Parent-Teacher Assn.

The Parent and Teacher Association will sponsor a community Thanksgiving service Sunday evening, Nov. 21, at 7:00 p. m. in the Baptist Church. This will take the place of the regular meeting planned for Nov. 24 as previously announced. There will be special music arranged by Mrs. W. H. Burden and Mrs. Robert Watkins. All Churches are requested to dismiss their audiences to join the P. T. A. members in this special service.

Please notice that the musical round up is postponed because of conflicting engagements for the school auditorium. Watch for a later announcement.

School Carnival

There will be a carnival in the high school auditorium on Wednesday night, Nov. 24, with plenty of fun and entertainment for everybody. Save up your nickels and come out and have a good time.

Amateur Contest

The amateur contest sponsored by the Junior Study Club at the school auditorium last Friday night was a decided success, a good crowd being present. Besides the amateur contest, the program also featured a beauty contest and a Shirley Temple contest, all of which aroused much interest. A quartette composed of Mrs. E. E. Hooker and Miss Sue Beth, Bill and Jack Edwards won the amateur contest. The beauty contest winner was Miss Marie Stanford, while Charlene Barnett won the Shirley Temple contest. The winners will compete in a statewide contest in San Antonio.

Say, kiddies! Santa Claus has already stepped at Hooker's and left a store full of things.

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Tollett announce the arrival on Thursday, Nov. 11, of a fine 6 lb. baby boy. He has been named Tommy Earl.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Spalding and Alfred Spalding and family visited in Sadler several days this week.

Gleaners Class

The Gleaners of the First Methodist Church School met Friday afternoon at the church. Mrs. Paul Pyle hostess. Order was called the president, Mrs. Edwards, roll call by sec'y, Mrs. Webb, after which minutes of last meeting were read and approved. A business session was held and many things were discussed for the betterment of Church School work. A most enjoyable program was rendered every one present taking part.

There were three honorees for the month, one being absent. Gifts were presented and admired by all and each honoree present thanked the class for remembrance. There were two visitors, Mrs. B. J. Osborn and Mrs. J. T. Bain, and we hope to them with us at each meeting.

Our hostess served lovely refreshments after which we adjourned to meet Nov. 26 at the church in an all day Thanksgiving service, each bringing a covered dish filled with goodies. Mrs. Richmond Bowlin, reporter

Wedding Anniversary

On Nov. 10, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Killingsworth observed their 50th wedding anniversary at their home in Hedley. About 9 o'clock their relatives and friends began to arrive. As each one arrived they were asked to register in the guest book. By noon 85 had registered. At 12 o'clock the father, mother and eleven children gathered around the table. In the center stood the beautiful three tier wedding cake bearing 50 candles, showing the number of years these old people had spent together and had the privilege of rearing such a large family and having them all with them on this occasion. A bountiful dinner was served. The afternoon was spent in talking over old times and taking pictures. The old couple received many lovely and useful gifts. Their 8 daughters, 3 sons, 40 grandchildren and 5 great grandchildren were all present. They were:

Walter Martin and family, Mrs. Bruce Kysor and daughter and Mrs. Oscar Martin and daughter of Canon City, Colo.; Ollie and Thelma Killingsworth. Russell Brewer and family, J. A. Carmac and family and Cecil Amerson and family of Quail; Mrs. Joe Payne and children of Okla. Asha, Okla.; Jack Killingsworth and family of McLean; Alton Martin and family of Alanreed; Clarence Killingsworth and family of Wellington; Claude Killingsworth and family of Lubbock; Mrs. Rex Brooks and children of Mullinville, Kansas; Herbert, Cothes and wife of Greenburg, Kansas and Bowie Robison and family of Hedley. Other relatives and friends present included George Webb and wife and Glen Wickman and family of Dimmitt; Mrs. Lena Maples and son of Hart; Mrs. Ethel Hunter and daughter of Hereford; W. W. Breeding and wife and Carl Amerson and family of McLean; E. G. Pierce and wife of Quail and R. E. Newman and family, Mrs. Paul Pyle and children and Mrs. J. W. McPherson and daughter of Hedley.

B. W. M. U.

The ladies of the First Baptist Church met Monday at 8 o'clock for a missionary program and social hour. Mrs. Wells hostess. The high point in our program was the discussion of two ancient peoples the Syrians and Armenians, who claim as their racial home the oldest part of the world, where was doubtless located the Garden of Eden.

The topics were discussed by Misses Murray, Combest, Blankenship, Simmens and Alewine. Following was the social hour, and a delicious plate was served.

The quick way to alkalize is this: Take two teaspoons of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia 30 minutes after eating and drinking. Or, when among others—take two Phillips' Tablets that come in a small flat tin you carry in purse or vest pocket.—You do it unnoticed. Relief is almost immediate. "Gas," nausea, acid breath and other offensive symptoms leave.—That "stuffed" feeling and pains from "acid indigestion" cease to annoy. You feel great.
This is the way, we believe, more doctors use than any other when alkalizing upset stomach.

Fordham's pre-school nursery is directed and maintained according to the teachings of Dr. Charlotte Buhler, of Vienna, world-famed exponent of child psychology. It is under the immediate direction of Mrs. Emilie D. Schloemer, assisted by Mrs. Anna Blitz.

INFANTS' UTOPIA

Youngsters Play at Will While Students Peek

By WILLIAM C. UTLEY

IF LITTLE Johnny Jones next door makes up his mind that your youngster's sled is a prettier red and therefore more desirable than his own, and proceeds to appropriate it through the simple expedient of biffing your youngster in the eye and taking it away from him, don't tell your boy to turn the other eye and regard his neighbor only with humility. Tell him to biff right back—maybe twice, just to emphasize his point.

If your daughter insists on playing with her dolls so long that she is late for school, let her be late; she'll soon find out she can't get away with it.

And if you don't agree with these suggestions, you're probably not the only one. Nevertheless, they are characteristic of the New Deal in child psychology which is being given exhaustive "laboratory tests" for the first time in America at Fordham university, New York city's seat of higher education in the Bronx.

Frisch Had the Idea.

