MODERN BUILDING FOR DAIRY HERD

Proper Housing of Animals Necessary for Full Production.

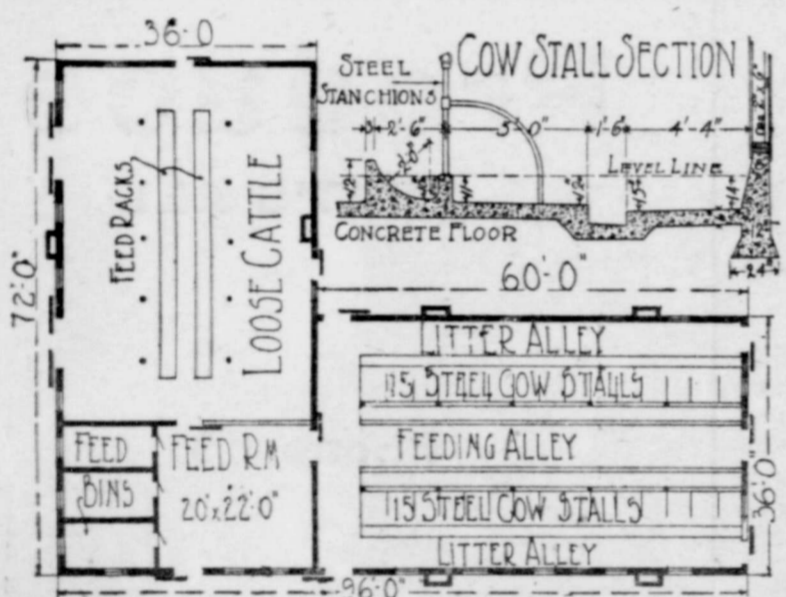

BARN WELL CONSTRUCTED

Has Thirty Steel Stalls for Cows and Large Open Feeding Room—Modern Labor-Saving Devices Are Employed.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 187 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

There was a time not so long back when the only crops raised in the states south of the Mason and Dixon line were cotton and tobacco. If these failed or the weevil got in its deadly work the farmer was out of luck. Moreover this constant repetition of the same crop used up the fertility of the soil and within a few years it was abandoned.

Similarly in the great country beyond the Mississippi wheat was the one and only crop. As in the case of the Southern farmers, these people suffered in case the crop failed.

But a change has been wrought in farming in both of these sections. Farmers by bitter experience have learned that it is not safe nor profitable to depend upon a single crop and consequently are going in for the diversified farming. And most important of all they are all taking up dairy work. They have bought herds to start with and are gradually building up a real dairy business.

For they know that a good herd will not fall them year in and year out. The dairy department of the modern farm is the most important because it is a source of all year-round revenue.

To make the herd as productive and as efficient as possible and increase this revenue, the farmer cannot direct his energy and thought in any better direction than that of building a real barn that will house these animals in comfortable fashion. For contented cows will give plenty of good milk.

There are several important features in the construction of a dairy barn that should be considered before the barn is built. In fact they should be uppermost in mind when the plans are being drawn up. Of these ventilation and stall arrangement are very vital. Without plenty of fresh air a herd cannot do justice. They need the air just as much as human beings.

In the barn shown here with floor plans these two salient features have not been overlooked. This is easily seen by the ventilators on the roof and the air intakes along the sides of the barn. This handsome and complete structure is 36 feet long and 36 feet wide with a wing 72 by 36 feet.

It is built of frame on a stout concrete foundation. The roof is gambrel shaped insuring plenty of room for a hay loft. In the main section of the barn are the cow stalls, 30 in number. These stalls are of the most modern design, the stanchions being spaced and so made as to be sanitary and efficient for stanching. In front of each stall is an individual drinking trough, insuring a steady supply of fresh water for the cows. Like all water is essential to good and plentiful milk production. This can not only provide this but insures much of the heavy work usually done by the old system of leading the herd to a neighboring trough.

These two rows of cow stalls face a central feeding alley over which runs a carrier track. The feed can be carried on carriers from the feedroom and given to the stock in their stalls without any back-breaking efforts on the part of the hired men. At the rear of each row of stalls is a litter alley also equipped with carrier tracks. Aside from the advantages which this modern stall equipment offers the cows, it is important from the standpoint of the help. It reduces immeasurably the drudgery around stock barns and helps in large measure to keep the boys contented. They have been leaving farms because of the unnecessary heavy work. Proper barn equipment will help to stem this exodus to the cities.

The floor is concrete while the stalls are wood block or cork brick. The animals cannot rest easily and comfortably on the solid floor, requiring a more resilient material. Lately asphalt mastic has been used for this purpose.

In the wing which extends across one end of the barn the various feedrooms and racks are located. An unusual feature of this barn is the large open feedroom with racks where loose cattle may roam and feed at will. These racks are set out in the middle of the floor and cattle can eat from either side. At the rear end of the wing are the regular feed bins and feedroom, 20 by 22 feet, where the various rations are prepared and hauled by carrier to the racks or stalls. Plenty of windows around the barn provide an abundance of sunlight and air. The barn doors are all hung on

SEPARATE SKIRTS FOR FALL ADD TAILORED ORNAMENTS

WITH its advantages in the use of cloths that employ beautiful color combinations and are varied by many patterns in stripes, plaids or checks, the separate skirt finds its nearest another great asset. The precision of plaits, and their management, wins it many admirers. Manufacturers are adding to this fine tailoring this season, small touches in tailored decorations, that call attention to the perfection of workmanship that is the glory of the tailor's art.

But the separate skirt appears to need a new name—it will soon be the "contrasting" skirt. There are many suits among the new showings in which the coats are plain and the skirt in a checked or plaid or striped pattern; the coats and skirts are intended for each other and will spend their days together. There is an advantage in owning an extra skirt—of the same material as the coat—because coats usually outwear skirts, but that is an after thought, the coat really belongs to the contrasting skirt.

One of the new skirts for fall is shown above, made of striped serge and box plaited so that the light stripes are revealed between the plaits of a solid color. The light stripe makes the neat folds that form small ornaments at each side of the front and diamond-shaped buttons, in two colors, matching the colors in the skirt, finish off the folds. A flat belt is made of the material and fastens with a button near the front.

Tailored and lingerie blouses continue to bear the separate skirt company. Those high-collared ones of crepe de chine, worn with tailored bows or ties at the neck, are among those present this fall and reasserting their perennial charm of neatness.

