MINERAL MIXTURES FOR STEERS PAY

During the past winter the Iowa experiment station fed a bunch of two-year-old steers weighing around 950 pounds to see if simple mineral mixtures paid.

One lot of seven steers was fed shelled corn, linseed oilmeal, corn silage and clover hay. Another lot of seven steers received in addition to the above, one ounce per head daily of a mixture containing 49.99 pounds of high calcium limestone; 49.99 pounds of spent boneblack and .02 pound of potassium iodide. Still another lot, in addition to the standard ration, received two ounces per head daily of the following: high calcium limestone, 24.99 pounds; spent boneblack, 24.99 pounds; potassium iodide, .01 pound, and powdered sulphur, 50 pounds.

The mineral-fed lots showed a slightly better daily gain, approximately the same daily feed consumption and almost the same cost of 100 pounds of gain as the steers fed the check ration. The estimated selling price was 35 cents a hundred pounds more on the mineral-fed lots, making the margin per steer over feed cost after crediting hog gains at $6.75, $5 more than the check lot for the first lot and $4.33 more than the check lot for the lot which received sulphur.

Ground soy beans and soy bean oilmeal as substitutes for linseed oilmeal were also tried out. The check ration consisted of shell corn, corn silage, clover hay and linseed oilmeal. In the test one lot received ground soy beans in the place of linseed oilmeal and the other received soy bean oilmeal. After crediting hog gains at $6.75 a hundred the check lot showed a margin over feed cost per steer of $3 more than the lot that received ground soy beans and $4.43 more than the lot fed soy bean oilmeal. In the case of the ground soy beans the rate of daily gain was lower and the cost of 100 pounds of gain higher. The soy bean oilmeal lot showed practically the same daily gain and cost of 100 pounds of gain as the linseed oilmeal group but the estimated selling price was lower. Linseed oilmeal was valued at $45, ground soy beans at $45 and soy bean oilmeal at $50 per ton.

Soy bean hay when used to replace red clover hay produced steers that made a margin over feed cost $4.88 less than the clover fed lot. Clover hay and soy bean hay were both valued at $20 a ton.

Unnecessary Expense to Grind Beans for Swine

Fattening hogs will eat whole soy beans more readily than ground soy beans, according to C. M. Vestal of Purdue university. A series of experiments just finished at the agriculture college shows that a lot of pigs fed ground beans made an average daily gain of 1.56 pounds during a 70-day test. They ate 301 pounds of whole soy beans and 80 pounds of soy beans during 100 pounds gain. A lot fed on whole soy beans made exactly the same daily gain. They ate 282 pounds of corn and 95 pounds of soy beans for each 100 pounds gain. The feed cost for 100 pounds gain was $5.77 for the ground soy beans and $5.82 for the whole soy beans, with corn at 70 cents a bushel, ground soy beans at $1.50 a bushel and whole soys at $1.45 a bushel.

In a check experiment with three lots of hogs, the lot fed on ground soy beans made a daily gain of 1.64 pounds with a feed cost of $6.05 per hundred pounds gain. The lot 2d on whole soys made a gain of 1.69 pounds daily with a feed cost of $6.09 per hundred. A third lot fed on un-threshed soy beans made an average daily gain of 1.44 pounds at a feed cost of $6.08. These figures show that grinding beans for hogs is an unnecessary expense.

Live Stock Hints

Keep the pigs well supplied with shade and fresh water.

Guard rails in the pig pen keep the sow from mashing her young.

Sun and light make for sanitation in the pig sty.

One of the most successful methods of eradicating sweet clover hay is to allow the plants to wilt in the swath then windrow with a side-delivery rake and, a few hours later, place in small upright cocks.

See that the pigs have a clean trough for sour feed will cause digestive troubles.

Provide shade and water for all classes of live stock to prevent them from suffering from the heat.

Keep the sows and pigs in clean dry quarters. Filthy quarters are responsible for nearly all pig ailments.

The fattening of cattle on pasture is a practice that has been increasing each year for the past several years.

AFTER BABY ARRIVES

Many Mothers Weak, Nervous

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helps to Restore Health

A great many letters similar to the following recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a wonderful medicine for bringing the new mother back to normal health and strength.

It is an excellent restorative, contains no harmful drugs, and can be taken in safety by a nursing mother.

Thousands of mothers who have regained their strength by taking it are its best recommendation. Why not take it yourself?

Now Well Again

Milwaukee, Wisconsin.—"After I had my second child I felt sick and nervous and could not do much. Then after the other baby came I was worse than ever. I suffered this way for a long time and did not know what to do. I was looking over my cook books and I found one of your little books and I sat down and read every page. Then I bought a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and took four bottles of it before I stopped, and now I am well again. I always recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends."—Mrs. JOHN MITZKE, 773 6th Ave., Milwaukee, Wis.

Buffalo, N. Y.—"My health got worse after my little girl's birth, and my mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as it had done her so much good. I had headaches and tired feelings, with no ambition, also pains at times so it hurt me to walk. With the Vegetable Compound I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, and I have been greatly helped. I do hope you will use my letter as a testimonial as it will help other women."—Mrs. GEORGE SHOEMAKER, 849 Emslie St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Followed Friend's Advice

Vienna, South Dakota.—"After my second child was born I was completely run-down and didn't care for anything. I had sharp pains in my sides and a white discharge and was nervous and weak. I didn't seem to care how I neglected my work. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it for two months the first time and one month the last time. It has helped me in a great many ways and the pains have left me entirely. I certainly wish you to know how much benefit I have received."—Mrs. G. W. FREEMAN, Vienna, South Dakota.

