Food Would Sour and Boil -Teeth Like Chalk

Mr. Herbert M. Gessner writes from his home in Berlin, N. H .: I had stomach trouble over ten years; kept getting worse. I tried everything for relief but it came back worse than ever. Last fall I got awfully bad; could only eat light loaf bread and tea. In January I got so bad that what I would eat would sour and boil; my teeth would be like chalk. I suffered terribly. I prayed every day for something to cure me. One day I read about EATONIC and told my wife to get me a box at the drug store as I was going to work at 4 p. m. I took one-third of it and began to feel relief; when it was three-fourths gone, I felt fine and when it was used up I had no pains. Wife got me another box but I have felt the pain but twice. I used five tablets out of the new box and I have no more stomach trouble Now I write to tell you how thankful I am that I heard of EATONIC. I feel like a new man; I eat what I like, drink plenty of water, and it never hurts me at all.

THE SCARLET LETTER

By NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE Condenuation by George S. Barton

thorne, American writer, was born in Salem. Mass., July 4, 1804. His days were spent Here the young solitary walks of which he was so fond, but in the Even at this earl;

date he had acquired a taste for writ ing, and carried a little blank book in which he jotted down his notes. After a year in Maine, Hawthorne returned to Salem to prepare for col-lege. He amused himself by publishing a manuscript periodical, and at times speculated upon the profession he would follow in the future.

For some years Hawthorne lived in Concord, Mass., in the old Manse, and wrote "Mosses from an Old Manse," "Twice Told Tales" and "Grandfather's Chair." He joined the Brook Farm colony at West Roxbury, but found that the conditions there suited neither the toste year his temperature and he his taste nor his temperament, and he remained but one year.

While serving as surveyor of customs at Salem he found among some old papers a large letter "A" embroidimagination was so stirred, that upon his retirement from office he wrote The Scarlet Letter.'

Some other stories of Hawthorne are "The Blithedale Romance," "The Wonder Book," "The Snow Image," "Septimus Felton" and "The Dolliver Romance" were left unfinished at the author's death. He died at Plymouth. N. H., on the 19th of May, 1864, and five days later was buried at Sleepy Hollow, a beautiful cemetery at Concord where he used to walk under the pines when living at the old Manse. Over his grave is a simple stone, inscribed with the single word, "Haw-friend," said the townsman, "else you village. would have heard of Mistress Hester Prynne. She hath raised a scandal in godly Master Dimmesdale's church. The penalty thereof is death, but the magistracy in their mercy, have doomed her to stand a space of three hours on the platform of the pillory, and for the remainder of her life to wear a mark of shame in her bosom."

"A wise sentence!" remarked the stranger. "It irks me, nevertheless, that the partner of her iniquity should not at least stand by her side. But he will be known-he will be known!"

Rev. Mr. Dimmesdale, a young minister of high native gifts, who had already wide eminence in his profession, was urged to exhort Hester to repentance and confession. Addressing her, he advised that she name her fellow sinner even if he had to step from a high position to stand beside her, for it was better so than to hide a guilty heart through life.

Hester shook her head, keeping her place upon the pedestal of shame with an air of weary indifference. That night her child writhed in convulsions, and a physician, Mr. Roger Chillingworth, none other than the stranger Hester had noticed in the crowd, was called. Having eased the baby's pain he turned and said: "Hester, I ask not wherefore thou hast fallen into the pit. It was my folly and thy weakness. What had I-a man of thought-to do with youth and beauty like thine? I might have known that in my long absence this would happen."

"I have greatly wronged thee," murmured Hester. "We have wronged each other," he answered. "But I shall seek this man whose name thou wilt not reveal, and sooner or later he must be mine. I shall contrive nothing against his life. Let him live. One thing, thou that wast my wife, I ask. Thou hast kept his name secret. Keep likewise, mine. Let thy husband be to the world as one already dead, and breathe not the secret, "I will keep thy secret as I have his."

Z...... Freed from prison Hester did not flee, but established herself in a small cottage just outside the town, incurring no risk of want for she possessed the art of needlework which provided food for herself and child. She had named the little one "Pearl," as being of great price, and little Pear! grew up a lovely child. People wished to take her away and the matter was discussed in the mother's presence by Governor Bellingham and his guests-Rev. John Wilson, Rev. Mr. Dimmesdale, and Dr. Chillingworth.

