ATTITUDE ON FRENCH ISLES IS EXPRESSED

By NORMAN B. DEUEL
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON, Oct. 26.—Secretary of State Cordell Hull said today that President Roosevelt had conveyed to the French government this nation's attitude on the status of French possessions in the Western Hemisphere.

The state department said the president's message was handed to the French ambassador here on Thursday evening, the day after Hitler and Petain met.

Although Hull did not specify the nature of the president's message, it was indicated that Mr. Roosevelt had informed the French leaders that the United States and other American republics will not permit any change in the sovereignty of European possessions in the new world.

Under the act of Havana, the American republics set up machinery to establish protectorates over the Western Hemisphere of Axis-conquered nations in the event there was any attempt to change their sovereignty.

Hull said that there had been several diplomatic exchanges between this government and the French government since the act of Havana was formulated.

The French island of Martinique in the Caribbean has been of particular concern to this country, in view of the concentration of a French naval force there and the possibility of a clash between that fleet and British warships in nearby waters.

Approximately 100 American-made planes, bought by France before its capitulation to Germany, also are stored on the island. Both this government and Britain have sought to negotiate for their purchase, thus far without success.

C.I.O. Officials Denounce Lewis' Willkie Speech

The endorsement of Wendell L. Willkie by John L. Lewis, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, was repudiated today by many CIO affiliates and their leaders.

The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, the Textile Workers union and the United Retail & Wholesale Employees all announced in New York that they were sending messages to President Roosevelt pledging him their support.

Gustave A. Strebel, president of the New York State Industrial Union Council of the CIO, which endorsed Mr. Roosevelt for a third term at its convention last month after 23 left wing unions had walked out in protest, said he would denounce Lewis in a radio broadcast tonight.

Allen S. Hayward, national organization director for the CIO, said in New York that he and regional directors and organizers with whom he had talked by telephone at Buffalo, Boston, Rhode Island, Philadelphia, Wilmington, Del., Newark, N. J., Allentown, Pa., and Detroit, all endorsed Lewis' stand.

Pro-Roosevelt CIO officials charged that Hayward and those for whom he spoke were on the CIO's national staff and depended on Lewis for their jobs.

Irving Abramson, first vice president of the New Jersey State Industrial Union Council of the CIO, "repudiated Lewis as my leader," and charged that Lewis had "betrayed organized labor for the monied interests of Wall Street."

Officers of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers (CIO) at Philadelphia messaged Mr. Roosevelt that the 80,000 union members would support him and that Lewis spoke only for himself.

At Camden, N. J., Philip H. Van Gelder, national secretary-treasurer of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America said his union was for Mr. Roosevelt.

Support for Lewis came from the state, county and municipal office workers of America, which announced at New York that it opposed Mr. Roosevelt's "disastrous policies."

At Kenosha, Wis., R. J. Thomas, international president of the United Automobile Workers of America, which claims 412,000 members, commented, "I am for Roosevelt."

At St. Louis, Luther M. Slinkard, secretary of the local CIO

Public Is Urged To Use Caution At Rail Crossing

WASHINGTON — Because of the increase that has taken place in recent months in the number of fatalities resulting from accidents at highway-railroad grade crossings, the Safety Sections of the Association of American Railroads today made public an appeal to the public to use greater caution in approaching and passing over such crossings. The appeal was made in a letter sent to member roads by the Safety Section's Committee on Prevention of Highway Crossing Accidents, the Chairman of which is O. F. Gnadinger of Joliet, Illinois, Supervisor of Safety of the Elgin, Joliet & Eastern Railway. The letter follows:

"The alarming increase that has taken place in recent months in the number of fatalities resulting from highway-railroad crossing accidents shows the necessity for redoubled efforts being made by the railroads to impress on motorists and the general public the need for increased care being exercised in approaching and passing over grade crossings. This is especially important because of the increase in the number of grade crossing accidents that normally takes place in the winter months due to ice covered pavements and the fact that a majority of motorists drive with car windows closed, which handicaps them in hearing approaching trains.

"The Bureau of Statistics of the Interstate Commerce Commission has just released reports which show that 1,113 persons lost their lives and 2,667 were injured in highway-railroad grade crossing accidents in the first eight months of 1940. This was the greatest number of fatalities for any corresponding period since 1931, with the exception of 1937, when there were 1,144 fatalities. The number of persons injured in the first eight months of 1940 was greater than in any corresponding period since 1937 when there were 1,144 fatalities. The number of persons injured in the first eight months of 1940 was greater than in any corresponding period

Full Program for Oil, Gas Meeting Has Been Formed

FORT WORTH—The full program for the Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association's annual convention, opening here next Thursday and extending through Saturday, was announced today by President E. L. Smith.

