Miss Kinney County Pageant set Thirteen local beauties ready to compete this Saturday

Submitted by Susan Moore and Leigh Volesko

The annual Miss Kinney County Pageant is set to feature thirteen local beauties at 2 p.m. on Saturday, Apr. 21, at the historic Fort Clark Springs Theatre.

This year's pageant will be divided into three segments and is under the direction of Claudia Lopez, Dreams of Crowns owner.

For the first time, there will be a Little Miss Kinney County for young girls in kindergarten through fourth grade and a Junior Miss Kinney County for fifth grade through eighth grade girls. The title group will be for young ladies in the ninth grade through age 21.

The girls will be judged on how well they present themselves in a private interview with the judges, runway modeling, poise, dance and public speaking.

The winners of each division will be crowned by Miss Kinney County 2006, Timmeke

Simmons.

Simmons was reportedly the first queen crowned in over ten years and was honored by the presence of Rachel Clementz, Miss Kinney County 1971.

Simmons has fulfilled her title duties over the last year by participating in a number of community service and public speaking events. Simmons is currently pursuing modeling school in San Antonio and is the granddaughter of Wylie and Charlene Simmons of Fort Clark Springs.

Little Miss Delegates

Savannah Brandt is six years old and the daughter of Owen and Mitzie Brandt.

Mya Alexa Garcia is five years old and the daughter of Michael Garcia and Mayra Aguirre.

Celina Danielle Hernandez is seven years old and the daughter of Michelle Hernandez and Flip Talamantez.

Nicole Mestas is four years old and the daughter of Debra Buantello and Ruben Mestas.

Public forum for school board candidates to be held Friday

A public forum for the candidates in the Brackett Independent School District Board of Trustees election will be held on Friday, Apr. 20 in the BHS Auditorium at 6:30 p.m.

The forum will give the candidates the opportunity to introduce themselves to the public and answer a series of questions submitted by the public.

Nine candidates filed for the three open positions on the board.

Of the nine, Steven Stafford, Star Smith, Sondra Meil, Cash Letsinger, Daniel Laws, Tony Molinar and Cesar Cantu are scheduled to participate in tomorrow night's event.

Andrea Garcia and Tony Ashley expressed their regrets, but stated they would not be available to attend due to scheduling conflicts.

The school board election is May 12.

Hiding behind doors because of my weight

The Fly Lady Marla Cillely

We have lived our lives not being able to open the door; you know that "can't have anyone over syndrome" that has paralyzed us. We have other doors that we hide behind. It is perfectionism that keeps us huddled behind them in fear and shame. Remember that the opposite of love is fear.

I want for you what I have peace, and this peace came from loving me just the way I am. This means with all my warts and blemishes. Now this process of loving myself didn't happen over night. Just like your home is not going to get clean in a day. All my life I have been told (by my family) you have such a pretty face, if only you would lose some weight. Those if onlys and buts tend to negate the good that was said: Why couldn't they just stop with the pretty face. Then at the same time, I was programmed with, "Pretty is as pretty does": On one hand it is how I act and then almost in the same breath it was putting me down because of my physical appearance.

Learning to love myself was the hardest thing I ever did. In my perfectionism, I was self-conscious of the way I looked. So I hid behind baggy clothes (another door) and sweat shirts, and long coats. As a result, I had a new mantra in my life. When I lose weight, I will.....! When I lose the baby fat, when I go on a diet, if only I could fit into that dress, this year I am going to lose weight. Let me tell you, I became my own worst nightmare. The negative mindset was causing me to gain even more weight. Not only had I closed the door on my future by hiding behind my insecurities but I had throw away the key thinking I was not worthy to have or do anything because I was embarrassed to my family.

Seventeen years ago, I started my journey of peace! The first step was getting the audible negative voices away from me. I divorced him. I knew that I was going to die if I allowed myself to be brainwashed by him one more day. I also distanced myself from the rest of the family. That way I only heard the negative voices on the phone when I called my granny or my mother. "Honey are you still big?" was a common question.

Every thing that has happened to me in my life has made me the person that I am. I am thankful for every single bad thing that has every happened to me. Those things make me stronger and more able to share with you. In my imperfection I can help you become who you are supposed to be. It was only after I personally started to Finally Love Myself (FLY) that I found my voice.

We all have to start someplace. Let go of the negative attitudes and self-defeating behavior and be nice to you for a change.

Can You Benefit from Municipal Bonds?

Emily Cooper

You've made it through another tax season.

If you got a refund, you might be pretty satisfied with how things turned out.