Such letters and a successful record of fifty years should convince every ailing woman that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine she needs. For sale by druggists everywhere.

What Is It?

It is a duty both useful and necessary; it is esteemed a great virtue, but few possess it; it is found in the lower as well as the higher circles of life, and is often exhausted and as often renewed. Our sufferings are rendered lighter by it, and our trials are softened; it gives contentment to the mind and ease to the conscience, to the afflicted hope and to the mournful consolation. What is it? Answer.—Patience.

Royal Painter Broke

The gradual disappearance of European monarchies has thrown Phillip A. de Laszlo, famous painter of royal families, out of a job. The establishment of republican rule in Russia, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Greece, Turkey and Portugal has meant to him the loss of his most distinguished clients.

SWAMP-ROOT FOR KIDNEY AILMENTS

There is only one medicine that really stands out pre-eminent as a medicine for curable ailments of the kidneys, liver and bladder.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root stands the highest for the reason that it has proven to be just the remedy needed in thousands upon thousands of distressing cases. Swamp-Root makes friends quickly because its mild and immediate effect is soon realized in most cases. It is a gentle, healing vegetable compound.

Start treatment at once. Sold at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation, send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing, be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Elk Bother Farmers

Hungry elk emerging from the foothills and feasting on haystacks in the vicinity of Okanogan, Wash., have caused farmers to organize to combat them. The elk herds have been driven back by the firing of blank shells over their heads, but with the return of hunger the animals revisit the farm lands.

Freshen a Heavy Skin

With the antiseptic, fascinating Cuticura Talcum Powder, an exquisitely scented, economical face, skin, baby and dusting powder and perfume. Renders other perfumes superfluous. One of the Cuticura Toilet Trio (Soap, Ointment, Talcum).—Advertisement.

In Unmistakable Language

WHEY AND MANY DIFFERENT USES FOR IT STRAIGHT LINES REMAIN VOGUE; SIMPLICITY IN EVENING FROCKS

Whey Lemonade is Quite Refreshing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Just as buttermilk represents what is left from cream in butter making, so whey represents what is left from milk in cheese making. Though less nutritious than buttermilk and skim milk, since it contains less protein, whey may be substituted for them in making bread and other cooked foods, and it is also useful in some cases as a mild laxative drink for invalids.

Whey that differs little in composition from regular cheese whey, may be made at home by cooking sweet milk with some acid material, such as vinegar, lemon juice, or cream of tartar, or even with sour milk, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Fresh curds and whey is an old-fashioned dish still used to some extent, though less common than it was when cheese making was regularly carried on in the home.

Whey Lemonade and Punch.
1 quart whey. Slices of lemon
4 table-spoonfuls or a little grat-
sugar, or sugar, or diced
Juice of 2 lemons. rind, nutmeg or cinnamon.

Mix, chill and serve as a beverage.
Variations.—Double the quantity of lemon juice and of sugar and add other fruit juices and a little fruit cut in small pieces. This transforms whey lemonade into whey punch. Set the punch away to chill and ripen; serve with crushed ice if desired. Rhubarb, pineapple, grape, currant and cherry juices lend themselves well to whey punch. A sprig of freshly crushed mint is sometimes added. Nutmeg or cinnamon will overcome any characteristic whey flavor. Whey punch may be frozen if desired.

Whey Honey.
1 cupful whey. 1/2 cupful corn
1-2 cupful sugar, sirup, either white or brown.

Mix whey and sugar and boil the mixture till it is of the consistency of strained honey. This sirup will keep indefinitely if properly bottled and is delicious for spreading on waffles or pancakes. Used a little thinner it makes an excellent pudding sauce. Since it requires no thickening it is the easiest possible sauce to make.

RICE IS EXCELLENT BASIS FOR SALADS

Useful Also in Fixing Up Left-Overs of Many Kinds.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Cold boiled rice, if very dry and flaky, is an excellent basis for many salads and may be the means of using left-overs of vegetables, fruits, meat, or fish, says the United States Department of Agriculture. For instance, left-over peas, carrots, green beans, or fresh tomatoes may be combined with left-over rice, and small amounts of fresh fruits may be used in the same way. Grapefruit makes a delicious salad served with rice and French dressing. Plain, cold boiled rice or cold pressed rice may be served with lettuce with a hot or cold cheese dressing or with mayonnaise. Either adds greatly to the nutritive value of the dish and gives it a distinctive flavor. Because of its texture, rice readily takes up the flavor of any dressing.

Souffle of Peas Useful for Luncheon or Supper

Lima beans, split peas, cowpeas or fresh or canned green peas may be used to make a luncheon or supper dish that is fairly substantial, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

4 table-spoonfuls flour	1 cupful mashed cooked peas (any kind)
4 table-spoonfuls fat	2 eggs
1 cupful skim milk	1/2 teaspoonful salt
	1/4 teaspoonful pepper
	Few drops of onion juice

Make a white sauce from flour, fat and milk. Mash the cooked peas to a pulp. Beat white and yolks of eggs separately. Mix vegetable pulp, seasonings, sauce and well-beaten yolks. Fold in stiffly beaten whites, put in greased baking dish and bake in slow oven until firm.

Stuffed Green Peppers

4 green peppers.	1 1/2 cupfuls meat stock thickened with 2 table-spoonfuls flour.
1/2 onion cut up fine.	1 1/2 cupfuls meat chopped or ground fine.
1/2 cupfuls meat	1/2 cupfuls bread crumbs.
1/2 cupfuls ground fine.	1/2 teaspoonful salt.