BLOUSES DELIGHT THE EYE WITH NEW ENCHANTMENTS

ALL womankind is straying shopward these days, making endless journeys and excursions among the new displays of hats and blouses. The milliner has a rival now, for blouses grow and grow in importance and delight the eye with new enchantments of beautiful color or exquisite, intricate garnishments. Going shopping is about as inviting as walking in a garden of wonderful flowers, but not so safe for the pocketbook. However, it is time now to make a choice among hats and blouses for fall—there never was a better time—and the first showings are apt to be the best.

Crepe de chine and other crepes appear to have seized upon the imagination of women almost to the exclusion of other materials, when they consider blouses. These lovely fabrics make all the fancy blouses and many of the plainer ones. It is always summer in their realm; at least there is nothing about them that betrays a concession to wintry weather. But they manage nevertheless to be gay harbingers of the new season by flaunting its colors and its embellishments. Many of the new blouses combine two colors and two materials, as can-ton crepe and georgette or crepe de chine and georgette. This last union of beautiful materials appears in the blouse pictured, of sapphire blue crepe de chine and black georgette. Like nearly all the fancy blouses it is cut with a peplum which in this case is of the georgette and extended above the waistline where it is joined to the body of the blouse under a row of French knots. The peplum is elaborated with slashes and ingeniously trimmed out at the bottom, across the front, where head fringe calls attention to its eccentricities. Beads with braid embroidery and a little extra stitching of silk make this a splendid bit of finery. It is a slip-over model cut in the kimono style and has a narrow sash of the georgette.

Particularly Youthful.

The straight bodice, with very little decoration and attached to a full skirt is a fancy of the moment for frocks of dark silk. These are particularly youthful.

DODSON WARNS CALOMEL USERS

You Cannot Gripe, Sicken, or Salivate Yourself if You Take "Dodson's Liver Tone" Instead

Calomel salivates! Its mercury, after one or two doses, will grip and sicken you and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and are knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents, which is harmless vegetable substitution for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your troubles over. The man in town, these days is the awkward fellow who always used to be stepping on some woman's skirt.—Detroit News.

ASPIRIN

Name "Bayer" on Genuine

Beware! Unless you see the name "Bayer" on package or on tablets you are not getting genuine Aspirin prescribed by physicians for twenty-one years and proved safe by millions. Take Aspirin only as told in the Bayer package for Colds, Headache, Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Earache, Toothache, Lumbago, and for Pain. Handy tin boxes of twelve Bayer Tablets of Aspirin cost few cents. Druggists also sell larger packages. Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Monocetate of Salicylic Acid.—Advertisement.

Auto Industry Gigantic. Hygienic Dish-Washing.

The hygienic importance of electric dish-washing has been shown in a report by Surgeon J. G. Cummings of the United States Army. Investigating the effects of the influenza epidemic in institutions having a quarter of a million people, it was found that where dishes were washed by hand there were 324 cases of the disease per 1,000 persons; but in hotels and other places having electric dish-washers the rate was only one-third as great, or 108 per 1,000. The washing by machines is not only more thorough than hand washing, but hotter water is used, and this insures more effective sterilization.

To Reclaim Used Motor Oil.

A company has been organized in London with the object of reclaiming stale lubricating oil. The waste oil can be bought at prices ranging up to about $100 per ton and in some cases can be had for the cost of collection. It is planned to establish immediately a plant near London with a capacity of treating 50 tons per week, which it is believed, can be easily collected in London and other plants in the various cities of the kingdom.—Scientific American.

In Boston.

Lady Visitor (to boy's mother)—Can't little James recite some of the verse he learns at school?

Boston Janie—No, Poetry according to my way of thinking, is without logical coherence and therefore devoid of interest, but I shall, if you desire, state some of the formulas of higher mathematics.

ENTERTAINS TEACHERS

One of the most delightful social functions of the season was the breakfast Saturday tendered the lady teachers of our school by the Nineteen Nineteen Study Club at the home of Mrs. R. B. Adams.

At 9 o'clock the guests assembled at the home of Mrs. E. C. Herd. At the door they were met by Mrs. Ed Dishman, president of the Club, who in her own gracious manner gave each a cordial welcome.

Festoons of ribbons in Club colors, green and white, hung from the ceiling to the four corners of the table in the center of the room.

Mrs. Herd presided over the punch bowl, serving the guests with delicious punch.

Sweet strains from the Edison lent charm to the hour.

At 9:30 the guests were invited to the home of Mrs. Adams, just across the street.

In the receiving line were Madams R. B. Adams, Chas. W. Kinslow, Louie Thompson and P. C. Johnson, whose hearty welcome filled each heart with cheer.

Tables were arranged in the living and dining rooms for thirty guests. Misses Mae and Alice Johnson and Mary Pope Walker deftly served a most delicious two course breakfast. The rooms were artificially lighted.

The tables, laid with beautiful linen and shining silver, with a vase of flowers in the center of each table, gave a pleasing effect.

Mrs. Walker, in a charming manner, gave a reading entitled "Simon's Wife's Mother Lay Sick of a Fever," and to a very hearty encore responded with "Miss Kitty, My Teacher."

Misses Mae and Alice Johnson, much to the delight of all, sang "Bible Stories," and responded to an encore with "Jesus Loves Me" in Chinese dialect.

Those present were Misses Willie Mamie Trapp, Ruth Coffey, Gladys Snody, Alma Anderson, Blanche Temple, Mae Simmons of Memphis, Ora Lee Campbell, Lizzie Wimberly, Mary Harris, Mae Johnson, Alice Johnson, Mary Pope Walker, Madams J. M. Green, Ed Kinslow, P. T. Boston, J. C. Coffey, W. D. Biggers, Belle Smith, L. W. Willis, B. W. Moreman of Lelia Lake, Alva Simmons, U. J. Boston, E. C. Herd, Ed Dishman, P. C. Johnson, R. B. Adams, Chas. W. Kinslow, J. R. Adamson, Nat S. Perrine, P. V. Dishman, Louie Thompson, Elmer Williams, Y. F. Walker.

The favors were carnations and chrysanthemums.

It was almost the noon hour before we departed, thanking the Club ladies for their hospitality and carrying with us sweet memories of this happy occasion.

Tells Childless Women What Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Did for Her

Millston, Wis.—"I want to give you a word of praise for your wonderful medicine. We are very fond of children and for a considerable time after we married I feared I would not have any owing to my weak condition. I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and now I have a nice strong healthy baby girl. I can honestly say that I did not suffer much more when my baby was born than I used to suffer with my periods before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound years ago. I give all the credit to your medicine and shall always recommend it very highly."—Mrs. H. H. JANSSEN, Millston, Wisconsin.

