TRIALS OF A CONDUCTOR

Yale Student Tells of His Experience
On a New York Street Car.
A Hard Life.

During my vacation last summer as a conductor on the B. R. T. I passed the physical examination and the test at the company's employment bureau, went through a bunch of red tape and was assigned to a certain station to begin "breaking in." It took me a week to get acquainted with the different lines and to pass the examination on the rules and regulations of the road before I became a candidate for "bucking the list."

I was ordered to report to the car barns at 4:30 each morning, but always had to lie around the general waiting room several hours before the station master would give me a car to take out. A swarm of flies and the constant ringing of the call bells prevented me from sleeping during this interval, so that the starter's voice singing out my number, car, track and line sounded like heraldic music to my ear.

The early morning cars pick up the laborers bound for their places of work. They are the rough men of the docks, factories and ditches, who entertain strong opinions on the subject of labor vs. capital. Socialistic corner orators and demagogic editors have so influenced and warped their ideas that they regard a corporation as a tyrant master of the toiler, a power preserving his hatred. Many of these men, knowing that the conductor has to provide his own change, contrive to occupy the front seats and deliberately hand him dollar bills, which he is unable to break, or fish around in their pockets for the fifth penny in order to kill time and prevent him reaching the rear seats and collecting their pal's fares before the car arrives at the transfer point.

These trolleys run on schedule, and as the motorman is bound to "make time" he is unable to reduce his speed and co-operate with the conductor in breaking up this nefarious scheme. Then these fellows, who alternate each morning in their occupancy of seats, jump off and in chorus demand their transfers, claiming that they have paid their nickels. Should you hesitate you will become a target for their anger. You will be insulted sworn at and informed that you ought to be a conductor on a hearse instead of a trolley car. Your anger, if you have any sand in your craw, has by this time reached the boiling point, and you would willing tackle a circular saw. But the company's rule that an employe must not strike a passenger under any provocation, but must cultivate patience, has to be obeyed, and you are forced to sacrifice your self-respect.

The inspector who has been a witness on this scene now orders you to issue the disputed transfers, in which you reluctantly comply. He has counted your "load," and if he desires can compel you to "ring up" the deficient number of uncollected fares, which must be paid out of your own pocket.

Another class preys upon the conductors during the rush hours by passing off expired transfers and spurious money on him. Nor has the pickpocket, who makes a specialty of "touching" passengers on crowded cars, any hesitancy in relieving him. In order to protect himself against "the losses" sustained by the constant dropping of coins in making change the conductor begins by "holding out." This step soon leads to "knocking down," at which act he is detected by "spotters" and it results in his discharge.

In the evening when the "fare-dodgers" are homeward bound, the conductor is confronted with a repetition of the difficulties of the morning. A gang of laborers all claiming in broken-English that their boss who is somewhere on the car, will pay their fare, demand their passports (transfers). You almost have to choke their nickels out of them, as the majority of these men carry the nickels in their mouths.

At night returning from Coney Island, you are handed the real lemon extract of your tribulations and have to drink it to the dregs. It is a very stimulating draught after the fatigue of the day. The crowds tired, sleepy, and eager to get home, almost come to blows in their attempts to obtain seats. They stand up in the aisles or so on each other's laps, fill up and cling to the rear platform and so crowd the running board that it not only interferes with but jeopardizes the life of the conductor in his haste to collect all fares before the car reaches the second-fare point.

Of all passengers that help to make life burden to the conductor women are the worst. The foolish questions they ask you would stump the Blackstone of the company's legal talent. It behooves you to provide yourself with a pocket encyclopedia in order to hide your ignorance. Many of these women are accompanied by all their children, especially those that are under age and not subject to fare. A woman will board a car at the Brooklyn bridge, instruct you to let her off at some street in Bath Beach and become highly indignant if she discovers that you have let her ride a few blocks beyond her destination.

The moral foe of the conductor is the iceman. He takes advantage of the law giving him the right-of-way, and through pure cussedness deliberately impedes traffic, offering the pretense of stress of work. He is always ready to introduce an icepick to back up his side of the argument.

The conductor, who out on the running board has to collect and ring up fares, make change, give and punch transfers with time and destination, has to use both hands and cannot hold on to any part of the car. He is liable to be knocked off by the shaft of one of these ice wagons boked up against the sidewalk. An opportunity to go to the hospital greets the conductor at every step. Should he swing out too far in circling a passenger on the running board he runs a chance of being knocked off and killed by striking one of the elevated pillars. Should he fail to keep his hand on the trolley rope while the car is turning the curve, or while passing under trestles or overhanging cross wires, the trolley pole is liable to leave the wire, get caught in some obstruction, be torn out of its socket and fall from the roof of the car on top of him.

A sudden shower drenches him to the skin, and his clothes have to dry on him. He must in turn become accustomed to bear the cold of the early morn and the heat of the day, without being allowed to unbutton his coat, and again the chill of the night or sea air.

Bucking the list means working on the stretch of ten to fifteen hours irregular per day, including Sundays. No matter how tired he may get he cannot sit down, even when not busy. There is always bookkeeping to be done, for which he must learn to write legibly while the car is in motion. It is generally all in while making out his sheet at the end of his run.