"God gave me the child!" cried Hester, and turning to the young clergyman, Mr. Dimmesdale, she exclaimed, 'Speak thou for me. Thou wast my pastor. Thou knowest what is in my heart and what are a mother's rights, and how much the stronger they are when that mother has but her child and the scarlet letter! I will not loose the child! Look to it!"

"There is truth in what she says," began the minister. "There is a qualin Salem, but when he was 14 years ity of awful sacredness between this mother and this child. It is good for this poor sinful woman that she hath ad continued the an infant confided to her care-to be trained by her to righteousness. Let us leave them as providence hath seen wilderness,instead fit to place them!"

"You speak, my friend, with a strange earnestness," said Roger Chillingworth, smiling at him.

"He hath adduced such arguments that we will leave the matter as it stands," said the governor. The affair being so satisfactorily concluded, Hester and Pearl departed.

Rev. Mr. Dimmesdale's health failing he consulted Dr. Chillingworth. Taking him as a patient, the doctor decided to know the man's inmost nature before trying to heal him. Arrangements were made for the two men to lodge together so that he might be constantly under the doctor's observation.

As Doctor Chillingworth proceeded with his investigation, begun as he imagined with the integrity of a judge desirous only of truth, a terrible fascination seized him and insisted that he do its bidding. He now dug into the poor clergyman's heart, like a miner seeking gold; and Mr. Dimmesdale grew to look at him with an unaccountable horror.

Often Mr. Dimmesdale tried to speak the truth of his past from the pulpit but had cheated himself by confessing his sinfulness in general terms. Once, indulging in the mockery of repentance, he mounted the scaffold where Hester had stood. There was no danger of discovery for everyone was asleep. Even so he was surprised centuries ago the grass plot be- by Hester and Pearl, returning from a death bed in the town, and pres-

Hester had taken berths to Engand, and on the holiday the shipmaster informed her that Roger Chillingworth had booked passage on the same vessel; saying nothing, she turned and stood by the pillory with Pearl.

The minister, surrounded by leading townsmen, halted at the scaffold and calling Hester and Pearl to him mounted the scaffold steps. Telling Hester he was a dying man and must hasten to assume his shame, he turned to the market-place and spoke with a voice that all could hear.

"People of New England! At last, at last I stand where seven years since I should have stood. Lo, the scarlet letter which Hester wears! Ye have all shuddered at it! But there stood one in the midst of you, at whose brand of sin ye have not shuddered."

With a convulsive motion he tore away the ministerial gown from his breast. It was revealed! Then sinking down on the scaffold he died, his head resting on Hester's bosom.

Afterwards, conflicting accounts arose about the scene on the scaffold. Many testified to seeing a scarlet letter on the minister's bosom, while others denied it, saying that Dimmesdale's confession implied no part of Hester's

ROADS IN NATIONAL FORESTS

Thirty Thousand Miles Will Be Needed in Next Ten Years for Proper Development.

Thirty thousand miles of road, estimated to cost not less than $150,000,-000, will be needed for the proper protection and development of the national forests, and the near-by communities during the next ten years, according to comprehensive road plans which have been prepared. The secretary of agriculture has already approved the construction of 5,152 miles, estimated to cost $26,463,000, contingent upon federal and co-operative becoming available. Government expenditures of $15,740,000 have been authorized for this purpose. The roads comprised in the comprehensive road plans form the basis of the ultimate national forest road system. They are used as main highways, either in connection with through routes or to serve important local needs. The construction of feeder roads is being largely postponed until the primary road system of the national forests is completed. It is expected that the present estimate cost will be largely exceeded when surveys are made of the projects now on the list, since in many cases the only available estimates are based upon incomplete data.

FARMER AND GOOD HIGHWAYS

Has Become Hard Working and Voting Enthusiast for Improved Roads Because of Many Benefits.

The biggest booster for good roads in the country today is the farmer. A few years ago he felt that the portion of his taxes used in the construction of permanent highways represented a benefit only to the motoring tourist and the city automobile owner, writes H. W. Slauson in Leslie's. The farmargued that he was paying for their pleasures, and the result was a superstition against the good roads

Now, however, when the farmer finds that his land has trebled in value: when the merchandise for which he has telephoned in the morning can be delivered by noon of the same day; when the market for his own produce is brought hours nearer; when the winter and its following spring thaw possess no terrors for him-all this because of the improved highway which makes his farm only a suburb, as it were, of the nearest city-he naturally becomes a hardworking and hard-voting enthusiast for good roads.