How can women who are weak and sickly expect or hope to become mothers of healthy children? Their first duty is to themselves. They should overcome the derangement or debility that is dragging them down, and strengthen the entire system, as did Mrs. Janssen, by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and then they will be in a position to give their children the blessing of a good constitution.

First Photograph of Human Face

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN.

HERE are two names that are sure of immortality: Catherine Dorothy Draper and John William Draper. For there will always be encyclopedias in which is the record of human progress and individual achievement. And these encyclopedias will contain articles on photography. And no article on photography is complete without mention of these two names.

For the first photograph of the human face was that of the fair features of Miss Draper. And the man who made the photograph was her brother, Professor Draper.

Moreover, whenever photographers meet to discuss their art, the story of the first photographic portrait is apt to be retold. At the recent convention of the American Chemical Society at Rochester, N. Y., Prof. Francis Owen Rice of New York university retold the story and exhibited the copy of the photograph reproduced herewith.

Interesting in this connection are the other photographs reproduced. Each gives a glimpse of the progress that has been made in the 82 years since the Drapers achieved immortality. The photograph of Theodore Roosevelt, assistant secretary of the navy, which shows him in the act of speaking, is the familiar snap-shot which the veriest amateur of the present day can take. The baseball scene is a speed-picture; the dirt thrown up by the man sliding in is suspended in the air, so fast did the shutter work. The bird's-eye of the White House was taken from an airplane, yet the picture is as clear as if the camera had been on a tripod on top of the Washington monument.

Louis Jaques Maude Daguerre (1789-1851), born in Normandy, is the pioneer of the process of photography; his name is immortalized in the word daguerreotype. He worked for many years to fix the pictures seen in the camera obscura. Photography, as everyone knows, is the art of preparing permanent representations of objects by means of the light they emit or transmit. Wedgwood and Davy are credited with the first step. They obtained prints of ferns and lace by placing them on paper or leather treated with silver nitrate and exposing them to the light.

Daguerre made the first photograph produced in a camera. It was a delicate positive; the image was very friable and no copies could be made. Still it was a photograph. Soon Daguerre reached the point where he made announcement that he could take a photograph of an inanimate object, his camera requiring an exposure of approximately half an hour.

This was in 1839. At the time Daguerre announced his discovery Prof. Samuel Finley Bresson Morse (1791-1872) was in Europe. Yes; this is the Morse who invented the telegraph, but he was more than an in-

NIGHT BLINDNESS.

What is known as night-blindness is a rare condition in which a person towards evening finds that objects are becoming less and less distinct, and at last he is totally blind. This may occur without previous warning and cause great alarm, but the next morning the victim of the condition finds to his delight that his sight is restored. This is repeated every night, but at last the eyes become so weak during the day also, that the victim may become partially or totally blind. This strange affliction may be epidemic. It has attacked bodies of troops exposed to great fatigue and the glare of the sun's rays. It is seldom met with in temperate climates, except among sailors just returned from tropical regions. It is frequent among the natives of some parts of India, who attribute it, as our own sailors do, to sleeping exposed to the moonbeams. The most probable cause of the affection is, however, exhaustion of the power of the retina from over-excitement, or from excessive light, so that this organ is rendered incapable of appreciating the weaker stimulating action of twilight or moonlight.

And This Is Glory!

Little Willie, sitting opposite to an old pensioner, whose breast bore many medals, gazed at him and the medals long and earnestly, and at length said to his mother: "Mother, why does that man wear his money on his coat? Won't they let him have pockets?" London Mirror.

vention. He was born in Charlestown, Mass., and was graduated from Yale in 1810. He studied painting under Washington Allston and Benjamin West. He became one of the best of our early portrait painters and a credit to his masters. He was the first president of the National Academy of Design. The University of the City of New York made him professor of the history of art in 1835. It was while returning from Europe in 1832 that he conceived the idea of the telegraph, but it was not until 1844 that his efforts were successful and he was able to send over the wire the message, "What hath God wrought?"

John William Draper (1811-1882) was born near Liverpool, England, and came to America in 1831. He graduated in medicine in 1836 from the University of Pennsylvania. He took the chair of chemistry and natural history in the University of New York in 1839. In 1841 he became professor of chemistry in the medical department of the university.

So, you see, in 1839, when Daguerre made his announcement of the first photograph, Morse and Draper were colleagues in New York university. Morse was interested in photography through his portrait painting and in chemistry through his telegraph on which he was working. Draper was interested in photography through his chemical investigations.

What more natural, then, that Morse should hasten to write Draper of Daguerre's success in taking a photograph in a camera? Moreover, Morse gave a full account of Daguerre's process. He and Daguerre were friends, the Frenchman having traveled in America, exhibiting "dissolving views."

Draper studied Morse's account. He quickly saw changes that could be made in the process to shorten the exposure of minutes to seconds. These, if successful, would enable him to make a photograph of a living subject.

So Draper immediately constructed a camera made out of a cigar box and two spectacle lenses. Preliminary experiments gave promise of success. Then he asked his sister to sit for him. She dressed up for the occasion in the costume fashionable among New York belles of the day and climbed with her brother to the roof of the university building where the sun was shining in full summer glare.

Draper first covered his sister's face with a thick coating of white. Then he put her down in a chair and clamped her head in an iron brace to prevent her moving. Doubtless there are "galleries" even yet in remote country districts where the clamp is considered a necessary part of the apparatus of a first-class gallery. Professor Draper made an exposure of only thirty seconds. Then he closed the camera and hurried to the dark room to develop the plate. As a matter of fact, all he really hoped to get was proof that an "instantaneous exposure" was feasible.

But it was an excellent likeness. In fact it was so excellent that most of the people to whom it was shown were entirely skeptical and did not hesitate to accuse the photographer of using the pencil of the artist to supply the deficiencies of the camera. However, Professor Draper obligingly repeated the experiment many times with unvarying success. Moreover he wrote several articles for the magazines of the day, giving full details. Finally the doubters were convinced.

Not only were the doubters convinced but they demanded photographs of themselves and their wives and their sweethearts. Soon there was such a demand for daguerreotypes that Draper and Morse opened a photograph gallery. This was certainly the first in America and probably the first in the world.

