THIS MAN'S PLANS WENT ALL WRONG

He was to Lunch with his Wife, who was late—Another woman happened along and—

Henderson came to his Staten island breakfast table so good-natured that his wife looked at him in a puzzled way and one of the children asked in a whisper if papa "was not feeling well this morning." The customary growl at the coffee was missing; the toast was just right and he complimented the eggs on their freshness. Noticing the look of alarm on the faces of the children he laughed heartily, chucked the little cherubs under the chin, gave them a dime all around and said to his better half: "My dear, it is going to be a remarkably light day at the office. I shall only have to look in. Or, perhaps, I can just call them up by telephone and that will be enough. Suppose you come up to town with me—I shall take a later boat than usual—and we will take luncheon and after that go to the matinee. What say you?"

What did she say? Well, as she had been begging him to take her uptown to luncheon for a month without material results, what she said can be imagined. They dawled up to Manhattan, having a honeymoon over again, and at Whitehall street Henderson said: "Just wait for me a moment in the elevated station while I telephone the office."

The wife was in rapture. Of course she would wait. Henderson was a long time at the telephone. When he finally returned the sunny sky of his morning disposition was overcast with heavy storm clouds. "It will be impossible for me to go shopping with you," he almost snapped. There is a man waiting for me in the office who has just arrived from Chicago to put through a big business deal." Then seeing the look that came into his wife's face he tried to assume his morning's good nature again, and said: "Never mind, dear, I will meet you at 12:30 o'clock, and we will have luncheon together." He named an uptown elevated station as the trysting place and a famous restaurant as the place for luncheon. The wife brightened up again, kissed her husband right before the crowd and went away in a train happy. Henderson hurried to his office and plunged headlong into the business struggle.

It was 1 o'clock when, tired, cross and as yet in doubt as to whether he had succeeded in putting through "deal," he got off a train at the trysting place. Had a lady been waiting there for some one? O, yes, the ticket seller said, she had. He had noticed a woman waiting. She had been waiting for about half an hour. She had been gone only about 10 minutes.

With his nerves strung to high tension by the labors of the forenoon, Henderson exploded a few times, and then thought bitterly. "She might have waited a little longer when I was working so hard." A bright idea struck him. "Which is the nearest of the big department stores?" he asked of the ticket seller. The information obtained, Henderson hurried away.

Being alone and hungry and tired of waiting, he reasoned, his wife would naturally make for the restaurant of the nearest department store for her luncheon. Henderson arrived at the vast establishment, and after being stepped on by fat women, and jabbed in the ribs by the elbows of thin women, and hustled about by medium sized women, he reached the women's restaurant and looked in. It was crowded, and in that vast throng of femininity he saw not his wife.

Turning saxagely he entered the men's restaurant and ordered a steak and a bottle of beer. "We can serve you the steak," replied the waiter, "but not beer or liquors of any sort." After a long time he got his steak. It was tough, half cold, and too much cooked. He ate it murderously.

After paying his check Henderson thought he would just take another look in at the women's restaurant. Perhaps his wife had stopped somewhere on the way and he would see her there now. He stepped just inside the door of the great room where the many women were eating. No, she was not there, and he turned to go out. Just then a woman carooned against him in a manner peculiar to women in department stores, where the presence of a mere man is ignored to the extent of forbidding him even dimension.

"G, Mr. Henderson," she said, "how jolly to meet you." It was a woman he had formerly known, but had not seen for a long time.

"Charmed!" said he in his most urbane way. "I was looking for my wife." They shook hands, said a few common-places things and parted. Henderson looked up as the woman swept away and there was his wife coming through the door of the woman's restaurant, her eyes taking in the scene and her lips set tightly together.

"Margaret," he gasped.

"Who is your friend?" said she.

"Have you had luncheon?"

Henderson explained that the woman was a casual acquaintance of other days.

"Where did you lunch?" demanded the wife, "and why did you not meet me?"

She was generally the meekest wife that ever swore to love, honor and obey, but there was a sort of dictatorial manner about her now which somewhat confused Henderson.

"My dear," he began, "I was detained—on business—important business. Yes, I have had luncheon."

"With whom?" she asked.

"Why alone, of course. With whom did you think?"

"O, I did not know. Men are not allowed to eat in this room, you know, unless they are acting as escorts."