GRAVEL GOOD FOR HIGHWAYS

When Properly Handled It Can Be Traveled Over All Year-Dirt Road Is Different.

While gravel, as a rule, does not make the best type of read, that is not so much the fault of the gravel as of the way it is put on. It is usually not evenly spread or leveled down, nor are the holes kept filled. If properly handled a gravel road can least be traveled on any time of the year, which cannot be said of a

FARM ROADS MADE OF EARTH

No Good Reason Why They Should Not Be Graded Up and Maintained in Good Condition.

The vast majority of the farm roads must necessarily be of earth. However, there is no reason why they cannot be graded up somewhat after the fashion of a public highway and main--tained in that condition.

FARM ROADS ARE ESSENTIAL

Just as Important as Public Thorough fares in Hauling Various Kinds of Crops.

Many of us know the value of good public roads, but how many of us know the value of good reads on the farm? Experience has taught that good roads on the private farm are just as essential and important as good

By CHLOE ARNOLD.

It happened rather oddly that day Bill Cumming went away I covered the monument. After all, the day was quite like a Barrie play humorous, and pathetically sweet it left one feeling like laughing and crying at the same time.

Bill was the first boy from Ridgfield to enlist in 1917, when his con try called on her sons, and he going into camp at Niantic, Conn. h an American household from Scotland such as this is, of course the "mean-ter" came to supper that Suncy night. who were laid in these grounds Companioned by SIXTEEN BRITISH SOLDIERS. Living their enemies, dying their guests.

In Honour of Service and Sacrifice, This Memorial is Placed For the Strengthening of Hearts

Until five years ago the battle of Ridgefield was unmarked and existed only on one of the seldom-looked-at pages in the histories, though the ancient and well-conditioned hickory tree designated the graves. And by it Miss Mary Olcott reckoned where to place the monument.

When this battle was fought most of the men of military age were away with Washington, Lafa yette and other generals. They had no home guard such as parade in full rig about the station grounds of a Friday afternoon. Indeed some historians say that most of the six hundred were men seeking adventure under Benedict Arnold, For he was then a popular hero, and he directed the principal defense against the British.

No one has ever known the names of the Eight Patriots. And perhaps some English mother in 1777 wondered at just what spot in the wilderness somewhere in America they had buried her boy. The British were all buried in one grave, the Americans in another. The tablet pays equal honor to each. And it is placed only "For the Strengthening of Hearts."

On that Sunday morning in April, 1777, the colonists needed some definite sign of success in their struggle with the enemy and with the stubborn wilderness from which they had to hew their homes. Indeed it was but three years afterward that Washinghis mother went into the house ry | ton was inquiring whom he could

So with 2.000 men he disemrked from the 27 ships the British nt to Compo beach, near Westport, d went off to Danbury, where the onists had collected their supplies. While Tryon was passing through edding (where Mark Twain's house ill stands) he shot up a church by ay of something to do. The British marched on up the village streets, which are now as they were then. But the wounded of both sides were taken into Miss Sarah Stebbins' house and tenderly cared for. Her house stood near where Miss Mary Olcott's does now, and the old buttery door, pierced by many shots and a cannon ball, is at the Olcott house. The soldiers who died on the field or of their wounds were the ones to whom the stone was raised.

Tryon knew that he was not popular' with the most of the Ridgefield villagers, so he plundered a good many of them, taking everything they had, and they had to appeal to the general assembly for help. His men also burned the Keeler grist mill and set fire to several houses.

