White Stone Mountain looming through the blackness in the background, fiery cross burns over the ceremonies as 450 men are initiated into the Ku Klux Klan in Atlanta, Ga. About 2000 clansmen and several thousand spectators watched the well-advertised rites. Grand Dragon Samuel Green axed the gathering, telling the white-robed Klansmen the South would fight "Yankee" attempts to enforce racial equality.

NEBRASKA HAS LAKE AND CORNHUSKERS SEE POSSIBILITIES

OGALLALA, Neb. (UP) — No one has been trying to keep it a secret, but there is a lake a few miles from this town that many people, including Nebraskans, don't know about.

The situation may be changed one of these days. There are people who think the lake can become the "playground of the Middle-west," thereby enabling the Cornhusker state to cash in on one of the tourist eras.

Lake McConaughy, which measures 55 square miles, was built for work. Its purpose is to irrigate farm land. Now some people think there is no reason why gay-shirted vacationers should not frolic on its sandy beaches.

Eastland Plays Weatherford Here Sunday

Eastland lost a baseball game Sunday to Mineral Wells at Mineral Wells by a score of 4 to 1. It is stated that there was not an earned run by either team, but that the game was hard fought.

Eastland will play Weatherford Sunday afternoon at Eastland.

STEVENSON-JOHNSON MAJOR RACE IN AUGUST RUNOFF

DALLAS, Tex. July 26 (UP) — Former Gov. Coke R. Stevenson and U. S. Rep. Lyndon B. Johnson today faced a runoff campaign for the U. S. Senate seat being vacated by W. Lee O'Daniel.

Returns to the election bureau showed Stevenson with a comfortable lead over Johnson, but not the majority for nomination without a runoff.

Gov. Beauford H. Jester had an apparent majority in his bid for a second term.

In other statewide races, one upset loomed. Associate Justice of the Supreme Court W. St. John Garwood, an appointee of Jester, appeared headed for defeat at the hands of a politically "unknown" Austin attorney, Jefferson G. Smith.

The Election Bureau's latest tabulation on the Senate race gave Stevenson 409,272; Johnson 339,853.

Supreme Court — Garwood

Prominent among those who think so is Mrs. Marcella Allen of Lincoln. As secretary of the Nebraska Reclamation Association, he first love is irrigation, but she also plugs for anything else she thinks might develop the state.

She, therefore, does not hesitate to spread the word about Lake McConaughy. She doesn't care how many people get in on the ground floor of what may be a new Nebraska industry.

Construction on the dam that holds back waters of McConaughy was started in 1936. It was completed in 1941. The lake grew up during the war when the people had other things to think about. As a result, Mrs. Allen says, not enough people are aware of Big McConaughy's recreational potential.

The word has got around to some, however. One Sunday not long ago 10,000 cars were counted around the lake. The state fish and game commission reports that four tons of crappies were fished out of the clear, blue water in a single day.

"All this happened without advertising," Mrs. Allen points out. "And with practically no accommodations for tourists."

One eating place is located on the lake, Mrs. Allen says. It seats 11. The day the 10,000 cars were counted, a man who sells bait had 2,000 customers. Mrs. Allen says things like that cause business.

Kleiner Pool And Kirk Pool Wells Watched

Two large wells, one in the Kleiner pool in the northwestern part of the county, the other in the Kirk pool along the Eastland-Comanche border, were the highlights of oil development during the past week.

The Lone Star Producing Company's producer on the Kincaid struck almost as thick a pay sand as in the discovery well near 350 feet of the Mississippi lime was found and the new well is reported as having pumped over 300 barrels, which is even better than the first one. This flow was through choke; under the boom-day procedure of wide-open flow, oil men declare it would make several thousand barrels a day. The new producer in the No. 4 Kincaid.

One of the best in recent weeks in the Kirk pool is the No. 1 Sanders of the W. B. Johnson Drilling Co. of Longview, which produced 305 barrels in 15 barrels through a 20-64 choke.

