FRIZZELL BOND APPEARS UNLIKELY TO BE MADE

BIG SPRING, Tex., Aug. 6 (UP)—Herbert Paul Frizzell, 34 year old rodeo performer, was scheduled to be released today on bonds totaling $20,000 in the pistol slaying here Thursday night of two men.

Justice of the Peace W. O. Leonard set bonds of $10,000 each in the deaths of Henry (Buck) Jones, 40, Ranger rodeo judge, and Carl C. Myers, 23, Abilene, a Hardin-Simmons University student.

At mid-morning, County Attorney Elton Gilliland said bond had not been made and probably would not be made today. He said the next session of the grand jury will convene early in September. A special grand jury will not be called to consider the case, he said.

Frizzell told County Attorney Elton Gilliland that he had a fist fight with Jones after Jones made disparaging remarks about

Cool Weather Due To Linger

By United Press
The cool spell which has lingered over Texas for a week will hang a little longer, the Dallas Weather Bureau predicted today.

Yesterday was one of the coolest days of the summer in the Big Bend country where the maximum was only 65 degrees at Guadalupe Pass and Marfa.

Overnight, the mercury dipped to blanket weather with Guadalupe Pass reporting a minimum of 53 degrees. It was 56 early today at Salt Flat, 58 at Van Horn, Amarillo and Dalhart, 59 at Presidio and El Paso, 72 at Dallas and 74 at Brownsville. Most readings this morning were in the 60s or low 70s.

Yesterday's high was 95 degrees at Laredo but Persidio, usually a hot spot, had a maximum of only 78 degrees.

Rainfall was scattered. Here are some of the reports: Beaumont .62 inch; Ozona .60; Austin and Corpus Christi .25, and Persidio .16.

Couple Held Here Cleared In Murder Case

Paul Weaver, 30, and his wife, Frances Weaver, 23, were released by the Eastland County Sheriff's office Friday morning, after they had been cleared as possible suspects in the murder of Tex Thornton in Amarillo.

Sheriff J. B. Williams said fingerprint and pictures sent to Amarillo and Texas Department of Public Safety officials at Austin, revealed the couple had no connection with the crime.

Weaver received a $50 check from his mother, which was used by the couple to purchase gasoline and other necessities in which to leave town.

They were arrested by City Police the night of July 27 when the man was seen siphoning gas line from a Texas-New Mexico Busline bus, near the Eastland Bus Station.

They entered pleas of guilty to misdemeanor theft before Justice of the Peace E. E. Wood and were fined $25 and costs. They were serving out their fine, while authorities check possible connection with the Amarillo murder.

Legion Would Curb Communism

FORT WORTH, Aug. 6 (UP)—Two drastic proposals to curb Communist influence in this nation were weighed today by members of the American Legion.

They were issued yesterday at the opening of the department's 31st state convention by Past National commander Alvin Owsley of Dallas.

Saying that America can not have dealings with Communist Russia, Owsley proposed:

1. To close the nation's doors to all foreigners, including displaced persons.

2. Limit nationals of Communist satellite nations in the United States to be same number of Americans they allow in their countries.

The current national commander, Perry Brown of Beaumont, also touched on Communism. He told 5,000 delegates that Communists are not afraid of our professional military service, but do fear our potential strength.

Brown said the United States' potential strength lies in physically fit civilians, trained to be ready in time of emergency.

Gov. Allan Shivers spoke to the Legionnaires last night and reviewed accomplishments of the newly appointed state Youth Development Council.

PACT DEFENSE ORGANIZATION TO BE SPEEDED

By Haynes Thompson
United Press Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Aug. 6 (UP)—The U. S. Chiefs of Staff today wound up a whirlwind series of conferences with Western Europe's top military commanders and pronounced their mission "most successful."

Army Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Admiral Louis Denfeld and Air Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg met Belgian, Dutch and Portuguese commanders here today in the last of their talks with America's European partners in the Atlantic Treaty.

From Paris they will fly to Vienna to inspect American installations in Austria, then return to Washington to report to President Truman.

