United Press Outdoors Consultant
 Current indications point to a heavy outbreak of trichomoniasis in mourning doves this summer.

State conservation departments are co-operating with one another in the study and investigation of this dread disease among the South's second most important game bird.

The disease usually does not reach peak proportions until late summer, but in Alabama the doves have been dying in alarming numbers.

Current reports now being investigated by Alabama officials indicate that this year's die-off may be even greater than that which occurred last year when the disease took a disastrous toll of doves in 43 of that state's 67 counties.

The extent and full effect of this disease can be determined only if the public is alerted to its symptoms and its threat to one of the section's most important game birds.

Cause of the disease is a parasite known as the Lake Sand Formation, or until production in commercial quantities is encountered at a lesser depth.

4. All bidders shall accompany each bid with a cashier's check in the amount of $500.00, payable to me as Receiver, such deposit to guarantee the carrying out in good faith of all bids submitted, said check to be returned by me in the event the bid submitted is not accepted.

site known as trichomonas gallinae, which forms a large yellowish swelling in the upper part of the dove's throat, making it impossible for the birds to eat properly. A loss of weight ensues and eventual death from starvation follows.

Spokesmen and others who love the mourning dove and are interested in the preservation of this noble bird can help in the intensive study being made of this mortality.

If your activities take you afield, be on the alert for dead or sickly doves and report them immediately to the state Game and Fish Commission at Austin, or your nearest Game Warden.

The feeding habits, brooding characteristics and migratory nature of the dove are disadvantages of extreme seriousness in an outbreak of this kind.

The future of dove hunting in parts of the south, and especially the southeast, appear dark if the full possible effect of this dread disease are realized.

Hot, dry summer weather is having its effect on fishing in north Texas. Early morning and late evening and night fishing are the most effective periods at this time of season, with deep trolling soon to come in for its share of the spotlight.

Deep running lures capable of attaining depths of 30 to 40 feet as well as the metal and leaded trolling lines will soon become popular in deep water lakes.

Miss Betty Wilcox, student in the Ranger Junior College and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Wilcox, Jr., of Cisco has been awarded one of the coveted Opera Scholarships which is sponsored by the Fort Worth Opera Association, affiliated with the Texas Christian University.

While there she will study in the Opera Workshop, under the direction of Mr. Karl Kritz, nationally known musical figure. She will also take part in the productions of opera sponsored by the Fort Worth Opera Association. Miss Wilcox, a graduate of Ranger Junior College, will enter Texas Christian University as a member of the Junior Class beginning with the new semester this fall.

A student of Fred D. Baumgardner, Head of the music Department of Ranger Junior College, Miss Wilcox has appeared in numerous concerts and programs in this area. Her musical background has been thorough and her experience varied.

Miss Wilcox is happy over passing the audition and is looking forward to her matriculation at TCU and the workshop, she says and she hopes to leave the college here and the people.

KILLER'S PACE

BY JULIUS LONG

COPYRIGHT 1951 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Star Williams gets Rose Bidault acquitted of murder by gimmicking a gun, advertised as foolproof against accidents, so that it is accidentally discharged in court. But a camera in the courtroom catches the trick and now Star faces dishonor. Star now must prove Rose innocent to save himself.

By the time I had reached the city it was so hot and stuffy that I almost abandoned my coat and gun. But I'm superstitious about such things. That's why I'm alive to tell about them. So I wore my coat and gun to the Bidault house. The door was locked.

Rose had probably kept on drinking after I left and I knew there was no use to ring the bell. I got out a key ring with some very special keys and the third one did the job.

I went inside and ascended the stairs to the second floor. The condition of the writing desk in Rose's sitting room saved me. When I saw how the contents had been dumped and spilled all over it, I ducked. That's why the gun but merely grazed me, instead of knocking me cold.