"But my dear, I had luncheon in the men's restaurant and just looked in here to see if I could find you. I looked in here first, you know, before I ate. Really sorry that you did not wait for me a little longer. Shall we go to the matinee?"

"No," replied the wife. "I think I will go home."

"And to think," sighed Henderson to himself as they walked in silence to the train, "this is the first day for years I have been really good-natured."—New York Press.

WASN'T THE RUBE HE SEEMED TO BE

New Yorker Gets Taken In by a Pennsylvania Farmer with a White Beard and a Pair of Blue Jeans.

"Say," said the genial-looking man as he leaned over the railing of the ferryboat, and gazed reflectively at the stream of foam that floated out from beneath the paddles and made a white streak across the water, "do I look like what is professionally and vulgarly known as 'easy'?"

The stranger looked the speaker over carefully.

"Can't not say you do," he vouchsafed, encouragingly, "but I am not a gold-brick man."

"Wouldn't make any difference if you were," replied the other snappily. "Give me a New York tout, a gold-brick man, a horse thief—anything but the honest Pennsylvania farmer! I'm up to all but him." "Say"—he lowered his voice confidently—"I've been trimmed in the prettiest way you ever heard of."

"I tell you," he broke in suddenly, "it looks good to see those old sky-scrapers over again. I'm going back to one of them and try to make a living doing as I'm done. I'm going to join the bulls and bears and wolves—that don't wear sheep's clothing."

"It is just about six months since I went to a little town in Pennsylvania for my health. I had a tidy sum saved up and, as my health had gotten bad and my nerves unstrung, the doctor advised me to go to a nice, quiet country place, where I wouldn't waste too much money and could rest up. He especially advised my staying out of doors, riding, driving, golfing, and the like."

"When I got to this little town, which shall be nameless, I found myself in the wilderness. The people didn't know of any such thing as golf. Croquet was in the height of fashion. The beauty, fashion and chivalry used to go walking in the evenings, or sit around on the front porch holding hands for excitement. But there was a village livery stable kept by a sturdy old farmer mainly for the benefit of summer boarders, and I got all the rough riding and rough driving I wanted to, for that matter. I was on a good horse every morning at daybreak, and by the time I had been up there three weeks I felt like Ajax, Hercules, Philadelphia Jack O'Brien all in one. Indeed, I felt so fine and so thoroughly acclimated that I had hated the idea of going back to New York with its dirt and smoke and bustle and cold hearted dishonesty."

"One day I was talking to the sturdy old farmer who kept the livery stable, and telling him all about New York. He never seemed tired of hearing of the metropolis."

"Lordly!" he exclaimed regretfully. "Wal I dew wish I could go there and live. I end, too, if it wasn't for this here livery stable. I got a friend that'll buy my farm at a good figger, but there's no givin' this here stable away. Y'see, the darn thing only nets about $20 a week profit on an average, and no body'll give me my price for it after they see the books."

"I felt sorry for the old fellow and jokingly suggested that he do like some of our New York wolves, keep a double set of books, a true one for his own benefit and a fake set to show his customers. His face lit up at the idea.

"Lordly!" he exclaimed, "You New Yorkers is bright, ain't ye. Wal, wal, wal! Never thought o' that! I'll do it right now."

"That night as I sat on the piazza in the cool evening breeze and thought of the torrid old city, it occurred to me that if I bought out the old farmer myself I could live up in Pennsylvania all the days of my life in peace and comfort, if not in luxury. The idea grew in my head, and that night I turned over and over, with the result that the next morning I went down and offered the old man his price. A week later I was the village livery stable keeper."

The genial-looking man stopped and gazed moodily out over the purling waters.

"Well," suggested the stranger, "did the old farmer get off to New York?"

"Get off? Well, I guess he did. I'm the one that didn't get off. I'm the sucker that got stuck there and stayed until my last penny was gone. Say, if you ever meet Bezelebab in a white beard and blue jeans, telephone for me, will you?"

"Why; what did the old fellow do?"

"Do! Do! He did me!"

"But didn't you see the books?"

"Of course I did. But the cherub-faced rustic with the innocent accent had been keeping a double set of books right along."

BEWARE OF THE OCEAN FLIRT.

She May be Met by Husband at End of Trip.