Fordham, distinguished as the alma mater of Frankie Frisch, is not accustomed to training her young hopefuls in unorthodox ways. Frankie, who used to play a whale of a lot of second base before aging legs forced him to the sidelines as manager of the garrulous Gas House Gang representing St. Louis in the National league, once gave managers heart failure by sliding into bases head first. All the laws of decency decree that it is far more desirable to slide feet first, so that your spikes may make hamburger of a stubborn baseman, than to come into the bag head first, making it a cinch for the same baseman to plant a hard sphere none to gently in the center of your physiognomy. But Frankie insisted on sliding his own queer way, just like he had been taught at Fordham, and lo! year after year he was discovered to lead the league in stolen bases when the annual statistics were compiled.

Now comes the Rev. Walter G. Summers, S. J., head of Fordham's department of psychology, with the announcement that the university is testing methods of child training which may appear to the average parent just about as practical as sliding head first appears to the average baseball coach.

The experiments are being conducted with ten bright-eyed youngsters, five boys and five girls aged three to five, sons and daughters of college graduates, and "signed up" by their parents for a year's study. For the babies, known at Fordham as the "Control Group for Study," it looks like a pretty slick deal, for they do nothing but have one grand time. The happier they are, the more successful is the course. They are perfect physical and psychological youngsters, normal in every respect.

Talking harshly to them is strictly taboo. No one will punish them; no one will say, "Ah, ah, mustn't touch!"; no one will "mama" them to the Nth degree; no one will hurry them up to eat their meals; no one will nag them, and no one will make them cry. In short, this is an infants' Utopia.

"Talent in Every Child."

Fordham's pre-school nursery is directed and maintained according to the teachings of Dr. Charlotte Buhler, of Vienna, world-famed exponent of child psychology. It is under the immediate direction of Mrs. Emilie D. Schloemer, assisted by Mrs. Anna Blitz.

Dr. Buhler's principles are simple enough. Expressed fundamentally, they are:
"Don't force a child's development—let it come naturally. There is talent in every child. Guide it when it arrives. Nature varies the pattern of every individual."
Students of the course will be able to follow closely, under ideal conditions, the normal development of a child's behavior. Focal points are reaction to language growth, physical development, intellectual development, emotional reactions and socialization.

On the third floor at Keating hall, Fordham's new graduate school building, is a specially constructed nursery. Every day at nine the children arrive and every day at noon they are taken home. So far as the children ever suspect, they are being brought simply to a pleasant nursery where there are lots of interesting playthings, a place to rest and no one to spoil their fun.

How to Stop "Gimmies."

But they are not so isolated as they think. On fourfoot-high stools behind a one-way screen, students of child psychology watch their actions, unobserved.
The onlookers will be able thus to learn first hand why babies cry; why they shouldn't be nagged to eat their food; why they should be encouraged to take off their own hats, coats and rubbers; why they should not be rushed through their meals; why they should be encouraged to return a blow struck intentionally; why they should not be rushed into walking; why parents should not be over-anxious about the early expressions in a child's talk; how to stop a five-year-old youngster with the "gimmies" (one who says "gimme this" and "gimme that").

To put it briefly, the observers may learn how to be better mothers and fathers.

"After all," says Mrs. Schloemer, who interprets the Buhler theory in the nursery, "you have to live with your children 25 years, and a few common sense applications in bringing up a youngster might make the difference between a life of happiness and one of regret." This does not mean a few "common sense applications" on the seat of the pants, either, she says, and she has personally given individual training to 500 children.

Parents Are Impatient.

"Don't hurry your youngster," says Mrs. Schloemer. "Too many mothers rush their children through breakfast, rush them off to school and pepper them with a barrage of 'don'ts' only an adult could remember. Let your child be late to school once in a while, but show him calmly that he did the wrong thing. The average parent has not enough patience. Any normal child wants to do the right thing and will, if he is given proper directional stability. Rushing children through breakfast results in nervous indigestion, and forcing them to eat cultivates it. I have seen children two to three years old vomit when food is put before them. Cause—too much nagging by the parents. The sight of food has become revolting.

"When one youngster hits another, let him strike back. Up to a certain age, all arguments should be settled this way. It creates independence, assertion and ultimate understanding. Please do not misunderstand that we advocate sponsoring hand to hand engagements. To children two, three and four years old, words mean little. It is action that registers here. Naturally, in adults it should be a battle of words to settle a misunderstanding."

"Don't over-mama your child. It robs him of self-development. There's too much mama-ing from grandmother, sister, aunt and cousin. The child's mother should be the mother."

Keep Promises to Children.

She stresses the importance of adults' building respect through integrity.

"Don't change your mind," she warns. "If you promise to take your child for a walk in the park—do it. Don't say, 'I've got to do something else.' A child wants to respect you. Before you promise something stop and figure out if you will be able to keep that promise."

"Don't spank your child—it is only an extreme measure."

"Don't give your children trick toys, such as balls that roll back when they should go ahead or gas balloons that go up when they should come down. This is unnatural; a young child cannot understand it. Let him play with toys that exemplify such things as rolling down an incline when pushed, rubber balls that bounce, project blocks that teach formations. Let him play with sand, and with paints—he'll figure things out for himself very quickly."

"Don't rush your child to walk. As soon as the organs are sufficiently strong he will be impelled to walk. A child seven to eight months sits up and starts to roll over; at ten months he'll pull himself up on a crib and shortly after that he'll start to attempt the first steps at locomotion."

You Can't Know Everything.

"Don't rush your child to talk, either. He'll talk when ready. If he pronounces words incorrectly, don't attempt to correct him. Do that in later years. You can't speak a foreign language correctly the first time you understand what words mean and later on you correct your mistakes in pronunciation. Language development in a child is similar."

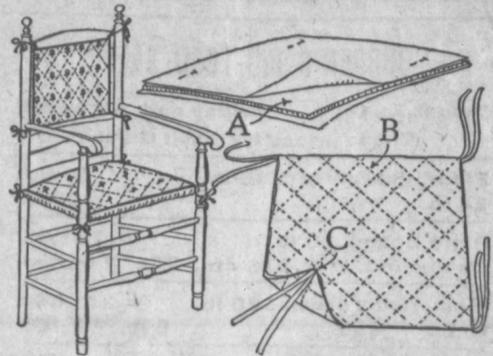

Mrs. Schloemer declares no ordinary father or mother knows everything about a baby, and advises that a doctor be consulted occasionally, especially in preference to experimenting when there is any doubt.

