COMMUNITY FAIR AND BARBECUE ARE GREAT

The best Community Fair ever held in the Panhandle was pulled off in Hedley on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, winding up with a barbecue and picnic dinner on the last day that was "in a class to itself."

Estimates on the number of people in attendance center around 2,000 the first day, and from four to five thousand the second day. Some outside papers, obtaining their information from outside sources, were somewhat "stingy" with attendance figures, but those given in this article are conservative.

The exhibits of all classes were fully up to expectations as to quantity, and many of them greatly exceeded all expectations as to quality. Many of these were taken to Clarendon for exhibition at the County Fair yesterday, today and tomorrow.

Everybody seemed to enjoy the Fair immensely. There were two fast ball games between McLean and Hedley, the home team winning both; scores 1 to 0 and 8 to 5. Two traveling picture shows gave evening performances, and there were plenty of refreshment booths, doll racks, novelty stands etc. The young folks were in their element, and plainly showed that they were "having a time."

Special mention should by all means be made of dozens of different persons and things, and we will do this from time to time. We can't do it all this week, however, for many good reasons. We give below a number of the prize winners (we have not yet received the complete lists). Unless otherwise stated, those named live at Hedley. First and second prize winners in the order named:

In the Community Exhibit, Giles was there with bells on. The live wires (both sexes) of that community put on a display that would have been in the money at any show. They won everything in sight in this class. More about this next week.

In Individual Exhibits, A. A. Nipper got first prize and $10; W. C. Bridges second and $5.

The Hedley Equity Union had a dandy exhibit, and gave special prizes to the following members on the articles named: Pumpkin W. F. Keeter; sweet potato, A. B. Cloninger; kaffir, J. D. Shaw; melon, J. B. Stogner; maize, J. L. Holland; cotton, Tom Tate; Irish potatoes, G. C. Phelps.

Following are individual prize winners in agricultural classes: Beet, J. F. Randle; melon, Dudley Key; kaffir, Dudley Key; red top cane, W. C. Stanton; kaffir heads, H. C. Darnell, G. C. Meredith; maize heads, R. F. Luttrell, W. C. Stanton; corn, R. L. Lamberson, L. H. Howell; cotton, Dudley Key, W. C. Stanton; peanuts, Frank Heath, W. C. Stanton; bull nose pepper, John Adamson; egg plant, John Adamson; cushaw, L. H. Howell, W. C. Stanton; pumpkin, H. C. Darnell, J. E. Neely; sugar beet, Mr. Sweet; tomatoes, Oscar Heath; sweet potatoes, Oscar Heath; alfalfa, H. Hoggard.

WAR HERO IS BURIED HERE BY COMRADES

Every business house in Hedley was closed last Thursday afternoon, and one of the largest crowds ever assembled here attended the funeral of Wesley Adamson, son of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Adamson, who was killed in action in France October 8th, 1918, in the Argonne Meuse sector, in France.

Wesley was raised in Hedley, and was known and loved by all our people because of his sunny disposition and sterling character. He joined the Army soon after America got into the world war, being a private in Co. H, 142nd Infantry—the company organized at Clarendon and made up largely of Donley county boys. He was perhaps the youngest Donley county boy in active service, being less than 18 years old when he enlisted. He was highly esteemed by his comrades in arms, and did a true hero's part up to the time he made the supreme sacrifice.

The American Legion Post here, named for Wesley and another Hedley hero, had charge of the funeral, assisted by Aubyn E. Clark Post of Clarendon.

Capt. E. A. Simpson of Clarendon paid glowing tribute to Wesley's character, and spoke feelingly of his splendid service to his country. Rev. Cal C. Wright made an eloquent and touching talk at the grave. The Ex Service Men, in charge of Capt. Nat S. Perrine, made the exercises beautifully impressive. Misses Mary Harris, Lola Kinsey, Annie Richey, Ima Moreman, Myrtle Reeves, Lola Baker and Ella Kirkpatrick, gowned in white, bore the lovely floral offerings. The pall bearers were Lake Dishman, Cecil Williams, Ed Kinslow, Herman Kirkpatrick, Arthur Greer, Robt. Davis. Among those from Aubyn E. Clark Post, who took part, were Joe Holland, Harry Warren and Allen Beville. The funeral procession was said to have been about three miles long, many vehicles having reached the cemetery before others left the tabernacle where the funeral was held.

It was a sweetly solemn occasion, and there were few dry eyes among the vast throng of mourners. All Hedley joins us in expressions of deepest sympathy to the bereaved parents and other loved ones.

MacMillan off for Baffin Land

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN.

DONALD B. MACMILLAN is off for Baffin Land—just about now he is saying good-by to civilization away up on the coast of Labrador. And what does the veteran explorer expect to find? Probably he himself doesn't know. But Baffin Land offers that strongest of lures—the lure of the unknown. And if MacMillan reaches its interior or its west coast and gets back to tell the tale, two or three years from now we may be hearing something new—and seeing it, for he intends to bring back moving pictures. Anyway, he and his schooner, the Bowdoin, are off for Baffin Land.

The truth is that Baffin Land is an undiscovered country. It was "discovered" away back in the Seventeenth century (1584-1622) by William Baffin—that is, that hardly English explorer discovered and charted Baffin bay, which lies between Greenland and Baffin Land. So he necessarily discovered the east coast of Baffin Land. But no man has ever sailed around Baffin Land. And no white man has ever penetrated to its interior.

MacMillan therefore does not know what's ahead of him. But the Eskimo who live on the big island have told him wondrous tales of towering mountains with great glaciers; vast lakes; birds new to science and of great size; beautiful flowers; herds of reindeer. The island, it is estimated, is about 1,000 miles from north to south—from Lancaster sound to the Gulf of Boothia. It is anywhere from 200 to 500 miles wide east to west. Its east coast line is an ice-capped plateau with an altitude of from 5,000 to 8,000 feet. The interior is supposed to be largely of rock, covered with ice. The western coast, vaguely indicated on the maps, is drawn from statements made by Eskimo.

This western coast, according to stories told MacMillan by Eskimo, is inhabited by people who have never seen a white man. So, one of the results of the expedition may be moving pictures of a primitive people untouched by civilization. MacMillan thinks there is coal, oil and mineral wealth of various kinds on the island. Then there is terrestrial magnetism to be studied from observations taken near the magnetic pole. Also the aurora borealis is to be photographed.

MacMillan is a veteran in Arctic exploration. He was born in Provincetown, Mass., in 1874, and was a '98 track and gridiron star at Bowdoin. In early life he taught the young idea how to shoot. He was in the Peary Arctic Club North Polar Expedition of 1908-09; frozen feet put him out of consideration for Peary's final dash to the pole. He was a member of the Cabot Labrador party in 1910 and did ethnological work among the Eskimo of Labrador in 1911 and 1912. He headed the Crocker Land exploring expedition in 1913. After four years during which time two relief parties were dispatched in search of him and a third was formed, word came through that the little party was safe at Etah, Greenland. He had learned that Crocker Land was largely a myth.