Remove the tops and seeds from the peppers and parboil in boiling water for two minutes. Remove from the water, drain, and put in a casserole. Stuff the peppers with a mixture of the corn, onion, meat, bread crumbs, thickened stock mixture, and seasoning and bake. Canned corn may be used. The mixture may be varied by using other materials such as rice and tomatoes, suggests the United States Department of Agriculture.

LAMB FOREQUARTERS ECONOMICAL MEAT

Several Excellent Ways of Cooking Are Suggested.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
A breast of lamb, mutton or veal, sometimes presents a problem, as it contains more fat and skin and less meat than other parts of the lamb, and yet it is often economical to buy an entire forequarter of lamb, or necessary to dispose of this part when slaughtering on the farm. One way to prepare a breast is to make a pocket under the skin, fill it with bread stuffing and bake it, so that the thin layer of meat is protected by the stuffing from drying out. Other good ways of preparing a forequarter of lamb or mutton are suggested by the United States Department of Agriculture. They apply equally to a breast of veal.

Braised Breast of Lamb or Mutton.
Season a breast or shoulder of lamb or mutton, place in a covered casserole or roaster and surround with vegetables prepared as in the following recipe. Add a little water, cover the pan closely, and cook in a slow oven until the meat is tender, probably from an hour and a half to three hours.

Breast of Lamb With Vegetables.
Season a breast of lamb with salt and pepper and simmer until the bones can be slipped out easily. Remove from the water. In the meat stock cook vegetables such as turnips, carrots, celery, or onions cut in small pieces, green beans, peas, and okra. More salt may be needed. A few potatoes cut small may be added to cook during the last 20 minutes. Remove the bones from the meat, fold it together, and secure with small skewers or twine. Dredge with flour and brown on both sides in hot fat. Place on a hot platter and surround it with the vegetables which have been well drained. Use the meat stock for soup, skimming it when cold.

Preferred Combination of Meat and Vegetables

Among the many combinations of meat and vegetables which constitute a stew, the recipe below is preferred in parts of Virginia and Georgia, and is one of the dishes made popular by canning club girls under the direction of the United States Department of Agriculture and the state agricultural colleges.

The meat should be cut up in pieces and browned before stewing. A sour sauce may be made of vinegar, tomato catsup, a little Worcestershire sauce and pepper to taste. The meat should be simmered in this sauce till nearly done, the vegetables then added, and the cooking completed.

4 pounds of beef or pork	1 quart sweet corn, cut from cob or canned (boiled)
Small piece of fat	1 quart peas, or lima beans
meat for seasoning	1 quart tomatoes

Household Questions

If the house has no running water that's the first improvement needed.

Careless paring of potatoes or fruit often wastes as much as 20 per cent of their food material.

Tin cans have their place, but their place is not in the back yard, half full of water and serving as happy homes for mosquitoes.

LIKE the Greeks bearing gifts, come the new tailored and daytime frocks for fall. They are in an inspiring company bringing pleasing variations of the slim, straight dress that still holds the allegiance of fashionable womanhood and they trace us to certain points which stylists insist upon. One of these points they all agree they have long sleeves, they are simple (or seemingly simple), they are from twelve to fourteen inches off the floor, they approve the tunic and panels and countenance belts or belted effects—but no waist line, some of them are slightly draped and all of them make a point of a neatly tailored finish.

For decorative effects these daytime dresses are given to rows of small buttons and to bands and other motifs, in outline embroidery, sparingly used taste, and the more women become informed the more they are appreciated.

Designers must depend upon novelty in materials, combinations of materials, adroit draperies and original ornamentation to give these straight-line dresses the required variety. It remains for women to individualize their simplest frocks by adding to them accessories of their own. Little fads and fancies to help them out come and go. Just now a cluster of flowers posed on the left shoulder—or near it—is the most approved finishing touch. Natural flowers are worn in the daytime and artificial ones at night.

Fringes of silk or of ostrich feathers, bands of clipped ostrich or of marabout (dyed to match the material of the dress) flourish in the smile of fashion, for trimming more or less formal silken frocks. One of these, suited to afternoon or evening wear, is shown in the picture. The wearer may tuck it up for evening with a bouffant at the shoulder and select a lavender color pleases her for the frock. Such a dress makes a fine background for a handsome necklace in "daytime jewelry" or whatever treasured piece its owner may choose to pose upon it.

THE FLY'S WARNING

"I suppose you want to know how I do it," the Fly told the Fairy Queen. Now you may think it is strange that the Fairy Queen should have gone to pay a visit upon the fly.

Not that the Fairy Queen was one to think herself superior, she was as simple and sweet as could be. But she did not care for flies, and yet she had gone to call on one.

She did not pretend to the fly that she liked him. She did not say that she was glad to see him and then go back to Fairyland afterward and talk about him.

That would have been deceitful and the Fairy Queen hated deceit. No, she told the fly she had come to see him because she wanted to find out how it was he did so much harm so she could send around messages and make people see how it was.

"Yes," the Fairy Queen said, "I would really like to know how you do it."

"You know it is quite true that you do spread disease. You are one of the worst creatures I know as regards doing this very bad work."

"Well," said the Fly, "I am a Blue-Bottle Fly, and I must live up to the family record."

"What is the family record?" the Fairy Queen asked.

"Spreading just as much disease as is possible wherever we are and keeping on doing it."

"I shouldn't think that would be a record of which a family could be proud."

"Ah, but you're not a Blue-Bottle Fly, and you don't understand."

"Your thoughts are kindly. You like to see health all about."

"We don't. We don't mind how much sickness there is. We don't object at all."

"In fact, we like it."