Coast Oil Corp's No. 1 H. H. Richardson and No. 1 G. Bell, both in Kirk; Ryan, Hays & Burke No. 1 J. W. Rushing, Marble Falls test, two miles north-east of Desdemona; Phillips Petroleum Co., No. Rea, Ellenburger test, two miles northwest of Sedwick in Shackelford County; J. D. Sanderfer, Jr. No. 1 W. W. Allen, Blake Caddo field, four miles east of Cross Cut, in Brown County; B. F. Phillips No. 1 E. L. Findley B. wildcat, four and one-half miles northwest of Putnam, in Callahan County.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris will leave tonight for San Angelo to be with the family and attend the last rites.

Vet Insurance Reinstatement Deadline August 1

This is the last week for reinstatement of lapsed National Service Life Insurance on a "comparative health" basis, Scott B. Harrington, Manager of the Dallas, Texas Veterans Administration Regional Office reminded veterans.

Before August 1, an eligible veteran may reinstate any amount of term insurance—from $1,000 to $10,000, in multiples of $500—regardless of the length of time it has been lapsed, and usually without a physical examination.

He need only fill out a simple application form, in which he certifies that his health is as good as when the policy lapsed, and pay premiums for two months.

The privilege of reinstating on this basis will be available after July 31 only to veterans whose policies have been lapsed for less than three months. Where the period of lapse is three months or longer, the veteran will be required a physical examination and qualify as an insurable risk.

Body Of Lost Flyer Found; Funeral Wed.

Mrs. J. H. Goodrun of Ranger has received word that the body of her grand-nephew Jaes P. Rust who has been missing since December 3, 1947 has been found in the wreckage of his plane on Thomas Mountain in California.

The body was found Saturday and funeral services will be held Wednesday in San Bernardino, California.

At the time of the crash, Rust who was a student flyer was on a solo flight from San Bernardino to San Diego. An intensive search at the time was fruitless.

The flyer formerly resided in Ranger and Eastland and his wife who survives him is the former Ina Faye Norris of Carbon.

Other survivors are his father, a four year old son, a sister, Mrs. Doyle Flynn, all of San Bernardino and a brother, Virgil Rust who is in the Navy.

Eastland Man Killed

According to reports received in Eastland by the Eastland county sheriff's office Sunday afternoon, Sam Garrett of Eastland, was accidentally killed Sunday at Odessa.

Chigger Curs Recommended LINGOLN, Neb. (UP) —Don't scratch that chigger bite but try fingernail polish. The polish cures the itch and dries up the bite, according to O.S. Bare, entomologist at the University of Nebraska.

Acetone in the polish has the same effect as a salve on a burn, he said.

CONTESTED RACES ARE ALL SETTLED

The votes cast in Eastland County Saturday in the Democratic primary, had not all been tabulated Saturday morning. In fact one or two small boxes with not more than 50 or 75 votes were unreported.

According to the best information available this morning the contested County and district races in the County were all definitely settled.

Judge Geo. L. Davenport, incumbent, won over his opponent Earl Conner, Jr., by at least 150 votes.

Allen D. Dabney will go into a run-off with Cecil C. Collings for Associate Justice of Eleventh Court of Civil Appeals, Courtney Gray, incumbent, having been the third man in the race.

Sheriff Williams is leading his opponent Jack White by at least 379 votes.

County Judge P. L. Crossley is leading his opponent Claborn Eldridge by better than 350 votes. Billie Mac Jobe of Baird defeated both of his opponents, R. L. Pearson, incumbent of Ranger, and Charles H. Dawson of Cross Plains, in the race for Floral Representative of Eastland and Callahan counties.

Turner Collie of Eastland, incumbent, was an easy winner over his opponent, Millard Slaughter of Cisco.

For Justice of the Peace of the Eastland Precinct E. E. Wood, incumbent, defeated J. W. Cooper Dug. Barton, present incumbent, defeated C. C. Street for Constable of the Eastland precinct.

Planes Prepare For Maneuvers Over Berlin

LONDON July 26, (UP)—Sixteen newly-arrived American jet planes were being readied today for high altitude interception maneuvers over Germany. A group of B-29 superfortresses will participate.

The 16 jets from the 56th fighter group at Selfridge Field, Mich., landed at the American Air Force base here, near Munich, yesterday afternoon, completing the flight that began in the U. S. 13 days ago. The last leg of the flight was made from Odiham, England.

Tile stoves, popular throughout northern Europe, were in use in Germany as early as the 14th century.