The Baffin Land Arctic Exploration—the official title of the little company that MacMillan will command—is being financed by a group of Bowdoin men. The plans provide for an absence of two years. The plans do not provide for a relief expedition. If the Bowdoin is crushed in the ice, the party will retreat by sledge to Fort Churchill, the trading post at the foot of Hudson bay, and return to civilization by way of Northern Canada.

MacMillan has carefully selected his companions. The members of the expedition, in most instances, he has known for years and several of them have been his shipmates on previous voyages. His mate is Jonathan Small ("Jot") of Provincetown, Mass., who was with him for four years on the Crocker Land expedition and whom the explorer describes as "through-and-through sailor, and the best story teller I ever met." Another former shipmate is Thomas McCue of Brigus, Newfoundland, the cook, who was with the explorer on a trip through Hudson bay last year. Harold Whitehouse of Boothbay harbor, another experienced sailor, is engineer.

Ralph P. Robinson of Haverhill, Mass., will be the explorer's general assistant during the expedition. He was a pupil of Doctor MacMillan at Worcester academy and later was associated with him as director of summer camps in Maine. He served in France during the war as a lieutenant of infantry, and since his return had been physical director in the Haverhill public schools until he gave his resignation in June to join the expedition.

Dawson Howell of Boston represents the Carnegie Institute on the expedition as magnetic observer and will also serve as radio operator. He is the son of a Pittsburgh lawyer and is a former Trinity college football captain. Richard H. Goddard of Winthrop, a member of this year's graduating class at Dartmouth, where he was prominent in athletics, will be Howell's assistant.

The Bowdoin is small—just about the size of the Discovery, Baffin's ship which, in 1616 was the first to reach Baffin bay. But she has been specially constructed for the expedition, and is regarded as quite up-to-date for ice work. She is 80 feet 10 inches in length, of 115 tons displacement, 19 feet 7 inches beam and 9 feet 6 inches depth. She is of the knockabout auxiliary type, equipped with a 45-horsepower crude oil-burning engine that will drive her eight and a half knots an hour. Tests of the engine with various kinds of fuel have convinced MacMillan that oil obtained from the Arctic whale can be utilized. Though she had on board 2,800 gallons of fuel, the sails will be used as much as possible, and the motor be saved for emergencies among the ice floes.

The Bowdoin's egg-shaped hull offers nothing to which ice may cling. Under sufficient pressure from ice floes, instead of being crushed, the Bowdoin should be lifted out and be carried with the pack. Her construction is very strong. The frame of the hull is planked with 3-inch white oak, to which has been added at the water line a 5-foot belt of greenheart or ironwood. This armor is said to be capable of withstanding the grinding action of ice better than steel or any other material. Twelve tons of cement ballast has been so placed as to eliminate any danger of ice punching through engine room and tanks. Her bow is sheathed by heavy steel plates. She carries a spare rudder and propeller. It is believed that her slight draft of 9½ feet will make it possible to drydock her on a beach at low tide so that repairs can be made.

The forecastle is of great importance to a ship's company in Arctic temperatures. The Bowdoin's is large and has been laid out with special thought for the comfort of the explorers, who will spend much of their time there during the long winter months. There is a thick air space between the outer and inner skins of the hull for insulation against the cold and moisture. When winter sets in a 2-foot covering of ice and snow will be placed over the entire schooner, with snow houses, after the fashion of Eskimo igloos, to cover the hatchways. For heating purposes the vessel is equipped with oil heaters and kerosene for them. Cooking will be done in a range with coal.

When the Bowdoin left Wiscasset, Me., she was, check-a-block with a wonderful conglomeration of articles. The explorers have many friends, and gifts of all kinds had been showered upon them. In that packed cargo, were tobacco and matches sufficient to last two years—2,800 gallons of oil, 14 tons of nut coal, enough to keep the galley range hot for two years, flour enough for a like period, 100 gallons of gasoline for lighting, 500 pounds of butter, 500 pounds of coffee, 13 cases of tea, 100 pounds of lard, a barrel of molasses, ten hams, four strips of bacon, six cases of corned beef and corned beef hash, 36 cases of other canned goods, 240 pounds of assorted jellies and jams, bags of beans, cases of macaroni, cases of cranberries, puddings, cheeses, cereal, dried fruits, nuts and candy, a case of flavoring extracts, spices, dates and prunes, drugs, medicines and a quantity of dehydrated vegetables—onions, potatoes, carrots, cabbages, cranberries, etc. From which the moisture has been extracted and which will return to their natural state upon being soaked in water. Somebody had given a number of old automobile tires, to be lowered over the sides as ice buffers.

The Bowdoin carries a wireless telegraph outfit. She has also a complete apparatus for her scientific work. Two motion picture cameras and four miles of film, with which Doctor MacMillan plans to record the events of the trip, as well as the animal and bird life, form an important part of the expedition's equipment. The explorer also expects to be able to use the cameras, which are furnished with special high-speed lenses, in making photographs of the aurora borealis, and he will attempt, through photographs taken at different points, to measure the height of the northern lights.

And here's something clever. There's a motion picture machine and several reels of film for the benefit of the natives. These reels include films which MacMillan made on a previous trip to the North. So, when the Eskimo see themselves projected against the side of an iceberg, they will be more likely to believe what the films show them of the white man's country. And maybe they will not consider MacMillan a magician!

The explorers carry 20 rifles and shotguns and 10,000 rounds of ammunition. These, of course, are for the securing of specimen animals and for the killing of game. These firearms may also save their lives, since if they have to desert the Bowdoin and make their way to civilization on foot, they will have to live off the country. This can be done, as Stefanson, Amundsen and others have proved to the world. Sir John Franklin's two crews perished to a man on such a retreat to the North after an attempt to conquer the Northwest passage. The men were brave, but apparently inadapted. They perished in the midst of plenty.

Of course the MacMillan party have no expectations of footing it home across the ice. They hope to navigate the Bowdoin clear around Baffin Land.

"One hundred years ago Parry left England on the Fury and the Hecla to negotiate a Northwest passage," said MacMillan. "He went into Hudson bay south of Southampton island and followed the midland of Canada northward till he reached Fury and Hecla straits. Here he stayed two years and found he was balked by ice and a strong, rapid southward current. As fast as he sailed up he was driven back and he became discouraged and quit. Never since has a ship attempted this trip. That's why I had the little schooner Bowdoin built. Experience has shown that the small, hardy craft with a small crew works better than a large vessel and an extensive expedition." The Bowdoin's 45-horsepower oil engine should give us a cruising radius of nearly 4,000 miles just with the fuel in our tanks, to say nothing of whale oil. We also can depend on our sails. I see no reason why we can't get home all right."