"Don't give your children too much money for toys," she continues. "Even ten cents a day is too much. A daily contribution is a short cut to creating the 'gimmies' in your child. If he gets into tantrums say 'no' and mean it—he'll get over it."

Fordham's class was besieged with babies for the special nursery when the tests were being made, but the instructors are still looking for a healthy pair of twins to add to the class. In fact, they'll be doubly welcome at Keating hall.

HOW TO SEW

by Ruth Wyeth Spears

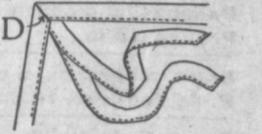

There May Be Many Reasons for Making Quilted Chair Pads.

IF ALL the reasons for quilted chair pads were lined up in order of their importance the most intangible reason of all might head the list. Yes, it is quite likely that any decorator, amateur or professional would place atmosphere at the top. But then it is also possible that first rating might be given to the reason that the pressure of slats across the backs of chairs is softened by quilted pads. Then, though it might not be mentioned, it is a known fact that worn out cane seats are sometimes replaced with inexpensive composition seats which may be disguised by gay quilted pads.

Chintz, calico or gingham chair pads are in fact one of the simplest and most inexpensive ways of adding color and charm as well as comfort to a room. Such pads are often used on the backs of chairs and not on the seats, and especially for side chairs, the seat pads used without any back covering. In making such small things as these it is quite easy to do the quilting on the machine. Or, if you wish to take the other point of view about it, the work of quilting them by hand would not consume an unreasonable amount of time. There is no doubt that handwork has a certain quaintness that machine work lacks.

The pads shown here are made with one layer of sheet wadding between the two layers of the chintz. The edge bindings and ties are made of bias tape. Cut the three layers of the pad material exactly the size and shape you want them to be when finished. Place the sheet wadding between the two layers of covering material as shown here at A. Either pin or baste in this position, and then quilt, either by hand or by machine, as is shown here at B. Make the ties by stitching the lengthwise edges of the bias tape together, and then tack them to the corners of the pad as at C before it is bound. Now, bind the edges, sewing the ties right in with the binding as shown here at D. Every Homemaker should have a copy of Mrs. Spears' new book, SEWING. Forty-eight pages of step-by-step directions for making slipcovers and dressing tables; restoring and upholstering chairs, couches; making curtains for every type of room and purpose. Making lampshades, rugs, ottomans and other useful articles for the home. Readers wishing a copy should send name and address, enclosing 25 cents, to Mrs. Spears, 2110 South Desplaines St., Chicago, Illinois.

Still Coughing?

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm. Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained from the very first bottle. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

Friendly Talk

BUT after all, the very best thing in good talk and the thing that helps it most is friendship. How it dissolves the barriers that divide us, and loosens all constraint—this feeling that we understand and trust each other, and wish each other heartily well! Everything into which it really comes is good. It transforms a letter-writing from a task into a pleasure. It makes music a thousand times more sweet. The people who play and sing not at us, but to us—how delightful it is to listen to them!

Yes, there is a talkability that can express itself even without words. There is an exchange of thought and feeling which is happy alike in speech and in silence. It is quietness pervaded with friendship.—Van Dyke.

Reading in Biology

Some of the Biology students think they are in the fourth grade because they have been reading stories to the class and had to take the book home over night and practice reading so they could read it well in class.
After the stories were read, the class was given an examination to see how well they could listen and understand the reader. The stories which were read are as follows:

Experience and knowledge has given the modern surgeon such courage that there seems to be little he cannot do. He works safely on the inside or outside of the body. Occasionally the crippled are made to walk, the blind to see, and the deaf to hear.

Another interesting story well known to all people of South Dakota was the grasshopper year of 1874. One day in July a cloud came over from the north. Instead of rain and thunder, it brought grasshoppers. They came like driving snow, filling the air, covering the earth, the buildings and everything. They sounded like continuous hail on the roofs. At times the insects were 6 inches thick on the ground. Men had to tie strings around their trousers to keep the pests from crawling up their legs. The Union Pacific trains were stopped because the rails were so oily and greasy that the wheels spun and would not pull the train. When the insects left the country was a scene of ruin and desolation.

These stories were very interesting and were enjoyed by all.
But we are still wondering whether man or insect will be the controller.

Thanks to Electric Servants

Thanksgiving is now a Woman's Holiday
too!

For service to you during this last year has been instrumental in providing more leisure, more pleasure, and greater happiness, than this Thanksgiving Day is occasion for us to give sincere thanks. Like many of you, we have "grown up" right here in West Texas. This is our twenty-sixth Thanksgiving. So we can remember when the turkey season meant a holiday for every one except Mother.
The Thanksgiving dinner was a long, tedious task for her... many hours in the kitchen before a hot, odoriferous stove. And there were scads of dishes to wash when it was over. This burden on her is no longer necessary, we're happy to recall. The trend toward the all-electric kitchen means complete emancipation for women. Out of this freedom is born the Neolactress—a modern home maker alert to this new electric age. The vista of a more glamorous future than pots and pans has become a reality, whether it be Thanksgiving or just another day. If you have not yet electrified your kitchen, we suggest that you investigate the economy of Electric Servants ere another holiday rolls around. They have made Thanksgiving a vastly happier day for many of your neighbors... and we are glad!

Right Is Might

Let us have faith that right makes might, and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it.—Abraham Lincoln.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

No matter how many medicines you have tried for your cough, chest cold, or bronchial irritation, you can get relief now with Creomulsion. Serious trouble may be brewing and you cannot afford to take a chance with any remedy less potent than Creomulsion, which goes right to the seat of the trouble and aids nature to soothe and heal the inflamed mucous membranes and to loosen and expel the germ-laden phlegm. Even if other remedies have failed, don't be discouraged, try Creomulsion. Your druggist is authorized to refund your money if you are not thoroughly satisfied with the benefits obtained from the very first bottle. Creomulsion is one word—not two, and it has no hyphen in it. Ask for it plainly, see that the name on the bottle is Creomulsion, and you'll get the genuine product and the relief you want. (Adv.)