Special Session Of Congress Convened Today

WASHINGTON, July 26, (UP)—The GOP controlled 80th Congress convened in extra session at President Truman's call today, ready to give the President a firm "no" on meat rationing and price controls.

House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., and Senate President Arthur Vandenberg called the two houses into session at noon, EDT., after a leadership meeting to lay out the Republican plan of action.

The President will appear tomorrow before a joint meeting of House and Senate to deliver in person his legislative requests for an anti-inflation program and other laws he considers necessary now.

Mr. Truman invited Democratic leaders from each house to come to his office for a preview of his message. He expected to complete the final draft during the day and show it to four Democratic senators and four Democratic representatives at 3:30 P. M.

Despite an expected request for them by the President there was little prospect the Republicans would permit the return of rationing and price controls.

Powers Discuss New Approach Toward Moscow

LONDON July 26, (UP)—High level representatives of the United States, Great Britain and France discussed a new approach to Moscow today at possibly the most crucial three-power meeting since the breakup of the foreign ministers council last December.

Top diplomats talked for more than an hour in the office of Sir William Strang, Foreign Undersecretary.

The three western powers must decide whether the new approach should be made personally by their ambassadors or some other high representatives, or by a further exchange of notes.

A foreign office spokesman said no final draft of a new note to Moscow had been approved.

Canada Probes Plane Crash

RIMOUSKI, Canada, July 26 (UP)—Department of transportation officials began an investigation today into the crash of a twin-engine DC-3 airliner on Gaspe Peninsula, killing 26 persons, including 22 vacation-bound lumberjacks. It was the worst air tragedy in Dominion history.

EMBARGO PUT ON ALL RAIL SHIPMENTS EXCEPT MAIL

BERLIN, July 26, (UP)—The American and British military governments today sealed the borders of their occupation zones in Western Germany against railway traffic into or out of the Russian Zone.

The Anglo-American embargo on rail shipments destined for or coming from Soviet-occupied Germany was one of the most drastic measures employed by the west in the crisis over the Russian blockade of Berlin.

The Western Powers attributed their action to "technical difficulties." That was the reason given by the Soviets when they clamped their land blockade on Berlin.

Maj. Gen. Charles Gross, deputy chief of transportation for the Anglo-American area of Western Germany, sent a message to transportation officers which said "Due to technical difficulties, bi-zonal authorities cannot in August accept for movement across the United States and United Kingdom, zone railway traffic, exclusive of mail, originating in or terminating in the Soviet Zone."

The order in effect cut the Russian zone all forms of surface transportation also traversing the western zones. Barge traffic has been paralyzed for weeks. Thirty-four barges bound for Berlin from the west were being held up by the Russians, and 24 Soviet craft were interned in the British Zone.

The new rail embargo automatically cancelled out the shipment of more than 70,000 tons to the Soviet zone, scheduled for early August. The bulk was from Italy. Return shipments from the East included 30,000 tons of coal for Switzerland and 15,000 tons of Minerals and miscellaneous cargo for Italy.

Ranger Police Locate Run-Away McCamey Girl

Through the efforts of Ranger police a 16 year old McCamey girl enroute to her home with her mother after having run away from her home during the weekend.

Chief W. G. Pounds stated this morning that the father of the girl called him Sunday and stated that he believed the girl to be here. After a check it was learned that the girl had been here but had gone on to Dallas.

Ranger police located the girl there and her mother who had come to Ranger went on to Dallas this morning to return the girl to her home.

Yugoslavia Still Pro-Soviet

BELGRADE, July 26 (UP)—Yugoslavia will continue its "anti-imperialist" pro-Soviet policy without change despite the attack by the Cominform. Vice Premier Eduard Kardelj told the Communist Party Congress today.

FORT WORTH LIVESTOCK Cattle 4,000. Active to slow and weak. Medium and good slaughter steers and yearlings 25-33. Common 20 down. Medium and good beef cows 17-23. Bulls 16-22.50. Stocker and feeder steers and yearlings 27 down.

Hogs 1,000. Strong to unevenly higher. Good and choice slaughterers mostly 25-27.20. Common and medium 17.50-24. Stocker and feeder steers 28 down.