But if you'd like to see a somewhat different outcome in 2008, you may want to review all areas of your tax return, including your investment-related taxes.

As you may know, some investments are more "tax-friendly" than others are - and municipal bonds might be some of the friendliest ones of all.

If you aren't that familiar with municipal bonds, here are the basics: Municipal bonds, or "munis," are issued in two main categories: general obligation bonds and revenue bonds. General obligation bonds finance the activities of state and local governments, while revenue bonds pay for specific projects, such as airports, hospitals and other civic institutions.

So, when you purchase a muni, you're supporting a project or service, possibly in your state or community. And you will be rewarded for your civic-mindedness - through tax breaks. Specifically, your interest payments will be free from federal taxes; if the municipality that issues the bond is in your state, your interest payments also may be exempt from state and local taxes.

Municipal bond interest is free from federal taxes, but some munis - particularly airport and housing bonds - might be subject to the alternative minimum tax (AMT). If you think you may have to pay the AMT - and a lot more people are subject to this tax now than in years past - you might want to avoid these types of bonds. Conversely, if you know you won't be assessed the AMT even if you bought some AMT-subject munis, you might be especially interested in these bonds, because their yields are typically higher than the yields on regular municipal bonds.

In any case, municipal bonds offer some benefits beyond tax-free interest. For one thing, munis can help you diversify a portfolio heavily weighted with stocks. Municipal bonds may not be affected by many of the factors - such as poor corporate earnings reports - that cause volatility in the price of stocks. So, municipal bond prices generally do not move together with stock prices.

Furthermore, municipal bonds are among the most secure investments you can own. The default rate on munis - especially general obligation bonds - is typically quite low.

Which types of municipal bonds are right for you? Your choice depends, to a great extent, on your goals and investment personality. For example, longer-term munis - those bonds that mature in 10 years or more - will generally pay a higher interest rate than shorter-term bonds. Yet, prices of the longer-term offerings also may fluctuate more.

You may want to consider owning a variety of short-, intermediate- and long-term munis. This type of portfolio - known as a bond "ladder" - can help you in all types of interest-rate environments. When market rates are down, you'll benefit by owning long-term bonds, which generally pay higher rates than short-term bonds. But if market rates are up, you can use the proceeds of your maturing short-term bonds to reinvest in issues with higher rates.

Finally, when you're shopping for municipal bonds, look for quality - those bonds that are rated at least "A" or higher by the major rating agencies.

Municipal bonds occupy their own special niche in the investment world - and it's a niche that you may want to explore further.

A poem in your pocket

Submitted by D. Curry, BISD

The month of April traditionally celebrates National Poetry Month. This year as libraries and organizations in San Antonio start activities to celebrate poetry, one activity suggests that everyone pick a favorite poem, carry it with them, and share it with people all this month. The idea began in New York last year and is spreading across America. The name, "Poem in Your Pocket," comes from a poem by Beatrice Schenk de Regniers: Keep a poem in your pocket / and a picture in your head / and you'll never feel lonely / at night when you're in bed." We're going to celebrate the month with poems written by local poets. Maybe one of these will end up in reader's pockets. Here's a poem by one of our graduating seniors:

Time

Time is too valuable to waste
 Thinking on my fears
 Never being able to overcome them.

Time is too valuable to waste
 Thinking that one day I will grow up
 Wanting to be there for others.

Time is too valuable to waste
 Thinking on my past and knowing
 That I have made wrong decisions.

Time is too valuable to waste
 Thinking that what I do today
 Will surely reflect my tomorrow.

Time is too valuable to waste
 Thinking what the future might bring
 Terrified that dreams aren't accomplished.

Bungee jumping is quite a rush — but don't try it until you get o-o-oo-lllll-lldd-derr-rrr!!!!

By Auzzie

Many people believe bungee jumping is dangerous and something only a crazy person could do.

After looking up at that bungee tower, I saw other people jump. They appeared to be of sound body, mind and soul.

If it is so dangerous and crazy, why do people do it?

It didn't take long before I was at the top of the tower. On the edge, I kept thinking, "Wow, this is pretty high!"

I had doubts, but I made up my mind... I had paid $40, and I wasn't gonna get a refund (I hate losing money).

The jump master looked at me and said, "Never mind the blood stains you see down there." Wise guy.

Then he shouted, "5... 4... 3... 2..."

"What happened to ooo-ooone?" was the last thing going through my mind. Suddenly, I was falling.

Unlike a falling cat, I was not going to land feet-first. I had no idea which way was up.