With Professor Morse in Europe in 1839 was Matthew B. Brady (1824-1896). He was a precocious boy of fifteen, an employee of A. T. Stewart, New York's "merchant prince." When Professor Draper produced his "instantaneous photograph" Brady saw his opportunity. He quickly established a gallery on Broadway. He was successful from the start. In 1851 he took a prize at the London world's fair. When the Civil war broke out he was "Brady, the Photographer," with world-wide fame and galleries in New York and Washington.

When the Civil war broke out Brady started out with a horse and buggy and a camera to photograph it. He was in the thick of the first battle of Bull Run. That night he blundered into the New York fire department zouaves. He was on foot, but he still had his negatives. The zouaves gave him a sword, which he strapped on outside of his linen duster and so made his way to Washington. In making his wonderful collection of Civil war pictures, he spent the fortune he had made as a photographer. In Washington, owned by Levin Corbin Handy, a nephew, is a collection of 10,000 Brady negatives. Nearly every one is the portrait of a celebrity. Edward VII is there. So are Andrew Jackson and Edgar Allan Poe and Sam Houston and Santa Anna and J. J. Audubon. The index reads like a catalogue of the world's greatest of the Nineteenth century.

Brady, the world's most famous photographer, died in the Presbyterian hospital, New York, a poor man.

THE DOOR SCOT.

Synopsis.—Jane Harding, respectable and conservative old spinster—but never too old to think of marriage—with more money than brains, is inveigled by a strong-minded spinster, Miss Higgleby-Browne into financing an expedition to hunt for buried treasure on Leeward island. Her niece, Virginia Harding, undertaking to stop her, gets on the vessel engaged for the hunt, and in the confusion is unwillingly carried along. By no means conceding her distaste for the expedition and her contempt for its members, Virginia makes the acquaintance of the Honorable Cuthbert Vane.

CHAPTER III.

Engage the Enemy.

It was fortunate that I slept well in my narrow berth on board the Rufus Smith, for the next day was one of trial. Aunt Jane had recovered what Mr. Tubbs, with deprecating coughs behind his hand, alluded to as her sea-legs, and staggered forth waveringly, leaning on the arm of Miss Higgleby-Browne. Yes, of Miss Browne, while I, Aunt Jane's own niece, trod meekly in the rear with a cushion. Already I had begun to realize how fatally I had underrated the lady of the hyphen, in imagining I had only to come and see and conquer Aunt Jane. The grim and bony one had made hay while the sun shone—while I was idling in California, and those criminally supine cousins were allowing Aunt Jane to run about New York at her own wild will. Miss Higgleby-Browne had her own collar and tag on Aunt Jane now, while she, so complete was her perversion, fairly hugged her slavery and called it freedom. Yes, she talked about her Emancipation and her Soul-force and her Individuality, prattling away like a child that has learned its lesson well. "Mercy, amny, what long words!" I cried gaily, sitting down beside her and patting her hand. Usually I can do anything with her when I get her up a bit. But the eye of Miss Higgleby-Browne was on her—and Aunt Jane actually drew a little away.

"Really, Virginia," she said, feebly endeavoring to rise to the occasion as she knew Miss Browne would have her rise, "really, while it's very nice to see you and all that, still I hope you realize that I have had a—deep Soul-experience, and that I am no longer to be trifled with and—treated as if I were—amusing. I am at a loss to imagine why you came. I wrote you that I was in the company of trusted friends."

"Friends!" I echoed aggrievedly. "Friends are all very well, of course, but when you and I have just each other, amny, I think it is unkind of you to expect me to stay thousands of miles away from you all by myself."

"But it was you who sent me to New York, and insisted on my staying there!" she cried. Evidently she had been living over her wrongs.

"Yes—but how different!" I interrupted hastily. "There were the cousins—of course I have to spare you sometimes to the rest of the family!" Aunt Jane is strong on family feeling, and frequently reproaches me with my lack of it.

But in expecting Aunt Jane to soften at this, I reckoned without Miss Higgleby-Browne. A dart from the cold gray eyes galvanized my aunt into a sudden rigid eccentricity.

"My dear Virginia," she said with quavering severity, "let me remind you that there are ties even dearer than those of blood—soul-affinities, you know, and—and, in short, in my dear friend Miss Higgleby-Browne I have met for the first time in my life with a—Sympathetic Intelligence that understands me!"

So that was Violet's line! I surveyed the Sympathetic Intelligence with a smiling interest.

"Really, how nice! And of course you feel quite sure that on your side you thoroughly understand—Miss Higgleby-Browne?"

Miss Browne's hair was rather like a clothesbrush in her mildest moods. In her rising wrath it seemed to quiver like a lion's mane.

"Miss Harding," she said, in the chest-tones she reserved for critical moments, "has a nature impossible to deceive, because itself incapable of deception. Miss Harding and I first met—in this plane—in an atmosphere unusually favorable to soul-revelation. I knew at once that here was the appointed comrade, while in Miss Harding there was the immediate recognition of a complementary spiritual force."

"It's perfectly true, Virginia," exclaimed Aunt Jane, beginning to cry. "You and Susan and everybody have always treated me as if I were a child and didn't know what I wanted, when the fact is I always have known perfectly well!" The last words issued in a wail from the depths of her handkerchief.

"You mean, I suppose," I exploded, "that what you have always wanted was to go off on this perfectly crazy chase after imaginary treasure!" There, now I had gone and done it. Of course it was my red hair.

"Jane," uttered Miss Higgleby-Browne in deep and awful tones, "do you or do you not realize how strangely prophetic were the warnings I gave you from the first—that if you revealed our plans malignant influences would be brought to bear? Be strong, Jane—cling to the Dynamic Thought!"

"I'm clinging!" sniffed Aunt Jane, dabbing away her tears. "Really, Virginia," she broke out in a whimper, "it is not kind to say, I suppose, but I would just as soon you hadn't come! Just when I was learning to expand my individuality—and then you come and somehow make it seem so much more difficult!"

I rose. "Very well, Aunt Jane," I said, coldly. "Expand all you like. When you get to the bursting point I'll do my best to save the pieces. For the present I suppose I had better leave you to company so much more favorable to your soul development!" And I walked away with my head in the air.

It was so much in the air, and the deck of the Rufus Smith was so unstable, that I fell over a coil of rope and fetched up in the arms of the Honorable Cuthbert Vane. Fortunately this occurred around the corner of the deck-house, out of sight of my aunt and Miss Browne, so the latter was unable to shed the lurid light on the episode which she doubtless would if she had seen it. Mr. Vane stood the shock well and promptly set me on my feet.