A mouse can drink no more than its fill from a river.—Chinese proverb.

HOW LONG CAN A THREE-QUARTER WIFE HOLD HER HUSBAND?

YOU have to work at marriage to make a success of it. Men may be selfish, unympathetic, but that's the way they're made and you might as well realize it.

When your back aches and your nerves scream, don't take it out on your husband. He can't possibly know how you feel.

For three generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus lessening the discomforts from the functional disorders which women must endure in the three eras of life: 1. Turning from girlhood to womanhood. 2. Preparing for motherhood. 3. Approaching "middle age."

Don't be a three-quarter wife, take LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND and Go "Smiling Through."

STAR DUST

Movie • Radio

By VIRGINIA VALE *****

FOR months you will be hearing about the great success of the film "Stage Door," partly because it is such an entertaining picture, but more because it is proving a turning point in the careers of the many young actresses who appear in it.

Katherine Hepburn, so long tottering on the brink of whimsy and oblivion, returns to the early forthright manner of her great success, "Morning Glory" and really tugs at your heart-strings. Ginger Rogers proves to be a fine dramatic actress. Andrea Leeds and Lucille Ball make dramatic bits stand out so effectively that they have already been rewarded with leading roles. Constance Collier, for many years a great idol of the London and New York stage, proves that she can be equally effective in motion pictures.

Jack Benny has every reason to be proud of his wife's motion-picture debut. In Paramount's "This Way Please," Mary Livingstone tosses nonsensical lines about as deftly as she does on the nation's favorite air program. This picture also serves as the film debut of Flibber McGee and Molly, those pleasant homey folks of the radio, and brings back Buddy Rogers. He isn't as young and exuberant as he used to be, but he can still lead a band. Crowded as the picture is with big-time favorites, two youngsters manage to walk off with a large share of the honors. Betty Grable is a little bombshell of vivacious beauty and Rufe Davis proves to be the most hilariously-entertaining of all hillbillies with an imitation of a man sicking his bound dogs on a pig in a potato patch.

Decision on putting little Leatrice Joy Gilbert, daughter of the late John Gilbert, in the leading role of "National Velvet" is still in abeyance, but she is assured a future in films. She will make her debut in "Benefits Forged," an ambitious production in which Walter Huston will play the lead at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

With Ruth Mix, daughter of Tom Mix, starting on the first of four cowgirl pictures she will make for Grand National, this young company is assured more Westerns for release during the coming year than any other company. Tex Ritter is making eight musical Westerns for them, and Ken Maynard is coming back from his tour with the Cole Brothers circus to make eight dramatic Westerns for them.

Frances Dee retired from the screen long enough to have two babies and bring them up to the toddling age and when she returned to play in "Souls at Sea" she was not at all sure that she wanted to go on with her career. Now, however, she finds that working doesn't keep her away from her babies very much and she enjoys being able to swap professional studio talk with her husband, Joel McCrea. Paramount is equally enthusiastic over her return and will put her in the lead of "Dream of Love."

Ernst Lubitsch, Gary Cooper and Claudette Colbert have all been marking time while Paramount officials searched for just the right actor to play a very important role in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife." They were getting discouraged, when they happened to go to a party where "The Prisoner of Zenda" was shown, and as soon as they saw David Niven they chorused "That's our man." Luckily, he was just on his way back from England, and Sam Goldwyn to whom he is under contract had no immediate plans for him.

ODDS AND ENDS—The Warner Brothers are in a frenzy because the Mauchins are growing so fast, they are outgrowing some scenarios written for them. . . . Lionel Barrymore has gone off to England to work in Robert Taylor's picture being filmed at Oxford. . . . Norma Shearer expects to get started on filming "Marie Antoinette" any year now when she can get just the actors she wants in her supporting cast. . . . Rumor has it that Cary Grant will be known as number one comic of the screen when "The Awful Truth" with Irene Dunne, and "Bringing Up Baby" with Katherine Hepburn are shown. . . . Joan Crawford wishes that fans would write and tell her what sort of role to play next. She does not want to sing or dance, though she does both well, but will try anything else her fans suggest.

Don't Worry About Heart
By
DR. JAMES W. BARTON
© Bell Syndicate.—WNU Service.

WHEN you feel a pain in the region of the heart—directly over it, below it, above it or to one side—and you are not doing any work, and it is not after eating a heavy meal, it is not likely that there is anything wrong with your heart.

Again, you find yourself getting out of breath easily, and you have been rightly told that this is the first sign of a failing heart. If, however, you have been eating too much acid food—eggs, bread, cereals, meat, fish—the blood and tissues are likely to be acid and are asking for more oxygen, which would mean having to breathe oftener.

Perhaps also, you find your heart beating rapidly, perhaps at a rate of 84 to 90 instead of the usual 72 beats to a minute. If you are under any tension or strain, or have just eaten a hearty meal, it is normal or natural for the heart rate to increase.

Your Doctor Can Tell.
However the thought is not that you should ignore or tell yourself to "forget" the pain in the chest or under breast bone, the getting out of breath easily or the rapid beat of the heart. The very fact that you have these symptoms and they "get on your nerves" should cause you to say to yourself, "I either have heart disease or I haven't, and I'm going to find out about it."

Fortunately your family physician can tell you in a very few minutes whether or not your heart is sound. And if he finds it sound then you can give the pain, shortness of breath, and the rapidity, even some irregularity, no more thought. And even if he finds some actual heart trouble, does this mean that you are doomed to the life of an invalid till you pass away?
By simple tests—exercise, holding the breath, and others—or by means of the electrocardiograph and fluoroscope, your doctor is able to estimate just what your heart can do "safely." He will give you some simple instructions as to rest, exercise, and food; (medicine is sometimes given to steady the heart, and also to a great extent to steady the upset mind).

By following this simple advice faithfully there is no reason why you should not live your allotted span of life.

