in Ford Motor Company's 50 Year History

The Ford Motor Company's new million-dollar Parts Depot, located at 521 North Industrial Boulevard in Dallas, supplies parts and accessories to 340 Ford Dealers throughout Texas.

Mayor Robert L. Thornton will officially turn on this spectacular Ford sign tonight at 8:30 PM.

The sign, located at the corner of Elm and Houston Streets in Dallas, was erected by the Dallas District Ford Dealers. It is the largest animated neon sign in the Southwest.

The name of Texas is indelibly written in the pages of the great American industrial story.

Since 1913 when the Ford Motor Company built the first and only automobile assembly plants in the State of Texas, 1,308,658 Ford Cars and Trucks—each proudly displaying the brand, "Built in Texas By Texans" —have rolled off the Dallas assembly line.

Today more than 2,900 Texans with an annual payroll in excess of $13,500,000 are employed by the Ford Motor Company.

The new cars and trucks they assemble and the Ford parts they distribute are shipped to every corner of the Lone Star State and beyond its great borders into the Southwest. As the Ford Motor Company marks its 50th Anniversary, its Texas operation is recognized as a key factor in making possible the Company's Golden Jubilee slogan, "50 Years Forward on the American Road."

The Ford Dealers of the Dallas District are proud to be partners in progress with the Ford Motor Company and with the people of Texas who have been so much a part of this progress.

We look forward with full confidence that Texas-built Ford products will help build the future of Texas and add to its ever-growing industrial strength.