"I say!" he exclaimed sympathetically, "not hurt, are you? Beastly nuisance, you know, these ropes lying about—regular man-traps, I call 'em."

"Thanks, I'm quite all right," I said, and as I spoke two large genuine tears welled up into my eyes. I hadn't realized till I felt them smarting on my eyelids how deeply hurt I was at the unnatural behavior of Aunt Jane.

"Ah—I'm afraid you are really not quite all right!" returned the Honorable Cuthbert with profound concern. "Tell me what's the matter—please do!"

I shook my head. "It's nothing—you couldn't help me. It's just—Aunt Jane. She has let this awful Higgleby-

"Be Strong, Jane—Cling to the Dynamic Thought."

by-Browne person get possession of her, body and soul."

"Oh, I say, aren't you a bit rough on Miss Browne? Thought she was a rather remarkable old party—goes in strong for intellect and all that, you know."

"That's just what fooled Aunt Jane so—but I thought a man would know better." My feathers were ruffled again.

"Well, fact is, I'm not so much up in that sort of thing myself," he admitted modestly. "Rather took her word for it and all that, you know. There's Shaw, though—cleverest chap going, I assure you. I rather fancy Miss Browne couldn't pull the wool over his eyes much."

"She evidently did, though," I said snappishly, "since he's let her rope him in for such a wild goose chase as this!"

"Oh, really, now, Miss Harding, you don't think it's that—that the thing's all moonshine?"

"Why, what else can it be?" I demanded, driven by my wrongs to the cruelty of shattering his illusions. "Who ever heard of a pirate's treasure that wasn't moonshine? The moment I had read Aunt Jane's letter telling of the perfectly absurd business she was setting out on I rushed down by the first boat. Of course I meant to take her back with me, to put a stop to all this madness; but I was too late—and you are glad of it, I dare say!"

"I can't help being glad, you know," he replied, the color rising to his ingenuous cheeks. "It's so frightfully jolly having you along. Only I'm sorry you came against your will. Rather fancy you had it in your head that we were a band of cutthroats, eh?"

Well, the fact is I don't know much about the two chaps Miss Browne picked up, though I suspect they are a very decent sort. The odd fish, Captain Magnus, now—he was quite Miss Browne's own find. I assure you. And as to old H. H.—Tubbs, you know—Miss Browne met up with him on the boat coming down. The run old chap got on her soft side somehow, and first thing she had appointed him secretary and treasurer—as though we were a meeting of something. Shaw was quite a bit upset about it. I say, Miss Harding, you're bound to like Shaw no end when you know him—his's such a wonderfully clever chap!"

I had no wish to blight his faith in the superlative Mr. Shaw, and said nothing. This evidently pained him, and he continued to sound the praises of his idol. It seemed that as soon as Miss Browne had beguiled Aunt Jane into financing her scheme—a feat equivalent to robbing an infant-class scholar of his Sunday school nickel—she had cast about for a worthy leader for the forthcoming Harding-Browne expedition. All the winds of fame were hearing abroad just then the name of a certain young explorer who had lately added another continent or two to the British empire. Linked with his were other names, those of fellow adventurers, which shone only less brightly than that of their chief. One Dugald Shaw had been among the great man's most trusted lieutenants, but now, on the organization of the second expedition, he was left behind in London, only half recovered of a wound received in the Antarctic. His old companions had taken again the path of glory, and were far on their way back to the ice-fields of the South pole. Only Dugald Shaw was left behind.

"And so," the even voiced fellow on, "when I ran on to him in London he was feeling fearfully low, I do assure you. A chap of his sort naturally hates to think he's on the shelf."

"Well, old Shaw was fancying there was nothing for it but to go back to his place with the P. & O., which seemed a bit that after what he'd been having, and meant he would never get beyond being the captain of a liner, and not that for a good many years to come, when a cable came from this Miss Higgleby-Browne offering him command of this expedition. As neither of us had ever heard of Miss Higgleby-Browne, we were a bit floored for a time. But Shaw smoked a pipe on it, and then he said, 'Old chap, if they will give me my figure, I'm their man.' And I said, 'Quite so, old chap, and I'll go along, too.'"

"I had to argue quite a bit, but in the end the dear old boy let me come—after wiring the pater and what not. And I do assure you, Miss Harding, it strikes me as no end of a lark—besides expecting it to put old Shaw on his feet and give us hatfuls of money all round."

Well, it was a plausible story, and I had no doubt, so far as the Honorable Cuthbert was concerned, an absolute truthful one. The beautiful youth was manifestly as guileless as a small boy playing pirate with a wooden sword. But as to Mr. Shaw, who could tell that it hadn't after all been a trumped-up affair between Miss Browne and him—that his surprise at the message was not assumed to throw dust in the eyes of his young and trusting friend? So great was my faith in Aunt Jane's gullibility, so dark my distrust of Miss Browne, that all connected with the enterprise lay under the cloud of my suspicion. Mr. Shaw, after even a casual glimpse of him, one couldn't picture as a victim. I felt that he must have gone into the enterprise with his eyes wide open to its absurdity, and fully aware that the only gold to be won by anybody must come out of the pocket of Aunt Jane.

As these reflections passed through my mind I looked up and saw the subject of them approaching. He lifted his helmet, but met my eyes unsmilingly, with a sort of sober scrutiny. He had the tanned skin of a sailor, and brown hair cropped close and showing a trace of gray. This and a certain dark grim look he had made me at first consider him quite middle-aged, though I knew later that he was not yet thirty-five. As to the grimmness, perhaps, I unwillingly conceded, part of it was due to a scar which seamed the right temple to the eyebrow, in a straight livid line.

He was welcomed by Mr. Vane with a joyous thump on the shoulder-blade. "I say, old man, Miss Harding has turned out to be the most fearful doubting Thomas—thinks the whole scheme quite mad and all that sort of thing."

"Yes, but Columbus did not inveigle a confiding old lady to go along with him."

A Conundrum.

"Father," said a little boy thoughtfully, as he watched his parent collect his notes and arrange the slides for a parish entertainment, "why is it that when you spend your holiday in the Holy land you always give a lantern lecture on it? You never do when you have been to Paris!"—London Morning Post.

SHOOT SHEEP-KILLING DOGS

No Consideration Should Be Given Such Animals and Should Be Destroyed at Once.

Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.

