pictured in "Shoulder Arms" takes Charlie through all of the training experiences of a recruit, and then blows him into a first line trench, prepared for action with an armament by which he could be mistaken for a soldier, a cook, a chambermaid, a milkman, a valet, or a plumber. This equipment constitutes his idea of what a doughboy should have and doesn't get. He is prepared for every extremity, from cooties and rats to the flooding of his dugout.

Andrew Carnegie's words concerning saving should carry weight. He has tried it and he knows. He says:

FARM STOCK

FEED CROPS TO LIVE STOCK

Investigations Show Profit From Feeding Steers on Surplus Corn and Roughage.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

That the southern farmer who raises a surplus of corn and farm roughage can market them at a handsome price through steers of good quality, when properly purchased, and can retain fertilizing elements of the feeds on his farm, is clearly shown in recent investigations by the United States department of agriculture.

Three lots of native steers, grade animals two to three years old, of medium good quality, and averaging about 825 pounds at the beginning of the experiment, were fed for about five months on full feed. The animals in lot 1 received a daily allowance of 39.1 pounds of corn silage, 5.7 pounds of cottonseed meal, 4.9 pounds of oat straw; those of lot 2, 37.4 pounds of corn silage, 7.6 pounds of ear corn, 3 pounds of cottonseed meal, and 2.9 pounds of oat straw; and the steers of lot 3, 38.5 pounds of corn silage, 6 pounds shelled corn, 3 pounds cottonseed meal, and 3.5 pounds of oat straw.

At marketing time these groups of animals averaged, respectively, 1,044, 1,059, and 1,063 pounds an animal, the heaves of lot 1 having accomplished a daily gain of 1.56 pounds, those of lot 2, 1.69 pounds, and the animals of group 3, 1.7 pounds during the feeding period.

When the pork made is credited to the steers of lots 2 and 3, they paid for corn at 70 cents a bushel, and then made over $14 a head profit, or almost as much income as resulted from the cottonseed meal-fed steers. Without hogs following the steers the feeding of corn would have been considerably less profitable than feeding cottonseed meal alone. It cost $9.53 to make 100 pounds of gain in the case of lot 1, $10.82 for lot 2, and $10.75 for lot 3, where no pork credit is given the steers. Each steer in lots 1, 2 and 3 made a net profit of $15.19, $11.87, and $11.48, respectively, when no credit is given the steers of lots 2 and 3 for the pork produced. This pork credit probably amounted to about $3 a steer.

It is particularly noteworthy that the shrinkage in transit to market of these cattle during a 34-hour run ranged from 54 to 64 pounds a head, which indicates that silage, where properly fed in conjunction with supplementary grains, results in less shrinkage in transit than where cattle are fattened on grass and marketed directly from pastures. The steers under consideration in this experiment made good killing records, the carcasses being well covered with fat and generally satisfactory. The animals of lot 1 made a dressing record of 58.2 per cent, those of lot 2, 57.8 per cent, and those of lot 3, 57.4 per cent of marketable meat.

PROVIDE SWINE WITH SHADE

Many Hogs Die During Summer Months If Not Given Protection of Some Kind.

Many hogs die from the effects of heat during the summer months. If there is no natural shade in the pasture, places should be provided where the hogs may get relief from the heat. A cheap and practical plan is to build sheds with roofs of poles and straw, supported by posts. This will allow the free circulation of air, and if the water supply is near, will enable the hogs to pass the hot weather safely.

When a few sheep are cared for properly one may expect a flock in a short time.

When legume hay is used as a horse feed, the quality should be good and the quantity limited.

COCA-COLA WILL BE USED TO CHRISTEN ENGINE

Program Will Feature Exercises at Fire Hall on Wednesday.

(From Nashville Tennessean.)

Ann Dallas Dudley, the new fire engine at the Waverly-Belmont fire hall, will be christened on Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock with appropriate exercises. Mrs. Gullford Dudley, for whom the engine gets its name, is one of the state's pioneer suffrage workers and it is due to her untiring work that partial suffrage was given the women of Tennessee. Mrs. Miles Williams, a resident of the twenty-first ward, is chairman of arrangements, and also a pioneer suffragist, and little Judith Winston Folk, the 6-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reau Folk, also a pioneer suffragist and the youngest member of the Nashville organization, has been chosen sponsor. Miss Folk has selected as her maids the following young girls, daughters of prominent suffrage leaders: Travania Dudley, Lenore Kenny, Kate Barksdale, Harriet Ingram, Mary Sue Cantrell, Jane Davis and Elizabeth Smith.

At the christening not champagne but a bottle of coca-cola will be broken and the maids will shower the engine with yellow flowers. Speeches will be made by Mayor William Gupton, Commissioner Tompkins and Chief A. A. Rosetta. Mrs. Dudley, a member of the national suffrage organization, and Mrs. Reau Folk, chairman of the city organization, will be honor guests of the occasion.—Adv.