Somebody must have said something funny, as Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, left, and Republican candidate Gov. Thomas E. Dewey met at Dewey's Pawling, N. Y., farm. The conference was "non-political," but both men agreed that America "must stand with absolute firmness in Berlin."

WASHINGTON COLUMN

80th Congress' UN Support Leaves Much to Be Desired BY PETER EDSON NEA Washington Correspondent WASHINGTON—(NEA)—What the last Congress did to the United Nations was both good and bad. Congressmen still view UN with fishy eyes. Most important favorable action was Senate passage of the Vandenberg resolution, reaffirming U. S. intent to work for peace through UN. Being just a Senate action not requiring a vote by the House nor signing by the President, the Vandenberg resolution is not law. But it is an important policy statement. It backs up the President, State Department and U. S. mission to UN. Ultimate revision of the UN charter is cautiously called for by the Vandenberg resolution if other voluntary means for ending use of the veto on international dispute cases and admission of new members do not prove successful. Main purpose of the Vandenberg resolution, however, is to let the world know that the Senate is behind all efforts to promote regional security pacts and disarmament, while at the same time strengthening the United Nations world police force.

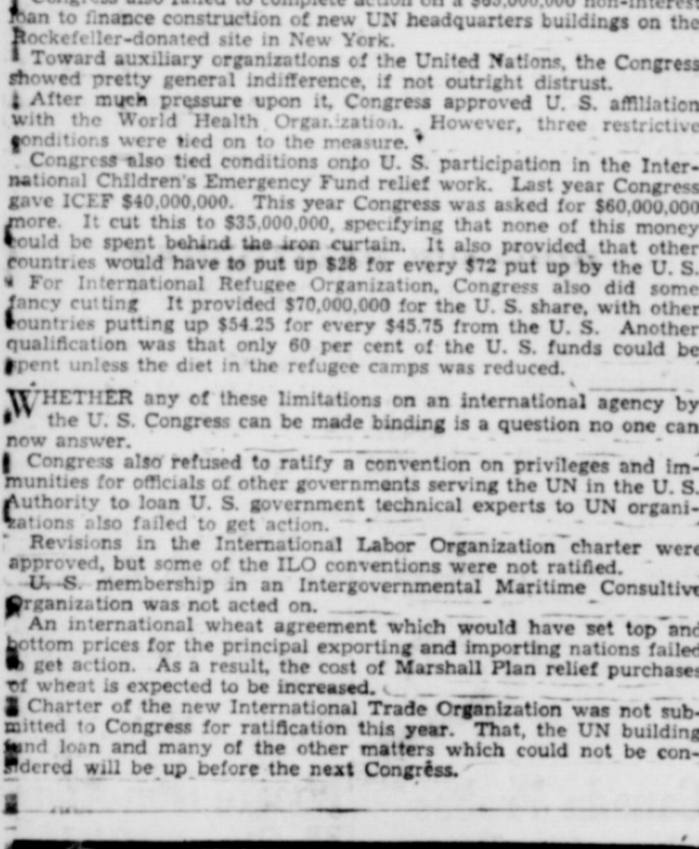

Marathoner, Cows Disrupt Traffic READING, Mass. (UP)—Clarence DeMar is hailed as "Old Man Marathon" because he is a perennial competitor and seven-time winner of the famed Boston A. A. road race. He finally has found a way to put his endurance racing to use—catching cows. DeMar has a suburban farm here and owns two cows. Deciding to take a vacation he found a farmer willing to take care of his livestock. The only catch was that DeMar must deliver the cows to a Wilmington farm. DeMar captured the cows and set off down a highway on foot with the pair in tow. An automobile roared past and one cow snapped its chain and set off across the countryside. DeMar lit out and effected a capture. A short distance along the road, a car came past and the cow galloped off. Twice more it happened and finally traffic on the road became so entangled with cows and DeMar the police escorted the safari to Wilmington.