The three chiefs of staff came to Europe to discuss organizational and other problems connected with the Atlantic Treaty's pledge of mutual defense against aggression.

Denfeld told newsmen on the half of his colleagues that the trip had been "most successful."

"We have met with chiefs of staffs from nine countries since our arrival in Europe," he said.

"We have been able to exchange views and get each other's views on military organization of the Atlantic Pact. But we have made no decisions nor come up with any final opinions."

"As a result, we are able to return home and advise our government on the military aspects of the pact."

Denfeld said he and his colleagues had found "a great unanimity of opinion in almost every incidence and a very friendly atmosphere."

He said he saw nothing that would stand in the way of completing the Atlantic Pact defense organization before the end of the year.

Although Denfeld insisted that the conferences dealt only with organizational problems, informed sources in London said the Americans sought assurances that pact nations which receive projected grants of American arms would use them only within the pact area and for specified purposes.

The American chiefs of staff also were said to have urged a high degree of centralization of command. Norway and Denmark objected in part, it said, because they doubted the wisdom of weak ening Scandinavia by any obligation to send forces, for example, to help Italy and Portugal.

At the same time, however, all participating in the talks were understood to have agreed that there should be regional commands under the over-all staff. These might be Scandinavia, the Brussels Pact area and the Mediterranean.

The last round of talks began this morning in the U. S. embassy here. The Portuguese chiefs of staff still were in the conference room when newsmen were invited in to ask questions. The Portuguese took no part in the press conference, however, except to say that the question of Spain's ultimate admission to Atlantic Alliance was not discussed.

Your Insurance and Your Future —
... are all bound up together. The family who keeps adequately insured is not only wise but thrifty since insurance provides protection for the thrifty dollar. If loss occurs in the household of the uninsured his life's savings may be wiped out, but not so with the insured man. To be thrifty and wise, be insured. And the less we have the more it is a part of wisdom to guard against financial destruction.

ISLAND OF ESCAPE

By Hugh Lawrence Nelson

THE STORY: Stranded by fire and a dynamic explosion without shelter and very little food on Spear Island, eight persons who come to Henry George Harding's "New Eden" face a future made of their own making. There is also a murderer in their midst who has struck once, possibly twice. George Bascombe has seized the only rifle and declared himself "king." He is well prepared for what has happened. Mollie Stark asks to be his "queen" and George asks the others to surrender necessities from him.

XXXII
BY the time Bea reached the shelter again, the bits of smoking wood had been thrust into the pile of kindling. Mabel and Harding crouched beside it, trying to coax the red glow into flame.

In a few moments the kindling pile was blazing and larger pieces of wood were added.

It was obvious from Sillwell's breath he had barked for whiskey, too. Even though he had probably hidden it on the trail somewhere, wash the blazing of the comforting fire no one mentioned the fact.

"George's got himself a cozy little establishment down there," Fred said. He looked at Nona and smiled. "Two fires going, and Mollie outside trying to roast a slab of mutton. She doesn't act very pleased."

"How'd he cut up a sheep?" Bea asked.

"George has a big sheath knife. George has matches. George is dry and comfortable inside the cave working on the whiskey." Sillwell looked around the circle of faces and put their thoughts into words. "In fact it looks to me like George was pretty well prepared for what happened."

ALL that night the fire burned brightly, sizzled occasionally as water leaked through the shelter roof.

At first the fire and the cooking of strips of meat had brought a comfort that found expression in talk. There was speculation about by Sugar. "I'm no good and you do better without me..."

Outwardly she had continued performing her duties in Army Intelligence with sufficient success to be in a position to ask favors of those in high places when she had been returned to civilian life.

Inwardly she schemed and planned. She used any person or means, the way she had been taught by war, to get what she wanted. The correct application of pressure, and she had emerged as a 40-year-old schoolteacher with her maiden name of Bea Cosgrove looking for a home on Spear Island.

Happy Harding would pay. SHE left her rock, walked slowly in the direction of the shelter and fire. She wanted companionship, for the first time in a long while. And she knew there was no one she could trust.