IT'S NOT YOUR HEART; IT'S YOUR KIDNEYS

Kidney disease is no respecter of persons. A majority of the ills afflicting people today can be traced back to the kidney trouble. The kidneys are the most important organs of the body. They are the filters of your blood. If the poisons which are swept from the tissues by the blood are not eliminated through the kidneys, disease of one form or another will claim you as a victim. Kidney disease is usually indicated by weariness, sleeplessness, nervousness, despondency, backache, stomach trouble, pain in loins and lower abdomen, gall stones, gravel, rheumatism, sciatica and lumbago. All these derangements are nature's

Their Faithfulness.

"Force of habit is almost as hard a master to some people as rum is said to be," commented the landlord of the tavern at Grudge. "Although the post office moved to its new location more than a month ago, and, too, though they never were compelled by law to do so, 'most any time o' day a bunch of prominent and influential lunkheads' can be seen standing in the doorway of the old post office room, patiently waiting for busy people to come, as they used to, and scrouge past them, trying to get in."—Kansas City Star.

The Effects of Opiates.

THAT INFANTS are peculiarly susceptible to opium and its various preparations, all of which are narcotic, is well known. Even in the smallest doses, if continued, these opiates cause changes in the functions and growth of the cells which are likely to become permanent, causing imbecility, mental perversion, a craving for alcohol or narcotics in later life. Nervous diseases, such as intractable nervous dyspepsia and lack of staying powers are a result of dosing with opiates or narcotics to keep children quiet in their infancy. The rule among physicians is that children should never receive opiates in the smallest doses for more than a day at a time, and only then if unavoidable.

The administration of Anodynes, Drops, Cordials, Soothing Syrups and other narcotics to children by any but a physician cannot be too strongly deprecated, and the druggist should not be a party to it. Children who are ill need the attention of a physician, and it is nothing less than a crime to dose them willfully with narcotics.

Castoria contains no narcotics if it bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher. Genuine Castoria always bears the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher

Hard to Determine. Ruth Clifford, the moving picture star, has a cousin overseas. Recently his name appeared in the casualty list as wounded.

"Yes," said Miss Clifford, in answer to an inquiry by her director, "he was wounded, but not seriously. We had a letter from the regimental surgeon."

"Where was he wounded?" asked Gerard.

"We are not quite sure. The surgeon mentioned the place, but we don't know whether it's an anatomical phrase or a French village."

MOTORS INSTEAD OF DOGS

Trip Over the Cascades in a Gasoline Sleigh Was a Distinct Success.

A spectacular trial trip was recently made across the Cascades in a motor sleigh, and a number of photographs, taken at various stages of the journey, are reproduced in Popular Mechanics. The achievement of the motor sleigh was almost as amazing as that of the first army tank conquering, as it did, all kinds of obstacles. Skimming the surface of snowfalls, old or new, the strange little vehicle broke its way through primeval passes with never a stumble. The rescue of an automobile, hopelessly stalled in the drifts of Snoqualmie pass, was a mere incident in its progress. Crossing a deep gully on a pair of hemlock poles was but one of the day's adventures. The intended substitution of the motor sleigh for the dog drawn sledges of Alaska's snow-bound trails means more to the people of that great territory than may be generally realized. Jack London and others have limned the malemute as a romantic figure; but the followers of the trail know well he is never that. It is the elimination of much human hardship, as well as canine inefficiency, that recommends the gasoline method.

Time's Changes.

"Times shore change," philosophically said Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "Just tuther day, as it were, nobody thought anything in perticular if a feller took a demijohn to church under the back seat of his wagon, and after the sermon had grown sorter tiresome winked a few of his friends outside to help him lap it up and fool around and swap horses and mebbey fight a little in a general way. "But now, by girt, if he even smells of patent medicine on a week day he's got to produce the omenick and p'int out the place whur it says he's got the deadly disease that he claims to have taken the medicine for."—Kansas City Star.

Proud of His "Profession." "Burglars who served in the army are going back to their old trade," said a London police official the other day. "These men deliberately elect to live by stealing because they find it adventurous. It was with the same spirit that they joined the army. At least one convicted burglar won the Victoria cross." Confirmation of this characteristic is provided by a captain in a famous fighting regiment, who declares that one of the bravest men in his company, a corporal with a D.C.M. and other honors, declared himself a professional thief. "His one regret," remarked the officer, "was that the recruiting authorities would not let him describe his occupation on his attestation papers as 'burglar.'"

Let us not forget our soldier boys who have been serving in our mighty armies. Our town must give them a picnic, a supper, or some form of entertainment when they return. In leaving, so few of them left at a time that it was hard to give any public demonstration of our appreciation of them, but many of them have already returned, and several more will be shortly, and we would like to see our town in some way, entertain them publicly and in a fitting manner.