"Well, I will tell you how we do it. We have many, many hairs on our bodies."

"You cannot see the hairs on my body, as I'm small, but if you look carefully you will see some of them."

"You Are One of the Worst Creatures I Know."

If you could see me through glasses which would make me look much bigger than I am then the hairs would stand out distinctly."

"I have glasses with me," said the Fairy Queen, "which enlarge small objects."

"Then take a look at me," said the Fly.

The Fairy Queen did this, and she saw small hairs all over the Fly's body.

"There are a great many," the Fairy Queen said.

"To be sure," said the Fly.

"That is how I do it," the Fly continued.

"Still I don't understand that," the Fairy Queen said.

"I go around," said the Fly, "and I collect dirt wherever I go."

"Perhaps I should say these hairs collect dirt. They just catch up dirt and sit upon food and I carry the dirt with me."

"There are such small pieces of dirt that they're not noticed, but dirt carries disease, and so I carry disease."

"Of course it is not always dangerous, but I am not what you might call a valuable citizen."

"If I were being fair to people I would warn them not to let flies be around any more than they can help. I would warn them of my hairs which collect and carry dirt, and I would tell them that we're their enemies in this way."

"But I'm a Fly, and I don't care, so I won't warn them."

"Ah, but I will, Fly," said the Fairy Queen. "I will send around my messengers with this warning and will tell them about the way you gather dirt and spread disease."

But the Fly had gone off. He had no more to say and he had plenty of other things to do more interesting than this.

Certainly Suitable

After the usual Saturday romp the children gathered in the drawing room for some music.

As bedtime drew near the mother said, "Now children, choose a hymn to finish up with and then you must all say good night."

"Let's have 'Ere Again Our Sabbath Close,'" said a little girl of seven.

"Well, I think that would be more suitable for tomorrow night," replied the mother.

"Oh, but we always air our Sabbath clothes on Saturday," said the child.

Something to Think About

IDLERS' ISLAND

If you are resolved to continue your search for Idlers' Island, contrary to the advice of the experienced, and those disconcerted souls out at the elbow who have spent the best years of their lives in its quest, you may set it down as an unassailable fact that you are doomed to sorrowful disappointment.

The youth who dreams of this mystic place, forgetful of his duties to his parents and his employers, while he is fitting up his phantom ship to sail away in pursuit of perpetual pleasure, is heading straight to a land of sorrow and desolation, which he will find in the meridian of life, when his sky is turning gray and the icy winds of winter nip his shivering body and freeze up his last remaining energy.

There is only one event at this time of his existence which really astonishes and startles him out of his self-imposed impoverishment, and that is, he cannot build himself up again to hopeful manhood.

He is pushed and jostled on the streets and takes it as a matter of no consequence; he is shunned by old friends who pass him with a sneer, but there is not enough fire in his blood to kindle resentment; he is miserable and lonely, but so dull in sensibility that he is unconcerned.

He may sometimes try to brace him-

WHEN YOU MARRY A MAN

IT WOULD be foolish, O Miss, to let the idea take root under your hair that he who stood up the best of theater tickets, the slickest of taxis, the choicest of flowers, the most melting of chocolates, doesn't know that 100 cents make one dollar, and won't expect you to.

Observe that even as a lover he found much to stare at in the menu. It's all very well to find out a man's favorite dishes; try some of your own sometimes for a change. It is a wonderful love that can stand apple pie and custard Sunday after Sunday.

Don't worry too much over the fact that there are hundreds and hundreds of super-attractive damsels in the city where he does his work, for no doubt it equally concerns him that there are many super-attractive men where you have your home.

Taunt not your husband by alluding to his ignorance of domestic matters. If men conducted their business on the lines of some households, America would be a back number amongst commercial nations.

Remember there are many ways of killing love. Some wives do it by strangulation, some by malnutrition, self up as a sudden ray of hope momentarily flashes across his darkened mind, but the effort proves too much for him.

The background of his subconscious self is still covered with dream pictures of Idlers' Island, blurred by cobwebs and out of harmony with the colorful scenes around him, and his present physical and mental lassitude.

When he was twenty-five he was lazy, careless, wasteful and improvident, with friends everywhere delighted to help him spend his inheritance; now that he is five and forty, he is destitute and alone, left to drift seaward with the ebbing tide.

Oh! that he could warn the hot-headed youths of today of their folly. But he cannot. He is despised and shunned; ragged, hungry, gaunt and cold, all because in his earlier days he refused to work, so that he might have time to search for Idlers' Island, where now he is imprisoned for life!

Babies on a Train

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

BABIES nearly always cry On a train; And I also think that I Would complain If you took me from my cot On a dusty day and hot, On a railroad jiggled me Where I didn't want to be, When I didn't want to roam, Wanted just to stay at home.

Babies nearly always yell Loud and long; And I think I'd shout as well, Good and strong, If my mother took me out, Tugged and tumbled me about, Shook me up and shook me down, Hustled me from town to town, When I wanted most to stay Right at home on such a day.

Babies always cry before The journey's through, Babies always raise a row— So would you.

Seems to me that all along Railroads are entirely wrong: All it does, a railroad car, Is take you from the place you are To some other place you aren't at. Tell me, what's the sense of that?

Toads Killed by Motorists

The common American toad is in danger of extermination by motorists, according to biologists of the Department of Agriculture. In the vicinity of Washington alone hundreds of toads are found dead on the roads every morning. They are attracted to the highways at night by the automobile lights and are killed as they hop along the roadway. Experts say this slaughter is very unfortunate, because the toad is of great value to the community. Many obnoxious insects and worms are a regular item on the toad's menu. An examination of the stomachs of over 500 of these toads revealed the fact that nearly 90 per cent of their food is composed of worms, ants, snails, spiders, millipedes and other insects.—Pathfinder Magazine.