"Hey!" She jumped at the call, whirled quickly to face Fred Sillwell. He sat in partial shelter of a ledge, with a bottle in his hand. "Come on over," he called. Bea walked toward him slowly, returning with each step to the present on Spear Island.

HOUSE WITNESS — Carl Strandlund, president of the Lustron Corporation, maker of prefabricated steel houses in Columbus, O., may be called to testify before the House Banking and Currency Committee investigating huge government loans to the company. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which has granted loans totaling $34,500,000 to Lustron, also were scheduled to testify.

She sniped a piece of meat from the bucket with a stick. She carried it with her out into the mist of day.

SHE walked briskly along the trail toward Fisher's Cove, chewed on her meat and tossed the last bit of gristle aside. Movement took some of the stiffness from her muscles, and the circulation of blood carried away a part of the depression of spirits she had felt with the rest.

A fire burned before the entrance of the cave, but Bea saw neither George Bascombe nor Mollie as she hurried past. Captain Oak had said he would return as soon as possible. Bea wondered if she should believe him, or if his presence in the tunnel that night was a preliminary to the explosion.

Her first sight of the cove told her of the exact truth of Harding's words. Nothing human could live in that broken water. Huge waves swept across the reef with scarcely a check and dashed white thunder against the base of the cliff.

There was no sign of any beach. There was new wreckage caught here and there on cliff projections, tossed into the break in the wall where the trail had led down to sand. Idly, moving cautiously, she poked about in the debris.

"The last of the Gullwing." She found a section of splintered rail with a tightly lashed white circle still in place. She tugged, managed to turn it over so she could read the black lettering of the word Simpatio on the white canvas.

She looked quickly again out over the water, found no reassurance there for her fear. She searched now for bodies among the wreckage. Even when she found none she felt no better.

The clouds opened again in gentle rain. She began retracing her steps slowly. This time when she passed the cave, George Bascombe stood in the entrance while Mollie Stark bent over the cooking fire.

Bea hurried past, did not turn when the man shouted. She was soaking wet, but the rain brought a greater visibility than the mist. She stood on a rock, looked around the island. She shivered.

Fred said proudly. "I said I was emotionally immature. Well I took the trouble to find out a new thing or two about you boys. I arrested his development. He paid plenty. Gave me a good start in business."

"You didn't come to this island by chance did you?"

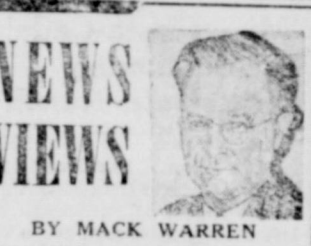

"No? I suppose you think I piled up the Gullwing just for the heck of it?"

"I don't mean that. But the four of you didn't get together by chance and come here."

"I don't mind telling you now. You can get a chance to see what a smart operator I am. We came to the island to make pictures."

BEAUTY IN BERLIN — The American occupation in Germany is leaving its mark. Now the Germans are getting the beauty culture craze. Some 20,000 Berliners flocked to Wannsee Lake Beach in the U. S. sector of the city to see local beauties, like this one, strut their stuff. (Photo by NEA-Acme staff correspondent Charles Chitham.)

A big new gambling casino in Las Vegas will have a fancy six-room nursery and a staff of baby sitters who will keep an eye on the kids while Mom and Pop inspect the gaudy cubes, the bouncing ball and try to draw to an inside straight. If you don't win too much money, you'll probably get your children back; but there's no truth in the rumor the children will be taught to say, "Baby needs a pair of shoes." The children will be kept neat and clean, and, if possible, the folks will be well cleaned too. Any way, it should keep the children and the baby-sitters away from gambling. That's something.

The idea of an Inter-Club Council for Eastland sounds good to me. The Horned Toad Derby proved that all the various clubs can successfully work together on a project too big for one to handle alone and with an organization such as the Inter-Club Council, composed of representatives of various civic and service clubs, a systematic method would be available to put BIG projects over in a BIG way.