There is just more good things in store for Miami this summer and fall than one could imagine. But to get them all, we surely need a commercial body of some kind. We could very nicely have a club of business men, farmers and stockmen to help promote our interests and look after things coming our way. We would like to hear from anyone interested in some form of organization for Miami and Roberts County.

RAILWAY RATES TO BE ADVANCED

Public Treasury Will Be Relieved of Burden of Meeting Deficits in Earnings.

EDITORS' POLL IN CONGRESS.

Heavy Vote for Return of Roads Arouses Interest at the National Capital.

Washington.—The national poll on the railroad question by 6,000 newspaper editors throughout the country has aroused great interest at the national capital. With 83 per cent. of the editors giving it as their impartial opinion that the public favors an early return of the railroads to their owners and only 11 per cent. favoring Government ownership or operation, the members of Congress of both political parties propose to provide speedily for the legislation to make it possible to restore the roads to private management before the end of the year.

In Congress there is a general agreement that the following steps will have to be taken before the roads are returned to their owners:

1. An advance in rates to meet the greatly increased cost of labor and materials in order that the Public Treasury may be relieved of the burden of meeting monthly deficits and the roads made self-supporting. The Director General of Railroads states that the increase in rates thus far is about 25 per cent. as compared with an increase in operating costs of from 50 to 100 per cent.
 2. Greater nationalization of public control of transportation—a single public control in the Federal Government in place of 49 masters in the different States, with conflicting laws and regulations.
 3. Legalization of consolidations and common use of lines and facilities whenever in the public interest.
 4. Assurance through an act of Congress that in the future the Government will approve of rates for freight and passengers that will not only be fair to the public, but fair to the roads, and that will yield a sufficient income on capital to attract the $750,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 of new capital needed every year for the expansion of railroad facilities.
- How the States voted in the national poll of editors on the question of the return of the railroads to private management is shown by the following chart. That the railroad question is a non-partisan issue is plain from a study of the table:

PLAN TO MAKE A ROAD DRAG

Illustration Shows an Implement Which is Simple and Inexpensive —Tough Wood Best.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The accompanying illustration shows a typical design for a road drag, which is very simple and inexpensive. The design contemplates the use of an ordinary log of timber, such as may be readily obtained in almost every locality. The log should be about 7 or 8 inches in diameter and from 6 to 8 feet long, and should preferably be of hard, tough wood which will not decay very rapidly when exposed to the weather. White oak, burr oak, chestnut, cedar, hickory, walnut, or any similar wood may be satisfactorily used, provided that it is well seasoned before the drag is put into use. Railroad ties have been frequently used for this purpose and possess the advantage that they are already cut to about the right length. In selecting the tie, however, care should be exercised to see that it is of sound wood and of the proper size.

The drag is made by splitting or sawing the log into two equal semi-cylinders, which are then framed together in the manner shown in the illustration. The better of the two pieces should form the front runner of the drag, because it is the one subjected to the greater wear. Moreover, while the front runner should always be placed with the face forward, it is claimed by many that better results may be obtained by having the round part of the back runner go forward in order to increase the smearing action of the drag. The two runners are usually spaced from about 30 inches to 36 inches apart, and are connected in ladder fashion by means of cross stakes or rungs.

The ends of the rungs are ordinarily fitted into 2-inch auger holes, bored in the runners, and are secured in place by means of end wedges. The auger holes are so arranged that the rungs, when framed together, will be displaced in a longitudinal direction with respect to each other. The object of this displacement, or offset as it is usually termed, is to make the ends of the front and back runners follow approximately the same line on the road while the drag is in operation. The amount of displacement, therefore, should depend on the amount of skew necessary to make the drag empty itself. But since this skew varies with the condition of the road surface, the proper offset to be given to runners cannot be definitely fixed. Under ordinary conditions an offset of from about 12 inches to about 16 inches will prove satisfactory.

In order to make it easy for a man to stand upon the drag and to shift his weight properly when dragging over a hard surface, the drag should be provided with two 1-inch boards parallel to the runners and nailed down to Typical Design of Split-Log Drag. The boards should be about 8 inches wide and their length should be slightly less than that of the runners of the drag.

The chain by means of which the drag is drawn should be about 8 feet long and its links should be made of three-eighths-inch steel. On light drags two trace chains may be used for this purpose.

Many road drags constructed as above described, without metal-cutting edges or other modifications, have been very satisfactorily used where the conditions were favorable. It is evident, however, that such drags are effective only on comparatively soft road surfaces, and to diminish this limitation and also to increase the life of the drag it is very desirable to provide a metal-cutting edge for the front runner. An excellent edge of this kind may be made from a strip of iron or steel about one-fourth inch thick and about four inches wide, and even old wagon tires or worn-out grader blades have been very satisfactory.