Must Have Jarred Captain's Dignity

Rear Admiral W. E. R. Martin, in "The Adventures of a Naval Paymaster," tells this story:

While the author was serving in the old Bellerophon at Barbados, a remarkable personality, known as the queen of the washer-women, paid them a visit. Her name was Jane Anne Smith—a tall negress dressed in spotless white, wearing a turban.

She came alongside in her own boat, pulled by six men. With a sweep of her arm she brushed aside the sentry on the gangway who asked her business, and marched straight on board. The first person she saw was the commander, George Primrose, on the quarter-deck. In two strides the gigantic negress gathered him to her breast and kissed him, in front of all hands, exclaiming joyously:

"Oh, Massa Primrose, Jane Anne 'member you when you was little mid-shipman, so high."

Antelope Disappearing

Antelopes, the graceful, shy little animals whose tender flesh used to delight the early settlers of the prairies and large herds of which once grazed on the site of Saskatoon, Sask., are doomed to early extinction, in the opinion of Fred Bradshaw, chief game guardian of Saskatchewan. He states in his annual report that only 250 head are left.

Zen of The Y.D.

A NOVEL OF THE FOOTHILLS

by Robert Stead

AUTHOR OF "THE COW PUNCHER," "THE HOMESTEADERS," "NEIGHBORS" ETC

COPYRIGHT BY ROBERT STEAD

"A suit for a fellow about my size," he explained. "He's visitin' out at the ranch, an' he hefts about the same as me. Put in one of them Hereford shirts an' a collar."

Y.D. tucked the package surreptitiously in his room and awaited the day of Zen's marriage with mingled emotions.

Zen, yielding to Transley's importunities, had at last said that it should be Christmas day. The wedding would be in the house, with the leading ranchers and farmers of the district as invited guests, and the general understanding was to be given out that the countryside as a whole would be welcome. All could not be taken care of in the house, so Y.D. gave orders that the hay was to be cleared out of one of the barns and the floor put in shape for dancing. Open house would be held in the barn and in the bunkhouse, where substantial refreshments would be served to all and sundry.

Christmas day dawned with a seasonable nip to the air, but the sun rose warm and bright. As the hour approached Zen found herself possessed of a calmness which she deemed worthy of Y.D.'s daughter. She had elected to be unattended as she had no very special girl friend, and that seemed the simplest way out of the problem of selecting someone for this honor. She was, however, amply assisted with her dressing, and the color of her fine cheeks, burned deeper with the compliments to which she listened with modest appreciation.

At a quarter to the hour it was discovered that Y.D. had not yet dressed for the occasion. He was, in fact, engaged with Landson in making a tentative arrangement for the distribution of next year's hay. Zen had been so insistent upon an invitation being sent to Mr. and Mrs. Landson, that Y. D., although fearing a snub for his pains, at last conceded the point. He had done his neighbor rather less than justice, and now he and Landson, with the assistance of a well-filled stone jug, were burying the hatchet in a corner of the bunkhouse.

"Dang this dressin'," Y.D. remonstrated when a message demanding instant action reached him. "Landson, hear me now! I wouldn't take a million dollars for that girl, y' understand—and I wouldn't trade a munny cayuse for another!"

So, grumbling, he found his way to his room and began a wrestle with his "store" clothes. Before the fight was over he was being reminded through the door that he wasn't roping a steer, and everybody was waiting. At the last moment he discovered that he had neglected to buy shoes. There was nothing for it but his long ranch boots, so on they went.

He sought Zen in her room. "Will I do in this?" he asked, feeling very sheepish.

Zen could have laughed, or she could have cried, but she did neither. She sensed in some way the fact that to her father this experience was a positive ordeal. So she just slipped her arm through his and whispered:

"Of course you'll do, you silly old duffer," and tripped down the stairs by the side of his ponderous steps.

After the ceremony the elder people sat down to dinner in the house, and the others in the bunkhouse. Zen was radiant and calm; Transley handsome, delighted, self-possessed. His good luck was the subject of many a comment, both inside and out of the old house. He accepted it at its full value, and yet as one who has a right to expect that luck will play him some favors.

Suddenly there was a rush from outside, and Zen found herself being carried bodily away. The young people had decided that the dancing could wait no longer, so a half dozen hustlers had been deputed to kidnap the bride and carry her to the barn, where the fiddles were already strumming. Zen insisted that the first dance must belong to Transley, but after that she danced with the young ranchers and cowboys with strict impartiality. And even as she danced she found herself wondering if, among all this representation of the countryside, that one upon whom her thoughts had turned so much should be missing.

She found herself watching the door. Surely it would have been only a decent respect to her—surely he might have hoped to whirl her joyously away into the new life in which the past had to be forgotten. . . . How much better that they should part that way, than with the memories they had!

But Dennison Grant did not appear. Evidently he preferred to keep his memories. . . .

When at last the night had worn thin and it was time for the bridal couple to leave if they were to catch the morning train in town, and they had ridden down the foothill trails to the thunder of many accompanying hoof-beats, the old ranch became suddenly a place very quiet and still and alone. Y.D. sat down in the corner of the big room by the fire, and saw strange pictures in its dying embers. Zen. . . . Zen! . . . Transley was a good fellow, but how much a man will take with scarce a thank-you! . . . Presently Y.D. became aware of a hand resting upon his shoulder, and tingling from its fingertips came something akin to the almost forgotten rapture of a day long gone. He raised his great palm and took that slowly ageing hand, once round and fresh like Zen's, in his. Together they watched the fire die out in the silence of their empty house. . . .