All I knew was my heart was somewhere back at the top of the tower. I was near the bottom when, suddenly, I went back up like I was shot from a slingshot.

The worst part was when I reached the top. At that point, I was caught in limbo. Total weightlessness. There was no up and no down.

The feeling was just like it looked: someone being thrown helplessly into the air with nothing to hold or grab onto.

Gradually, I stopped going up and down. I was hoisted back up.

My friend asked me how I felt. I only gave a short, "Wow."

Bungee jumping isn't for kids, but you can try it when you get a little older.

Maybe you could talk your mom into giving it a go, mate!

Who Started It? How Did It Come to Be Called That?

By Stack

The term "rock 'n' roll" was originally a nautical term, which has been used by sailors for centuries. It refers to the "rock" (fore and aft motion) and "roll" (sideways motion) of a ship.

The expression can be found in English literature going back to the 1600s, always referring to boats and ships.

The term was first used in music in the 1800s, but with a religious meaning. It was first recorded that way on a phonograph record in 1916, in a minstrel recording of gospel music on the Little Wonder record label called "The Camp Meeting Jubilee."

Some historians point to "Rocket 88," a 1951 hit written by Ike Turner, as the first rock record because of its distorted electric guitar sound. Others claim Bill Haley's 1954 hits "(We're Gonna) Rock Around the Clock" and "Shake, Rattle and Roll" (the latter a remake of a Big Joe Turner song) helped birth the rock explosion.

Still others say most people think rock 'n' roll began with Elvis or the Beatles.

One thing for sure about rock 'n' roll is what it means to me - cool guitars, huge Marshall amps and tons of distortion!

I love listening to rock 'n' roll music with my friends and pretending we are a huge band playing the "air" guitar.

Future Cars Will Do The Driving!

By Sam

In the future — the near future, IBM says — we will be able to dictate and send e-mails, get spoken directions to a restaurant, and even play a game of "Name That Tune" with a futuristic onboard computer — in the car.

If the children in the back seat are too noisy and the computer can't hear the driver well enough, it will just read his or her lips.

And if the driver gets drowsy, approaches a sharp curve or drives too fast in the rain, the car might cut off his or interactive privileges. Then the driver can pay more attention to driving.

Chapter 11

The Search

"I have to go out into the hotel," Ralph informed his relatives. "I've got to help the boy."

"Oh, no, not out into the hotel," cried Ralph's mother. "Not while the housekeeper is looking for mice. If you're seen we'll all be in danger."

"I'll be back before dawn," said Ralph staunchly. "I must go. Don't try to stop me."

"See here, my boy, aren't you being a bit dramatic?" asked Uncle Lester. "Whatever do you have to go out into the hotel for?"

"To pilfer a pill," said Ralph. "An aspirin tablet." His answer was dramatic enough even for Uncle Lester. His entire family stared at him in disbelief. Not an aspirin! Not after his own father had been poisoned by one of the dread tablets. "An aspirin!" Ralph's mother gasped. "No, Ralph, not that! Anything but that!"

"It is the only way," Ralph stood tall and brave. "The boy has a fever and he needs an aspirin. I'm going to find him one."

"Oh, Ralph!" His mother hid her face in her paws.

"But Ralph," quavered Aunt Sissy. "Remember your father. You can't carry an aspirin in your cheek pouches. It would poison you. How could you get one here?"

"I'll find a way," Ralph was outwardly steadfast in his determination, but inside he wondered how he would manage to get an aspirin into Room 215 if he did find one. Roll it, perhaps.

"Ralph, stay here," pleaded his mother. "You're too young. Let your Uncle Lester go."

"Well, now, let's talk this over," said Uncle Lester.

"I'm not too young and I haven't a moment to lose," Ralph, who was really frightened by what he was about to do, also enjoyed the drama of the moment. "Good-bye. I shall return before dawn."

"Ralph, promise me you'll be careful," pleaded his mother. "Promise me you won't climb into suitcases like your Aunt Adrienne." Ralph's Aunt Adrienne, who liked nice things, had climbed into a suitcase to examine a nylon stocking, someone had closed the suitcase, and Aunt Adrienne had never been seen again. It was hoped she had been carried away to a life of luxury. "Promise me, Ralph," cried his mother, but her son was already on his way out the knothole. Ralph scurried across the carpet of Room 215, flattened himself, and squeezed under the door. Once out in the hall, his courage ebbed. The aspirin tablet seemed a very small thing to find in such a vast place. It would be much easier to find the motorcycle. No, thought Ralph, I must not even think about the motorcycle.