GOOD ROADS ARE NECESSITY

Add to Joy and Comfort of Country and City Life—National Problem for Everybody.

Good roads will add to the joy and comfort of country life and city life. They are a public necessity. The problem is a township problem, a county problem, a state problem, a national problem for men and women of all business and industrial life. It deserves united co-operation.

"MERCHANTS' HAVEN"

Canal in Copenhagen.

THE Vikings, scudding about in their little sailing ships to plunder, pretty well controlled commerce a dozen centuries ago. In the course of their scuddings they founded on the north coast of the island of Sjælland, where nature had provided a protected harbor, a town which they called København, or "merchants' haven," and which is now known to the world as Copenhagen, capital of Denmark.

The merchandising done at this haven consisted largely in those days of receiving stolen treasures from the big blond raiders and providing the sea rovers in return with mead for their drinking horns. The traders flourished and eventually began to find some outlet beyond their own country for their increasing stocks, and thus Copenhagen grew to commercial importance, so much so, in fact, that it became one of the influential members of the Hanseatic league and a rival of Hamburg, Bremen, Lübeck and the German North sea and Baltic ports.

In the Thirty Years' war Germany was torn and plundered and Copenhagen took a spurt ahead of its German rivals. King Christian IV, recognizing Denmark's opportunity, promoted trade. In 1620 he built on one of the waterways which cut into the city a house, and that striking, many gabled structure still is used as a stock exchange. It is of red tapestry brick and is surmounted by a spire formed by the twisting together, ropelike of the bodies of four great copper dragons. This spire, green with the verdigris of centuries, may be seen on clear days far out over the Øresund, that separates Denmark from Sweden.

Germans Got the Trade. But in later days the Danish traders lost some of the aggressiveness of Eric the Red and old Christian, while the north Germans became more and more the merchants of the Baltic and the North sea. Then came the theft by Prussia of Schleswig-Holstein and later the digging of the Kiel canal. Copenhagen became an easy-going city of a glorious past, while the ships from the seven seas anchored at Hamburg or Bremen.

The world war, however, gave Copenhagen another opportunity, and now the old "Merchants' Haven" hopes again to take mercantile sea honors from the castle banner of Hamburg. Regarding Copenhagen's aspirations, Albert E. Haase, writing in the New York Times, says:

The war made Copenhagen a clearing house for Europe. As the capital of one of the most important neutral European countries it became a political center of great significance. Changed conditions brought prosperity and a new class of business men assumed control. The financier supplanted the producer.

Denmark's financial system was, even before the war, sound. Her methods for mobilizing her credits had long been accepted by the financial world. Old banks expanded and new banks came into existence. It is reported that deposits grew to almost four times their pre-war amount. Insurance records of old Denmark were shattered in a manner that never had been thought possible; for Copenhagen became the place in which American and European insurance companies placed their reinsurance, a business which had once gone to the central powers.

On the heels of this increased financial power came a positive assertion of initiative on the part of the Danish business man. World-wide trading organizations came into being and Copenhagen became the home of these organizations, the branches of which were chiefly in countries at war with Germany. Among these organizations is the Transatlantic company, which was started in 1916, to compile information regarding foreign trade and to invest capital in firms engaged in foreign trade. This organization has, so far, succeeded in associating itself with seventeen importing and exporting companies. Another important organization is the General Commercial Company, Ltd., started in 1917, which differs from the Transatlantic company only in that it is concerned chiefly with Russia and South America.

Though increased financial power and strong commercial organizations free from German influence are sources of strong assurance to the Danish trader, yet the free port has been the foundation of the confidence upon which they have placed their hopes. Their confidence in Copenhagen's free port has not been lessened by the constant warnings that Sweden and Norway will not stand with folded arms while Denmark attempts to gain supremacy in the Baltic trade. Again and again the warning is made that Malmö and Gothenburg in Sweden, and Bergen and Christiania in Norway, are planning free harbors. The Dane knows that more cities of Scandinavia will be needed to handle the enormous resulting traffic, yet he is well aware of the fact that the geographical position of either Malmö or Gothenburg is not as favorable as that of Copenhagen. Norway's claims do not loom large, for Bergen and Christiania cannot be placed in the same category with Gothenburg or Malmö.

A Free Port 25 Years.

The port of Copenhagen has been free for more than 25 years. For a period of years it was not improved, but during the war changes have been made and a real development has taken place. It has been estimated that more than $10,000,000 has been spent thus. Its tonnage capacity, reported to be 1,000,000, has been pronounced as inadequate for the traffic which Copenhagen may expect. This condition, however, may be easily overcome, since the free port, being north of the city, is at a point where it may be enlarged to twice its present capacity.