The program includes details just completed for the celebration of the 45th anniversary of the birth of the Texas oil industry. Presentation of a bronze memorial plaque to the citizens of Corsicana, commemorating the discovery of commercial oil production there in October, 1895, is scheduled for Thursday afternoon.

President Smith will present the plaque to J. L. Collins, association vice-president for East Central Texas, who in turn will present it to Joe E. Butler, president of the Corsicana Chamber of Commerce. It will be erected in Corsicana on a concrete base and model derrick, and dedicated next week with appropriate ceremonies.

Special invitations to attend the anniversary celebration have been extended the men who discovered some of the more famous fields in Texas oil history. The petroleum pioneers also have been invited to make up the crew for the wildcat oil test which the association is sponsoring in downtown Fort Worth, using the world's oldest rotary drilling rig.

Spudding in ceremonies for the wildcat will take place Thursday noon, with a number of leading Texas oil men due to take part. The business session Thursday

WM. E. BEACH IS KILLED BY A T.&P. TRAIN

Brief funeral services will be conducted at the family home, Main Street, Ranger, at 9 o'clock Sunday morning for William E. Beach, 23, whose body was found on the railway tracks just a short distance east of the Mingo railway station about midnight Saturday morning.

After the services at the home the body will be shipped on the Sunshine Special leaving Ranger at noon, for Poplar Bluff, Mo., for burial.

Circumstances surrounding the accident which caused young Beach's death are meager, but an investigation Saturday revealed that he had crossed the tracks to a cafe, where he purchased a hamburger. On returning to join his companions he apparently stepped in front of the train.

William Beach was born in Malden, Mo., March 24, 1917, and had lived in Ranger for the past 13 years.

Survivors include his mother, Mrs. W. L. Beach of Ranger, two sisters, Miss Virginia Beach of Ranger and Mrs. O. R. Harrell of Eastland and one brother, Donald Joe of Ranger.

FAMOUS AMERICAN NAMES CAN BE FOUND ON DRAFT LIST OF COUNTY, PUBLICATION SHOWS

If Uncle Sam is looking for real fighting names to draw in the draft he will find plenty of them on the Eastland County draft registration list, a casual reading of the names reveals. There are a number of registrants in the county, apparently named for famous early American warriors, who, if they live up to the reputations of their namesakes should prove real handy in case of war.

Not only are there names of famous fighting men but there is a sprinkling of statesmen, orators and at least one famous naval commander.

To start with there is John Paul Jones, and there is not a name in American naval history that stands out more prominently than the famous leader of early American naval forces. His counterpart, in name at least, can be found on the registration rolls.

Famous generals come in for a good number of first and second names, the rolls reveal. There is Robert Lee, to name one good Southern general. There is also a Pershing and a Lafayette, to pick names from more recent history.

But that isn't all. Andrew Jackson is represented. So is George Washington. If Indian fighters are needed there are Sam Houston, David Crockett and Daniel Boone. And who could ask for more when it came to real old rugged and tumble fighting. If guerrilla warfare comes back into vogue a Jesse James can be found in the county.

Presidents are well represented in the lists, too, though some of them have been mentioned as generals. First there is George Washington and Andrew Jackson. There is also that good old Southern name of Jefferson Davis. Woodrow Wilson was popular in Texas about the time some of the draft registrants were born, and his name bobs up pretty regularly. There is also a Warren Haring, an Abraham Lincoln, a Grover Cleveland, a Zachary Taylor and an Aaron Burr, though Burr was never a president. James Monroe, whose name crops up quite often in connection with the application of his doctrine, is also registered.

The famous Rough Riders of the Spanish-American War days could be well represented by Theodore Roosevelt, and the diplomatic corps might be represented by Benjamin Franklin, who once represented the United States in the court of France.

Daniel Webster might be the spellbinder who could address the recruits, though Joseph Weldon or Joe Bailey could be listed among the silver tongued orators. A place might also be found for Thomas Edison.

And, to complete the list, if there was any need to spread the alarm that the enemy was approaching, who could do a better job than Paul Revere, because he, too, is registered?

Ranger Girl Hurt In Car Accident

GERMAN RAID UPON ENGLAND IS INCREASED

By WALLACE CARROLL
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON, Oct. 26.—Ranging over many heavily congested districts, fleets of German airplanes attacked the British Isles with renewed fury today, causing heavy casualty lists when bombs struck a tenement house and a filled movie theater.