So, don't worry about your heart. It is sound or it isn't. Even if not sound, all you need to do is to follow the doctor's advice, and so live "safely."

Food Supply in Body Fat.

When an overweight individual decides that he or she is going to reduce weight for health or appearance's sake the first and longest step toward attaining the normal figure and weight has been taken.

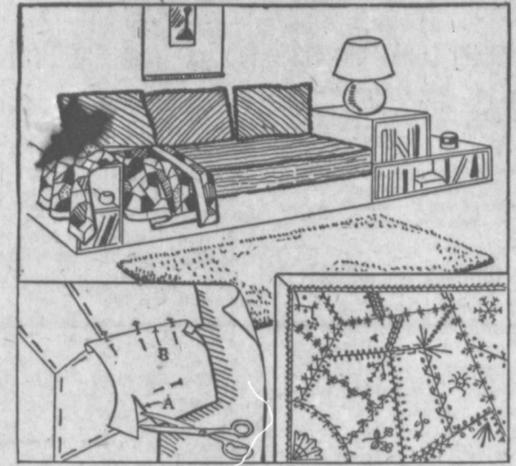

The second step is to get a thorough examination by the family physician, particularly heart, blood vessels and kidneys. There have been cases of collapse and death following a strict reducing diet which could have been avoided had the overweight undergone examination and taken six months to a year to reduce instead of three or four weeks.

If the physician considers it safe to reduce and supervises the amount and kinds of foods that will be eaten during the reducing period, then there will be no going back to the full diet on the first sign of a little weakness or faintness. This is when so many overweights give up the struggle and if they are not under a physician's supervision they are wise to give up and get a fresh start.
The third step or point to remember is that whether the overweight eats a large or a small quantity of food, his body is going to require just a certain amount. If he eats more than this the extra food will accumulate as fat in and on his body; if he eats less than this required amount of food, the body is going to get that extra food needed from some place. And the place the body gets the extra food it needs is from the overweight's own body—his excess of stored fat.

"From the standpoint of nutrition the increased fat deposits or fat deposits of the body represent so much excess energy; consequently in reducing the weight an attempt is made to call forth these fat deposits. This is done by supplying a diet which has less than the amount needed to maintain the body structure and supply it with the energy needed for its daily work. This compels the body to draw on its reserve energy—the fat deposits."

If in addition to this the body is required to do more work or exercise, then an even greater call is made on these fat deposits to supply this extra energy. This is the reason that less food and more exercise will always be the ideal method of reducing weight. This method builds muscle (strength of body) and reduces fat (an inactive tissue).

Crazy Patch Work at Home in a Modern Setting.

THE crazy patch is the oldest of quilt patterns, yet there is something amazingly modern in its angular lines. So whether your living room is traditional in style or newer than tomorrow you will be interested in the revival of crazy patch work for what our grandmothers and great-grandmothers called a "slumber throw."

A corner of one of these old silk crazy quilts is shown here at the lower right. The pieces were small—many not more than 1 1/2 inches wide or long. A variety of embroidery stitches joins the pieces. Both plain and figured silks were used, the plain patches often being embroidered with flowers, fans and other amusing motifs—note the beetle embroidered on one patch. Several colors of silk embroidery thread were generally used but in the most artistic of these quilts one color predominated in the embroidery.

Larger patches with simple feather stitch and herring-bone stitch at the joinings also give a good effect. The pieces are sewed to a foundation of some firm soft material. Outing flannel or an old wool blanket are good. Pin a piece in place over the space to be filled, trim the edges to the right shape, as at A, allowing enough to turn under, as at B, where the patch laps over the one next to it. Baste the turned edges down as shown. When a number of patches have been basted in place, sew them down to the foundation with the embroidery stitches and then remove the bastings. The backing is tied to the front with silk embroidery thread as comforters are tied. Little or no padding may be used and a plain band around the edge is effective.

Simple Way to Avoid Dust When Shaking Grates and Taking Ashes From Pit

THERE is an easy way to keep dust from sifting through the cracks of the ashpit door when shaking furnace grates. Quite a few readers have asked me how it can be done, and I'm sure many more of you will be interested. Here's how:

Have a spray made of small pipe, connected with the cold water system installed in the ashpit of the furnace. Only a short length of pipe will be needed. In it have small holes drilled and cap the free end.

Just before shaking the grates, turn on the spray. It will throw a fine mist over the whole ashpit, wetting down the ashes as they drop through the grate openings and settling the dust immediately. Then remove the ashes from the ashpit. They will be sufficiently wet to prevent the dust from rising and settling in the cellar.

The cost and installation of such a spray will be but little, and it certainly will save you considerable work in dusting off things on which the dust would otherwise settle.

SYNOPSIS

Joyce Sewell, on the eve of her twentieth birthday, rebels at her lot, dependent on her detested stepmother, Irma, and full of tragic memories of her mother's murder twelve years before and her father's death six months ago. Irma calls in Heim Blackadder, an admirer, to help her persuade Joyce to marry rich, young Michael Kirkpatrick. Mike, sent up to Joyce by Irma and Blackadder, demands a showdown on his proposal and is rejected. Reading her father's papers, Joyce realizes that La Barranca, a Mexican hacienda which her father had owned, legally belongs to her. Later, she receives a letter enclosing a warrant on the United States Treasury for $10,000 compensation for her mother's murder at La Barranca. She confers with Mr. Bradley, a banker and only remaining friend of her father's. She decides that she wants to make a secret journey to Mexico.

CHAPTER II—Continued

She sat staring at the floor, not answering at once. "I know what you mean," she said finally, "and I'll try to explain. I remember everything, but I've found out that being far away from a thing like that doesn't help you to forget—it makes it into a picture on the wall. Then there's something else. Places go by contrasts, don't they? I won't say anything about Elsinboro; all I can tell you is that when I've been unhappy, when I'm most miserable, I look back and dream of happiness and La Barranca. She swept her eyes to his face. "My mother isn't here, Mr. Bradley. I mean she couldn't possibly come to Elsinboro—not even in my thoughts. Does that sound foolish to you?"

"Not foolish, my dear," he murmured, "not at all foolish."