The most exasperating rule of the B. R. T. is that one concerning pennies. He is obliged to accept them, but cannot turn them into the company. Women especially seem to consider a trolley car as a convenient channel to get rid of their pennies and the conductor in trying to dispose of them has always to hand out an apology when he is forced to offer pennies in change. Besides taking up time in the counting of them they often become oxidized from perspiring hands and the new conductor whose fingers are generally blistered, is apt to develop veridigris poisoning as a result.

A short time ago I was severely criticized for speaking favorably of the show girl as a pal of the student, and comparing her with the society girl in his own set, in an article in the Yale Monthly Magazine. An experience while a B. R. T. conductor will illustrate wherein these two types of girls differ.

One afternoon I was surprised to find as a passenger on board my car a young woman of Boston's and Newport's best social circles, who had been an intimate friend of mine during my better days, while attending "prep" school. After the surprise of first greeting had abated, and my admission that I was not masquerading or being run had been received as genuine, I was treated to the Valley Forge frost of my life.

On the other hand, the greeting I received a few days after from Miss Dorothy, the daughter of Lillian Russell, was sincere and unaffected by my change of position. She advised me that if I had to risk my life I might do it as a jockey than as a conductor, as the former would prove the more remunerative vocation. She afterward tried to use her influence to secure me an apprentice mount with Diamond Jim Brady's racing stable.

After a fight with an iceman I resigned my job as conductor on the B. R. T. I sold my uniform and cap to a recruit, and with the proceeds made a parley bet at the Brighton track, winning in one afternoon the sum $203.

The conductor who bought my uniform soon after met with an accident that resulted in his death.

As a student of fortune, fighting my way through "prep" school and college, I have often been governed in the acceptance of a vacation position by the element of excitement that it would be productive of rather than the amount of muscle that it would put on my frame or silver in my pocket.

This has developed into such a mania that in spite of the fact that since 1900 I have worked in the various capacities of tutor, stenographer, waiter, ditch digger, sailor, hotel clerk, cowboy, coal agent, marksman, actor and reporter, instead of a toiler I have developed into an ardent excitement hunter.

Of all the excitement producers of our career "bucking the list" as a B. R. T. conductor easily captures the main event label. It has bucking the line, bucking the trolley and bucking the broucho beaten so badly that in comparison they are mere parlor games.

Bucking the list is an acid that will test the gameness of any man's metal. If the stagnant blood in your veins is making you blaze, let me prescribe the strenuous life of a B. R. T. conductor as an infallible remedy for same.—"Teek" Charwate, Yale '08, in New York World.

Parable of the Building of the Temple As Found in Some Old Papers.

In going over some old papers that belong to his father, ex-City Attorney Stewart found one that will prove of interest to the Masons of Texas and concerning which the following account is given:

Some years ago, at a meeting of the Grand Lodge of Masons in Houston, Grand Masters Matthews, J. W. McLeary, ex-Attorney General of the State of Texas and now one of the Justices of the Supreme Court of Porto Rico, and Governor Joseph D. Sayers were dining with the late Charles Stewart, when a discussion arose between Stewart and McLeary as to the parables of the Bible, it ending with an assertion by McLeary that he could write a parable that would compare favorable with the parables of the Bible. Mr. Stewart wagered that he could not, and gave him a whole year in which to write one. At the expiration of time the same parties again took dinner with Mr. Stewart to see whether Judge McLeary had written the parable. Judge McLeary read the following parable, and it was decided that he was entitled to the wager. The parable is as follows, which will be more readily appreciated by Masons:

"When King Solomon's Temple had been completed and dedicated Zebulon, one of those faithful workmen who had been found worthy to receive the Master's degree, started forth upon his travels.

"He journeyed into a far country. In the course of time his strength was failing, his raiment was tattered, his purse was light his feet were sore.

He sat himself down to rest by the wayside. He beheld a stranger approaching him, and said, 'Are you a Mason?' 'Yes,' replied the stranger. 'Behold I show you the 24-inch gauge and the common gavel wherewith I wrought at the building of King Solomon's Temple.' And the stranger showed Zebulon these and passed on.

"Then Zebulon arose and pursued his journey. And meeting a wayfaring man, he said, 'Are you a Mason?' 'Yes,' replied the stranger. 'Behold I show you the 24-inch gauge and the common gavel wherewith I wrought at the building of King Solomon's temple.' And Zebulon passed on. And he walked through a city at midday, and sat himself down upon the steps of a palace. And the prince of the city, whose palace it was, walked forth and Zebulon accosted him and said: 'Are you a Mason?' 'Even so,' replied the prince, 'for behold I have builded my palace after the designs laid down upon the trestle board, and I have here a keystone like unto that in one of the arches of King Solomon's Temple.'

"And Zebulon arose and pursued his journey, and as he journeyed he met an army with banners and at its head rode the general, with his officers armed and clothed in the full pageantry of victorious war. And Zebulon saluted him and said, 'Are you a Mason?' And the general answering, said, 'Verily, for have I not been clothed by King Solomon himself with the lambskin, which is by far the most honorable of all decorations when worthy worn?' And the general and his armed host passed on, and left Zebulon standing by the wayside.