Rescue workers ignored repeated air alarms to dig bodies and injured persons from a four-story tenement house struck when a bomb landed in a busy shopping center. A number of casualties, including fatalities, resulted from the bomb hit on the movie house, and a man, his wife and five children were killed by a direct hit on their backyard shelter.

By midafternoon there had been five alarms in the London district.

Among the casualties at the bombed tenement house were some of the Italian residents of London. Some of the victims there were trapped in their apartments and others were caught while shopping in a grocery store on the ground floor.

Other sections suffered as heavily as London. Reports from a Midlands town said that during the night fire fighters at one time found themselves attempting to deal with 125 fires.

In addition to heavy casualties, the German bombs caused widespread damage. Bombs fell on a block of new buildings, where it was feared casualties were high.

Hints Are Given Italian Navy To Go Into Action

By REYNOLDS PACKARD
United Press Staff Correspondent
ROME, Oct. 26.—Startling events within the next few days involving the Italian navy and probably shifting the war's battle fields to the Mediterranean were forecast today by Virginia Gayda in the authoritative newspaper Giornale D'Italia.

As the Italian high command admitted that British warships last night shelled Italian forces on the North Coast of Egypt, Gayda said that "forthcoming developments will hold unpleasant surprises, not only for England but also for England's friends and minor satellites in certain parts of Europe."

General headquarters of Italian armed forces said that the British men of war shelled the Italians near Maktla, east of Sidi Barrani.

Developments in Axis policy seen in the last few days in the Hitler-Franco meeting and the conversations of the Fuehrer with the French government "shortly will have new and important developments," Gayda wrote.

"The present conflict is shifting a great part of its center of gravity toward the Mediterranean, and the Italian navy has carefully prepared plans drafted for future action which cannot be rendered public. Axis policy and action can be prepared new and unpleasant surprises for England and its few remaining satellites and friends in certain parts of Europe."

General headquarters said that the British shelling of Italians in Egypt caused no damage.

Uncle Sam Hoards His Tin

The United States is a rich country—but not quite rich enough to be normally self-sustaining.

There are certain raw materials we don't have. Tin is one of them. Most of the tin used in the United States comes from British Malaya or the Dutch East Indies. It's one of the commodities essential to war industries.

There is a tendency among Americans to feel just the least bit uncomfortable when they think of the materials in which nature has short-changed us—materials that might, in the end, spell the difference between victory and defeat. And so, on this matter of tin, the National Defense Advisory Commission got busy.

The problem has been attacked on four different fronts. The prospects are that, give or take a little time, the tin shortage in this country might be solved regardless of international events. Here's what's been done:

1. Reserve supplies of tin are rapidly being accumulated from both British Malaya and the Dutch East Indies. If war should cut off Pacific shipping lanes today, the United States would have enough tin to last for at least nine months, perhaps as long as 12. This reservoir of material is not enough to instill a complete feeling of security; but, after all, the sea routes are still open and American importers have made arrangements with miners to speed operations.

2. Conferences are going on between the Industrial Materials Division of the Defense Commission and the Metals Reserve Company to consider prospects of constructing a tin smelter in this country for processing Bolivian ore. Currently, neither the United States nor Bolivia has smelting facilities.

3. The field of substitutes and synthetics is being feverishly explored in the hope that something practical will be found.

4. And, finally, it is believed the normal reclamation of about 8000 tons of "clean scrap" tin each year could be expanded to some extent.

It is an encouraging picture. It helps to prove to the uncertain that losing any source of supply need not cripple American defense industries.

In a peaceful world, being self-sustaining is neither healthful nor socially desirable. In a world at war, it may prove to be salvation.

With conscription coming on, a lot of streaks will be broken by men who up until now have never been lucky enough to have their names called in a lottery.

A western bandit, measuring less than 5 feet, has been sent away for a good stretch.

council which claims 50,000 members; said his group would stand on its endorsement of Mr. Roosevelt and would proceed with plans for a joint Roosevelt rally with the American Federation of Labor Central Trades and Labor Council and the Railroad Brotherhoods next week.

Daniel J. Tobin, president of the AFL's International Brotherhood of Teamsters, and chairman of the labor division of the Democratic National Committee, said at Chicago that Lewis' speech put him in the same class with "steel men who tried to crucify labor."