Nobody Loves Forever

THE STORY: David tells Jessica he loves her. She can't still the beating of her heart. "There's another word more important than love—loyalty," she replies. Then suddenly she is telling him all about her hasty marriage and its consequences. "You made a mistake, Jessica," David insists. "You took a schoolgirl infatuation for love." He asks if he may kiss her. city. From time to time David bent across Betsy to meet Jessica's glance. "Sorry?" he asked. She shook her head. No, she was not sorry. Her heart still held a touch of the heady happiness which had warmed her under David's kiss. She let her fingers cling to his as they drove slowly through the gathering dusk. It was wonderful to be happy, to be loved and cherished, to forget a future which before had loomed threatening and dark with apprehension. But the carefree mood had lasted only under the spell of David's smile. When he had driven away and Jessica turned to walk with Betsy up the steps of the old gray house where she had lived since Tom went away and left her, the afternoon seemed like a dream. As the door closed behind her and she stood in the cold dark hallway she felt imprisoned again, beset by doubts and low-spirited. Betsy said practically, "I want my supper." "You've had your supper, baby." Lucy opened the kitchen door and said, "Where were you? I was worried." Jessica removed Betsy's bonnet and coat. She followed Lucy through the kitchen door. Lucy bustled about making hot tea, saying that her mother had gone to church and that she had stayed at home believing they might return chilled and hungry. Lucy will be hurt when I tell her I plan to leave Tom, thought Jessica, with a touch of irritation at her own sense of guilt. Why should I bother about what Lucy thinks? I'm young. I've a right to happiness. Lucy said, "Drink your tea." Jessica pushed the cup away. "I've had my lunch." She hurried on to explain, "We met David Gregory in the park and he insisted that we take a ride. Betsy loved it."

RECORD of the last Congress falls short of this goal. Congress provided enough money—over $13,000,000—for the U. S. share of UN expenses. It provided another million plus for pay of the U. S. mission to the UN—now numbering 188. Congress failed, however, to authorize appointment of another U. S. deputy to serve on the Security Council with Ambassador Austin and Dr. Philip C. Jessup. Congress also failed to complete action on a $85,000,000 non-interest loan to finance construction of new UN headquarters buildings on the Rockefeller-donated site in New York. Toward auxiliary organizations of the United Nations, the Congress showed pretty general indifference, if not outright distrust. After much pressure upon it, Congress approved U. S. affiliation with the World Health Organization. However, three restrictive conditions were tied on to the measure. Congress also tied conditions onto U. S. participation in the International Children's Emergency Fund relief work. Last year Congress gave ICEF $40,000,000. This year Congress was asked for $60,000,000 more. It cut this to $35,000,000, specifying that none of this money could be spent behind the iron curtain. It also provided that other countries would have to put up $28 for every $72 put up by the U. S. For International Refugee Organization, Congress also did some fancy cutting. It provided $70,000,000 for the U. S. share, with other countries putting up $4.25 for every $45.75 from the U. S. Another qualification was that only 60 per cent of the U. S. funds could be spent unless the diet in the refugee camps was reduced. WHETHER any of these limitations on an international agency by the U. S. Congress can be made binding is a question no one can now answer. Congress also refused to ratify a convention on privileges and immunities for officials of other governments serving the UN in the U. S. Authority to loan U. S. government technical experts to UN organizations also failed to get action. Revisions in the International Labor Organization charter were approved, but some of the ILO conventions were not ratified. U. S. membership in an intergovernmental Maritime Consultative Organization was not acted on. An international wheat agreement which would have set top and bottom prices for the principal exporting and importing nations failed to get action. As a result, the cost of Marshall Plan relief purchases of wheat is expected to be increased. Charter of the new International Trade Organization was not submitted to Congress for ratification this year. That, the UN building loan and many of the other matters which could not be considered will be up before the next Congress.