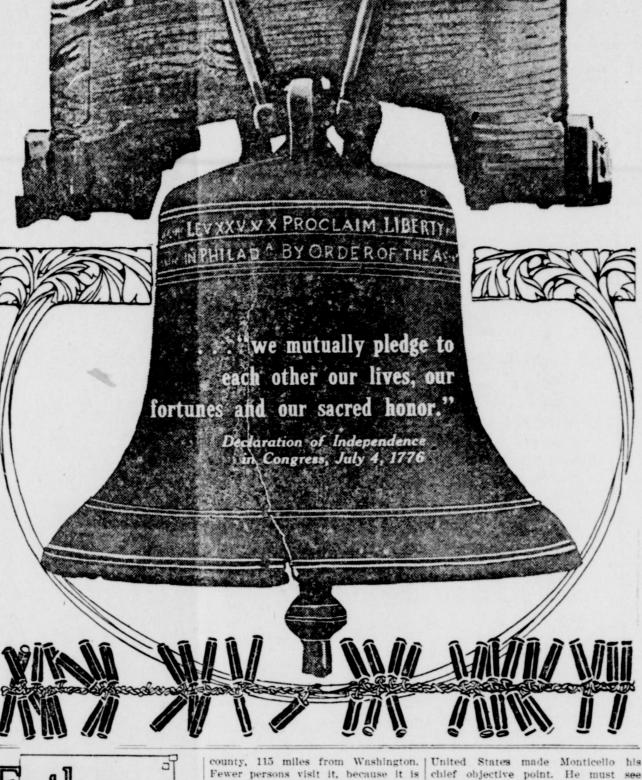

In that day the old Keeler tavern was the favorite inn on the way to Boston, Tryon heard, moreover, that the patriots were making ammunition in it. So he mounted his guns in the Episcopal church and fired at the tavdid enjoy its hospitality. Altogether the old tavern's fortunes are enviable. For it is now where Cass Gilbert, the architect, spends his summers. It is called "Cannon Bal. house," and the main part is unchanged, even to the partition on the second floor which they used to put up to make a large ballroom. A wing is added in the rear and a fountain from Gilbert's band makes more beau tiful the end of that fine old street.

Father of the Fourth C SEE SEE Jefferson Ever Friend of Liberty and the Enemy of All Forms of Despotism 9

By ROBERTUS LOVE.

The Father of His Country was

George Washington, but the Father of the Fourth of July was Thomas Jefferson. Jefferson wrote the Declaration of Independence, which was adopted and signed on the fourth day of July. Forever thereafter that day was and will be "the Glorious Fourth." The Declaration of Independence was a special plea for the rights of the individual., The whole life of Thomas Jefferson was a protest against the old-time tyranny which sought to limit the development and action of individual man. Jefferson loved liberty and despised despotism. He was the principal pioneer of democracy in all the world. On this account all that he did and said and wrote, his manner of living and working, his ome

History of Monticello.

In 1769 Jefferson began the construction of his mansion on the mountain above Charlottesville. On New Year's day of 1772 he took thither his bride, the beautiful young Widow Skelton, whose husband, Bathurst Skelton, had died when she was in her nineteenth year, leaving her a considerable fortune. She was about twenty-three when Jefferson married her. Mrs. Jefferson was a singularly beautiful woman, with auburn hair to match the red locks of her famous husband. She lived only about ten years after her second marriage. Jefferson never took another wife. His daughter was the mistress of Monticello and likewise the mistress of the Executive Mansion when Jefferson was president of the United States. Jefferson survived his wife 44 years.

For the last 50 years of his life Jefferson was hopelessly insolvent. From time to time his precious estate and home were in imminent danger of being sold over his head. His debts were due to various causes. For one thing, he put his name on notes for friends and was held responsible for large sums. Then he was an extravagant entertainer. His house was perhaps Monticello is one of America's the most commodious and manorlike in shrines of pilgrimage. The house, America. The chambers occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Jefferson are most interesting. At Monticello Jefferson lived nearly Jefferson, a radical in all things, a sixty years. From a hilltop near Monticello one may see the birthplaces of three men whose work and wisdom added to the United States nearly one-half of its present territory on this continent. These men were Jefferson, George Rogers Clark and Meriwether Lewis. Through the efforts of Clark the states of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin and part of Michigan were added to our domain. Meriwether Lewis, with a vounger brother of George Rogers Clark, was sent by Jefferson on the famous trip of exploration and discovery which, many years later, resulted in giving Uncle Sam title to the Pacific Northwest.

Miss Donovan stood there motionless after the door closed behind her guest. She was conscious of the sting in those final words, the half-expressed threat, but the smile did not desert her grasped the thought that this must be lips. Her only thought was that the other was angry, irritated over her failure, her inability to make a report to her mosters. She looked at the right, but as her eyes lifted once more she baheld her traveling suit draped over the head-board of the bed, and instantly the expression of her face changed. She had forgotten hanging it there. That must have been where the woman went when she disappeared. It was not to rummage the bed at all, but to hastily run through the pockets of her jacket. The girl swiftly crossed the room and flung coat and skirt onto the bed. She remembered now thrusting the telegram from Farriss into a pocket on the morning of its receipt. It was gone!