Tobin's comment was regarded as being at least semi-officially that of the democratic party. In Boston, Joseph Salerno, New England regional director of the CIO, said that Lewis "did not speak for the greatest majority of the members of the CIO" and regardless of his message, "We will vote for President Roosevelt on November fifth."

since 1937 when there were 3,990 injuries.

"Hundreds of human lives could be saved annually if motorists would only use greater caution at grade crossings. Surveys made by safety officials show that a greater proportion of grade crossing accidents involve motorists who are familiar with local grade crossings and who use those crossings frequently, rather than motorists who perhaps pass through that locality for the first time. In view of that fact, we urge that an intensive effort be made by your agents and local employees through civic and other local organizations and public schools to firmly impress on the various communities as well as the general public the need for greater attention and care being used in approaching and passing over highway-railroad grade crossings. Regardless of the familiarity which a motorist has of grade crossings in his locality, eternal vigilance in making certain that a crossing can be passed over in safety should be exercised."

WRAY WADE SEVERN

LESENCOFF SAVES A LIFE CHAPTER XVI

SURELY nothing serious could have happened to Nella. Probably she had gone for a walk in the woods to regain her self-control. So reasoned Braitwood, as he made anxious way along a narrow path that pierced the grove east of the house.

"Nella!" he called. "Nella!" When she did not reply his apprehension increased. He thought of the dream she had related to them the previous night, of the faint which had mercifully spared her from more of Murphy's questions, and of her undeniable neurotic inheritance.

Then he recalled that she loved the orchard and directed his steps there. The fruit trees, thickened and colored with promised abundance, held no hint of tragedy. Braitwood heard a crow whirr overhead and the distant murmur of the stream at the end of the estate.

"Nella!" He repeated the call. "Oh, Nella!" Perhaps she had gone for a swim. Nothing like cold water to restore one to normalcy. He hurried toward the natural swimming pool at the southern boundary of the property. Screened by a growth of young birches and fed by the stream, the pool was visible from a small stone bridge which spanned a side road that joined the state highway. Suddenly Sidney's feet took startled root. Impossible not to recognize the tall figure staring intently into the water.

Boris Lesencoff stood on the rail, arms extended for a dive. He had flung his coat on the bridge, but he was otherwise fully clothed. Immediately he became a streak in the air.

ONLY a few bubbles marked the spot where Lesencoff had gone under. In an instant a dark head appeared; a shoulder flashed white; a powerful arm struck out; the other arm appeared, holding Nella Langdon's limp form. The pool was not wide. A few strokes and the Russian made bank.

Sidney took the girl from him and laid her, face down, on the grass. "We must get the water out of her lungs," he said.

"She had hardly gone under when I caught her," Lesencoff told him. Kneeling beside the unconscious girl, he helped Braitwood administer first aid.

"What did you see?" Sidney asked, his hands moving rhythmically against Nella's sides.

The director shook the water out of his hair. "It is something I cannot understand. She walked deliberately into the water, gazing straight before her. When she got beyond her depth, she sank. It looked deliberate. Then I dived."

"She acted oddly last night, Lesencoff," Sidney explained. "She had had a terrible shock. Did you know that Adam Langdon had been murdered?"

Lesencoff inclined his head. "Such news travels quickly," he said. "The milkman brought it from the Langdon Knoll kitchen to George Wilkinson's door this morning. I'm staying with the Wilkinsons this week." He hesitated before adding, "Can it be possible she knows more about the murder than she has told?"

SIDNEY'S eyes warned him to be less personal. Nella exhibited signs of returning consciousness. A shudder passed through her slender form and a faint breathing had begun to trouble her lungs.

"I came over as soon as I had had breakfast," the director went on. "I hope I may be of service to Marta. She will need all her friends."

"There is little you can do except leave condolences for the family," Sidney replied. "Langdon surprised me when we arrived by announcing his marriage to Patricia Bridges. Did you know of that, too?"

"Married to Patricia Bridges? Impossible!" Lesencoff exclaimed. "I understood there was a wife, but naturally I supposed her to be Marta."

"Well—it was otherwise," Sidney said. "So!" Lesencoff took a moment to digest the news. "All was amiable, no doubt?" he questioned.

"All was decorous," Sidney amended. "For an instant the Russian did not speak. Finally, after a quick glance to see if the girl were sufficiently conscious to hear him, he said, "Had I been present, I might have shot Langdon myself. You didn't do it, did you, Braitwood?"

"No, although I almost wanted to," Sidney replied. "Doubtless you, yourself, have an alibi, Boris?"