Incidentally, as may be imagined, Wiscasset had the time of its whole existence in the departure of the Bowdoin. The event brought an influx of visitors such as the town has never seen before. The entire local population, together with summer residents from surrounding resorts, and relatives and friends of the crew, thronged the wharves along the water front.

Mingled with their cheers was the screech of whistles on harbor craft, the bellow of the fire siren and the peal of church bells. The harbor was dotted with launches, dories and other pleasure craft.

To this spontaneous demonstration on the part of the populace was added the official valedictory of the state, pronounced by Gov. Percival P. Baxter, a personal friend of the explorer, just before the schooner left the dock.

Under her full speed of eight and a half knots an hour, the schooner, for the benefit of the spectators, made a complete circle around the harbor before heading down Sheepscot bay. The crowd remained on the docks and watched her until she passed Davis island and finally disappeared around Westport point.

Stories of Great Scouts

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE IRON NERVE OF SAM HOUSTON, THE VIRGINIAN

Courage and daring were qualities characteristic of all the scouts who won their right to fame in frontier history, but for iron nerve and pure grit Sam Houston was the peer of them all. Perhaps he inherited his fortitude from his father, who was a soldier in the Revolution; perhaps during his long stay among the Cherokee Indians he learned that a warrior bears pain without flinching.

Houston was a Virginian who had entered the army and risen to the rank of ensign at the outbreak of the Creek war in 1813. Gen. Andrew Jackson, "Old Hickory," had taken the field against the Creeks and, after a series of battles in which the Indians were defeated, they made a last stand at their fortified encampment, Tohopeka, in the Great Horsehoe bend of the Tallapoosa river, Ala.

During the assault on this fort, a barbed arrow struck Houston in the thigh. He tried to pull it out, but failed. The agony was frightful. Calling to a soldier, Houston commanded him to extract the shaft. Twice the man tried and failed, then begged to be relieved of the task when he saw the unspeakable torture he was causing.

"Try again," commanded Houston. "And if you fail, I'll run you through with my sword!"

The third attempt was successful, and as the barbed shaft was torn from the flesh, it was followed by a gush of blood. General Jackson, seeing Houston's wound, ordered him to the rear. The young ensign waited until Jackson had passed on, had a surgeon bind up the wound, and in a few minutes he was back in the thick of the fighting.

The high peak in Houston's adventurous life came in 1836 when, at the head of a little army of 800 Texans, with the battle cry of "Remember the Alamo!" on their lips, he defeated the hordes of Santa Anna, the Mexican dictator, at San Jacinto, and won freedom for Texas. He was elected first president of the Lone Star republic.

At the outbreak of the Civil war, Houston, who was governor of Texas, was bitterly opposed to the secession of that state from the Union. The Confederates forced him to resign. They required all men over sixteen to register and to carry a pass while traveling. Houston refused to do either. Once they stopped him and demanded his pass, "San Jacinto is my pass through Texas!" thundered the brave old man as he rode on.

Houston died at his home in Huntsville July 26, 1863, with the name of Texas on his lips.

JEDEDIAH STRONG SMITH, THE AMERICAN ULYSSES

This is a story of a modern Ulysses, a frontier hero of many wanderings, who died without receiving the fame which was his due, a man whose service to America has been but lately appreciated by his countrymen. Jedediah Strong Smith was his name, and his contribution to history was the first accurate mapping of the great West.

Smith was born in New York in 1799. As a boy he played with the young Seneca Indians of Chief Complanter's tribe, and learned their lore. He became an expert with the bow and arrow, which he afterward carried on all of his expeditions. Once he brought down a hawk flying about 75 yards above him, and he could drive a shaft to the heart of a buffalo as skillfully as any Indian hunter.

In years of wandering Smith crossed the western country on the south from the Colorado river to the Pacific; he crossed it midway from the Rockies to the Pacific, and he traversed it on the north from California to the Rockies. He visited all the important streams from Arizona to the Yellowstone country, and he made accurate notes of all he saw. This information was used in correcting the unreliable maps of the day and proved of inestimable value to later explorers.

Smith's death was heroic. In 1831 he was guiding a wagon train over the Santa Fe trail. The train had taken a short cut around the head of the Cimarron river and soon was lost in a desert country. Water must be found at once. Smith set out in search of a stream, and finally reached one. While drinking, he was surrounded by a band of Comanches, who determined to have the white man's gun.

The Indians signaled peace, and after talking in the sign language for a while, they succeeded in frightening Smith's horse. As it turned, they shot at the scout with arrows, wounding him in the arm. Smith wheeled about, shot the chief dead with his rifle and killed two more savages with his pistols. Then grasping his ax, the scout dashed into their midst. They cut him down with their lances, but when they approached to scalp him, Smith rose up again and stabbed three of them with his knife. Then he dropped dead. The Indians afterward admitted that he had killed 13 of their party before he died!

LIVE STOCK

NOT WISE TO OVERLOAD CARS

Death or Injury of Animals Means Heavy Loss to Shipper—Temptation to Crowd is Great.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It makes quite a difference in the profits of the farmer stock raiser whether he obtains 8½ cents per pound for his hogs as meat or from ¼ to ½ cent per pound for them as dead hogs and soap-grease material. Which of these prices he obtains depends upon how the animals are loaded in the cars. Many shippers, either through ignorance or in an effort to save a small amount of freight, overload or improperly load their live stock when sending it to market, and thereby run great risks of sustaining serious losses through crippled or dead animals, say specialists of the bureau of markets, United States Department of Agriculture.

With freight rates at their present levels there is a strong temptation to economize on this item of expense by crowding a few more animals into an already well-filled car. Representatives of the department, however, who see thousands of carloads of live stock unloaded at the great central markets, are of the opinion that if farmers and stockmen could see the condition in which much of the live stock reaches the stockyards they would be impressed not only with the folly of overloading, but also with the absolute necessity of taking every precaution against injury and death of the animals while in transit.

Overloading is one of the commonest, and at the same time most serious, mistakes made by the inexperienced or careless shipper. It seems such an easy matter to crowd just a few more animals into a car, and the fact that once in a great while an overloaded car will go through without serious mishap seems to urge the shipper on to tempt fate just once more. The wise shipper, however, will have nothing to do with this false economy, say specialists of the department. He will lay down a hard and fast rule to load only as many animals in the car as can ride comfortably, and from this rule he will not deviate.

The chances of loss through overloading are greater in warm weather than in cold. Temperatures may be such at the time of loading that the animals are fairly comfortable, but before they reach market the weather turns suddenly hot, with the result that anywhere from one to 12 animals suffocate. This is particularly true of hogs. The shipper should remember that stock cars frequently stand in freight yards completely hemmed in by trains of box cars. Under such circumstances, if the animals are crowded in the car and the weather is hot, overheated and dead animals are almost certain to result.