"You hear a lot about the card sharpers and bunco men who travel on ocean liners," says the man who goes over to 'the other side' frequently, "but I've never seen anything about the ocean flirt. She does quite as much damage in her way as the card sharper. There is always one on an ocean liner, sometimes more, but always at least one. Sometimes the flirt is a married woman, who may be a devoted wife and mother on land, but as soon as she finds herself on the ocean far away from husband and children, she develops into the most outrageous flirt."

"The slickest I've seen lately was on the same boat I crossed to England on three weeks ago. I was sharing my stateroom with a friend—call him Brown. At the first meal out a woman came in and sat down directly opposite us. I've seen a good many women in my time, but she was one of the handsomest. She was one of the Junoesque type—tall, well formed, with lustrous black eyes. She was a woman to take any man's eye.

"Now, Brown had known a good many kinds of women and had something of a name among them. The Juno set got his attention right away. He managed to get an introduction somehow, and the first thing I knew he was wild about her—really lost his head. He used to sit up at nights and tell me what a wonderful woman she was and what a sad life story she had. She came of a distinguished old Southern family—strange how all the women who have sad experiences always comes from a distinguished old Southern family—that lost all of its property in the war. Her parents were honest, but poor. They struggled along till her mother died at Juno's birth. Juno grew up, became a governess in a wealthy family, and after many vicissitudes—during which she had always held her self proudly aloof from all men and was yet unmarried—she was informed that she had fallen heir to several millions, left by a rich old uncle, who died in England. She was on her way over to meet her cousin and collect."

"Well, Brown believed every word of it. And not only did the fair one get attention from Brown, but from every other unattached man on shipboard. While one man would be sitting in a dark corner talking to her on a moonlight night, all the others would be stalking about and glaring at each other. That woman certainly had that shipful roped and tied."

"When the boat drew up at her pier at Southampton and we all piled off, the first person at the gangplank was a tall, well-built man who rushed forward and gathered the Juno up in his arms and fairly rained kisses upon her face. Behind him was a nurse carrying in her arms a little boy who yelled frantically at the sight of her and shrieked for joy. Just as the party disappeared the woman turned and threw a laughing glance over her shoulder at the sick-looking crowd of men coming up behind."

"Brown was too stunned to believe the fears of the rest. He insisted that the man must have been her cousin and the child his own, but the final blow was yet to come. When we filed into our hotel at London we found just ahead of us the tall 'cousin.' And here was what he wrote on the register: 'A. J. Jackson, Mrs. A. J. Jackson, nurse and child, Chicago.' Brown gave up. The New York Lothario had been stung by a Chicago queen bee."—New York Press.

BRIDE AND GROOM GO TO JAIL.

Mexico, Mo., Sept. 10.—Mr. and Mrs. Nortou Melson, who were married last week in this city, spent the first night of wedded life in the county jail. The bride and groom chose this method of outwitting friends who were waiting to give them a noisy reception at their new home and spent the night as guest of the jailer.

WACO BUTCHER MURDERED.

Waco, Tex., Sept. 10.—One of the most dastardly crimes that has occurred in Waco and McLennan County in some years occurred last night, Mathis Block, who runs a meat market on the corner of Twelfth and Morrow Streets, being the victim.

The killing took place about 9 o'clock last night, but no one knew of it until this morning, when W. G. Huggins, the meat cutter for Mr. Block, came to the place to open up to go to work.

He saw a door slightly ajar, walked in and lighted a lamp. There, covered with blood, sitting in his desk chair, was Mr. Block. He was leaning back, almost in a comfortable position, and the clots of blood showed that he had been dead for some time.

Sheriff Tilley and Chief of Police Dollins were notified at once. Justice word was also summoned and in a short time a half dozen officers besides several citizens, had gathered at the place.

The wound in the head is a horrible one and was the length of an ordinary wood ax. The skull was caved in and broken and the brains were scattered on the edges of the wound.

There was no evidence of a struggle on the part of the victim and the indications were that he never knew what hit him and that death was instantaneous.

The killing doubtless took place at an early hour last night, for the clots of blood about the wound were cold and the deceased had not retired for the night. He was sitting in his desk chair and had probably been at work on his books, or was intending to do so, and had fallen asleep when the blow was struck.

The Breath of Life.