"Ironclad, now that I consider," Lesencoff's glance had fastened on Nella's head. "The girl has a bruise behind her ear. It is not fresh. Did you notice it?" he asked.

Sidney examined a small, discolored spot, plainly visible through the damp, streaked hair. "I wonder how she got that?" he muttered.

Lesencoff shrugged sadly. "We have given her another chance at life—for what it may be worth," he said. "At her age happiness should still be possible. You must talk with her, Braitwood. You know her father."

"I mean to," Sidney promised. "Shall we assume that she slipped and fell into the pool when we give an account of the accident?"

"Certainly she slipped. I saw her do it," Lesencoff agreed. "As for Marta, I shall see her publicity agent at once and give matters as favorable an interpretation as possible. Greatness is in her. This sorrow should broaden her art."

SIDNEY gazed thoughtfully at Lesencoff's broad shoulders and well-poised head. The director had expressed no regret for Adam's death. He had always hated Langdon and now he thought only in terms of Marta's suffering and the possible effect the tragedy might have on her future.

Yet, in spite of Marta's denial, Sidney knew that he loved her, and that she had had to make a choice between him and Adam Langdon. He insisted that he had an ironclad alibi. Braitwood hoped he was right.

They carried Nella back to the house and sent for a local doctor. Though she seemed conscious she did not speak, nor could she be induced to do so.

"That blow on her head may be responsible," the doctor told them. "Time will determine if it is. But the trouble may be a psychosis, due to shock."

He suggested a nurse. Pat, however, decided that they had best share the nursing between them. Though no word was spoken, all agreed that if Nella had anything to say when she became herself again, it might be better for the family to learn of it first.

BRITISH LURE U. S. FLEET TOWARD BASE AT SINGAPORE WITH BID TO VISIT AUSTRALIA

Should the U. S. fleet be visiting in a northern Australian port, it would be within 2500 miles, or easier striking distance of Singapore—and the effect would not be lost on the Japanese.

Navy men here are highly confident they could beat Japan if they had use of the Singapore base. They could clamp on a tight blockade, they believe, under circumstances which would compel the Japanese to fight at a great disadvantage. Further, they think the Japanese are quite aware of it—for which reason the belief is growing here that Japan would not force a war if the U. S. fleet should suddenly materialize at Singapore.

Strategists in Washington are beginning to suspect Britain's struggle to retain her hold on Suez and the eastern Mediterranean may hang the outcome of the war—could easily be decided by what the United States does in the Pacific. And they don't mean it would be necessary to fire any shots, either.

Here's the way it's being figured: Britain can spare few, if any, men to defend the eastern Mediterranean. The Suez Canal and the near eastern oil fields may be of vital importance, but they will have to be defended with men on the spot or with reinforcements from Australia, New Zealand and India. Because of the Japanese threat in the Pacific, however, large bodies of dominion and Indian troops must be kept at home and can't be sent to the Mediterranean.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

"Probation after Death" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be heard in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, October 27. The Golden Text is: "Let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not" (Galatians 6:9). Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again into a lively

Re-Enactment of Road Bond Plan Is Being Urged

LONGVIEW, Tex.—Financial aid by the State to Texas counties under the amended Road Bond assumption Act of 1939 has been of great assistance to local taxpayers, and the East Texas Chamber of Commerce favors re-enactment of the bill by the next session of the Legislature, but with three amendments designed hope for the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead" (1 Peter 1:3). The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Spiritual development germinates not from seed sown in the soil of material hopes, but when these decay, Love propagates anew the higher joys of Spirit, which have no taint of earth" (page 66).

Buckaroos Defeat Ranger By 58 to 0

The Ranger Bulldogs suffered their second most decisive defeat of the season, and the sixth of the year, when they were beaten by the Breckenridge Buckaroos Friday night at Breckenridge by a score of 58 to 0. The score was one short of the 59-to-0 defeat they suffered earlier in the season at Odessa, and ran the total points scored against them to 274.

The Buckaroos started scoring in the first quarter and scored in each period of the game. The only Ranger threat came when James Townzen returned a Buckaroo kickoff to the 50-yard line and appeared to be lose for a touchdown when he was brought down from behind.

Throughout the game the Buckaroo defense kept the Bulldogs from crossing the 50-yard line.

Starting Lineups

Ranger: Jackson, Simpson, ends; Ownby, Hardin, tackles; Lee, Horn, guards; Gray, center; Elder, Townzen, J. O. Townzen and Ready, backs.