CHAPTER X

Grant occupied himself with the work of the ranch that winter, spring and summer. Occasional news of Mrs. Transley filtered through; she was too prominent a character in that countryside to be lost track of in a season. But anything which reached Grant came through accidental channels; he sought no information of her, and turned a deaf ear, almost, to what he heard. Then in the fall came an incident which immediately changed the course of his career.

It came in the form of an important-looking letter with an Eastern postmark. It had been delivered with other mail at the house, and Landson himself brought it down. Grant read it and at first stared at it somewhat blankly, as one not taking in its full portent.

"Not bad news, I hope?" said his employer, clanking his curiosity in commiseration.

"Rather," Grant admitted, and handed him the letter. Landson read: "It is our duty to place before you information which must be of a very distressing nature, and which at the same time will have the effect of greatly increasing your responsibilities and opportunities. Unless you have happened to see the brief dispatches which have appeared in the press this letter will doubtless be the first intimation to you that your father and younger brother Roy were the victims of a most regrettable accident while motoring on a brief holiday in the South. The automobile in which they were traveling was struck by a fast train, and both of them received injuries from which they succumbed almost immediately.

"Your father, by his will, left all his property, aside from certain bequests to charity, to his son Roy, but Roy had no will, and as he was unmarried, and as there are no other surviving members of the family except yourself, the entire estate will be yours."

"The amount of the estate will be very much greater than even you may anticipate."

"The brokerage firm which your father founded is, temporarily, without a head. You have had some experience in your father's office, and as his solicitors for many years, we take the liberty of suggesting that you should immediately assume control of the business. A faithful staff are at your disposal."

"Well, I don't know. Possibly six or eight millions by this time."

"Six or eight millions! Jehoshaphat! What will you do with it?"

"Look after it. Mr. Landson, you know that I have never worried about money; if I had I wouldn't be here. I don't care for the money, but any son-of-a-gun who takes it from me is a better man than I am, and I'll sit up nights at both ends of the day to beat him at his own game. Now, just as soon as you can line up some one to take charge I'll have to beat it."

Grant put his affairs in order as quickly as possible, and started for the East with a trunkful of clothes. But even before he started one thought had risen up to haunt him. He crushed it down, but it would insist. If only this had happened a year ago. . . .

Grant reached his old home city late at night, and after a quiet cigar and a stroll through some of the half-forgotten streets he put up at one of the best hotels. He was deferentially shown to a room about as large as the whole Landson house; soft lights were burning under pink shades; his feet fell noiselessly on the thick carpets. He placed a chair by a window, where he could watch the myriad lights of the city, and tried to appraise the new sphere in which he found himself. It would be a very different game from riding the ranges or roping steers, but it would be a game, nevertheless; a game in which he would have to stand on his own resources even more than in those brave days in the foothills. He relished the notion of the game even while he was indifferent to the prize. He had no clear idea what he eventually should do with his wealth; that was something to think about very carefully in the days and years to come. In the meantime his job was to handle a big business in the way it should be handled.

He turned the water into his bath; there was a smell about the towels, the linen, the soap, that was very grateful to his nostrils. . . .

In the morning he passed by the office of Grant & Son. He did not turn in, but pursued his way to a door where a great brass plate announced the law firm of Barrett, Jones, Barrett, Deacon & Barrett. He smiled at this elaboration of names; it represented three generations of the Barrett family and two sons-in-law. Grant found himself speculating over a name for the Landson ranch; it might have been Landson, Grant, Landson, Murphy, Skinner & Pete. . . .

As a result of his interview it was arranged that Mr. Jones, second luminary of the firm of legal lights, should take Grant's affairs under his particular care until the young Westerner felt safe in his new saddle. When Grant, accompanied by Jones, finally appeared at the office of his father's firm he was received with a deference amounting almost to obeisance. Murdoch, the chief clerk, and

Not so Miss Bruce. Miss Bruce had tapped on the door and entered with the words, "I was your father's stenographer. He left practically all his personal correspondence to me. I worked at this desk in the corner, and had a private office through the door there into which I slipped when my absence was preferred."

"She had crossed the room, and, instead of standing respectfully before Grant's desk, had come around the end of it. Grant looked up with some surprise, and noted that her features were not without comprehending qualities.

"How do you think you're going to like your job?" she asked.

Grant swung around quickly in his chair. No one in the staff had spoken to him like that; Murdoch himself would not have dared address him in so familiar a manner. He decided to take a firm position.

"Were you in the habit of speaking to my father like that?"

"Your father was a man well on in years, Mr. Grant. Every man according to his age."

Grant looked at her keenly. Whatever her words, he had to admit that her tone was not impertinent.

"You appear to be a very advanced young woman," he remarked. "I am a little surprised—I had hardly thought my father would select young women of your type as his confidential secretaries."

"Private stenographer," she corrected. "A little extra side on a title is neither here nor there. Well, I will admit that I rather took your father's breath at times; he discharged me so often it became a habit, but we grew to have a sort of tacit understanding that that was just his way of blowing off steam. You see, I did his work, and I did it right. I never lost my head when he got into a temper; I could always read my notes even after he had spent most of the day in death grips with some business rival. You see, I wasn't afraid of him, not the least bit. And I'm not afraid of you."

"I don't believe you are," Grant admitted. "You are a remarkable woman. I think we shall get along all right if you are able to distinguish between independence and bravado." He turned to his desk, then suddenly looked up again. He was homesick for some one he could talk to frankly.