Another mistake frequently made is to load mixed stock without proper partitions. When two or more species of live stock are shipped in the same car they should generally be kept separate by building strong partitions. This is particularly important when large animals are shipped with smaller ones.

It has been found that shipping live animals any considerable distance is an undertaking always fraught with some risk. This risk, however, may be materially reduced, in the opinion of department specialists,

The exact number of animals that should be shipped in a car, naturally, varies with the size of the car, the size and kind of animals, the length of haul, the season of the year, and weather conditions. There can be no variation, however, in the general rule that the animals should have sufficient room to be reasonably comfortable, and that the car should be so partitioned that large animals cannot trample the smaller ones, and that aggressive and quarrelsome animals cannot injure those with a more quiet and timid disposition.

Even at the present comparatively low price of live stock a single dead or crippled animal invariably represents a substantial loss, and in many instances wipes out the profit on the entire shipment.

CARD OF THANKS

We cannot find words to express our thanks to everyone who came to us when the sad hour came that brought back to our Nation and home the body of our much loved soldier son and brother. How much your words of sympathy helped us you will never know, and to every one who helped in any way to make our grief lighter, we thank you over and over again. To his cousin whom he loved as a sister, who came more than 200 miles to attend his funeral, we express our thanks. To the girls who placed such beautiful flowers on his casket; to the American Legion, who have a tender place in our hearts, and who labored so faithfully to make everything as it was for our benefit and to show honor to him who gave his life for them.—we can never tell you how we thank you. # SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. Walker

WORD "GENTLEMAN."

A FRENCH critic, discussing the recent famous battle for the boxing championship of the world, expressed surprise that so many Americans should have favored the challenger from abroad.

Perhaps if he had stopped to think for a moment he would have realized that, after all, this is in the true sporting spirit.

That spirit is at times hard to cultivate. It is natural for a city to want its home team to win in baseball, and for a college to wish to see its young giants sweep all before them on the diamond, the links and the gridiron.

"To have and to hold" is the motto of national or international sport from yachting to polo.

It is reasonable for a nation not to wish to lose any championship once it has obtained it.

Various explanations have been given of the popularity of Carpentier, the best small man who stood up to the best big man in their business in the world today.

A ray of light is thrown on the matter by a word that was used by several experts in describing the affair. They said that the Frenchman fought like a gentleman and lost like one.

This involved no reflection on the champion, because nothing of an "ungentlemanly" nature was done by anybody on the memorable occasion in question.

The interesting thing is the use of the word "gentleman."

It is an expression that Americans have been shy of from the earliest days, partly because it conveyed a suggestion of class distinction in a country that has no "classes" and partly because the word was hard to define even in countries where it was in common use.

There is no doubt that in the arriest sense of the expression, George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and John Adams were "gentlemen."

Yet there can be equally little doubt that the first would have corrected anybody who defined him in that way by saying that he was a soldier, while the other illustrious two would have preferred to be called statesmen.

As for Benjamin Franklin, if anybody had called him a gentleman, he would have remarked probably that he preferred to be a printer.

Daniel Webster was entertained at the Jockey club in Richmond on a famous occasion. He surprised his hosts by saying that, though born in New Hampshire and a senator from Massachusetts, he could give three good reasons why he could claim to be a "Southern Gentleman." And he gave these amid a storm of laughter.

In fact, it is only in the army and the navy that the word "gentleman" survives in a technical sense. For "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman" is the ground for one of the most serious charges that can be brought against anybody who holds a commission.

The great John Henry Newman, afterwards cardinal, in discussing "the idea of a university" gave a considerable part of his time to the effort to define a "gentleman."

He, of course, had no more sympathy than any American would have with the view, not uncommon in parts of Europe, that a "gentleman" is a man who has no profession or business; who has nothing to do but nothing.

In olden days a "gentleman" was supposed to be like Bayard, "without fear and without reproach; kind to women and children; gentle in peace and careless of his own safety when duty called him."

It is an interesting thing to find the word used in the case of a professional boxer.

Trifles.

Break one egg into a bowl, add one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, and one and one-half teaspoonfuls of powdered sugar. Add flour, stirring until the mixture will take no more. Turn on to a floured board, divide into three parts and roll as thin as possible. Cut into narrow strips or squares and fry in deep hot fat. Sprinkle with powdered sugar mixed with cinnamon.

Fritter Batter.

Mix and sift together one cupful of flour and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt. Add two-thirds of a cupful of milk gradually, and two eggs beaten thick, one tablespoonful of olive oil and the whites of the eggs folded in after being beaten stiff. Bananas cut in quarters, sprinkled with lemon and sugar, let stand half an hour, then dipped in the batter and cooked as the apple fritters, are delicious. In fact any fruit may be used for fritters.

GOOD THINGS FOR THE FAMILY.

FOR those who enjoy hot cakes and gems for breakfast, the following recipe will be one to try:

Popovers.

Mix and sift one cupful of flour, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, seven-eighths of a cupful of milk, one-half teaspoonful of butter, and two eggs. Beat the batter with a Dover egg beater until light. Pour into deep hissing-hot iron gem pans well greased and bake in a hot oven for thirty minutes. If baked in buttered earthen cups the popovers will have a glazed appearance.

Apple Fritters.

Sift one cupful of flour with one teaspoonful of powdered sugar and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt. Add two-thirds of a cupful of water, beating constantly. Add one-half tablespoonful of olive oil and the white of one egg beaten stiff. Core and pare tart apples, sprinkle with lemon juice, dredge with sugar and let stand half an hour. Dip in fritter batter and fry in deep fat. Serve with lemon sauce.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"TARTAR."

"TARTAR," as applied to the wild tribes which inhabit middle and central Asia, is one of those words in which a wrongly assumed derivation has modified the spelling and the very shape in which we now have it, for the people usually designated by this name are not "Tartars," but "Tatars."

The interpolation of the "r" in the first syllable came about when these hordes burst into Europe during the Thirteenth century and swept everything before them. Many persons claimed that the ravages of the invading cavalry constituted a fulfillment of the prophecy in the ninth chapter of Revelation concerning the opening of the bottomless pit and the loosing of the inhabitants of the infernal regions. From this belief ensued the change of their name from "Tatars" to "Tartars," the latter being an outgrowth of Tartarus, or hell, whence these implacable hordes were supposed to have come.

The bravery of the invaders, together with their stolid disregard of pain and the manner in which they turned upon their guards when captured, also gave rise to the expression "catch a Tartar" or "be caught a Tartar," which is in use to this day as a synonym for being taken by surprise, particularly when a person thinks that he has made an easy conquest.

FARM OPPORTUNITIES

I AM constantly in receipt of letters from women tired of office work who ask what chance they would have in investing their savings in a small farm. They want a home, they want to be their own masters, they long for the country after years of confining labor at a desk.