Touched by his understanding she reached out one hand impulsively and laid it on his arm. "Oh, Mr. Bradley, please be my friend. You can help me so much! My passport, a letter of credit, but that's not all. You know my stepmother. Father used to keep telling me she's a good woman. Well, she is, but if she finds out what I'm doing or where I am I'll have two fights on my hands instead of one."

"How are you going to work it? How will you get away?"

"I've thought it all out. I can say I'm going to Frances Holder's for a visit."

"H'm. But they'll trace you. Nowadays a deliberate disappearance is one of the hardest things on earth to stage."

"I've thought of that too." She gave him a look so composed it set his blood to tingling. "If I go by air, where will I be by the time they begin their tracing?"

He blinked at her admiringly. "Joyce, I've made up my mind. I'll do everything I can to help you and I promise I'll keep my mouth tight shut till you say the word."

On the same impulse they rose to their feet and stood with right hands half extended, not quite touching. "You're awfully young, Joyce, and most people would say I ought to be jailed for letting you go. But you've got heart as well as head, and as for youth—what's it for? To spend while it's strong."

He proved as good as his word and better, for he could see a lot further ahead than Joyce. Within ten days not only did he arrange that her passport for travel abroad should come direct from the State department rather than through the local county clerk, but he coached her on her department in the meantime toward her stepmother, provided her with a certified copy of her father's will, warned her about excessive baggage and bought her tickets by air in a fictitious name.

Later, without detection, she boarded a plane at Elsinboro's almost deserted airport that connected at Newark with a night plane south.

CHAPTER III

Dirk Van Suttart, second secretary of embassy, would have showed to greater advantage in any other setting. The traditions of an ancient name were behind him, he had more than his share of good looks, a reasonable amount of money and a merry eye. Away from his job he was as clean-cut a young American as ever drew breath, but he was on the way to being spoiled, poisoned by the bite of the diplomatic bee.

He was engaged in testing the spring of a polo mallet when the reception clerk entered, laid Joyce's slip on the desk and lingered to smoke a cigarette. Dirk read the paper over his shoulder.

"What does she want?"

"Same old thing. She'd like to walk in on the chief."

Dirk finished testing the stick, put it away in a clothes closet, went to his padded chair and rummaged for a dispatch. "All set. You can show her in." Presently Joyce stood before him. He perused the dispatch frowningly for a moment longer, then motioned her to a chair beside the desk.

"Won't you sit down, Miss Sewell?"

Joyce hesitated. "You're not the ambassador, are you?"

"Hardly. I'm the second secretary."

"I wanted to see the ambassador."

"Are you an American?"

"Yes; born of American parents residing abroad. I arrived from the States last night. Do you wish to see my passport?"

"That's not necessary at present. I suggest you state your business. If it's something I can't handle—or if it's important enough—an appointment will be made for you with his excellency."

Joyce sat down without taking her eyes off him. She was puzzled. Here was a young man, the very antithesis of Mike Kirkpatrick in looks, manner and breeding, yet all she felt was bitter disappointment. Why? Suddenly the answer swept over her. She was face to face with the mask that had defeated her father—immature, perhaps, its veneer not yet solidified, but the same unfeeling mask.

"What's your name?" she asked. "Dirk Van Suttart," he replied, betrayed by the suddenness of the question. A glint lit in his eye and color rose to his cheeks, but he quickly controlled his anger and raised one eyebrow. "Really, Miss Sewell, while you requested a personal interview I didn't realize you were contemplating an exchange of confidences."

"I like to know to whom I am talking," said Joyce coolly. "I think you'll find my business is quite personal. I'm the daughter and sole heir of the late Cutler Sewell and there's a file in this office under his name. I wish to know my rights. Am I entitled to have copies of the dispatches, or to examine them, or to be given a resume, or—if all that is impossible—can I be informed of the last step in the negotiation?"

By this time both Van Suttart's eyebrows were raised to the limit. "No copy of any dispatch can be given to anybody," he declared, "except by specific direction of the Department of State, and the same restriction applies to the balance of your question. May I ask to what this file refers?"

"To my father's property in this country."

"I thought so. Miss Sewell, Americans abroad suffer from an unfortunate delusion which you seem to share that the foreign service is maintained for their individual convenience. It isn't. It was created for the benefit of the United States as a whole and of the taxpayers at home who foot the bills. Haven't you heard of the Mexican claims commission in Washington?"

"I have."

"That, my dear young lady, is where you should file your petition. I did, through my father, when I was eight years old. I'm not eight now, Mr. Van Suttart, though you seem to think so. The Mexican claims commission has been sitting for a great many years considering claims amounting to $250,000,000. Has it settled a single case?"

"I'm not at liberty to say."

"You mean you don't know? I'll tell you, it hasn't—not one."

"Miss Sewell, this conversation is getting us nowhere. May I say in conclusion that I've given you all the advice—the only advice—to which you are entitled? The embassy can do nothing to help you—nothing have."

"Help!" exclaimed Joyce. "I didn't come here for help; I asked for certain information. Are you sure you have the authority to refuse it?"

"Quite sure."

Joyce stood up to find her knees were trembling. She had been dismissed, told to leave! Anger surged in her veins—anger against some implacable force outside herself and Van Suttart. She became a flame and suddenly its beauty cut through to his inner consciousness. In a half daze he was telling himself that if he had met this girl at a cocktail party instead of in the course of official business he would have crashed through to her side and stayed there. But he was too late, the polished shell he wore had held out too long.

"Mr. Van Suttart," said Joyce, "your imagining I came to you for help has its funny side. Aren't you ever puzzled as to why you're alive—why you draw down pay? A canary in his gilded cage earns his keep with song, but a popinjay can't even sing."

She was gone before he could wipe the look of amazement from his face, much less answer.

She hurried to the hotel where she was living, paid her bill and asked that her baggage be brought down. At sight of the petaca there were supercilious glances from the tourists, the clerk and even the porter, but not from the taxi driver; again the little native trunk served her well. He did not bother to lie about the fare and even understood her quest for the best hotel unfrequented by foreigners. Unhesitatingly he drove her to an establishment in a back street but near the center of town. The proprietor greeted her in soft Castilian and took the trouble to accompany her himself to a top-floor room.