It's a significant fact that the strongest animal of its size, the gorilla, also has the largest lungs. Powerful lungs means powerful creatures. How to keep the breathing organs right should be man's chiefest study. Like thousands of others, Mrs. Ora A. Stephens, of Port Williams, O., has learned how to do this. She writes: "Three bottles of Dr. King's New Discovery stopped my cough of two years and cured me of what my friends thought consumption. O, its grand for throat and lung troubles. Guaranteed by Rock Drug Store. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free."

PORTER'S LURID STORY.

Cuero, Tex., Sept. 10.—The Sam Houston Flyer from San Antonio brought Fred Jackson (colored) to Cuero for hospital treatment.

Jackson has a hair raising story. He was a porter on an excursion train which ran from San Antonio to Port Lavaca yesterday. On its return trip the excursion train ran on the siding at Landenau, and Jackson turned the switch and sat down on a beer keg to wait until the Sam Houston passed and to turn the switch and get the excursion train on the main line again. While in this position two men armed with guns approached Jackson, and hearing the station whistle of the approaching Flyer, they, with cocked guns, forced Jackson on the track in front of the train. As the Flyer was upon him Jackson made a desperate effort to clear the track, but was caught by the pilot and his left arm and face badly bruised. He was then picked up by the Sam Houston. He was taken to San Antonio this afternoon. No clue to the perpetrators.

THE ELECTION LAW.

There is probably no state in the American union that has not, at some period of its progress in statecraft, had more or less agitation over election laws and the best means of securing to the people in so far as such a thing is possible, a pure and unpurchasable ballot. This, of course has never been fully achieved by any commonwealth on earth. There has never been a time in the history of the world when money could not influence the ballot to a greater or less extent. In Texas the matter of purifying the ballot has had the most profound and careful consideration of many of the wisest and most honorable men who have participated in the State's councils, and while much good has resulted from their labors, yet the end desired has not been fully attained, and, perhaps, will never be. However, each blow that has been aimed at that slimy monster, "an impure ballot," that would eventually sap the commonwealth of its vitality and so disgust and dishearten the better element of Texas citizens as to cause them to lose interest in matters of statecraft, has been a step in the right direction, and merits the commendation of all good citizens.

The Terrell election law, as originally passed in 1903, was probably the greatest single blow that was ever struck at illegal and un-decent manipulation of the ballot in Texas, and yet it was far short of perfection. Every good thing that has ever been attempted in the world has met with strong and untiring opposition. When the matter of correcting the inequalities of the Terrell election law came up in the 29th Texas Legislature, this opposition was so strong in both bodies that the amended bill, when finally passed, was a legislative monstrosity with such a preponderance of useless, confusing and in some instances ridiculous provisions that the original good intention of the measure were overshadowed and almost lost sight of in the labyrinths of meaningless and contradictory phraseology.

Many men of prominence throughout the State, and among them not a few who are prospective members of the coming 30th legislature, believe that the Terrell election law ought to be repealed. Those men, however, who have denounced that measure upon the hustings and in public print, are not, as many people seem to think, in favor of unconditional repeal of the law without preparation for the purity of the Texas ballot. The chief grievance against the Terrell election law is that it is cumbersome, contradictory and seems to seek through a multitude of words to hide its own meaning. An election law should be a small, perfectly white and immaculately clean napkin, without frills or painted ornament, just large enough to easily cover and sacredly preserve the franchise of loyal, honorable Texans, and upon whose spotless purity each honorable citizen of the State should look with such reverence that he would give his life rather than permit a polluting finger laid upon it.

The law governing the holding of party primaries should by no means be incorporated in the general election law. It is an entirely separate matter and so long as it is combined with the general election law will cause confusion among the election officers and also among voters, both in the holding of primaries and general elections. It is for the reason that the two laws should obviously be separated, and that the entire election law is confusing and in many places obscure in its meaning and capable of being construed in different ways, that many public men believe that a general election law retaining the best features of the present law, should be passed repealing the present law, and that a separate, simple and easily construed law be put upon the statutes regulating the holding of primaries.

Every man who advocates the repeal of the Terrell election law, is in favor of repealing it by the passage of another election law that will be in the line of progression toward securing to the voters of Texas the absolute purity of the sacred privilege of the ballot.