Success in farming requires training and experience as well as a wish for that type of work. A good business training and initiative are excellent as stock in trade, but there should be more than that. Farming is no easy job.

Two young women tell me that they are making money with a small sheep farm. There is plenty of demand both for the wool and the meat. But these two women also run an apriary, marketing their honey, in a distinctive package. It is the finest honey, and they charge a high price for it. They have worked up a trade with a list of private purchasers, and sell through the mail.

The thing is to have only the very highest class of produce, to charge high for it, to put it into attractive and striking packages that are an advertisement in themselves, and to sell direct to the consumer. With the parcel post this is possible. We find it better to specialize in several things rather than in one. Establish a market for one of your items and you establish it for all.

This sounds like good talk, and I recommend it to my readers who may be thinking of turning to the farm as a source of income.

He flaunted the document in the face of the officials, assuring them it was a diplomatic passport issued by the British embassy.

DAIRY THE DAIRY

CHOOSING BREED OF CATTLE

Market for Dairy Products, Climatic and Other Conditions Have Important Bearing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In selecting the breed of dairy cattle suited for his particular locality, the farmer should give close consideration of two sources of income from this kind of stock, say specialists of the bureau of animal industry, United States Department of Agriculture. One part of the income is represented by the sale of products, either milk or butterfat; and the other comes from the sale of surplus stock. Often the latter may amount to a considerable sum, even though the herd is composed of grade animals.

Another point that should bear in mind is that no single breed is altogether superior to all others; it may excel in certain features, but not in all. It is best, therefore, to select the breed which comes the nearest to meeting the necessary conditions.

Most of the milk sold in towns and cities is subject to certain requirements as to quality, among which are standards for the butter fat and milk solids. For much milk, payment is based upon quantity by weight, without special reference to any butter-fat content above the legal standard. Local requirements differ greatly as to the content of butter fat and solids.

Consumers, as a rule, much prefer milk of a deep, rich color, which usually is considered to be an indication of a large cream content. A distinct and deep cream line in the milk bottle is another feature by which the quality of milk is judged. Although generally the consumer does not want to pay more for a better quality of product, occasionally it is possible to create a demand for rich milk at a higher price.

Very often the benefits of co-operative effort are lost through the exercise of an inborn spirit of independence. Consequently, it frequently happens that in the selection of a breed no consideration is given to the fact that another breed already may be established in the locality. The predominance of a certain breed in a community offers many advantages.

Where There is One Breed in Community It Is Easier to Dispose of the Surplus Stock.

A market is established which, because of the availability of large numbers of animals, attracts those who buy large consignments. Under such circumstances all surplus stock may be disposed of to better advantage, and co-operative advertising also may be used effectively. In addition, bulls may be bought co-operatively or exchanged with facility, thus very materially reducing the cost of service in the herd.

Any necessary additions to the herd can be obtained, without expense for travel, from neighbors' herds with whose history the buyer is thoroughly familiar. These advantages apply not only to the breeder of purebred cattle, but also to the owners of grades.

In this country there is a very wide range of conditions, as to both topography and climate. On rich, level pastures all breeds thrive, but on rough, hilly land, where pasturage is scant, they do not show equal adaptability. In the extreme cold of the North, with its long winters, different resisting qualities are needed as compared with the almost tropical heat in the southern parts of the country.

In the United States four breeds of dairy cattle have attained considerable prominence, namely the Ayrshire, Guernsey, Holstein-Friesian and Jersey. These breeds have been developed carefully for a long time for the purpose of dairy production, and in consequence each transmits its characteristics with regularity to its offspring. Certain distinct features distinguish each breed from the others, but all possess ability as milk producers. There is, of course, considerable variation in the characteristics of individuals within each breed.

TREASURE ISLAND.

Well, here's a new kind of "Treasure Island"—a kind that Stevenson himself would chuckle over, could he come back to read it. And by a woman, too! So, as you may easily imagine, it's different from the rank and file of the many stories about treasure islands.

Just the same, it's a real treasure island story—an uninhabited island, adventures who have adventures, mystery, treachery, violence and Spanish doubloons. And this time, for good measure, love and romance and humor are thrown in.

The author, Camilla Kenyon, was born in San Francisco, with a legend of a buccaneer ancestor in the family. She says she sometimes thinks the old rover's soul may have got by mistake into her earthly frame. Anyway, she always has doted on sea tales of adventure—and now she has written one of her own that's better reading than most of those she has read.

CHAPTER I.

An Aunt Errand.

Never had life seemed more fair and smiling than at the moment when Aunt Jane's letter descended upon me like a bolt from the blue. The fact is, I was taking a vacation from Aunt Jane. Being an orphan, I was supposed to be under Aunt Jane's wing, but this was the merest polite fiction, and I am sure that no hen with one chicken worry about it more than I did about Aunt Jane. I had spent the last three years, since Aunt Susan died and left Aunt Jane with all the money and no one to look after but me, in snatching her from the brink of disaster. Her most recent and narrow escape was from a velvet-tongued person of half her years who turned out to be a convict on parole. She had her handbag packed for the elopement when I confronted her with this unpleasant fact. When she came to she was bitter instead of grateful, and went about for weeks affecting a spectacle of blighted affections which was too much for the most self-approving conscience. So it ended where I wrote to her frequently and kindly, urging her not to mind me but to stay as long as she liked.

Meanwhile I came up to the ranch for a long holiday with Bess and the baby, a holiday which had already stretched itself out to Thanksgiving, and threatened to last until Christmas.

As to Aunt Jane, my state of mind was fatuously calm. She was staying with cousins, who live in a suburb and are frightfully respectable. I was sure they numbered no convicts among their acquaintances, or indeed any one from whom Aunt Jane was likely to require rescuing. And if it came to a retired missionary I was perfectly willing.

But the cousins and their respectability are of the passive order, whereas to manage Aunt Jane demands aggressive and continuous action. Hence the bolt from the blue above alluded to.

I was swinging tranquilly in the hammock, I remember, when Bess brought my letters and then hurried away because the baby had fallen downstairs. Unwarned by the slightest premonitory thrill, I kept Aunt Jane's letter till the last and skimmed through all the others.

At last I came to Aunt Jane. I ripped open the envelope and drew out the letter—a fat one, but then Aunt Jane's letters are always fat. Nevertheless, as I spread out the close-filled pages I felt a mild wonder. Writing so large, so black, so staggering, so madly underlined, must indicate something above even Aunt Jane's usual emotional level. Perhaps in sober truth there was a missionary—

Twenty minutes later I staggered into Bess' room.

"Hush!" she said. "Don't wake the baby!"

"Baby or no baby," I whispered savagely. "I've got to have a time-table. I leave for the city tonight to catch the first steamer for Panama!"