"Can you recommend a woman lawyer?" she asked. "I know of one, but she's a Mexican."

"I prefer a Mexican," said Joyce. "Will you give me her name and address?"

He took out his card, scribbled on it, and handed it to her. "She's a difficult person," he remarked, "but an excellent lawyer."

Joyce decided to waste no time in telephoning for an appointment, but she did stop long enough to unpack her bag and hang up her clothes. As her rage at Van Suttart began to cool she wondered at it and felt a little ashamed. Probably that manner of his had got him his job, perhaps he was paid to make people feel exactly as she had felt. She opened the petaca, sorted out the documents she thought she would need and made her way on foot to the lawyer's address. It was a strange, old-fashioned building which opened suddenly upon a big square well surrounded by balconies and roofed by the sky. There was an elevator but no attendant. Rather than attempt to work the mechanism herself she walked up two flights and located a door upon which was inscribed: Lic. Margarida Fonseca.

She knocked; there was no answer. She opened the door, stepped into an empty anteroom and coughed. The door into a room beyond was open. She passed through it and stopped short. On the farther side of a littered desk, leaning back and apparently absorbed in staring through the thick wall at some vision far away, sat a woman whose appearance could be described only as leonine. One glance was enough to make her speak in English.

"What do you want?"

"A lawyer," said Joyce.

"What for? What about?"

"May I sit down?"

"No! What about?"

"An estate."

"Whose?"

"Mine. I have the documents here proving absolute title if you'll only take the trouble to look at them."

"No use. You're wasting my time. Don't waste yours or my time by going to any other lawyer. I give you that advice for nothing."

"What is your time worth?" asked Joyce, switching into Spanish. "I like you. How much would you charge to let me sit and look at you for half an hour?"

(TO BE CONTINUED)

Margarida Fonseca swung around in her swivel chair, planted her elbows on the desk, her fists in her cheeks, and stared. "Cara'ol! Hablas Castillano, gringuita! So, we talk Spanish! Who are you?"

"My name is Joyce Sewell. I'm the daughter of Cutler Sewell who owned—"

"Tst! Tst! Nobody owns anything. You possess, you don't own."

"Oh, but I do," protested Joyce. "I can prove it." She advanced, sat down on the edge of a chair and laid her documents on the desk. "Please let me show you."

"It's no use, my child. I've told you the truth and the whole truth. Incidentally I don't like Americans, but let me give you something else for nothing. Get out. Go back to your own country before somebody makes one bite of your pretty head."

Joyce stood up and buried her grave blue eyes in Margarida's black ones. "I'll get out, but I won't go back. I was wrong about you. I may not find a lawyer with more brains, but I'll get one who isn't a coward." She snatched up her precious documents, turned quickly and started toward the door.

"Stop!" yelled Margarida. "Nobody can say that to me! Come back and sit down. Give me the papers." She took them, spread them out but kept her puzzled eyes fixed on Joyce. Abruptly she smiled. "I thought you were out to make a play on the tender female heart but I've changed my mind. Have you any money?"

"How much?"

"Ten thousand dollars."

"Really! You're loose in Mexico at your age with $10,000! We'll see the papers."

She glanced over them swiftly with odd jerks of her nose as if she were a parrot tearing the meat out of one nut after another.

"Why didn't you tell me it was La Barranca?" she asked of the blue sky.

"You didn't give me a chance," said Joyce.

Margarida turned. "I think I've found a way. It has nothing whatever to do with the courts. Come back in a week."

"That won't do," said Joyce, "it won't do at all!"

"Because a week is too long!"

"You have courage, little one. Since you don't do your fighting with tears we'll go hunting together. Fortunately I care nothing what happens to you—nothing at all. Is that clearly understood?"

"Don't worry," said Joyce. "Show me the road and I'll look out for myself."

Margarida scooped up the papers, crammed a hat on her head, showed the way out and slammed the door behind them. A moment later they were in a taxi which scurried along interminable back streets to draw up in exactly 15 minutes at the residence of Gen. Zacharias Onelia, right-hand man to the minister of war.

"General, it is very good of you to receive us," said Margarida. "Do you mind taking a look at this young lady before she goes out to walk around the patio while you and I have a talk? She has a peculiar value, General."

"Especially to you," said Margarida and turned to Joyce. "Suppose you go out, chica, and stay out till you're called!" As soon as Joyce had gone Margarida leaned toward Onelia and continued in a low voice. "General, this is a momentous business, far deeper than may appear at first glance. The young lady, Miss Joyce Sewell, is undoubtedly the lawful owner of hacienda La Barranca."

Interpreters of the Mode

Cotton, of course, is the material.

Typical of Youth. The surest way to be a big little-body is to wear dresses that are as expertly planned as the grown-ups'. The little number above, center, has the smart styling of a sub-deb's frock. It is typical of youth's freshness and activity, and is one model that gets little girls' complete endorsement. It is the number one dress for the number one sweetheart in anybody's family.

An Orchid to You. Do you think of a charming sorority tea with lots of atmosphere and plenty of style when you look at the handsome new two-piecer above, right? Would you like it made in one color and material, or perhaps with a topper in gold lame or satin combined with a skirt of a rich dull fabric? Why not make it yourself to suit your own fancy and step into a swell little world of glamour crowded with fans and fun and festivity?

The Patterns. Pattern 1401 is designed for sizes 36 to 52. Size 38 requires 4½ yards of 35-inch material.

Pattern 1366 is designed for sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 2½ yards of 39-inch material, plus 1¼ yards of machine-made pleating to trim, as pictured.

Pattern 1396 is designed for sizes 32 to 44. Size 34 requires 1½ yards of 39-inch material for the blouse, 1½ yards of 54-inch material for the skirt.

Many, Many Women Say Cardui Helped Them

By taking Cardui, thousands of women have found they can avoid much of the monthly suffering they used to endure. Cramping spells, nagging pains and jangled nerves can be relieved—either by Cardui or by a physician's treatment. Besides easing certain pains, Cardui aids in building up the whole system by helping women to get more strength from their food. Cardui, with directions for home use by women, may be bought at the drug store. (Pronounced "Cardui.")