Ralph began to feel pretty small himself, much smaller than he had felt during his show of bravery back in the mouse nest. Down in the lobby a clock struck one. There was not a moment to lose. He ran to the next room, squeezed under the door, and searched under the beds and the dresser while the two guests slept soundly. All he found was a bobby pin.

He skipped Room 211 because his enemy, the little terrier, was still there, and ran on to Room 209. A hurried search, frightening because of the loud and uneven snores that came from one of the beds, revealed nothing but a few pretzel crumbs, which Ralph did not have time to eat.

On and on ran Ralph, down the hall, under doors, around under beds and dressers. There was not a single aspirin tablet to be found. In one of the rooms he did see a penny that had rolled under a luggage rack and remembered his mother's wish to leave a tip for room service, but tonight he had no time for pennies. He must press on and find an aspirin.

A small doubt began to creep into Ralph's thoughts as he ran down the hall to the last room on the second floor. Maybe there was no aspirin. Maybe he was risking his life and the lives of his family for nothing. But Ralph pushed the thought aside. He would not let himself become discouraged. If there was no aspirin on the second floor, there had to be one somewhere on the ground floor. Tonight he was willing to brave the stairs to find it. He flattened himself and squeezed under the last door on the second floor. There was nothing under either of the beds but the things Keith called dust mites. There was no sound but the rattle of the windows in the wind.

Ralph started across the carpet toward the dresser when suddenly a light from the bedside table blinded him. He stopped, rooted to the carpet by fear, even though it was not likely that anyone was going to cut off his tail with a carving knife.

He heard someone slip out of bed and utter a sound halfway between a squeal and a scream. Before Ralph knew what was happening, an ordinary drinking glass had been clapped down over him, and there he stood in a glass trap.

By then his eyes were adjusted to the light and he found himself facing a pair of bare feet. Looking up, he saw that the feet belonged to a young woman in a pink nightgown. "Mary Lou, wake up," she whispered to the young woman in the other bed. "Look what I've caught."

"Huh?" said Mary Lou, blinking and raising up on one elbow. Her hair was done up on pink rollers. "Betty, are you out of your mind? It must be past one o'clock in the morning."

Oh, Betty, do you suppose we could take him back to Wichita with us?" asked Mary Lou. "My third grade would love him."

"So would my kindergarten," agreed Betty. "We could keep him in a cage on the ledge and all the children could bring him food from home. It would be such a good experience for them to have a pet in the classroom."

Well, thought Ralph grimly, I always wanted to travel. A cage in a kindergarten in Wichita, however, was not exactly the destination he had in mind. The minutes were slipping by dangerously fast. He had to do something. "Look," he shouted through the glass in desperation. "Let me go. Please let me go. There's something terribly important I've got to do."

"He squeaked!" marveled Betty. "He's adorable!" squealed Mary Lou.

It was no use. Young women could not speak his language. Ralph was in despair. He thought of Keith tossing feverishly in his bed and of his family huddled in the mouse nest waiting for his safe return. "But I don't see how we could take him back to Wichita," said Betty sensibly. "We're driving to San Francisco and then to Disneyland before we start back. How could we carry him thousands of miles?"

The two teachers looked thoughtfully at Ralph, who knew his fate depended on their decision. Was he to be carried to Disneyland and eventually to a ledge in a kindergarten room in Wichita? Or would they let him go? A third possibility crossed Ralph's mind. Perhaps they would leave him under the glass for the housekeeper to see. He hoped not. He did not think he could last that long. Already the inside of the glass was beginning to feel warm and airless.

"I suppose we really shouldn't turn him loose in the hotel," said Mary Lou. "Mice are pests even if they are cute."

The teacher not only destroyed Ralph's hopes, she hurt his feelings as well, calling him a pest when he was on an errand of mercy. From the mouse's point of view, the teachers were the pests.

"I know!" exclaimed Betty suddenly, causing Ralph to look over his shoulder for a clue to what it was she knew. "I know how we can get rid of him without hurting him."

The young teacher reached over to the bedside table, where she picked up a picture postcard. She slid it carefully under the glass and under Ralph's feet so that he was now standing on a postcard. He noticed the picture was of a giant redwood tree, the same postcard all travelers bought when they came to California. "Now what are you going to do?" asked Mary Lou.

"Watch," Betty carefully lifted the postcard, Ralph, and the glass, and walked across the room. Even though he knew it was useless, Ralph scurried around in his tiny prison. He was afraid she was taking him toward the washbasin. He had heard of mice being drowned by people who did not like traps.