FUNNY BUSINESS

THE SCOREBOARD

Senior Circuit Race Is Open; Braves Haven't Cinched Flag BY JIM O'LEARY NEA Staff Correspondent (Pinch-hitting for NEA Sports Editor Harry Grayson, who is en route to London to report the Olympic Games.) NEW YORK—(NEA)—Old-timers can now tell the pennant winners simply by the Fourth of July rule. But not this department. It's all too confusing. Take the senior circuit, for example. The Boston Nationals, leading the crop, should be a shoe-in. Pitchers Johnny Sain, Bill Voiselle and Lefty Warren Spahn are breezing along. Veteran rightfielder Tommy Holmes, rookie shortstop Al Dark and leftfielder big Jeff Heath are hitting. Catcher Phil Nease, Dark, second baseman Eddie Stanky and his understudy Connie Ryan, plus centerfielder Jim Russell have given the Braves defensive strength up the middle where it counts most. The bats of first sacker Earl Torgerson and third baseman Bill (Most Valuable Player) Elliott are sure to get hotter. The leadership couldn't be better. Everyone knows what Billy Southworth did in St. Louis back in 1942-43-44. What else does a club need? BUT that's the catch. Eddie Stanky, the infield spark, is gone for 60 days. That takes the club into mid-September with Connie Ryan, a capable enough second sacker, plugging the gap. The Pirates—maybe. Too much may depend on the batting strength of outfielder Ralph Kiner. Fritz Ostermuller, 41 come World Series time, is carrying a terrific mound load. But you can't count the Pirates out when they still hover around second place annoyingly. Wonder Man Musial and the other hustling Red Birds are appreciated at home, and respected the league over. Manager Eddie Dyer says, "If I can keep my regulars in the lineup and get a little more pitching help, we'll be tough to beat." The Giants seem to have made their bid. The Polo Grounders are limping along on catcher Walker Cooper's bad leg with no pitchers to support the bats of Whip Kids Bobby Thomson and Whitey Lockman, both outfielders, to say nothing of home-run clouting first baseman Johnny Mize. And just when everyone was giving up on Brooklyn including the legendary Dodger fans—wham! Apparently Manager Leo Durocher has found a line-up that will suit him two days in a row. Now that everyone knows what type of glove to take onto the field, the Braves are on the move. So while things look very bright up in Beantown and the Hub is getting to be a National League town for the first time since Stallings' Miracle Club of 1914, the pennant still isn't in the bag. The race is on and it will be fun to watch.

Explorers Seek Remains Of Noah's Ark

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (UP)—Fred Avery, a model shipbuilder, is going to eastern Turkey to hunt for Noah's Ark. He wants to make a model of it.

Avery fashions ship models for the U. S. Navy Academy here and is known unofficially as commander of the academy museum's "fleet." But building navy ships in miniature has begun to pall. Avery wants to make an authentic model of the most famous ship of all—the one that Noah built.

Avery has his passport ready and plans to leave next month on an expedition which he says "has been planned secretly for more than three years."

The employers will head for Mt. Ararat, where the Ark is supposed to have come to rest after the Great Flood.

Avery says the backers of the expedition have "good reasons" to believe they have discovered the petrified remains of the Biblical ship atop the 16,915-foot mountain.

The adventurers hope to reach eastern Turkey next month. Snow and ice cover Mt. Ararat most of the year. Avery explains, and it has been decided that late August or early September would be the best time for the search.

Avery is reluctant to discuss the expedition except to say "There have been a number of reports that there is something up there. It could be Noah's Ark, preserved under the ice and snow all these years and suddenly exposed by an upheaval in the earth. Or for all I know, it could be a house on top of a mountain." But if it is the famous ship, Avery hopes to be on hand to fashion the first authentic model of Noah's Ark.

Nobody Loves Forever
By Margareta Brucker

THE STORY: David's love seems to offer a haven for Jessica, she thinks of leaving Tom. Lucy pleads with her not to hurt Tom but Jessica tells her sister-in-law whatever she does she will love Tom to death. Alone at night she wonders, she remembers how she once loved him. But then she decides that was not love but youthful infatuation. David's love is quite different.

It rained the following day. A dreary, blue Monday with the sky overcast and heavy with threatening clouds. Lucy went off bundled in a raincoat and carrying her umbrella. Jessica watched her from the upper window as she dressed hastily, dreading the meeting with Mrs. Blake.

Betsy still slept. Jessica left the room, closing the door softly behind her, and went downstairs.

The kitchen was warm and smelled of pickles. Mrs. Blake sat slicing cucumbers, a half-bushel basket of them beside her. She looked up sharply but made no comment about Jessica's tardy appearance. Instead she observed, "Genevieve has promised to come over this evening and help me make some relish."

Genevieve Miles was a tall, angular girl who worked in the same office with Lucy. She frowned upon Mrs. Blake and always appeared unexpectedly, bringing some gift of her own making, tea towels imprinted and hemstitched, or fanciful pot holders; and once or twice she came for the day to help with jam and jelly-making. She was quick and deft about kitchen tasks.