Her first thought was to search elsewhere, although she immediately realized the uselesness of any such attempt. The message had been in her pocket, as she recalled distinctly; she had fully intended destroying it at the same time she had torn up the letter of instruction, but failed to do so. Now it was in the hands of the La Rue woman, and would be shown to the others. It was some time before she could recall to memory the exact wording of the telegram, but finally it came to her bit by bit:

I want you all to come in here a losed behind them. Stella opened her own door a crack and listened; the hall, lighted only by a single oil-lamp at the head of the stairs, was deserted and silent. She stole cautiously forward, but the voices in Miss La Rue's room were muffled and indistinct, not an audible word reaching her ears. The key was in the lock, shutting out all view of the interior. Well, what was the difference? She knew what was occurring within-the stolen telegram was being displayed, and discussed. That would not delay them long and it would never do for her to be discovered in the hall.

Convinced of the uselessness of remaining, she returned to her own

Her breath came fast as she read, and crunched the paper into the palm of her hand. She understood, and felt no hesitancy. Westcott had made discoveries so important he must communicate them at once and there was no other way. He dare not come to her openly at that hour. Well, she was not afraid-not of Jim Westcott. She paused in her hasty dressing, wondering at herself, dimly aware that a new feeling partly actuated her desire to meet the man again-a feeling thoroughly alien to the Cavendish mystery. Even after gaining footing she saw nothing of Westcott, heard no sound indicating his presence. Suddenly something moved to her right, and she shrank back against the tree, uncertain if the shapeless thing approaching was man or beast. He was almost upon her before she was sure; then her lips gave utterance to a little sob

"Stay-of course: I am going to stay myself. It is the only way to divert suspicion. Good Lord, man, if we all disappeared at once they would know easy enough what had happened. Don't you believe Westcott is that kind of a fool. All ready, Joe?"

The man at the wagon muttered some response.

"Then up you go, miss; here, put your foot on the wheel; give her a lift, will you?"

Anxious to escape further indignities, and comprehending the uselessness of any further struggle, with a man on either side of her, Miss Donovan silently clambered into the wagon, and seated herself on a wide board, evidently arranged for that purpose. The fellow who had held back the top followed, and snuggled into the seat beside her. She noticed now he held a gun in his hand, which he deposited between his knees. "All set?"

"Sure."

"Well, keep awake, Joe, and mind what I told yer. Now, Moore, up with rou, and drive like h---: you must be in the bad lands before daylight." A fellow clambered to the seat in

The sun rose a red ball of fire, coloring the ridges of sand, and painting the grotesque rocks with crimson streamers. In the shadow of a bald cliff the wagon was halted briefly, and the two men brought forth materials from within, making a hasty fire, and preparing breakfast. Water was given the team also, before the journey was resumed; while during the brief halt the girl was left to do as she pleased. The passage was so narrow, and so diversified by sharp turns, that Miss Donoran, shut in behind the closed cover, could perceive little of its nature. The cliffs arose precipitously on either side, absolutely bare, To the left nothing could be seen but black rock, but on the other side an open space yawned, perhaps twenty feet across, its bottom imperceptible. The horses stumbled over the rough stones, held only by Moore's firm grip on the reins, and the light began to fade as they descended. At last nothing appeared above but a narrow strip of sky, and the glimmer of sun had totally vanished. Almost at the same moment the driver released the creaking brake, and at a trot the wagon swept forward between two pinnacles of rock, and came out into an open valley.

The transition was so sudden and startling as to cause the girl to give utterance to a cry of surprise. They were in a green, watered valley, a clear stream wandering here and there

HIGH-CLASS HORSES NEEDED

No Provision Made for Future by Many Farmers Who Are Using Up Their Work Stock.