Later, while the baby slumbered and I packed, I explained. This was difficult; not that Bess is a general listing obtuse, but because the picture of Aunt Jane embarking for some wild, lone isle of the Pacific as the head of a treasure-seeking expedition was enough to shake the strongest intellect. And yet, amid the welter of ink and eloquence which filled those fat pages, there was the cold hard fact confronting you. Aunt Jane was going to look for buried treasure, in company with one Violet Higlesby-Browne, whom she sprung on you without the slightest explanation, as though alluding to the queen of Sheba or the Stanzas twice. By beginning at the end and reading backward— Aunt Jane's letters are usually most intelligible that way—you managed to piece together some explanation of this Miss Higlesby-Browne and her place in the scheme of things. It was through Miss Browne, whom she had met at a lecture upon Soul-Development, that Aunt Jane had come to realize her claims as an Individual upon the Cosmos, also to discover that she was by nature a woman of affairs with a talent for directing large enterprises, although adverse influences had hitherto kept her from recognizing her powers. There was a dark significance in these "adverse influences," though whether they meant me or the family lawyer I was not sure.

Miss Higlesby-Browne, however, had assisted Aunt Jane to find herself, and as a consequence Aunt Jane, for the comparatively trifling outlay needed to finance the Harding-Browne expedition, would shortly be the richer by one-fourth of a vast treasure of Spanish doubloons. The knowledge of this hoard was Miss Higlesby-Browne's alone. It had been revealed to her by a dying sailor in a London hospital, whither she had gone on a mission of kindness—you gathered that Miss Browne was precisely the sort to take advantage when people were helpless and unable to fly from her. Why the dying sailor chose to make Miss Browne the repository of his secret, I don't know—this still remains for me the unsolved mystery. But when the sailor closed his eyes the secret and the map—of course there was a map—had become Miss Higlesby-Browne's.

Miss Browne had clear before her the road to fortune, but unfortunately it led across the sea and quite out of the route of steamer travel. Capital in excess of Miss Browne's resources was required. London proving cold before its great opportunity, Miss Browne had shaken off its dust and come to New York, where a mysteriously potent influence had guided her to Aunt Jane. Through Miss

"I Must Get to Panama in Time to Save Her."

Browne's great organizing abilities, not to speak of those newly brought to light in Aunt Jane, a party of staunch comrades had been assembled, a steamer engaged to meet them at Panama, and it was ho, for the island in the blue Pacific main!

With this lyrical outburst Aunt Jane concluded the body of her letter. A small cramped postscript informed me that it was against Miss H.R.'s wishes that she revealed their plans to anyone, but that she did want to hear from me before they sailed from Panama, where a letter might reach her if I was prompt.

"And of course," I explained to Bess as I hurried things into my bags, "if a letter can reach her so can I. At least I must take the chance of it. What those people are up to I don't know—probably they mean to hold her for ransom and murder her outright if it is not forthcoming. Or perhaps some of them will marry her and share the spoils with Miss Higlesby-Browne. Anyway, I must get to Panama in time to save her."

"Or you might go along to the island," suggested Bess.

"I paused to glare at her.

"Bess! And let them murder me, too!"

"Or marry you—" cooed Bess.

clerk, and at the cool negation of his tone my heart gave a sickening downward swoop. "Miss Jane Harding and party have left the hotel!"

"For—the island?" I gasped.

He raised his eyebrows. "Can't say, I'm sure." He gave me an appraising stare. Perhaps the woe in my face touched him, for he descended from the eminence of the hotel clerk where he dwelt apart sufficiently to add, "Is it important that you should see her?"

"I am her niece. I have come all the way from San Francisco expecting to join her here."

The clerk meditated, his shrewd eyes piercing the very secrets of my soul.

"She knew nothing about it," I hastened to add. "I intended it for a surprise."

This candor helped my cause. "Well," he said, "that explains her not leaving any word. As you are her niece, I suppose it will do no harm to tell you that Miss Harding and her party embarked this morning on the freighter Rufus Smith, and I think it very likely that the steamer has not left port. If you like I will send a man to the water-front with you and you may be able to go on board and have a talk with your aunt."

Did I thank him? I have often wondered when I waked up in the night. I have a vision of myself dashing out of the hotel, and then the hush that brought me is bearing me away. Bellboys luried my bags in after me, and I threw them largess recklessly. Madly we clattered over cobbled ways. Out on the smooth waters of the roadstead lay ships great and small, ships with stripped masts and smokeless funnels, others with faint gray spirals wreathing upward from their stacks. Was one of these the Rufus Smith, and would I reach her—or him—before the thin gray feather became a thick black plume? I thought of my aunt at the mercy of these unknown adventurers with whom she had set forth, helpless as a little fat pigeon among hawks, and I felt, desperately, that I must reach her, must save her from them and bring her safe back to shore. How I was to do this at the eleventh hour, plus about fifty-seven minutes, as at present, I hadn't considered. But experience had taught me that once in my clutches Aunt Jane would offer about as much resistance as a slightly melted wax doll. She gets so soft that you are almost afraid to touch her for fear of leaving dents.

So to get there, get there, get there, was the one prayer of my soul.

I got there, in a boat hastily commandeered by the hotel clerk's deputy. We brought up under the side of the little steamer, and the wide surprised face of a Swedish deck-hand stared down at us.

"Let me aboard! I must come aboard," I cried.

Other faces appeared, then a rope-ladder. Somehow I was mounting it—a dizzy feat to which only the tumult of my emotions made me indifferent. Bare brawny arms of sailors clutched at me and drew me to the deck. There at once I was the center of a circle of speechless and astonished persons, all men but one.

"Well?" demanded a large breezy voice. "What's this mean? What do you want aboard my ship?"

I looked up at a red-faced man in a large straw hat.

"I want my aunt," I explained.

"Your aunt?" he roared. "Why the devil should you think I've got your aunt?"

"You have got her," I replied with firmness. "I don't see her, but she's here somewhere."

The captain of the Rufus Smith shook two large red fists above his head.

"Another lunatic!" he shouted. "I'd as soon have a white horse and a minister aboard as go to sea in a floating bedlam!"

As the captain's angry thunder died away came the small, anxious voice of Aunt Jane.

"What's the matter? Oh, please tell me what's the matter!" she was saying as she edged her way into the group. Her eyes, round, pale, blinking a little in the tropical glare, roved over the circle until they lit on me. Right where she stood Aunt Jane petrified. Her poor little chin dropped until it disappeared altogether in the folds of her plump neck, and she remained speechless, stricken, immobile as a wax figure in an exhibition.

"Aunt Jane," I said, "you must come right back to shore with me." I spoke calmly, for unless you are perfectly calm with Aunt Jane you fluster her.

She replied only by a slight gobbling in her throat, but the other woman spoke in a loud voice, addressed not to me but to the universe in general.

"The Young Person is mad!" It was an unmistakably British intonation.

"Anybody that ain't goin' in that direction is welcome to jump overboard."

HOME HAS TWO BIG FEATURES

Strength and Comfort the Aim in Designing This House.