It is really no harder to be honest than it is to be dishonest. Men get paid for the trouble they take in either direction. The difference is that you get all your money in a lump for dishonesty, while honesty is a bank account that you can draw upon when in actual need.

THERE are many people who have gotten the idea that the Terrell election law is responsible for the poll tax amendment. Such however is not the case. The honor and credit of the passage and subsequent amendment of the Terrell election law belongs entirely to the 28th and 29th legislatures of Texas. The adoption of the poll tax amendment was made by the votes of Texas citizens, than whom there is no higher tribunal on earth, and who, if allowed to settle public matters by the exercise of an untrammelled ballot, would rarely go wrong in their judgment.

FUNNY THINGS

FROM THE PAPERS.

A Kansas City man ordered chicken pie in a restaurant and found a piece of chicken in it. Surely, these are the days of surprises.

A cow ate the ear off a New York dude who was spending a day in a hammock in Kansas. Those Kansas cows always did have an abnormal appetite for green stuff.—Western Publisher.

A Kansas youth, amorous and musical, soulfully played, "Oh, fly with me!" the other night at a church sociable in Wichita. One of "our most accomplished young ladies" accompanied him on the piano—and later on the cars.—Western Publisher.

A Fog Story.

Visitor—Do you have many fogs here?

Old Salt—Fogs? Bless me, I was lookin' over this 'ere railing once, lost me balance and fell over, and the fog was so thick it kept me up, and I 'ad to cut the way down to the beach with me knife!—Ex.

The little boy's father had come home from his office early and was lying for a nap before dinner. The little lad's mother sent him up stairs to see if his father was asleep. He returned with the answer: "Yes, mamma, pap is all asleep but his nose."—New York Tribune.

An Irishman was at work on a hoisting machine that carried hods of brick to the top of a building and brought them down empty. Happening to get crught he was carried to the top floor and in orderly but rapid progress of the machine was brought to the ground rather suddenly. A fellow workman leaned from the second story scaffolding and cried are you hurt Pat? "You go to the devil," shouted Pat. "I passed you twice and ye never spoke to me."—Ex.

Could Not Trust Him.

After a wordy argument in which neither scored, two Irishmen decided to fight it out. It was agreed that when either said "I've enough" the fight should cease.

After they had been at it about ten minutes one of them fell, and immediately yelled, "Enough! I've enough!" But his opponent kept on pounding him until a man who was watching them said:

"Why don't you let him up? He says he's got enough."

"I know he says so," said the victor between punches, "but he's such a liar you can't believe a word he says."—Washington Post.

An automobilist who was touring through the country saw walking ahead of him, a man followed by a dog. As the machine drew near the dog started suddenly to cross the road. He was hit by the car and killed instantly. The motorist stopped his machine and approached the man. "I am very sorry, my man, that this has happened," he said, "will $5 fix it?" "Oh, yes," said the man, "$5 fixes it I guess." Pocketing the money as the car disappeared in the distance, he looked down at the dead animal. "I wonder whose dog it was?" he said.—Judge's Magazine.

'Taint no use nobow to stude spelling. Nobody kan lern nobode nuthin' about it. It's plum eze—if u don't no how. Gram-mur? Shaw, it's a pasl ov fulishness.—Ex.

A negro tells the puzzled doctors at New Iberia just how that mulatto boy got his case of yellow fever: "Dat boy fill hisself full of beer and annudder nigger hit him in de belly wif a baseball bat."—Gonzales Inquirer.

A young man paid suit to an old widow who had been left a half million by her husband. When the young man was twitted by a companion about the faded appearance of his bride he simply remarked that the interest on half a million dollars would buy a considerable amount of paint.—Exchange.

A certain man was in the habit of boasting and making a great deal of talk about what he intended to do. "This man," said a neighbor, "reminds me of the weather in Western Kansas twenty years ago. He is full of wind all the time and he clouds up twenty times a day, but never rains."—Exchange.

An old man who had been henpecked all his married life was about to die. His wife concluded that she ought to offer him some consolation and said: "John, you are about to go, but I will follow you." "I suppose so, Mandy," said the old man weakly, but so far as I am concerned you needn't be in any blamed hurry about it."

An Embarrassing Tax.

"The women suffragists of Kansas are in a fix."

"How's that?"