The mention of Genevieve usually irritated Jessica. This morning she felt no interest. Let Genevieve come whenever she would, and in the end she might achieve her desire and marry Tom. She would make him a good wife and satisfy his mother.

JESSICA drank her coffee and glanced through the morning paper. There was one caption on

SARA LINTON'S DEBUTANTE BALL COMING SOCIAL EVENT

Sara Linton would be the daughter of Lucy's employer. There was her picture. A thin, homely girl with a long mane of pale hair.

Lucy would receive no invitation to that party, thought Jessica, and then another thought followed. David would. David lived a life apart from the life Jessica spent with the Blake family. She was quite outside Hugh Linton's circle.

She dropped the paper, amazed at her own reaction. David knew Hugh Linton well. How silly to feel a stab of jealousy. Back home in Kentucky she had had an assured social position.

Not here in Akron. The thought stung her.

If she had never married Tom Blake—then she would never have met David, she reminded herself.

Life was so complicated. She looked up and caught her mother-in-law's glance fixed upon her and rose hastily to collect the breakfast dishes. Mrs. Blake said nothing. She worked steadily through the basket of pickles, slicing, chopping, mixing.

The day fell into its usual dull routine.

Jessica tried to fasten her thoughts to the bright high hopes of yesterday but was unsuccessful.

A letter came from Tom announcing that he was at a point of embarkation.

That meant that in the immediate future she would face Tom with the news of her desire for a separation.

MRS. BLAKE thought of nothing but her son's return. She cleaned the things Tom liked best. She cleaned his clothes and hung them on a line in the back yard. Jessica wondered if there were an object in this program of preparation. She and Betsy were moved to the small back room which had been Tom's, and the front room was scoured and scrubbed and repaired.

David called. Jessica had a bad moment as she rushed to answer and then insisted that David time his calls when she was certain that both Lucy and her mother-in-law would be absent. She hated the stealth and secrecy, the subtleties by which they arranged meetings.

Doris kept Betsy whenever Jessica went downtown to meet David, and asked no questions, but even Doris hinted, if only by her manner, that she disapproved and worried.

Sometimes they met in the afternoon over a table at the Mayflower and danced, and Jessica forced herself to forget everything but the spell of the music and David's arm about her. Sometimes they drove far out into the country and sat and talked about their future.

Sometimes her desire to be with David frightened her, and she longed for the time when Tom would come and she could confess that she planned to leave him. Sometimes she was terrified at the thought of Tom's return. She was Tom's wife—suppose he refused to release her?

When she told this to David he laughed at her. "Divorce is a common thing, Jessica," he said. "Lots of couples make mistakes."

"I told Tom that I loved him," she said slowly.

"Nobody loves forever." He stooped to kiss her upturned face. She drew away. "You can't mean that?"

"But I do," he said lightly. "I'm not talking about our love. That's quite different. You've learned by experience that infatuation cannot last."

He went on to talk about the plans he had for their future. The home they would have and the trips they would make together. It's all settled, she thought with a touch of amazement. David talks as though it would be quite simple. Why do I worry about the unpleasantness ahead?

Broken Leg No Barrier To Boy Ballplayer
SUPERIOR, Wis. (UP)—It took more than a broken leg to keep 13-year-old Tommy Loken out of a baseball game.
Tommy broke the leg sliding into second base in a practice game. But the youngster hobbled to the mound three weeks later to pitch his team to a 6-3 victory in an important game.
He also contributed three hits to his club's attack. His only concession to the injury was that a substitute ran for him.

H. Hottenburg of London demonstrates the starting block he invented and his proposed starting style to help athletes in the Olympic Games this summer. The blocks can be moved backward or forward and be set at any required angle.

Nobody Loves Forever
By Margareta Brucker

THE STORY: Tom writes that he is at a point of embarkation. Jessica dreads facing him with the news that she wants a separation. Suppose he refuses to release her? David, whom she has been meeting secretly, push-pokes her fears.

WHENEVER she returned from these meetings with David, Jessica felt an odd sense of guilt and disloyalty to Betsy. Why? Didn't she plan to marry David, not only because she loved him, but because David would be a better father than Tom? He could give Betsy things.

What things? The question mocked her. Money? Social position?