The free port is a semi-official institution, and is in close connection with the Danish customs department. In fact, it is an agency of that department. Like all other free ports, it offers certain advantages to the foreign manufacturer. Goods may be stored in its buildings free of duty for any length of time. Thus the privilege is afforded to the Baltic distributor of having a convenient storehouse for his goods, which may accumulate during a slack season. When the demand becomes heavy the Baltic trader is in a position to meet the wants of his customers immediately. The cargoes of ocean-going vessels may be unloaded at Copenhagen and distributed in the Baltic regions by the smaller steamers which call at the less important Baltic ports. These steamers would return to Copenhagen with the exports of the Baltic regions, which would form the return cargo of the ocean-going vessels.

The convenience which the Copenhagen free port affords the foreign manufacturer is not confined to the Baltic territory alone; for Copenhagen may well take Hamburg's place for all Europe. As Hamburg was at one time so Copenhagen is now a terminus for many ships calling at all ports of the world, and chiefly European ports. Hence it offers the same service that Hamburg did in former years, that is, quick and cheap transshipment of goods, when the demand is heavy, to all important European ports.

Cotton of Commerce.

The transformation of the fleecy white mass gathered from the bolls into the finished cotton fabric involves many operations. The lint which is dropped into the pickers' baskets has clinging to its fibers numerous little hard seeds, all of which must be removed. The process of removing the seeds is known as ginning. When the cotton arrives at the factory it is run through various machines, which free it of dirt and form it into a lap or roll. It is then passed through rollers covered with steel wire points, a process which makes the fibers lie in straight parallel rows, except as they curl or twist about other fibers. The curls and twists are straightened out in a stretching frame and the fibers are then twisted and wound on bobbins of decreasing size until the strands are fine enough to be spun into thread or yarn. When the product is ready for the spinning machine it is called roving. From the spinning machine the thread or yarn is taken to the looms to be made into cloth.

The Kick That Told.

Major Walford Davies, who wrote the Air Force March, tells of an amusing experience which occurred once while he was hearing a rehearsal of one of his cantatas. "I could not help noticing," relates the composer, "that the clarinet player, a young man, but a clever and steady lad, jumped a good deal during the progress of the rehearsal. Then I found that his father, who played the trombone, sat just behind him, and every now and then he gave his son a kick, with the remark: 'Look out, Sammy, there be a flat a-comin'!'"

Unprofitable Thought.

"A man dat's always thinkin' 'bout hisself," said Uncle Eben, "is gineter feel lonesome when he finds out he's been monopolizin' dat special branch of human study."

IDEAL FARM LANDS

Minnesota Man at Last Found What He Sought.

After Long Search, the Wondrous Productiveness of Western Canada Was Pointed Out, and He Is Going There.

He farmed for a number of years near Windom, Minnesota, and as Mr. O. S. Marcy told it, he had done well. He had made sufficient money to see him and his wife through their remaining days.

"But there were the boys," said Mrs. Marcy, "and six of them, too—some of the six not yet back from 'overseas.' Yes, we are proud of them," the fond mother said, "but, oh! my, we had no girl," and she bemoaned that. These boys had to be looked after. "Why not settle them about you in your own neighborhood? You have good land there, splendid neighbors, and everything that might be desired."

"Yes, that is all true," replied this estimable lady, "but the land is so high-priced we couldn't afford to buy there, although worth every cent asked for it. You see we have six boys, and they are good ones, too."

So, one day, three years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Marcy rigged up the automobile for a touring trip. They wanted to investigate for the boys' benefit. The journey lasted for a year. It took them through Arizona with its varied scenery, its climatic and agricultural attractions; into the canyons of Colorado they went, and the agricultural possibilities there aroused a large amount of interest. Still undecided, down into the valleys of California the automobile went. Fruit orchards were plentiful, grain fields were attractive, but the psychological time had not arrived. Reversing their way, they passed through Washington, Oregon and Montana and home. A year's journey and no results. "Oh, yes," Mr. Marcy said, "we had a delightful time, enjoyed it all but the day and night up in Colorado, when we were held up by a wonderful snowstorm; we and six others. Planking the snow embankment, we came through safely, if a trifle inconvenienced."

It was interesting to hear these people talk. Their practical minds showed that they had not lacked opportunities for observation. They could not find what they wanted for the boys. When he was between twenty and twenty-five years of age, Mr. Marcy pictured to himself the kind of a home he wanted. He reared a family of boys and had yet to find such a place. His year's journey had been fruitless in that respect.

One day he decided he would try what Western Canada could do. He had read of it, and he had friends there who had done well. He toured the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. He saw the vast prairies, yielding their twenty and twenty-five, and as high as forty bushels of wheat, with enormous yields of other grains. The north central country, which afforded the grass and the shelter that made stock-raising a valuable adjunct to the growing of grain, was visited, interviews were had with the settlers, many from his own home district, and all were satisfied.