"Why the new ballot law there says that 'the lower limits of every voter as high as the knees must be visible from the outside of the booth while he is preparing his ticket,' and the women don't know whether to vote or not."—Farmers Union Magazine.

Almost Wished.

"Once upon a time," said a state senator the other day, as he lapsed into a story telling mood, "a rich man died, leaving a large estate to his family. The usual scramble ensued; contested will, law suits, family quarrels, etc. One of the boys got so tired of it all that he at length exclaimed: 'I almost wish father hadn't died.'"

What Did the Cook Say.

One of the state legislators entered an Albany restaurant the other evening and ordered a porterhouse steak. When the portion arrived it did not quite appeal to him as being sufficiently cooked. He called the waiter.

"Would you kindly take this back to the cook and tell him to broil it a little more."

"Sure," replied he of the white coat. This is how the polite request was handed back to the cook:

"Say, Bill, that fat guy backed away from this piece of horse. He wants a little more fire on it, or it's all up with you and your little pots. Get a move on or you'll have him butting in here and calling you by your real name. See?"—Albany Journal.

"SAP" IMMIGRATION PRIZES

AT SAN ANTONIO INTERNATIONAL FAIR.

The management of the San Antonio International Fair offer the following prizes for the best agricultural exhibits:

$500.00 for the first.
$300.00 for the second.

Open to all counties in the state. The S. A. & A. P. Immigration and Industrial Departments will offer the following additional prizes:

$300.00 for the first.
$200.00 for the second.
$100.00 for the third.

This offer will be confined strictly to the counties through which our road runs, and will not be open to counties in other parts of the state.

The above S. A. & A. P. Immigration prizes are conditioned on at least four S. A. & A. P. counties entering county exhibits. This will make it certain that at least three counties will get premiums. We consider this an unusual offer to encourage county exhibits.

If any of our "Sap" counties would take the first prize over all competitors, it would receive the first premium offered by the Fair Association, $500.00, and in addition would get the first prize offered by our Immigration and Industrial Departments, $300.00 a total of $800.00.

Should any "Sap" county exhibit get the second prize, $300.00, offered by the Fair Association, and secure the first "Sap" county prize, that county would get $600.00. Never in the history of state exhibits has such a liberal offer been made.

Active canvass will be begun in your community at once.

The Fair people are arranging for a separate Agricultural Building, and will give all space necessary for county exhibits.

If your county intends to place an exhibit at the Fair, notify me on or before September 15th.

We have arranged with the Fair management to have Col. Pyron visit the different counties on our road, and assist in getting up the county exhibits. This gentleman is well-known throughout Southwest Texas, and will render valuable assistance.

The Railway Company will charge regular rates for the transportation of the county exhibits to the Fair, and will return the same to points of origin free of charge, if notified in time.

Please consult our agent at your town. I will give any further information required.

We consider that the coming Fair will be the greatest in the history of Texas. There will be thousands of northern homeseekers present, and if "Sap" counties make a good exhibit, there is no question, but what it will be of great benefit to all concerned. Act quickly.

Moonlight Picnic.

Last Saturday evening a jolly crowd picniced at Split Rock. They carried their fun with them and found their pleasure greatly enhanced by the beauty of the scenery and the unique formation of the trees and rocks. A delicious lunch was enjoyed by the participants, who were: Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Morriss, Mrs. Pattie Hannis, Mrs. Wm. Morriss and small son of San Antonio, Mrs. Oscar Lejuen of New Orleans and Misses Dreyer and Clark of Corpus Christi and Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Coleman. They returned to town about nine o'clock having enjoyed the moonlight ride exceedingly.

A Happy Crowd.

One of the most congenial crowds in the city gathers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Williams each day. Besides Prof. H. W. Morelock and Misses McNealy and Bataille of the public schools, a Corpus Christi crowd composed of Mrs. J. B. Hardwicke and little son, and Misses Dreyer and Clark, Mr. S. D. Hopkins, telegraph operator and many others who have almost become permanent, gathers at each meal and enjoy the home-like service under the capable management of Mrs. Williams.

This Sanitarium is devoted exclusively to the treatment of Tuberculosis. It occupies a large estate at an altitude of 1100 feet, one mile from Llano, and 100 miles from Austin, on the Houston and Texas Central Railroad. The climate is sunny, mild, dry and dustless—one of the best climates for tubercular patients in the United States. A resident physician and trained nurses in constant attendance. Room for other patients. For further information and descriptive literature, with booklet of views, address

M. M. SMITH, M. D.,
Secretary-Treasurer, Austin, Texas.

Tivy High School.