Ma! I got my name in the paper!

Only Newspapers bring the news of vital interest to you

Headlines may scream of death and disaster without causing you to raise an eyebrow. But if your son gets his name in the paper—that's real news! It isn't by accident that this paper prints so many stories which vitally interest you and your neighbors. News of remote places is stated briefly and interpreted. Local news is covered fully, because all good editors know that the news which interests the readers most is news about themselves.

Now is a good time to learn more about this newspaper which is made especially for you. Just for fun ask yourself this question: How could we get along without newspapers?

Home Heating Hints by John Barclay Heating Expert

IT'S really no trick to build a good furnace fire quickly and easily.

Leave a layer of ashes about two inches deep spread on the grates. Spread about two inches of coal over this layer of ashes. Over the coal, place a generous amount of kindling—newspapers and light, dry wood.

The turn damper in the smoke pipe and the ashpit damper should be open wide. If the ashpit damper on your furnace is in back, open it and also the ashpit door in front. This assures maximum draft and quick ignition.

When the kindling is burning well, add fresh coal gradually. In this way you get a deep fire in little time—the kindling burning the coal beneath it, and the fire, in turn, igniting the coal above it. From time to time, add additional fuel until you have a solid, deep fire. When this is done, check your dampers and close the ashpit door.

Model Hayloft Is Placed in U. S. Farm Building; Seek to Standardize Crops

The most modern farm laboratory in the world has been opened by the Department of Agriculture in Washington in an effort to raise the standards of American farm products, writes a Washington United Press correspondent in the New York Herald Tribune.

In the new standardization building are located the bureaus directing regulatory and marketing agencies dealing with the principal farm products. Technological and economic research scientists also are housed in the air-cooled structures.

It also houses a modern hayloft—a combination standardization research laboratory and warehouse—with glass north front and scientific devices for analyzing quality and factors in hay.

Cotton experts prepare standards for use in domestic and foreign trade. The appeal board of review examiners, the final authority in the interpretation of standards, has its classing rooms in the building.

Along with cotton standardization and classical work, the physical and chemical properties of cotton fibers, lint and seed will be studied, as a part of the expanded federal-state cotton research programs.

These studies and tests will be related to practical problems in the principal branches of the cotton enterprise from the production of raw cotton through to the finished products of cotton manufacture.

The building contains a fireproof cotton warehouse in which can be stored more than 1,000 bales of cotton to be used chiefly in preparation of copies of the official standards. It is the new headquarters for the Bureau of Agricultural Economics' South-wide cotton market news service.

Croagh Patrick, the holy mountain in County Mayo, Ireland, is not as huge as it appears to be, although it is a monarch of a mountain. It gives the impression of great altitude because of the moist atmosphere. The Irish hills, under atmospheric influences, seem to rise to twice their natural height.

Our Parents Gone

I've often thought of our celestial Home.
So blessed and so grand;
To dwell always with saints so free from care,
In that blest Gloryland.

But Heaven now means so much more to me,
And nearer too it seems;
With my loved ones gone to join
The host of saints redeemed.

Some years ago our father went away,
And now our mother's gone;
O how lonely we are today,
Since our loved ones have passed on.

We miss our daddy, of course we do,
A memory sweet lingers still;
But we miss our dear mama too,
And know we always will.

I recall the years of childhood,
Around the family hearth;
When father prayed the best he could,
For the dear ones here on earth.

My mother helped humanity in need,
As long as she lived she tried to do good;
Many a kind and noble deed
She passed to those she could.

They are not dead, just fell asleep,
For they live on and on;
Although their forms lie in the grave so deep,
We trust their souls are in the Great Beyond.

A loving daughter,
Ela Culwell

WIFADASOS CLUB

Mesdames Hogue and Reed were hostesses to the Wifadasos Club Nov 9, with 18 members attending. The vice president called the house to order. Having no special business, the election of officers for the coming year followed. Results, president, Mrs W E Grimsley; vice pres, Mrs Frank Murray; sec, and treas, Miss Ola Curd; reporter, Mrs Dunesan. A reading on Thanksgiving by Mrs Dalton Swinney followed. The hostesses then served pie and coffee which, as always, was enjoyed. The rooms were decorated with huge bouquets of roses, chrysanthemums and marigolds. The next meeting will be Dec 14 at the home of Mrs Frank Murray, she and Mrs Hugh Watson joint hostesses.

At this meeting we will have the regular Christmas tree with exchange of gifts. Also the time to award prize for the best program rendered during the year is at this meeting.

Keep warm these cold nights.

NOTICE

I am asking all citizens of the county to cooperate with me in keeping down petty theft during the cotton season, when the county is filled with transients. Most of these are honest, but some are not, and everyone is urged to keep all money and valuables locked up and leave someone at home when you come to town. Do not leave your car parked in front of your house at night, or leave tools and other articles out where they can be easily stolen. Your cooperation will be appreciated.

TIGHT FITS
between engine parts

That's why mere "fast-flowing" oils get beat by WINTER OIL-PLATING

How hard is it for any known oil to squirm in amongst scores of close-fitting engine parts? It's hard. Hence all Winter oil ads rightly tell you that even a worn, loosened-up engine needs extra fast oil-flow this season.

Free-flowing Conoco Germ Processed oil holds records for speedy flow in any cold. And yet Conoco asks you earnestly: WHY BE SATISFIED WITH ANY FREE-FLOW ALONE, WHEN YOU CAN JUST AS EASILY HAVE THE RE-DOUBLED INSURANCE OF AN OIL-PLATED ENGINE?

Only an OIL-PLATED engine is lubricated for every cold start in advance—whole hours and days before any mere free-flowing oil can do one single wiggle!

Germ Process action on every working part creates OIL-PLATING. It becomes a part of all surfaces. It cannot drain down. It stays up without interruption, forever ready to speed your starter and preserve your engine every inch of the way this Winter.

Oil level stays up, too, once your Conoco Mileage Merchant puts in your correct Winter grade of Germ Processed oil.