Only the other day he arranged for a car in which he will load his effects to be taken to the Alberta farm he had purchased when on his visit. Mrs. Marcy goes with him, and the six boys will follow. He found the place he had pictured in his mind when he was twenty or twenty-five years old. "I was unable to find it until I made my Western Canada visit. I bought the farm, and I am satisfied. When I saw a carload of four-year-old steers brought into the Edmonton market, weighing 1,700 pounds, that had never been inside a building nor fed a bit of grain, I was glad I had made up my mind."—Advertisement.

Some Instances.

"Was there any convincing proof of the man's insanity?"

"Well, when he went on a fishing party he always said he had the poorest and smallest catch of the lot, and he never said anything about his child except to remark it was exceptionally dull and rarely said anything worth quoting."

A Danger.

"Weren't you once a member of a 'Don't Worry club?'"

"Yes, I resigned. I found I was tempted to take things too easy and mistake it for a 'Don't Hurry club.'"

Too Late.

"What's the matter with your sister?"

"The war was over before she got her sock knitted."—Kansas City Journal.

The Case Stated.

"We had a good state's attorney."
"Yes, but we're still lucky. Now, we have a nice one."
Many a self-made man ought to be ashamed to admit it.

FREEDOM OVER ALL THE EARTH

Due Recognition of Human Rights Now the Aim of Mankind.

Independence hall is holy ground at the entrance to which, like Moses at the bush of fire, one should remove his shoes; but it pales into insignificance beside Interdependence hall which some day we must build across the street from the "birthplace of American liberty." One hundred, two score and three years ago, the federation of the thirteen colonies into a federal union was a political event of prime import; today it is overshadowed by the thing which Tennyson dreamed, "The Federation of the World." The Declaration of Independence is a state paper of such significance as to stand in a class by itself. It immortalized every man who signed it. "These united colonies are and of right ought to be free and independent states; absolved from all allegiance to the British crown; and all connection between them and Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved." So run the words of fire the idealism of which was to be made real if need be, by the lives, as well as the property and sacred honor of the signatories. But the Declaration of Interdependence of all free peoples will overtop that of July 4, 1776, as the oak overtops the daisy.

But I was never surprised at any resemblance that appeared when your boys and ours stood side by side in the trenches. The minuteman of Concord is the ideal of the young Englishman of today, who hung himself over the top, giving away his comforts and risking his life for every man in his company. We long to see England rich in just such young men as your minuteman, and you make the same prayer for America, so that in this, as in all the things by which men live, you and we have the same aims—liberty and the service of our country and our God. I saw a very beautiful expression of the feeling between us on Memorial day last year, says a writer in Scribner's. I went early in the morning to the Old North Bridge with flowers for the minuteman; a Southern friend was with me, and the two lost causes, British and Confederate, were also on the bridge. We laid flowers before the minuteman and on the grave of the two British soldiers whose fate so moved Hawthorne. His spirit may have joined us as we passed the Old Manse, but no one else was to be seen, when suddenly a ghostly procession came through the mist—six old veterans just risen from their graves; four tiny boy scouts hardly yet born; and two young men of the present carrying a bugle and a flag. They went first to the British grave, and for the first time in history they laid on it England's flag and a branch of New England apple blossoms; they saluted, blew a bugle call, and passed on to do the same for the minuteman and his flag. Then they stood in line on the bridge—each of the 12 threw a flower into the river and saluted, while the leader said: "We salute all the sailors who died in the Civil war." Then after a last ghostly bugle call they melted away into the mist. Was it the mist of past or future?—for they had saluted the three great facts of past, present and future history—the birth of democracy, the friendship of Anglo-Saxons, and the future peace of the world which will surely spring from it.

religion, but making Americanism dangerously near a big provincialism. We helped no other people to gain our glorious liberty. All was well if we were left alone by the political and warring world. Autocracy in Rout. But a new world order has come in. The western hemisphere is all free. China has astonished the world by electing a president. "The bear that walks like a man" becomes human for a fortnight and is free—until his liberty, mistaken for license, enslaved him to the bolshevik. France and Portugal are free; Great Britain, our ancient oppressor, is free and is our friend. The British empire is free, a galaxy of great self-governing peoples—Canada, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa—all free, even though a figurehead king is its nominal head; but Lloyd George, democrat, not George V autocrat, is the real ruler of the British empire! Now for "Peace on Earth." Free peoples do not menace the tranquility of the world; they are not bent on conquest; they seek not to impose their will on their neighbors, even though the neighbor be weak and small. They covet nothing which is their neighbor's. They stand for peace on earth and good will among men. The considerations alike of safety and ethics demand the observation of the golden rule among nations. On July 4, 1776, the old Liberty bell rang out in order to "proclaim liberty throughout all the land, unto all the inhabitants thereof." Suppose that on another July 4 it were permitted to raise its cracked and wheezy voice to do a bigger and far nobler thing: Proclaim liberty to all the oppressed of the world! Where is the man who would not wish to live in that good world? Surely not one would pray with Simeon, "Lord, lettest thou thy servant now depart in peace." Let all the free peoples of the world send representatives to meet in Independence hall. Let them create and sign a nobler document than that which the fathers made and signed; nobler and larger for one reason only—the new document will be the Declaration of Interdependence. That declaration will enable all free peoples to stand against the aggression of autocratic spoilers. It will assert the solidarity of all who stand for freedom and who love their fellow men. It will set forth the growing sense of human brotherhood. It will express in larger measure the high political ideals of our time. It may not ring in a thousand years of peace, but it will herald that dawn—When light shall spread, and man be liker man, Through all the circle of the golden year.