On Monday Sept. 3rd, 1906, the Tivy High School reassembled for another year's work. The attendance the second day was the largest ever enrolled in the Kerrville schools. One very encouraging feature is that the pupils in the upper grades are continuing in school.

Quite a number of pupils from a distance have entered school, which is an evidence of the good report our students carry abroad with them.

The following is the enrollment by grades in Tivy High School: 1st, 48; 2nd, 37; 3rd, 43; 4th, 42; 5th, 28, 6th, 34; 7th, 21; 8th, 13; 9th, 14; 10th, 8.

Basket ball and base ball have begun in good spirit and with great enthusiasm on the campus, which is in good shape for such sports. A "Field Day," consisting of various athletic sports, will be given by the students in the near future.

O. E. S. Installation.

The officers for the coming year in the order of the Eastern Star were installed Tuesday night. The installation was not exactly public, but each member was given the privilege of inviting two friends. A large number of the members and their friends were present. After the installation, ceremonies, ice cream and cake that had been prepared by the ladies, was served and much enjoyed by all.

Methodist Church Nearing Completion.

The additions to the Methodist Church are nearing completion, and when finished, will be one of the nicest church buildings in the city. B. B. Lowrance the artistic paper hanger and painter is now busily engaged in printing and papering the inside. The walls are being paneled with new designs of paper which shows good taste in the church building committee and proves Mr. Lowrance to be a workman of rare ability.

Sherwin-Williams Paints

Cover the Earth.

We have just received a full car load of these paints. They cover more space, last longer and look better than any paints made.

This shipment includes paints for every purpose. Exteriors, Interiors, Floor Paints, Furniture Paints and Enamels.

The Sherwin-Williams Paints cost just as much as good paints ought to cost—not a cent more. If you pay less you don't get as good paint; if you pay more you pay too much.

STRUCK BY TRAIN.

Little Mexican Child Knocked From the Track by Passenger Train.

Tuesday morning as the "Sap" passenger train left Ganahl on the way to Kerrville, and when it was about two miles out from the depot, a little Mexican child, probably about one year old, was knocked from the track receiving serious injuries that will no doubt result fatally. The child's head was badly crushed, an arm was broken and it was otherwise injured. Its mother who was near by in a cotton field brought the child to Kerrville, where it was given medical aid, and there is very little hope entertained of its recovery.

A Mexican family was employed on the farm of Capt. Coldwell picking cotton, which the train passes through, left their child in company of a little boy, about two years old, and they were playing near the track, when, it is supposed the little fellow went to sleep between the ties outside of the rails. The engineer saw the little boy, who began to run when he blew the whistle, and not knowing there was another near the track until the engine struck it. It is supposed at the sound of the whistle the little child raised up just as the train passed or the engine would have missed it. The train was stopped within thirty feet where the accident occurred, the child picked up and cared for until the train reached Kerrville. This is the first accident of the kind that has occurred on this end of the road in a long time.

H. & A. PFEIFFER.

Prof. Edward Schmidt returned to his home near this city Tuesday from an extended visit throughout Germany. Mr. Schmidt left Texas about four months ago with a party of pioneer West Texas citizens for a trip to the Old Country. While away Mr. Schmidt enjoyed the finest of health, had a very enjoyable trip, but was glad to get back to his Texas home.

Turner's Contest at the Fair.

One of the many attractions at the West Texas Fair, was the Turner's contest, in which the Turn Vereine from Fredericksburg, Comfort and San Antonio took part. The Comfort Vereine carried off first honors and the Fredericksburg boys got second money.

In the individual contest the following were winners: Fifty yard dash, Walter Henke; throwing 16 lb slab, Herbert Schmidt; running high jump, Frank Leitner; running five jump, Frank Leitner of San Antonio, who jumped 16 feet and four inches; lifting 45 lb weight Eddie Korger of Comfort.

Prof. Utz, director of the San Antonio Turn Vereine had charge of the exercises and he proved to be the right man in the right place, and the West Texas Fair extends its thank to Mr. Utz for his untiring efforts in making this part of the program a success.