The sheep-killing dog constitutes one of the greatest menaces to the sheep industry. Such dogs not only kill sheep, but keep out of the sheep business men who are otherwise inclined to go into it, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Sheep-killing dogs work both singly and in groups, but usually in twos or threes. They do not limit their attacks to the flocks of the immediate vicinity in which they are kept, but travel for miles in all directions, spreading destruction in the flocks with which they come in contact. Because their work is so often done under the cover of darkness it is almost impossible to catch them in the act of destroying sheep.

After a dog has once formed the habit of killing sheep it seemingly becomes a mania with him and he is seldom if ever broken of it. He not only destroys sheep himself but leads other dogs to the work. No consideration should be given such dogs; and if additional losses from this source are to be avoided, they should be killed as soon as their habits are known.

FEEDING CATTLE FOR PROFIT

Market Requirements for Beef Are Much Higher Than in Former Years—Skill Needed.

The feeding of beef cattle for the market has become a special line of work, which requires a high grade of skill through understanding of the feeding values of different materials used in the production of beef, as well as an appreciation of the requirements of animal nutrition and shrewd business ability. Without these prerequisites the feeder is doomed to receive very small returns for his labor. The market requirements for beef at present are much higher than in former years. It is necessary, therefore, in order to obtain prices which will pay the feeder for his time and outlay, to produce a herd of cattle as nearly uniform as possible in appearance and quality, with a high market finish and symmetrical development, particularly in those parts which yield high-priced cuts in which the profits lie for the butcher.

ARRANGE WALLOWS FOR HOGS

Water Must Be Supplied Not Only for Drinking but for Animals to Cool Bodies.

Hogs in pasture where there is no water are likely to suffer, not only for drinking water, but for water in which to cool their bodies. Slops are not sufficient. The hogs should have water in their troughs and in the wallow to cool themselves when the burning rays of the sun makes their lives a torture.

Hogs have a way of ridding themselves of troublesome parasites when they have a muddy wallow. Nature, it seems, helps them to survive as the fittest when there is a struggle for existence with parasites.

Hogs that must be penned should have shade and plenty of water. It is bad enough to be kept in pen without a struggle with heat and thirst. Give them shade and water.

PLAN TO PREVENT INFECTION

Newly Purchased Animals Should Be Quarantined in Separate Pens for Two Weeks.

Do not place newly purchased stock, stock procured or borrowed for breeding purposes, or stock exhibited at fairs immediately with your herd. Keep such stock quarantined in separate pens for at least two weeks, and use care in feeding and attending stock to prevent carrying infection from these to other pens.

BOAR HAS GREAT INFLUENCE

Breeding Animal Should Be Placed in Good-Sized Yard and Away From Rest of Herd.

How about the herd boar? Get him out in a good-sized yard, away from the rest of the herd. Remember he is half of the breeding power of the herd, and that his influence on the profits for the year amounts to more than that of any one sow.

MR. BOWSER'S PITY

It Is Sometimes a Little Misplaced.

By M. QUAD.

(©, 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Mr. Bowser was more than half an hour late in coming up to dinner the other evening. No explanations were demanded of him, but at the dinner table he said:

"Mrs. Bowser, I met with a case that called for all my pity."

"Was it a lame horse?" she asked in her satirical way.

"Don't talk that way to me if you want to hear about it!" said Mr. Bowser in petulant tones.

"But you seem to pity everything and everybody."

"Well, I was born that way and can't help it. It would be a great deal better for you if you showed more pity. I was coming home at the usual hour. In passing the street I saw a lot of furniture on the sidewalk."

"Yes, the people were moving."

"They were not moving, Mrs. Bowser, for they had no place to go to. They could not pay the rent the greedy landlord demanded, and so they were evicted."

"Yes, you saw all this," remarked Mrs. Bowser.

"And, of course, I got off the car to see what the trouble was. I saw three widows seated on chairs and crying as if their hearts would break. There was a crowd around them, but no one offered assistance."

"No one but you?"

"Samuel J. Bowser has never seen a person in misfortune without offering assistance, and he does not want to be praised for it."

"How much did you give?" queried Mrs. Bowser.

"I did not give anything in a money way, though it may come to that tomorrow. The first thing was to shelter them from the night blast. I may tomorrow spend the day in looking for houses for them."

"I am sure they ought to be very thankful. There are many poor widows in town and they ought to find friends."

"But I haven't told you all," continued Mr. Bowser. "As I came along I saw a horse barn for rent. I went right to the owner and rented it for a week, and I shall place the three widows and their belongings in the barn for a day or two. It isn't just the place for them, but people must bend to circumstances. I am now going out in search of a moving van, and I may not be home for three hours. The widows can go to a restaurant and get dinner while I am moving the furniture."

"Your errand of pity does you great credit," remarked Mrs. Bowser, making a sudden change in her attitude.

"That is what I like hear you say," said Mr. Bowser, taking new courage. "If any newspaper man comes here you can give him the full particulars. It won't do a bit of hurt to have it all in the papers. It will make the rest of the people in town ashamed of themselves. Don't wait for me, but go to bed whenever you like."

Mr. Bowser went down the street, where he saw the evicted persons, and they still sat around in a disconsolate way. The crowd had mostly departed, and not one of them had put his hand in his pocket to aid the distress.

"Look here, woman," said Mr. Bowser, as he came to the first widow. "You can't stay out here all night, can you?"

"But where else can I go?" was the question.

"Isn't there some houses to rent farther down the street?"

"Yes, I think so, but they want $20 a month, and the rent must be paid in advance."

Here was an invitation for Bowser to put up $20, but he didn't take advantage of the golden opportunity. He said in reply:

"I have found you temporary quarters for a day or two, and then we will see what can be done."

"You are a good man," replied the widow, "but where are the quarters?"

"Well, they are in a barn, but it is a nice, clean barn and there is plenty of room."

"What! What!" exclaimed the widow. "Me move into a barn! I think not! I am no horse to live in a barn! It hasn't come to that yet!"

"But, my good woman, what can we do?" asked Mr. Bowser.

"I will tell you what we can't do, that is stable me up like an old horse. Do you suppose I have come to eating hay and oats! You ought to be ashamed of yourself to come along here with such a plan as that!"

"But you see—"

"No, I don't see anything!" was interrupted. "If I had $20 I could get a very nice house. There are four rooms, and they have just been repaired. It is just the place for a poor widow."

Mr. Bowser passed on to the next, and asked:

"My good woman, I come to your relief."

"Well, you are the first one who ever did," she replied. "I thought I would have to stay out here all night, but you are going to get me a house."