The thing most needed in the production of work horses for American farms is greater care in the selection of the stallion and the brood mare, say animal husbandry experts of the United States department of agriculture, who have been studying the present situation with respect to horses. Not only was there a net decrease of approximately 373,000 in the number of horses on farms on January 1, compared with a year ago, but the experts are of the opinion that there has been an even more marked decrease in the number of mares bred during 1919. The extent of this decrease cannot be accurately determined until the colt crop of 1920 is estimated. However, if the decline in breeding is as great as conditions now indicate, the country will be confronted with a seriously depleted supply of good horses within the next few years.

Many farmers are using up their work stock without making any provision for the future. Such a policy is short-sighted and will have serious results, according to department of agricultur, representatives. The present need is to increase the percentage of efficient horses by careful selection of parents. One of the principal factors from which the market is suffering is the breeding of too many lowgrade work animals. There is a strong demand for high-class horses, at good prices, the department says.

Information Shows That 59,547 Carcasses of Cattle Were Condemned on Inspection.

Tuberculosis was responsible for the condemnation of more cattle, slaughtered under federal meat inspection last year, than all other diseases comof animal industry, United States department of agriculture, shows that 59.547 carcasses of cattle were condemned on post-morten inspection and of that number 37,600 were the result of tuberculosis. In addition 53,652 parts of cattle carcasses were condemned for the same cause.

The bureau points out that tuberculosis in cattle and hog cholera in swine are the two most serious contaglous diseases affecting meat animals, and there is evidence that a heavy loss occurs on farms in addition to condemnations at establishments where government inspection is maintained. The department of agriculture is prepared to give information on the best methods of reducing the

MORE HOGS WERE IMMUNIZED

Chief Purpose of Inspection Is to Permit Reshipment to Farms and Feed Yards.

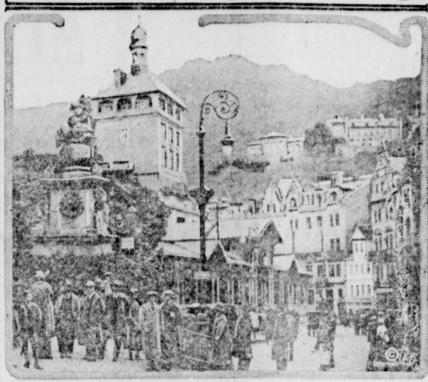

An outstanding feature of federal activities for the control of hog cholera during the last year was the great increase in the number of swine immunized so that they might be distributed from public stockyards for purposes other than slaughter. The last report of the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, gives the number of feed hogs immunized as 614,673. This is a large increase over the preceding the boiling point. Autocracy was year. The chief purpose of the inspection and inoculation is to permit reshipment to farms and feeding resentation from Austria, Prussia, and yards for further growth or fattening without danger to herds in which they are introduced.

SHEEP DOGS IN QUARANTINE

Examination Showed Many of Imported Animals Were Infested With Various Parasites.

Because of the danger to live stock. especially sheep, of the gid tapeworm, imported sheep dogs are subjected to federal quarantine. Sheep dogs have been found to harbor that parasite. During the last fiscal year representatives of the United States department of agriculture examined 131 imported sheep dogs for the presence of parasites transmitted to live stock, and 69 were found to be infested with parasites of various kinds. Twentytwo showed the presence of tapeworms, and one of the tapeworms expelled by treatment proved to be of the dangerous gid variety.

Scene in Karlovy Vary.

vertised health resort awoke one morning to find its postoffice changed from Carlsbad, Austria, to Karlovy Vary, Czecho-Slovakia, the mental shock to the German inhabitants must have been somewhat like the occasional explosions of its hidden wells, from which its famous mineral waters come, says a bulletin of the National Geographic society.

Though it is located in Bohemia, the Englishman had introduced afternoon tea, and the American had made tennis popular, but the 17,000 permanent residents, who remained in Carlsbad after the annual influx of some 70,000 visitors, were essentially German, and Karlovy Vary remains so, according to the press reports.

Hence it is easy to understand how this island of Germans, under Czech rule, approached a political boiling point. Dispatches told of open display of Emperor Franz Joseph's portrait, and of the refusal of the native sons, who live by means of the saline waters and salt derivatives, to call Carlsbad by any other name. Discovered by Charles IV.

Traditions had it, and the inhabitants preferred to believe, that Emperor Charles IV. discovered the healing power of the waters that gush through the vents of the mammoth lid chances to get to the top," he continthat nature clapped down over a ued. Among bined. Information from the bureau these, some physicians intimate, the health hunters gained the rosy cheeks and buoyant spirits for which the springs receive overmuch credit.