I dragged out my automatic. When I hit the floor, I rolled, brought up the pistol and actually held my fire till I made sure I had a case of self-defense. I had, all right. The guy standing there had reversed the revolver in his hand and the muzzle was coming around toward me. I squeezed my trigger three times in very fast style. The guy folded up, the revolver spilling unfired out of his dying hand.

I got to my feet and stared at the prone man. This fellow would never give anybody else any trouble. I walked over and snapped on the light, for there wasn't much sunlight in the room. I took a good look at the party on the floor. I didn't bother to feel for his pulse. I knew he was very dead. I had never seen the man before in my life. He was probably 35, I guessed, middle-sized except for a bushiness of the shoulders. His hair was sandy and cut close, and his nose veered slightly to one side. It looked as if it had been broken. I thought it was possible that the man had been a pug. I wondered if the shooting had awakened Rose Bidault. I walked across her sitting room and peered into her boudoir. I snapped on the light and approached her bed. The shooting hadn't awakened her. Nothing would ever awaken her again. She was as dead as the party out on her sitting room floor.

IT had been done with scissors. They had been rammed through her throat. I don't think she had really known what had hit her. Her eyes were closed; her face was very pale. I felt her wrist. The body had lost some of its warmth.

I went back into the sitting room and looked at the ransacked desk. Rose's handbag lay on the floor. Its contents had been dumped upon the desk. There were the usual cosmetic accoutrements and about $50 in small bills.

I picked up the bills and went back into Rose's boudoir. There was a jewelry box on her dressing table and I left the contents intact, for there was nothing in it but costume jewelry. I supposed Rose had put all her good stuff in storage. There was a watch on her wrist, a pretty good one with diamonds. I removed the watch. I carried it with the bills back to the dead man and stuffed them into his trouser pocket.

I went through his pockets. Aside from a few bills and change in another pocket and a set of keys very similar to my own, there wasn't a sign of identification. I didn't expect to find any initials inside the coat, and I didn't. It took the homicide squad about 20 minutes to get there after I called and they came en masse. Inspector Merica was in charge, which didn't suit me so well, for they never made cops any smarter. There was a sergeant with him, Lew Cost, and it was Cost who answered most of my questions while the fingerprint and photography boys began in a great big way. I knew they would find my fingerprints, for I had left them on the glassware.

"All right," said Merica, when I had finished. "You can drop in at headquarters and sign a statement. So far it sounds pretty good. Except for one thing. You admit you got in here with a skeleton key and that Rose Bidault didn't know you were coming back. That makes you guilty of breaking and entering."

"Not at all, Inspector. I was only checking back to see if Rose was getting along all right. Like I said, we did quite a bit of celebrating. You know what a strain she had been under."

Merica nodded. "I know. I worked on the Bidault case. I can understand what a relief it was for her to beat the rap. But you still walked in here without her consent."

MERICA hadn't been very serious about the breaking and entering phase, and he dropped the subject by regarding the body of the dead man. "Ever see him before?"

"No. My guess is he's a stranger in town. But he must have been around long enough to know about the Bidault house being deserted. He probably figured to clean out the place. You'll probably find proof in his pockets."

Merica eyed me shrewdly. Cost said: "You seem a little sure about what's in his pockets. You look?"

"No, Cost. I phoned you people right away."

Cost made a face to show that he was no fool.

Cost said: "Funny his gun hasn't been fired. Yet the guy had all the advantage. It don't look like self-defense to me."

Ranch owner George Stephens proved for himself, in the big Economy Run, just how little it costs to run his Ford Truck!

"The Lazy J's Ford Express did itself proud in the Run," says Stephens. "Daily records kept during the entire six months show that our Ford Truck ran up a total of 5,109 miles. My out-of-pocket expense for gas, oil, maintenance and repairs was exactly $123.51 . . . about a $20 bill each month . . . only 2 2/5 cents a mile!"
The Ford Truck POWER PILOT is one reason why Ford Trucks cost so little to run, in ranch work or any work. The POWER PILOT gives you the most power from the least gas. In the low-price field, only Ford has it!