AMERICA'S DEBT TO LAFAYETTE

Washington Paid Tribute to Great Services Rendered.

WHEN the Revolution began Americans were still pioneers and straight shooters. The country was full of men who had seen service in war against the French and Indians. Washington had been all his life a soldier. It is not surprising that American officers felt quite able to handle the military situation without assistance from the host of applicants for commissions from abroad. Therefore when Washington heard that a young Frenchman named Lafayette had left his wife and child and crossed the ocean to serve the American cause as a volunteer without pay, he muttered: "One more incumbrance." But Lafayette pleaded: "Give me a chance; I do not want to be an honorary soldier." He went to Washington's camp and there began a friendship which ran through so many years like an idyl. In 1788 Brissot visited Washington at Mt. Vernon with a letter from Lafayette.

Lafayette.

He says Washington "spoke to me of M. De Lafayette with emotion; he considers him as his child." Later, Lafayette sent to Washington the key to the destroyed Bastille, saying: "It is a tribute which I owe as a son to my adopted father, as an aid-de-camp to my general, as a missionary of liberty to its patriarch." French Eager in Liberty's Cause. The spirit of Lafayette was the spirit of Rochambeau's army. A host of young French officers looked on the expedition as a crusade for liberty, and crowded for places. Young Berthier was a volunteer at Yorktown, and he became a marshal of France, Viscount

De Noailles marched afoot the whole 756 miles from Newport to Yorktown. Young Saint-Simon, Clousen, Chastellux, a brother of Mirabeau, a brother of Talleyrand, Barras, later Director Barras, and many other enthusiasts for liberty were in the expedition. They understood Americans. Equality was the particular American trait which impressed them most, and this idea was imported by them from America into France. Rochambeau placed himself and his army under the command of Washington. The ragged Americans always had the right of the line. In case of equality of rank, the American officer always took command. Not so much as a cabbage was taken without payment. Before Yorktown the Americans were not skilled in siege operations, and Washington gratefully acknowledged the service of the French engineers. The French fleet closed the river, and the surrender came. Without that French help we tremble to think what might have happened.

Fired Lafayette's Ardor.

Toward the close of the year 1776, the duke of Cumberland, who was the brother of King George III of England, was traveling in France, and one day he arrived at the town of Metz, then a French possession. A certain count De Broglie, a veteran of many battles, was in command of the garrison, and, to do honor to his distinguished visitor, he invited some of his officers to meet him at dinner. Now it happened that the duke of Cumberland was in disfavor with his royal brother—he was, in fact, in banishment. He had lately received news that certain of his majesty's colonies in America had rebelled and declared themselves free, declining to be subject any longer to a tyrannical king. It would seem that the duke of Cumberland told the story with some gusto, as if he were not altogether sorry that his brother was in trouble. One officer listened with particular attention. He was a youth of nineteen, tall and thin, with a long nose and reddish hair. His solemn expression and his somewhat awkward manner contrasted strongly with the frivolous ease and grace of the other young officers present. He was a marquis of long descent, connected by marriage with one of the greatest families in France, and he had at his own disposition a very large income. He listened intently, he asked many eager questions, and when he rose from the table he had made a momentous and historic resolution. He had resolved to abandon the pleasures and luxuries of the gayest court in the world, even to leave his young wife and child, and to cast in his lot with these strange rebels in America. In his own words, "When first I heard of American independence, my heart was enlisted!" That young man was Lafayette; and when the American army went to the front in France, it merely paid a small part of the debt of gratitude we owe that splendid young officer—that true nobleman. Appointed a major general by Washington in July, he fought at the battle of Brandywine in September and received an ugly wound. Soon again in the saddle, he went through many vicissitudes and privations with Washington at Valley Forge, his crowning exploit being the forcing of the retreat of Lord Cornwallis, leading to his surrender at Yorktown, in 1781. Although Washington and other famous American generals had joined him previous to the surrender, Lafayette, with a small force, had initiated the rout of Cornwallis at the battle of the Clouds. That the highest credit was due to Lafayette is shown by the fact that Washington warmly thanked and complimented him in the presence of the troops, after the great surrender which practically ended the war. received with bands of music and a huge procession of citizens. It is related that on his first visit in 1784 there was a controversy as to how the procession was to proceed through the main streets of the town, owing to the fact that at one of the sharp turns, a house so jutted into the road that the general's coach could not pass. On the morning of the great event, it was discovered that the patriotic family occupying the property had cut off a section of the house, removing the offending corner and thus the coach was driven without a hitch through the street. The house with part of the first story missing can still be seen in this year of 1919, and is shown in the illustration.