HALF TIMBER AND STUCCO

Large Broad Front Porch is Screened In, and Sun Parlor and Wash Room Are Features Which Will Prove Attractive.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD. Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 187 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

To most of the people the selection of a house design and the details of the contrast is one of the most important events in their whole lives. For the average man does not intend to build more than one home during that time and he wants, if possible, to have a home for his children when he passes into the Great Beyond. In the planning of this new home there are many factors to be considered, but the two important considerations are durability and comfort. A home possessing these two qualities is bound to prove successful. Too many home builders have overlooked the basic foundations of a real home in their zeal to get something freakish and different. They wanted a show place, and as a result lost sight of the true character of the home. A few years later they have regretted their action for the so-called show place was merely a shell, and soon became the worse for wear and tear. It is only logical and sensible that the most moderate means should try to get the best there is for his money. It can be attractive, too, and strong. Today in this roof dormer in front of the bedrooms is a small balcony with very artistically designed balcony rail.

Stepping inside, the visitor finds himself in the main room of the house, a wonderfully spacious living room 13 by 23 feet 6 inches, easily as big as two ordinary rooms. At one side is the open brick fireplace that "burns." Windows on three sides, this room extends across the entire dwelling, provide excellent light and ventilation and add to the cheerfulness and comfort of this room.

At the right to the rear is an open doorway leading into the dining room, a room of good size, lighted by a triple

Second Floor Plan.

Window and opening into the sun parlor at the rear through two doors. This sun parlor can be used as a sleeping porch. It is glazed in. A swinging door on the left opens into the kitchen from the dining room. This kitchen is what architects are now putting in modern homes. It is a small room, quite compact but complete, and because of its size a saver of steps for the housewife. It is the sensible successor of the old-style large kitchen, which was two or three times too big for its purpose, and only a cause for much extra work.

the large cities we are continually confronted with glaring examples of faddism in home building—row after row of "cheeseboxes" that were put up to catch the unwary.

But in building a home like the one shown here, the average man of means cannot make any mistake, for it embodies the two important features, strength and comfort. It is evident that charm has not been sacrificed in any way to gain this result. In fact the exterior is very attractive and enhanced by some architectural touches that make it very appealing and striking. It has borrowed some of the features of the kitchen is a small washroom, in city homes used as a laundry, in farm homes as a cleaning up place for the help returning from the fields. It keeps this dirt out of the kitchen and bathroom.

On the second floor are the sleeping quarters, consisting of four bedrooms of average size, each room having ample closet space and windows on two sides. In the construction of a home, the number and size of windows is quite important. Especially is this true of bedrooms or any place where people sleep. They require plenty of fresh air through the night, and this can only be gotten by windows carefully placed.

A roof dormer at the rear of the house provides windows for the rear bedrooms.

A unique feature of this house is the garage at the rear adjoining the house. Instead of being built on the terrace, as is the house, it is built on a level with the walk and reached by a concrete driveway with high concrete walls, semi-tunnel style. It is built of frame and will hold two cars.

ONCE GREAT INDOOR SPORT

Roller Skating Was at the Height of Its Popularity in This Country in the 80's.

The roller skate was patented in France as early as 1819. Since that time scarcely a year has passed without the recording of some improvement. Plimpton's improvement consisted in so gearing two pairs of wheels that they would "cramp" when the footplate was caught by either side, and thus cause the skate to move on a curved line. Several years elapsed before the value of this invention was recognized generally. In the meantime the inventor was busy making improvements and taking out other patents and in 1874 had brought the skate practically to its present condition.

The device of "cramping" the wheels secured the initial success of roller skating. The earlier inventions were crude affairs compared with the modern appliances. About 1864 the mania for roller skating appeared in England. Two years later the "rinking" fever broke out in Australia, and spread thence to England and the United States. Since that time the craze has appeared at intervals only to die out again. During 1884 and 1885 the sport was at its height in the United States.

MERCHANT TELLS OF A REMARKABLE CASE

Writing from Maxey's, Ga., A. J. Gillen, proprietor of a large department store at that place, says:

"I have a customer here who was in bed for three years and did not go to a meal at any time. She had five physicians and they gave her out. One bottle of Tanlac she commenced keeping house and on the third she did all the cooking and housework for a family of eight."

This sounds really incredible, but it comes unsolicited from a highly creditable source and is copied verbatim from the letter.

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Advertisement.

Good Officers.

"A good officer," said General Pershing at a dinner, "turns even adversity to advantage. Like the young drug clerk, you know."

"Young man," a lady said to this chap, "I want about a pint of glycerin, please."

"Yes, madam," said the drug clerk. "That will be 55 cents—50 cents for the glycerin and a nickel for the bottle."

"But a month ago," the lady objected, "I got some glycerin here, and you didn't charge anything for the bottle."

"Yes, madam," said the drug clerk promptly. "Then that will be 60 cents."

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper. Advertisement.

Discontent.

There are two kinds of discontent in the world: the discontent that works and the discontent that wrings its hands. The first gets what it wants and the second loses what it has. There's no cure for the first but success; and there is no cure at all for the second.—Gordon Graham.

Well, Well.

"What's the row about?"

"A welfare worker tried his stuff on a prominent uplifter."

No Danger.

"Play poker with a bunch of women?" "No, I can't take their money." "Don't worry. You won't."

WOMAN AVOIDS AN OPERATION

Hope Nearly Gone, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Saved Her

Star, N. C.—"My monthly spells gave me so much trouble, sometimes they would last two weeks. I was treated by two doctors without relief and they both said I would have to have an operation. I had my trouble four years and was unfit to do anything, and had given up all hope of ever getting any better. I read about your medicine in the paper and decided to try it. I have used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills for about seven months and now I am able to do my work. I shall never forget your medicine and you may publish this if you want to as it is true."—Mrs. J. F. HURSEY, Star, N. C.

Here is another woman who adds her testimony to the many whose letters we have already published, proving that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound often restores health to suffering women even after they have gone so far that an operation is deemed inevitable. Therefore it will surely pay any woman who suffers from ailments peculiar to her sex to give this good old-fashioned remedy a fair trial.

Lawn Dice.
Wooden blocks, four to six inches in cubic dimensions, are used as elements in a game of lawn dice introduced by a western sportsman, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. As the blocks are fairly heavy, and are pitched somewhat the same as bowling balls, considerable exercise is afforded. Scoring is the same as in the ordinary game. It is said that the game is becoming very popular on the western coast.

First Really National Bank.
Bank of North America was the name of the first bank of a national character. It had a charter for ten years, from 1741, from the confederation, but doubt as to its legality led the bank to seek and obtain a charter from the state of Pennsylvania in 1783. In 1785 this latter charter was revoked, but in 1787 it was renewed. It was located at Philadelphia.