The teacher walked not to the washbasin, but to the open window. She held Ralph across the sill, removed the postcard from the glass, and gave it a little jerk that shook Ralph off into the vines that grew up the side of the building.

"There," she said, and closed the window, leaving Ralph clinging to a vine high above the ground.

ACS Relay for Life A cancer survivor story

Submitted by Pat Sitzes

Our cancer survivor this week is Ken Callnan, a two year cancer survivor who was diagnosed with colon cancer in February 2005.

Ken reported that when the doctor told him he had colon cancer, he wondered how long he had to live.

Ken was already involved with providing caregiver services to his wife Pat who at the time had rheumatoid arthritis. Now not only did he have to take care of her, but he had to deal with surgery and chemotherapy for his colon cancer.

Ken tried a new chemotherapy drug which his doctor told him was capable of wiping out his colon cancer, but alas, he could not tolerate that treatment regime.

He opted for six weeks of chemo followed by two weeks off, and he tolerated that regime better. He reported that it was not without unpleasant side effects, but doable.

Ken found support during this time of treatment from his family. Later after treatment was over, he started attending Our Cancer Support Group here in Brackettville.

Ken wants everyone who is 50 and over to get their colonoscopy to make sure they do not have cancer, but if they do that they find it early.

His symptoms were that he lost weight without trying, and he found out he was anemic which led to tests which confirmed he had colon cancer.

When asked what advice he would give to others going through cancer treatment, it would be to not give up, and to not let yourself get down.

Also how it is important that when a person is doing chemotherapy that they do not expose themselves to other people who are sick since a person's immune system is down.

When your immune system is down, a person could contract a germ which antibiotics might not be able to help your immune system fight these germs off.

Not only is Ken a cancer survivor, but he has been a caregiver, too.

This past year Ken lost his wife of 51 years to breast cancer which had spread throughout her body.

He took care of Pat for as long as he could at home.

Recently he attended grief counseling by the Val Verde Regional Medical Center Hospice program and with Jean Reardon's grief group at the First United Methodist Church, and he recommends if you have lost a loved one to cancer that you seek out these groups for help with dealing with the grief of losing someone to cancer.

Don't forget the Relay for Life which is taking place April 28 starting at 6pm until April 29 ending at 6am.

Come be a part of this event to raise money for cancer research.

YOUR HOROSCOPE BY WANDA PERRY
ARIES (March 21 - April 19): Tie up loose ends and complete old business. Clear the decks and make room for some exciting, wonderful new ventures or opportunities.
TAURUS (April 20 - May 20): A spur-of-the-moment meeting between you and your friends will bring about some amazing results. Present your thoughts and ideas with enthusiasm.
GEMINI (May 21 - June 21): Mentors, parents or someone in authority will play an important role in your life. Follow their lead or guidance and use the benefits of their wisdom and experience.
CANCER (June 22 - July 22): There is a lot going on inside your head as your brain reels with new ideas. Focus your attention on education, travel or political aspiration.
LEO (July 23 - Aug. 22): It pays to be meticulous and careful in your financial affairs. Take your time and make sure that you are abreast of everything that could affect your earnings.
VIRGO (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22): Enjoy uncovering your cultural roots and exploring artifacts from several generations. An item from a distant relative will get you started on this journey.
LIBRA (Sept. 23 - Oct. 23): Push forward with the burning fire of your passion. Brace yourself for an exciting, adventurous and somewhat turbulent time in your life. Expect the unexpected in the affairs of the heart and look for changes or opportunities on the emotional front. An increase in wealth or income is also indicated. Step out of the crowd and be willing to think outside of the box. Follow up on an unusual and inspiring moneymaking idea that will prove to be worth exploring.
desire to make changes on the job front. Stop talking about what should be done and initiate a decisive plan of action.
SCORPIO (Oct. 24 - Nov. 21): You are on the receiving end of good fortune or favors. Do not take your gifts for granted. Live in a constant state of thankfulness and express your appreciation.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 - Dec. 21): Lay low and review your life from a personal standpoint. Think of yourself as an observer whose main goal is to collect healing or helpful emotional data.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): The most avant-garde or unusual subjects will catch your eye this week. Delve into projects that will take you down an exciting path of discovery.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18): Stay on guard financially and avoid a free-for-all shopping spree. Get serious about saving. Work to establish a solid fiscal foundation.
PISCES (Feb. 19 - March 20): You are privy to some very powerful and compelling information.