DOING THEIR BIT

By LILLIAN B. COLDRICK.

(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Who dares call our Phil a slacker?" The black eyes of little Mrs. Norton snapped angrily, as she turned to her daughter, who was reading extracts from a letter just received.

"Oh, all the 'home folks,' nonchalantly replied Edith, the spoiled daughter of the family.

Edith Norton, not at all remarkable for her beauty, had always been jealous of her brother's pretty wife. The present family arrangements did not please her particularly. She would have preferred remaining in town rather than spending the autumn months in the mountains.

"Anyway, mother," continued Edith, "if we had remained in civilization instead of coming to this wilderness—"

"Wilderness!" interrupted Mrs. Norton. "Where could you find a more charming place than our beautiful Pine Villa? Why, I was glad when Dorothy's physician ordered her and the baby here for the next few months."

"Next few months?" repeated Edith crossly. "Oh, horrors! I thought a few weeks were bad enough. Of all the girls in the world, why did Phil choose such a delicate one for his wife!"

"Because a man usually chooses the girl he loves, delicate or otherwise!" declared Phil, entering the pretty breakfast room from the veranda, a spray of wonderful autumn foliage in his hand.

"If it were not for mother, I'd be a slacker and stay home rather than leave my wife to your tender mercies. At the same time, allow me to inform you that every man who remains at home is not necessarily a slacker! However, don't be afraid, Eda. You shall not have cause to be ashamed of your only brother. I will soon be going my bit for Uncle Sam!"

"Doing your bit! Doing your bit!" Was there ever such a nonsensical expression? If I were to present you with a dictionary of the English language, do you suppose you might select words equivalent to that ridiculous phrase?"

Mr. Norton, Sr., was not only suffering from a severe attack of gout, he had inadvertently and most unfortunately, for the rest of the family, forgotten his favorite brand of cigars; hence, his outburst.

The sudden, unceremonious opening of a door, which banged against an inoffensive chair, not only disturbed father's already ruffled temper, but what was of infinitely more importance just then, it more than slightly augmented his gout.

Turning to glare at the intruder, he encountered the saucy stare of a young under-maid, whose bristling red hair was dressed in an ear-draped effect. The supposedly invisible hair pins protruded an inch or two in every conceivable direction.

As Agnes placed a dish of steaming muffins upon the table, she patted her hair-covered ears most lovingly, and gently pressed back the offending hair-pins.

"Look here, young woman!" Mr. Norton fairly spluttered with mingled pain and rage. "Are you in the habit of placing food upon the table before the family is seated? And do we usually begin breakfast with muffins? One thing more," he fumed, as the girl, with one hand still at her hair, reached for the muffins with the disengaged hand. "If you serve food in this family, learn to dress your hair in the proper place. A breakfast room is not a tonsorial parlor."

When the indignant maid had left the room, Mrs. Norton turned to her irate husband.

"I do wish, father, you would not interfere with my affairs. It is most difficult to get help in the mountains and you must be prepared to overlook little deficiencies."

"Little deficiencies, indeed!" scoffed father. "Is it a little deficiency to chew red hair with my food?"

"Have you ever done so yet?"

"No, but I may, if she serves macaroni with tomatoes!"

Evidently, the entire Norton family had gotten out of the wrong side of their respective beds that morning.

It was a decided relief, when, from an opposite doorway, a slight, girlish figure appeared with a pale but smiling face as she wished them all "good-morning!"

The smile changed to a merry laugh as Phil, slipping one arm around her, covered her from head to hips with the beautiful spray of autumn leaves.

"Oh, thank you, Phil, dear; what marvelous coloring. Look, daddy," turning with her prize to the old gentleman.

"Don't talk to me, Dorrie. I'm a cross old man, I guess." The tiny wrinkles at the corner of father's eyes showed that his face would soon regain its usual benign expression.

"Cross, daddy? Who could be cross on such a glorious day?"

"Not you, surely, Dorothy," snapped Edith; "not when things are going your way. You wanted to come here and so we are here, whether we care to be or not."

A pained flush overspread the face of the little wife, as she glanced around the room at the other members of the family.

"Didn't any of you want to come? Baby and I can—"

"Yes, darling, mother wanted to come!" exclaimed good-natured Mrs. Norton, as she lovingly kissed both flushed cheeks. "Edith is cross today. She wanted to stay in town."