"I don't mind telling you," he said abruptly, "that the deference which is being showered upon me around this institution gives me a good deal of a pain. I've been accustomed to working with men on the same level. They took their orders from me, and they carried them out, but the older hands called me by my first name, and any of them swore back when he thought he had occasion. I can't fit in to this 'Yes sir,' 'No sir,' 'Very good sir,' way of doing business. It doesn't ring true."

speaks of a freedom when 'slowly broadens down from precedent to precedent.' Precedent is custom. Never defy custom, or you will find her your master. Humor her and she will be your slave. Now I think I shall leave, while you try and attune yourself to the atmosphere of these surroundings."

So this was the room which had been the inner shrine of the firm of Grant & Son. The quarters were new since he had left the East; the furnishings revealed that large simplicity which is elegance and wealth. A painting of the elder Grant hung from the wall; Dennison stood before it, looking into the sad, capable, gray eyes. What had life brought to his father that was worth the price those eyes reflected? Dennison found his own eyes moistening with memories now strangely poignant. . . .

"Environment," the young man murmured, as he turned from the portrait, "environment, master of everything! And yet—"

A photograph of Roy stood on the mantelpiece, and beside it, in a little silver frame, was one of his mother. . . . Grant pulled himself together and fell to an examination of the papers in his father's desk.

Grant's first concern was to get a grasp of the business affairs which had so unexpectedly come under his direction. To accomplish this he continued the practice of the Landson ranch; he was up every morning at five, and had done a day's work before the members of his staff began to assemble. For advice he turned to Jones and Murdoch, and the management of routine affairs he left entirely in the hands of the latter. He had soon convinced himself that the camaraderie of the ranch would not work in a staff of this kind, so while he was formulating plans of his own he left the administration to Murdoch. He found this absence of companionship the most unpleasant feature of his position; it seemed that his wealth had elevated him out of the human family. He wavered between amusement and annoyance over the deference that was paid him. Some of the staff were openly terrified at his approach.

When the cows were fed alfalfa hay they produced 2.8 pounds or about 13 per cent more milk than when they were fed the sudan hay. The weights of the cows showed no significant changes as a result of the change in rations. The cows seemed to prefer alfalfa to sudan as there was less waste of the alfalfa hay. Their production, however, did not fall a great deal when sudan hay was substituted for alfalfa.

Sudan grass is used a great deal as a hay and pasture crop in Kansas and the southwest. It withstands a dry summer much better than most forage crops. It is a very useful emergency hay crop in the corn belt. Under Iowa conditions fifteen to twenty pounds of seed per acre are used and the crop is seeded in early June. Farmers who have no hay ground this year can make very good use of sudan grass. Yields are from one to two tons per acre.

The DAIRY

SUDAN GRASS MAKES VALUABLE COW FEED

That sudan grass makes an acceptable substitute for alfalfa when the latter cannot be had is shown by the results of a recent feeding test with dairy cows at the Fort Hayes branch of the Kansas experiment station. Two lots of four Holstein cows each were fed through three twenty-day periods with ten-day transition periods between each of the experimental periods. During the first twenty-day period one lot was fed alfalfa hay and the other sudan grass hay. The hays were reversed for the two lots during the second twenty-day period and again during the third period. In addition the cows received thirty pounds of kafir silage daily and a grain mixture in proportion to their production.

When the cows were fed alfalfa hay they produced 2.8 pounds or about 13 per cent more milk than when they were fed the sudan hay. The weights of the cows showed no significant changes as a result of the change in rations. The cows seemed to prefer alfalfa to sudan as there was less waste of the alfalfa hay. Their production, however, did not fall a great deal when sudan hay was substituted for alfalfa.

Flies in Summer Cause

Considerable Annoyance

Flies cause considerable annoyance to dairy cows during the summer and not only does the irritation caused by these flies tend to lower milk production, but the restlessness of the animals is a frequent cause of inefficient milking. A good fly spray can be made from 4 1/2 quarts of coal tar dip, 4 1/2 quarts fish oil, 3 quarts coal oil, 3 quarts whale oil and 1 1/2 quarts oil of tar. Dissolve 3 pounds laundry soap in water, add ingredients of the spray and bring the whole up to 30 gallons with lukewarm soft water. This spray is guaranteed to keep off the flies and prevent the coats of the animals from becoming harsh, according to agricultural extension department specialists at Iowa State college.

Watch Cream Separator

to Save All Butterfat

Cream separators that have not been tested for some time may be cheating their owners out of considerable butterfat every time they are used, warns C. A. Iverson, of the dairy department at Iowa State college. This is an avoidable loss which can be prevented by testing the skim milk and then regulating the separator to skim more closely. Farmers who have the apparatus for the Babcock test can test the skim milk at home. A double-necked test bottle should be used and 20 cubic centimeters of skim milk used instead of 17.5 cubic centimeters as in the case of whole milk. Farmers who cannot do their own testing can have it done by their local creamery or can send a four-ounce sample to the dairy section at Iowa State college. A charge of 10 cents for the testing is made by the college.

Dairy Facts

- Keep the barn clean.
- Ship cream the quickest route.
- Wash the cow's udder before milking.
- Use a brush instead of a rag for washing utensils.
- Add fresh water to the cream cooling tank frequently.
- Ship cream at least three times a week in summer and twice a week in winter.
- Give cows on pasture access to salt every day. They need about one ounce per day.
- A year-old dairy calf has cost its owner about $50. If it is a scrub the owner has lost money.
- From the standpoint of value, dairy animals are the most important class of live stock on the American farm.