It is just before the Tepel enters the Eger that the underground streams pierce the crust at numerous points, and furnish the waters used for bathing and drinking by those who could afford to go there; and either bottled or boiled down by the millions of gallons, for its salt and soda content, and shipped to all quarters of the globe.

During the season at pre-war Carlsbad the guest at any of the numerous hotels would be awakened at 6 o'clock, or even earlier, and would arise to join the procession toward the springs. At a popular one, such as the Sprudel, from which flow 440 gallons of water a minute, at a temperature of 163 degrees, Fahr., he might have to wait 15 or 20 minutes until a whitecapped maid served him. For his protection, large glass covers were erected over many of the springs, and from an airplane Carlsbad might resemble a field

But to linger too long among the springs of Carlsbad is to miss its history. Here there is a grim sort of symbolism. For it was here, just 100 years ago last August, that Metternich plotted to clamp down the lid upon free speech, free press, and untrammeled teaching in the German states.

Origin of the "Carlsbad Decrees." There were signs that liberal agitation among Germans was reaching threatened. Prince Metternich of Austria arranged to have sympathetic repseven other states of the German confederation at Carlsbad, and then called them together in a hurry, under pretext of need for summary action.

Out of the conference came the famous "Carlsbad Decrees," and there can be little doubt but that the tinder for the world explosion in 1914 was lighted at Carlsbad. There was formulated the policy, later carried to a relentless conclusion by the German empire, of press censorship, of state regulation of teaching in universities and all other schools, and a commission was created to inquire into utterances opposed to the monarchical principle which every German state was pledged to maintain.

Only sixteen years before Metternich sonceived this method of political reression, Carlsbad was nearly blown up by the forces beneath the crusted urface. Now, to quote a traveler, "The most dangerous portions are firmly battoned down, under solid masonry, held together with iron and steel,

In the vicinity were porcelain works, and the shopper of the days when the wealth and fashion of three continents gathered there might purchase Bohemian glass and beautiful trinkets of many kinds, representing the Czech handicraft.

MOURN OVER LOST CHANCES

Few Who Do Not Claim to Have Had Great Opportunities, and Lost Them.

In an article in People's Magazine Hugh S. Fullerton tells of millions of dollars' worth of ideas running to "I'd rather have the idea I failed to follow up than the ones I made my money out of." That was said to me by a man who ranks among the wealthlest in the country and who is credited, among his associates, with almost supernatural wisdom in evolving ideas and seeing their possibilities. "Every man had one or more big yarn of an opportunity that you had, and overlooked, and then listen to them. Chances are every one of them will have a better story of lost opportunity than you told, and nine out of ten of them will tell a wonderful story of how some other man 'stole' their great ideas and got rich or famous from them. Examine into these stories and you will find, in the majority of cases, that the man who claims to have originated the idea did not do it at all, that he did not see the possibilities of it, or that, even if he did, he was not smart enough or lacked the initiative to follow it up.

There are more chances for men to get rich now than there ever were before in the history of the world, and more big chances being overlooked. Whether it is because men lack faith in themselves or because they prefer a humming bird in the hand to an eagle in the air, I don't know. They seem to think a man must be a supergenius or a great inventor."

I reminded him that he had a reputation as an originator, as an inventor and genius, in addition to being a successful organizer.

"Bunk," he asserted. "I do not claim to have originated anything. My success has been due to seeing the possibilities of an idea and working out the details so as to apply the idea to practical business. Probably a thousand men thought of the same things I did before I was born, and did not develop them. Some of my most successful ideas probably were talked over and dreamed over by hundreds who failed to work them out practically."

Insect Idiot.

Scientists tell us that when a grasshopper catapults his corporate self into space by the propulsive power of his hinged hopping poles he has no idea where he is going to light. It may be in the lake or the brush fire or the kerosene can or the pansy bed; it is all the same to him. Examine his countenance. He looks the perfect fool: At the top of the head two bulging eyes as expressive as the eye of a dead carp; and below this is a nose like a wooden plowshare. This is all. There is no forehead, no brain and no room for one. The grasshopper, we find, is an insect idiot. The best he ever did was to keep out from under the foot of his betters .- Minneapolis Journal.