CHEERFUL APRON DRESSES CONTINUE TO BE PRETTY

ALL the descriptive names which manufacturers have given to frocks and aprons for housework, that of "apron-dress" is the most fitting. It describes exactly the uses to which these garments are put, for they serve both as dresses and as aprons. A great deal of attention is given to designing them and they are among the most subtle of all things ready-made. Therefore manufacturers see to it that their lines are good, their colors pleasing, and the materials used in them sturdy and practical.

The apron-dresses for fall show no new departures in style, but their producers are giving more attention to fit and to attractive finishing than ever. The fabrics used are the ones we are familiar with—fast-color percales in stripes, plaids and fancy patterns, checked and plaid ginghams and solid colors in ginghams and chambrays. In the percales there are dark or light grounds with stripes and figures. White and solid colors in suitable cottons, ric-rac and other braids, pearl buttons with a few tucks in the material, account for the decorations used sparingly on garments which are intended to be simple.

It would seem that there is small chance for much variety of design in frocks that employ so few kinds of material, but it turns out to be otherwise. There are so many patterns in the materials used, so great variety in color and so many color combinations that a never-ending succession of designs are produced. Besides, designers seem endlessly ingenious in the shaping of collars, belts, pockets, and in the placing of such simple finishing touches as buttons or the management of fastenings. A regulation apron-dress is presented in the picture; it is striped percale in the slip-on style, and the simplest design, but is typical of garments of this kind.

IN MILLINER'S WINDOW HATS SMILE AT AUTUMN

THERE is a sigh in the heart of most women for the passing summer, the lure of the milliner's windows just now will make them forget it. The cool September is greeted by cheerful and gracious hats that reflect and welcome the glorious days of autumn. Hats seem always anxious to please—and always they succeed, for it is their privilege to present something new each season, and that is what the restless sex is always looking for.

lyn assures us that those becoming off-the-face shapes, with a little variation in their lines, are as strong as ever for fall. Bugle beads provide the vivacious trimming. These hats are a little closer fitting and smaller than their forerunners—they are shown in many colors.

At the left a felt shape has a flavor of sport styles at least, with an applique of grapes and foliage on the crown made of silk, and a saw-tooth binding about the brim edge. This hat also makes opportunity for many color combinations.

For those in mourning a hat is shown made of black silk and crape with facing of white georgette. Dull black beads provide its ornament.

Here are five hats, typical of different styles, that reveal something of the new modes. The group begins with a dress hat at the upper left. This is a large shape with most beautiful lines—what milliners describe as a lovely movement in its brim and perfect balance. It is made of fuchsia colored velvet—its crown covered with ostrich flues in the fuchsia shades—purples and reds. Next it is a semi-crown hat of felt in one of the beloved pleasant tones. It has the large, soft crown characteristic of this season, and a handsome trimming of pleasant feathers that trail off the crown and brim.

Just below it a tailored hat of dove-

Marine's Reasons for Seeking Transfer to the Orient Prove Truth of Kipling's Statement.

Who says that Kipling didn't speak the mind of the enlisted man when he wrote: "Ship me somewhere east of Suez?" A marine, who put in a long tour of duty in the Orient, recently wrote the editor of this column that he had requested to be transferred out there again. His letter was poetical, but sincere. He wrote in part:

"I can see in my mind's eye that old recruiting slogan, 'See the World,' and as I hear in my imagination the booming of the surf on those oriental shores and scent the odor of the Celestial heathen, methinks I should like once again to brush elbows with those slant-eyed sons of Confucius."—From the Leatherneck.

Accept and Except.
He—My dear Miss Grabbiegh, I wish to propose—
She—Oh, my dear Mr. Cashin, I will accept you—
He—But I did not mean to propose marriage.
She—I meant, of course, that I would except you from my list of eligibles.—Boston Transcript.

Important to Mothers
Examine carefully every bottle of CASTORIA, that famous old remedy for infants and children, and see that it bears the Signature of W. D. Hoagland in Use for Over 30 Years. Children Cry for Fletcher's Castoria

And He Probably Did.
He was eight years old, cleanly and neatly dressed.
"Say," he said boldly to a man he approached at Market and Pennsylvania streets, "can you tell me where Bellefontaine street is?"
"Why, that's a long way from here. What number do you want?"
"I don't know the number, but it's a big double white house and I would know it if I saw it."
"I believe you are lost. You better see a policeman."
"I'll try to figure it out myself for a while first."
And he started off toward Massachusetts avenue to find the "big double white house."—Indianapolis News.

Time Exposure.
A judge's little daughter, who had attended her father's court for the first time, was very much interested in the day's proceedings. After her return home she told her mother:
"Papa made a speech and several other men made speeches to twelve men who sat all together, and then these twelve men were put in a dark room to be developed."—Pearson's Weekly.

There's a Reason.
Nell—"Is it really true that you're going to divorce Bob?" Bella—"Yes, I'm tired of being alone."

Men are not necessarily big guns just because they are big bores.

Find the Cause!

It isn't right to drag along feeling miserable—half sick. Find out what is making you feel so badly and try to correct it. Perhaps your kidneys are causing that throbbing backache or those sharp, stabbing pains. You may have morning lameness, too, headaches, dizzy spells and irregular kidney action. Use Doan's Kidney Pills. They have helped thousands of ailing folks. Ask your neighbor!

A Texas Case
Mrs. J. W. Tidwell, 701 S. Corder St., Cleburne, Tex., says: "I was that on my back with rheumatic pains and lameness just over my kidneys. My back was so lame, I couldn't stand up. I was discouraged, for I had tried many different remedies. The druggist advised me to try Doan's Kidney Pills and I did. Doan's cured me of that attack and I haven't had any trouble since."

Japan's Highest Court.
The Japanese Supreme court—the Daishon-in—consists of seven judges, the chief judge being appointed for life, or until removed to a higher position. Last June the late chief judge, Baron Kunioji Yokota, was given another berth "nearer the emperor," and Dr. Shotaro Tomiya was put in his place. Doctor Tomiya is a graduate of the Imperial university of Tokyo and is one of the best liked jurists in the empire. The Japanese code of procedure is patterned after the best in the American, English and French codes.—New York Tribune.

The Same.
Byron came home from Sunday school in a hurry. "Grandma," he began, "have we a 1921 Bible?"
Grandmother looked both mystified and amazed. "Our Sunday school teacher said for us all to bring one with us to Sunday school next time," he explained.

Not until his sister came home did they find out that the teacher had told them to bring their New Testaments to the church next Sunday.

Volcano Renews Activity.
A severe eruption of the volcano of Popocatepetl in Mexico occurred early in April. This is a recrudescence of the activity which began in the spring of 1920, after 200 years of quietude.

Advocating the Style.
Sammy was lamenting.
"I only wish my wife had bobbed her own hair," he cried.

Marriage is sometimes a failure, but more often it's a compromise.

Intellectual women are better as wives than as sweethearts.