"Madam, I have rented a barn for you to stay in for two or three days, and then you can arrange things. You see, you can't stay out here all night."

"You have rented a barn for me!" sharply queried the woman. "What on earth do you take me for?"

"I take you for a widow in misfortune. It is a nice, clean barn. It smells of horse a little, but you will soon get used to that. You see, we can't run around at night to find a house."

"I'm Not a Horse to Live in a Barn."

"But I will sit here all night before I sleep in a barn! There are nice rooms up the street about two blocks, and I could move right in there if I had $18 in cash. You don't know how nice those rooms are. There is running water, three front windows to look out of, and the roof does not leak a drop. I should be so happy living there."

Mr. Bowser hung on to his $18 and passed on to the next. The third widow was ready to say to him:

"See here, Mr. Man, I heard what you said to the other women, and if they are not horses to be tied up in a barn you needn't think I am one! I am just as good as they are! And I have never lived in a barn and never shall!"

"But, you see, it is a case of misfortune," softly replied Mr. Bowser.

"Then why don't you put your hand in your pocket and pay my rent for a month. There is a family up here who will rent their parlor to me, and I can have the privilege of the kitchen. It is a beautiful parlor, and there is gold in the paper on the wall. All they will charge me is $12 a month. Come now, what are you going to do?"

What Mr. Bowser did was to turn away and take his road home. He felt to pity, but not exactly $50 worth, with the rent of the stable added to that. As he entered the house and sat down, Mrs. Bowser raised her eyebrows, as if asking a question, and he replied:

"I got there too late. A charity society had taken charge of the widows."

No Standardized Golf Ball.

An interesting point in connection with balls is that tennis balls and baseballs have both been standardized much more than the golf ball. In golf no particular brand of ball has been adopted, but in the last year the rules have been changed by the United States Golf association and the Royal and Ancient in Britain, to specify that a ball not smaller than 1.62 inches in diameter, nor more than 1.62 ounces in weight be used in tournament golf.

The reason why no particular make of ball has been selected as official in the golf field is that only one player uses the ball in the course of the tournament," an authority said.

"In tennis and baseball there has to be not only a standard ball, but one of a particular make, because with these balls the player is asking his opponent to use the same ball. Your ball may suit your style of play yet send him off his game."—Exchange.

Fish That Fight Malaria.

A fish known as Gambia affinis, which devours the larvae of the propagator of malaria, the Anopheles mosquito, has been acclimatized in Spain. Attempts to acclimatize these fish in Britain, France, and Italy, have failed.

The fish, which were imported into Spain by the American Red Cross, are being sent in large quantities to the malarial regions.

Japanese Trial by Ordeal.

Trial by ordeal still exists in some parts of Japan. If a theft takes place in a household, all the servants are requested to write a certain word with the same brush. The conscience is supposed to betray its workings in the waves of the ideographs written. Tracing an ideograph involves such an effort of muscular directness and undivided attention that the device often leads to the discovery of the guilty person.

It is very rare that the average newspaper boosts its own business, but gives quantities of space in boosting the affairs of others.

Somebody suggested that it is time for the newspapers of the country to adept a week in which their own business should be given precedence, and the Informer endorses the idea.

The date set is the second week in November, from 7th to 12th, including that great world event, Armistice Day.

The official title for the week is "Subscribe for your Home Town Paper Week."

Thousands of papers will join in this event, and our readers will hear more about it as time goes on.

The home town paper, large or small, is always ready to help any cause in the interest of a better community, better living conditions, and better government. SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

By F. A. Walker

WHAT CHILDREN READ

PEOPLE would not worry so much about what they call the "modern child," if they only stopped to think that fathers and mothers, uncles and aunts, of every generation had their doubts as to the new generation.

In fact, Adam and Eve were, in all probability, the only proud parents in all history who never said, "Children did not do such things when we were young."

The very latest discovery that has been made about the little boys and girls of America is that their taste in reading is quite different from that of their elders at the same age.

It appears that they are finding rather dull some of the things that appealed to the youngsters of former days, and are demanding more excitement than is good for them.

It is well, in thinking about such a subject, always to remember that older people have a weakness for considering any such change in taste as for the worse.

That is the compliment that maturity pays to itself.

The great trouble is that we don't remember what we really cared for when we were small.

Many of the things that we were supposed to enjoy we didn't really like until we grew up. Others that were forced on us for our good were spoiled for us forever.

Children have no sense of subtlety, or irony. This is natural.

They read "Alice in Wonderland," or "Gulliver's Travels," or "The Arabian Nights" for the straight story, not for any secondary meaning that is beyond them.

A clever American woman suggests that the children, especially in a big family, should be encouraged to write stories of wild adventure for each other.

self, will last longer than anything else in the way of history or travels that he ever wrote.

For him and his youngsters, the woods and waters around Oyster Bay were delightfully mysterious, where anything might happen.

For children the world is still, and always will be, full of a number of things. The main thing is not to try to turn them into little men and women.

LYRICS OF LIFE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE CONTEST.

OLD age complains when Winter reigns.

But youth runs out to play And finds in storms a thing that warms

Its pulses all the way— It is the contest so intense With Winter's angry elements.

The weak perspire beside the fire And shiver with the cold; The sturdy go to meet the snow With hearts increasing bold.

With hearts made stronger by the gale, Whatever arrows may assail.

The timid groan, the timid moan, When troubles cloud the sky; The brave go out and do not doubt, Unfriendly fate defy.

And find each contest bravely met Makes each contestant braver yet.

When thunders roll before your goal, What will your answer be?

Will you go forth to face the north, Or from the north flee?

Does Winter drive you to your fire, Or each new storm new strength inspire?

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name, its history, meaning, whence it was derived, significance, your lucky day and lucky jewel.

ERNESTINE.

ERNESTINE has an origin of lofty dignity. She is one of the "Eagle" names. Like many of the feminine names connected with mythology, the eagle occupied a position of great respect and even adoration among the ancients, and his name, with various suffixes and prefixes, furnished many of the cognomens then in vogue.

In Scotland the word for eagle was "erne" and the name was found in all countries where there were mountains, the homeland of the king of birds, Arundur, or Arneidur, was said to be the daughter of Asbjorn, of the Hebrides, who was sold to an Icelandic named Katell Thymr. This lady had the good fortune to find a quantity of silver sufficient for her ransom beneath the roots of a tree, but she decided to remain the wife of Thymr and goes down in history as one of the famous women of Iceland.