REMARKS

The Pastor has been out of the pulpit for two Sundays on account of sickness (caused by tonsil operation) but is very happy to announce that he will be able to fill both hours Sunday and Sunday night—at 11 o'clock and 7:30. It will be a great pleasure to have all members, and others who worship with us, present at these services.

Note: Will you not make it possible for us to have several stars on our score board Sunday by being present in your class with all six points brought up to requirements. We can't build a great and efficient Sunday school without the co-operation of every officer, teacher and pupil. Come and help to have and keep an efficient and progressive school.

Sunday will be our Promotion Day and all pupils who are to be promoted are urged to be present to receive their certificates.

B. Y. P. U. Installation Service at 6:30

The following new officers have been elected: President, Miss Velma Rane; vice president, Miss Pauline Caldwell; corresponding secretary, Miss Lucile Caldwell; recording secretary, Miss Ruby Mosley; librarian, Alton Quisenberry; Bible readers' leader, Walter Ginn; treasurer, Therol Dunn; chorister, George Hammack; pianist, Miss Velma Rane; group captain No. 1, Miss Birdie Stogner; group captain No. 2, Miss Allie Mae Caldwell.

The pastor is very anxious to meet every member of our B. Y. P. U. about 15 minutes early. We are A1 Standard. Help us to keep our Union at this high mark.

The Pastor.

JOINT MISSIONARY SOCIETY

The Joint Missionary Society met in regular session Sept. 29, at the Methodist church. There were 19 members present; two new members. A real good program was rendered on the subject of Unity of Spirit. Several good talks were made, each expressing the belief that if we live a Christ like life we must have unity of spirit. Ephesians, 4th chapter, tells us we must have unity and love for one another.

These meetings draw us closer together, and we desire the presence of all women of the community. You miss a blessing when you fail to attend.

Bro. Thomas was with us and gave an interesting and uplifting talk on why we should unite. We were glad to have him, and invite all the ministers of the town to meet with us at every meeting.

A motion was carried that we place a community chest in the Methodist church basement, in which to put cast off clothing or anything we can give for the benefit of the poor and needy. We urge all who can give something to bring it to the Methodist basement, or notify one of the following committee: Mrs. J. B. Masterson, Mrs. Sam Ayer, Mrs. S. L. Adamson, Mrs. E. W. Alley, Mrs. Dallas Milner.

A free will offering was taken for which we are thankful.

USING OUR OWN TALENTS

One of the most difficult of life's lessons is to learn to use what we have at hand, and not waste our time and strength in wishing for something else. The temptation to look into other fields and neglect our own is so strong that men succumb to it ere they are aware. Another thing that gets in our way is to magnify the talents of others whilst we minimize our own. The man who had received one talent reminded the Lord that one was 'all he gave him. And because of the littleness of his talents he was afraid and hid them.

It is our business to do the best we can with the endowments we have. This is the true measure of success. Those who are doing that are the truly happy people of the world. They are the successes of the world. Their part may be small, but is essential to the ongoing and the betterment of the world. After all, the world's work is done by the one talent souls who keep plodding their forward way to the goal designed by the Father for them to attain. As the general is helpless without the army, the Church leader is dependent upon the common mass about him. The martyr dies in vain unless there are those who will carry on his work after he is gone.

In the great task of building a civilized Christian community every man has a task to perform. No few persons can put over a great program for good unless the masses throng to help them. There are many men and women in Hedley who have more than one talent, who are letting their opportunity for good slip by. For one reason or another they are out of harmony with the Church, the Sunday School, and the Sabbath. For all these neglects they shall answer at that Great Day when we shall all stand before the Judge to receive our rewards.

If you are not in a Sabbath School or religious service at least once a week, you are cheating your soul out of the spiritual food necessary to your moral development. If every man in Hedley would use his talent the Church would be the liveliest institution in the town, and we would be the happiest people this side of Heaven. But, alas, we are not.

Sincerely,
J. G. Thomas.

"SOPHS" ORGANIZE

The Sophomore Class of '24-'25 organized Sept. 30. The following officers were elected:

Glenn Acord, president; Allie Mae Caldwell, vice president; Edith Heath, secretary; Frances Kendall, reporter.

Colors: Lemon and lilac.
Motto: Bs.

Mr. D. C. Moore, president of the School Board, visited three of the grade rooms Wednesday. We are always pleased to have members of the Board pay us a visit.

KINDERGARTEN

Those who have children under school age will be interested to know that a teacher who has had two years experience in the work has been secured to take charge of the Kindergarten, beginning next Monday.

Joe Everett visited the Fair in Amarillo two days last week.

The Sixth Grade room is rather crowded, there being fifty four pupils enrolled. But we are doing good work under Miss Trussell's direction.

THIRD GRADE

The Third Grade pupils under the supervision of their teacher, Miss Lona Mae Simpson, are doing some interesting work. In the drawing classes and on the sand table they are carrying out the lessons learned in English and Geography.

In the English class the pupils have studied about birds and Indians. In the drawing classes they have made many different kind of birds, and the windows of the school room are decorated with them. The sand table is made into an Indian scene, with the pine trees and wigwams. On the lake is a canoe with Indians in it. Out in the pine forest we will find many Indians with their bows and arrows.

In Geography class the pupils have studied about cotton, from the time the seeds are planted until the cotton matures and is made into cloth. They carried out this lesson in drawing by making book backs and a book. On each of the book backs there is placed a rabbit with a piece of cotton for its tail, to carry out the story, "A Cotton Tale." Now be patient and I will tell you an interesting cotton story.

(This cotton story will appear in the School News next week. Watch for it.—Editor)
