IN RECENT WEEKS our nearest little city of Amarillo has gained quite a bit of unwanted attention from the national media with the Brian Deneke/Dustin Camp case. It's nothing new. The decade between childhood and adulthood is a time of anguish for just about everybody. At the turn of the last century, the term "teenager" had not yet been invented, but the second decade of life seems always to have been burdened with huge problems.

"MY TURN"

By Carol Ellis

Prior to the Great Depression, very few young people went to high school. They were part of the work force. They worked in the factories, the mines, as delivery boys, or as household servants, or in the sweat shops, or on their family farms. Out here in the wide open spaces of the west they worked as cowboys. The majority of the "hands" on the great cattle drives were youngsters between the ages of 14 to 18.

Just about everybody was out of work after the Depression and when FDR took office in 1933, the needs of the young took a back seat as the country's main objective became getting men with families back into paying jobs. Of course, bored young folks with nothing to do resorted to mischief and even crime, becoming known as juvenile delinquents.

A secondary education for children of working-class families had not become popular, since people had to depend on the added income of their children for survival. High school was thought of as something for the well-to-do who planned to send their children on to college. Few working-class young people graduated from high school in the 20s and early 30s. Once you reached mid-teens you were considered grown up.

Today, youth is a time of rebellion, of breaking away from the constraints of childhood. Adults try to channel the excessive hormonal energy of teens into constructive activities. Their more violent tendencies are channeled into organized sports. But those who don't accept such directions often become misfits.

A recent article in Focus on the Family points out how the American culture has shaped each succeeding generation of teens. Those born between the years 1901 and 1945 are known as the "Builders." They were young during the Depression and WWII. Radio and newspapers were the only "media" they knew. They (or I should say "we") grew up with the Judeo-Christian ethic, married only once, saved their money, and bought only items they could afford. They enjoyed the swing music of the big bands.

Then came the "Baby Boomers" born between 1946 and 1964. Television exploded on the scene and opened up a whole new world. These young people experienced the Cold War, civil rights, de-segregation, the Vietnam War, rock and roll music, the sexual revolution, and space exploration. Morals and money both became more relaxed at about the same time. The divorce rate skyrocketed for this group.

Next we find Generation X or the "Xers" born between 1965 and 1976. From Watergate they learned that our country's leaders cannot always be trusted. There was less supervision at home since both parents were working. Environmental concerns and AIDS came on the scene. Many of these teens became single parents. Money and jobs were harder to get. Rock and roll was out, heavy metal and rap were in. Home computers were just beginning to be a major force.

Currently we have the Net Generation or the "N-Geners" born between 1977 and 1997. They have seen the end of the Cold War, the beginning of domestic terrorism, a booming economy, and a tolerance toward morals. Genetic research will play a part in their lives. The internet is the be-all to end-all for the current group of youngsters.

From this, it is easy to see that differences in values just naturally lead to conflicts between the different groups. High schools in large cities have become battle grounds. I've heard discussions about doing away with high school after the 10th grade. Perhaps we should go back to thinking of our young people after age 15 on up as adults rather than teenagers.

Suit Filed Against Co. Sheriff's Office

Francisco Javier Ortiz, owner of Pancho's Pool Hall on Main Street in Friona, has filed a suit in Amarillo's U. S. District Court as a result of a raid last April 16 by the Parmer County Sheriff's office.

Ortiz and Tomas Hernandez were arrested during the raid and charged with possession of alcohol in a dry area with intent to sell and operating a private club without a private club registration permit. The charges were later dismissed.

Joining Ortiz and Hernandez in the federal civil rights suit were Daniel Padilla, Ruben Villanueva, and Arturo Aguilar who were in the pool hall at the time of the raid.

The attorney representing the men told the Amarillo Globe News that "What we are saying is that what they (Sheriff's office) acted upon was not reliable information."

Jurors Are Dismissed

The members of the jury panel that were directed to report to District Court, 287th Judicial District, Farwell, on January 24, 2000 at 9:30 a.m. DO NOT need to report.

The case scheduled for trial has been settled. Any questions should be submitted to Sandra Warren, District Clerk, (806) 481-3419.

Sheriff Is Nominated For Award

On December 22, 1999, Sheriff Walt Yerger was nominated for the annual Education Community Service Award by the Texas Commission on Law Enforcement Standards (TCLES). The statewide award recognizes outstanding efforts in the area of community policing.

Yerger was nominated for the award for his efforts in establishing a county wide "lunch at the schools" program. The program is conducted once a year at each county school when area law enforcement officers serve lunch in the school cafeteria to the students and staff.

TCLES cited the program as helping students, teachers and staff at our schools to get better acquainted with area law enforcement officers.

The nomination further described how valuable the program was in promoting better communication between law enforcement officers and the people they serve.

man, organist, played traditional wedding selections. Soloist Datia Lust of Albuquerque, sang "I Will Be Here" before the couple repeated their wedding vows and as they lit the unity candle, she sang, "Two Candles."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length Italian satin gown that featured an A-line bodice of Alecon lace, covered with beads and pearls on the bust and featured a keyhole neck-line.

The three-tiered veil of scalloped nylon tulle was attached to a crown topped with puffs of net. She carried a bouquet of white and burgundy silk flowers and burgundy streamers that complimented the wedding colors.

Something new was her bridal ensemble and something blue was a garter with a cameo belonging to the groom's grandmother. For something old, she wore a diamond "pinky ring" belonging to her grandmother. Something borrowed was her veil.

Miss Jamie Kunselman, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and the bride's maid was Shawna Kenworthy. They wore floor-length gowns and carried bouquets of velvet poinsettias edged in gold.

Miss Channing Burgess was flower girl and scattered petals from a white basket with burgundy streamers. Ring bearer was Justin Rindisbacher, cousin of the bride, and his attire matched that of the best man and groomsmen.

Tommy Miller of Borger served as best man. Groomsman was Brock Tullos of Borger, the groom's cousin.

Ushers were the groom's cousins, Will Winborne of Borger and Kirk Stokes of Amarillo.

The reception was held in the Atrium Room of the hotel. The bride's table was covered with a white cloth centered with a three-tiered wedding cake topped with an assortment of burgundy silk flowers.

The groom's table featured a chocolate cake in a basket weave decoration, surrounded with chocolate dipped strawberries. A table at the entrance contained a large silver fountain with punch, also coffee and tea.

Servers were Colbi Winborne, Brook Trantham, and Meli Burgess, and Jennifer Coleman.

Breast cancer affects one in eight women. The key to winning the battle against cancer is early detection by having an annual breast exam, mammogram and performing breast self-exam each month.

Participants will receive a low-cost screening mammogram. Each woman will receive a breast health risk appraisal and individual instruction by a registered nurse in breast self-examination.

Funding is available through the Texas Department of Health for Texas residents who qualify for assistance. All exams are done by appointments only. Call (806) 356-1905 or 1-800-377-4673 for more information.