The next step in the evolution of Ernestine was Arnthora, and later Annora, who was the wife of Bernard de St. Valery. Her name was carried into the family of Braose by King John's victim, Maude de St. Valery, who called one of her daughters Annora.

The masculine Ernesto, which preceded Ernestine directly, appeared first in Lombardy in the year 752, through Markgraf of Austria Ernst spread all over Germany after the Reformation, and it was Germany which finally formed the feminine Ernestine. Though still in great vogue there, it has of late years been contracted to Stine, or Tine, or sometimes Erna.

Bohemia calls her by elaborate Arnostinka, but England and America took her over as Ernestine, and preserves her as such.

The moonstone is Ernestine's talismanic gem. It is said to bring her good fortune and good health and is particularly lucky for lovers who, old legend insists, may read the future in its depths. Sunday is her lucky day and 5 her lucky number. Yellow is said to be her color.

SUCCESSFUL BUTTER MAKING

Work is Not Difficult, but Scrupulous Cleanliness Must Be Observed at Every Stage.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The best foods in the world are available to the farm home which cares to raise and prepare them. Good butter freshly churned several times a week is one of the luxuries incident to life on the farm, and more than repays the home butter maker for the trouble involved. The work is not difficult, but scrupulous cleanliness must be observed at every stage. All utensils should be washed and scalded before and after churning.

The first consideration is the cream, which should contain about 30 per cent buttermilk. A gallon of cream of this standard will yield about three pounds of butter. It is better to churn the cream, not the whole milk. The cream should be cooled immediately after it comes from the separator and kept as cold as possible until the time for ripening, which should be done at a temperature between 65 degrees Fahrenheit and 75 degrees Fahrenheit. When the cream is mildly sour, it should be cooled to churning temperature or below and held so for at least two hours before churning begins.

Successful butter-making depends largely on the temperature at which churning is done, but there is no one temperature proper for every season of the year. Churning is a mechanical process, and if it is done under the same conditions on one day as on another the results should be identical. The temperature is the factor which must be varied to get uniform results.

There is nothing in the old superstitions regarding butter-making, such as turning the churn backwards or putting a horseshoe nail into it to make the butter come. If the temperature is too low, the churning period is unnecessarily prolonged, or it may be impossible to obtain butter. Too high a churning temperature is also to be avoided because buttermilk will be lost, the butter will be soft and will not keep well.

Butter will come in ten minutes at too high a churning temperature, or even in seven, with some patent

SEASONABLE FOODS.

THERE must be something wrong with the people who do not enjoy the luscious muskmelon and the rosy-meat watermelon, yet you find men who even dislike lemon pie, so it is hard to suit all tastes; however, "there is no loss without some gain," for there wouldn't be enough of such good things to satisfy all appetites if everybody wanted the same food at the same time.

Orange Ice in Melon Cups. This is really the nth power of serving, for each alone is delicious enough. Wash the small melons, cut in halves and scrape out the seeds and membrane carefully. Chill and fill with orange ice. Boil one cupful of sugar with a pint of water and the grated rind of an orange, add the juice of one lemon and the juice of four oranges, strain and freeze as usual.

Pimento Cheese. A most delicious cheese may be prepared at home at a small fraction of the cost usually paid for such an article. Take one-fourth of a pound of good, snappy American cheese, put through the meat chopper, also grind with three hard-cooked eggs, three or four canned pimentoes. Alternate the egg and peppers through the grinder to save the juice of the pepper, season with salt and cayenne, add mayonnaise dressing to moisten, and put away to chill. Cover with paraffin paper and keep in the ice chest. It never spoils, for it doesn't last long enough. This is excellent for the sandwich filling for hungry boys and men who carry lunches to school or work.

Fried Chicken With Boiled Rice. Cut up the chicken for frying, add butter to the hot frying pan, sprinkle the seasoning in flour and roll each piece until well covered. Place in the pan and cook slowly, closely covered, until quite tender, then brown. The chicken will be much more delicious and moist than if fried brown at once. Heap a mound of well-cooked hot rice in the center of the platter, surround with the chicken and serve with ripe olives.

Twin Mountain Muffins. Cream one-third of a cupful of butter, add one-fourth of a cupful of sugar, then alternately add three-fourths of a cupful of milk, two cupfuls of sifted flour, sifted with four teaspoonfuls of baking powder and one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt; add one egg well beaten, mix and bake in green pans. A cupful of well-floured blueberries, or dates finely cut, may be added if desired.

M. W. Mosley was down from Clarendon Saturday, and while here renewed his subscription to the religious weekly. Milt says "Everything is lovely and the goose hangs high." He has already picked out 18 bales of cotton, and that he has 80 acres which will make 40 bales or better. Not so worse, eh? We are glad to know that the Mosley family will move back into Hedley territory as soon as the present crop is gathered.

"HOME TOWN PAPER WEEK"

Every "Four Corners" has its Home Town Week nowadays, but all the boys and girls who have wandered from the Township Center cannot get back to enjoy the beloved surroundings. But all can subscribe to the Old Home Town Paper and thus keep well in touch with the little spot they once called home.

What joy to run over the school promotions and find that the tots of a few years ago are moving higher and higher in scholastic circles and eventually blossom forth as the "sweet girl graduates," or the clean strong boys discarding knickers.

Just watch the hardened old city coddler open up his home paper—it's the first thing he picks out of his mail—and what can he find there to interest him? Angus McGugan's horse died yesterday; Peter McGregor will run for the county clerkship; Horace Jell hopes to win the secretaryship of the Hilltown agricultural society; Lydia Munger has opened a millinery store in one side of the printing office. Mrs. Brown lost her hand satch el in the butchery; Dr. Dorland is attending Clara Brown who is down with a severe cold; Mrs. Plater broke her ankle and is in the county hospital.

Yet, though he smiles at the old time styles and expressions, he enjoys it all over and over again, for it takes his mind back home where his wonderful boyhood days—happy days—were spent.

See our "Home Town Paper Week" announcement elsewhere in this issue.

Something Different

IN WEARING APPAREL APPEALS TO WOMEN SHOPPERS. WE have a big stock of Ready-to-Wear and every garment is different, even in cheap dresses and coats. We buy from several good houses in New York and buy only one garment of a kind, and in looking over garments in our town and adjoining towns you won't find styles like ours.

We follow this rule also in our Millinery department. Our slogan is "Only one hat of a kind."

Everybody that looks over our ready-to-wear stock is amazed at the very low prices we are making on coats, suits and dresses.