She might have weakened, even then, in her resolution to leave Tom if she hadn't been so irritated by her mother-in-law and Genevieve. Genevieve came often now to consult with Tom's mother about plans for his homecoming. She was helpful, interested.

She asked Jessica, "Aren't you excited?"

Jessica said dryly, "I've lived alone so long it will be queer to have Tom back." Which it would. She dreaded his appearance and started every time the door opened, expecting to see a tall, broad-shouldered man with hair blond like Betsy's and eyes blue-gray like Lucy's.

"Tom may be sent out again," Genevieve suggested.

"Tom has done quite enough for his country," said his mother. "It is time that he took charge of his family now."

Genevieve said innocently, "I suppose Tom will still live here, won't he?"

be she works too hard," she hinted.

DORIS thought the same. "Lucy works like a slave for Hugh Linton," she remarked one day. "Try to stop her," said Jessica, absorbed in her own thoughts and wondering just how to approach Doris on the subject of divorce.

Doris had stubborn ideas about loyalty.

"I plan to leave Tom," Jessica said suddenly. There! It was out. "I thought as much, David Gregory?"

Jessica nodded. "How did you drift into that?" "I didn't drift. Probably fate."

Doris said dryly, "Don't hand me that line. Fate has nothing to do with the mess you'll make of your life if you make not one but two mistakes."

"I love David and he loves me." "You love what David represents," said Doris bluntly. "You love the idea of stepping into the kind of life you led until you met Tom Blake." She shook her Auburn head. "It's no good trying to go back, my girl. Look, you married one man whom you'd known too little, and now you plan to leave him and marry another one whom you know less. Love-making tricked you once—"

"It isn't tricking me, as you put it, into another." Jessica prepared to leave, stung by the accusation in Doris's steady eyes. "I've considered the whole affair. I've refused to run away. I plan to wait and discuss the whole thing calmly with Tom."

"He'll never let you go." "He can't keep me." "He can keep Betsy. Just remember that Tom's a returned serviceman and there will be little sympathy for you when you attempt to leave him for another man and try to separate him from his child. You haven't reckoned with the Blake stubbornness, Jessica."

"If he tries to take Betsy away from me I'll hate him."

Doris shrugged. "Did he listen to your wishes when he left you with his mother and Lucy? Try to oppose Tom and see where it gets you."

"David will find a way," said Jessica confidently.

SHE hurried back across the street and found Betsy seated on the living-room sofa with her fat legs sticking straight out, her blue eyes bright with interest. In her lap lay the picture of her father. At her mother's entrance she looked up. "Daddy!" she said proudly, and lifted the picture and hugged it close.

Mrs. Blake rocked steadily in a chair opposite. "What else?" she asked, with a triumphant gleam in her pale eyes.

"I love Daddy," Betsy said dutifully with her blue eyes fastened upon her grandmother's face.

"That's right," approved Mrs. Blake.

Lucy looked up from her sewing. "What else did you learn?" she asked.

Betsy puzzled for a moment, then repeated in a shrill monotone, "God bless Daddy. Bring him home soon."

Mrs. Blake said, "It's time she learned to say her prayers. Lucy taught her that. I can remember when I taught Tom."

"It's your bedtime, Betsy," said Jessica. "Give me the picture." She reached out a hand, but Betsy clutched her picture. "Daddy," she announced stubbornly.

For the first time Jessica wanted to shake Betsy. In her absence Mrs. Blake had busied herself installing in the child a knowledge of her father. Not because Betsy interested her, thought Jessica angrily, as she dragged the child from the room, but because she guessed this constant talk about Tom maddened me. She used Genevieve, even Lucy, to annoy me with her hints about how happy I should be, how overjoyed at Tom's return. Now she has started with Betsy, filling her mind with ideas and whipping up as interest in someone who means nothing to her.

Model Prison Inmates Distill Their Own
CARACAS, Venezuela (UP)—Jailers in the Caracas model prison discovered that prisoners were operating a home-made liquor still in their cell.
A search was started for the still when officials noted many of the prisoners were frequently drunk. The main still was made out of tin cans, and the men used pineapple syrup plus chewing tobacco as the base for the liquor. Dr. Guillermo Rasquin, prison analyst, said many of the steady customers had stomach ulcers.