"Then, footsore, weary, cold, and hungry, he pursued his lonely way. At nightfall he approached a village and, sitting down upon the steps of a cottage, he fell asleep. And the cottager came out and roused him, and Zebulon opened his eyes and seeing him, said, 'Are you a Mason?' The villager replied, 'I am; come into my home.' And he raised him up and led him into the cottage and he took off his sandals from the feet of Zebulon, and washed his feet and anointed his head with oil, and caused him to recline at his table. And Zebulon refreshed himself with bread and oil and wine. And when he was refreshed he opened his mouth and spake unto his host and said: 'The true test of a Master Mason is not in signs nor symbols, nor tokens nor decorations, but it is this: Is there burning on the altar of his heart that flame which ever warms a Mason's soul, the fire of charity?'—Houston Chronicle.

PROMINENT RANCHMAN KILLED.

C. P. Bacon Was Thrown From His Horse Monday Night and Instantly Killed.

C. P. Bacon, a prominent and well-known ranchman, was killed between 9 and 10 o'clock Monday night, while returning to his ranch seven miles north of Kerrville.

Mr. Bacon left town about 8 o'clock on his horse for the ranch, and was found lying in the middle of the road by August Boell, a farmer of Noxville, who was coming to Kerrville for supplies. Mr. Boell called to him and not getting a reply stopped his team and walked up to him, when he saw that he was dead.

Mr. Bacon's horse and dog were standing near-by, which showed that he only had been dead a few minutes.

It is not exactly known how he lost his life, but it is supposed that he in some manner was thrown from his horse. Mr. Boell immediately came to town and notified Justice of the Peace E. H. Turner, who at once repaired to the scene with several other citizens. Judge Turner after viewing the body, ordered it moved to town.

Mr. Bacon has many friends in Kerr county and resided on his ranch near Kerrville for the past 25 years, coming to this county from California. He was 65 years old and leaves a wife and several children.

The funeral took place Thursday the body having been held until that time to await the arrival of Mrs. Bacon, who was visiting her daughter at Sanderson.

"PITTSBURGH PERFECT"

FENCES ARE WELDED BY ELECTRICITY

This is the modern method of construction. Years of life are added through the elimination of serious fence defects.

A WRAP holds moisture, cracks the galvanizing and allows the water to attack the barb wire. A small amount of displaced galvanizing on "PITTSBURGH PERFECT" reinforces the protection against rust at the at the electrically welded joint; examine the joint.

STAYS CANNOT SLIP. They are always just where they were put. Stay and strand wires become one piece when the union is made. The fence is like a solid sheet of perforated steel.

EVERY ROD IS GUARANTEED PERFECT.

Don't allow your prejudice in favor of the rapidly-declining and now antiquated methods you have heretofore known to warp your good judgment.

"PITTSBURGH PERFECT" FENCES REPRESENT PROGRESS, because hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of standard material is daily welded by electricity. The hoop on the average sugar barrel in the isolated country grocery store is an electrically welded product. If your wagon was made in a large factory, its tires were welded by electricity. You will find electrically welded hoops on ice cream freezers and washing machines, on many tubs and buckets. Examine them. "PITTSBURGH PERFECT" fences are made by this modern, simple and marvelous process, producing, "THE WELD THAT HELD."

MR. FARMER: Listen Now. Every agent handling "Pittsburgh Perfect" fences is authorized to guarantee this:

- That the wires are not injured at the joints.
- That the fence is perfectly adjustable to uneven ground.
- That the stays will not separate from the strands.
- That the fence is all right in every particular.

Could you ask any more definite protection? Your complete satisfaction is absolutely assured.

Use "PITTSBURGH PERFECT" fences for Horses, Hogs, Cattle and Poultry. Easy to erect—easy to splice. It is in a class of its own. No slack wires. The best, strongest and most durable.

All "PITTSBURGH PERFECT" Fencing for this section will be shipped to Kerrville in car load lots. For full information, call on or write to

As Henderson descended the steps of the Treasury yesterday afternoon, dodging the rain that dript from his fellow-clerks' umbrellas, he joined Terwilliger, whose eyes were fixt on an approaching car.

"Say, Terwilliger," he said, "what do you think of the Presidents latest order?"

"What's that?" Terwilliger replied. "I am three orders behind now, and cannot catch up so suddenly."

"Cheer up," Henderson cried, as he slapt him on the back. "You've got to catch up to this. It's a reformed spelling edict, and you'll have to obey it. The whole inside will be ript out of that letter system of yours. The president has sent orders thru the Public Printer that the 100 words which the spelling reform committee, financed by Andrew Carnegie, has recommended as an entry wedge shall henceforth be used in public documents, and it's a good 10 to 1 shot that this order will extend to the correspondence of the departments, tho no order to that effect has arrived. This is only the prolog, but be sure it will be

"It's his idea you see."

ADDRESS TO THE PRINTER.

"See here: I've got ideas of my own, and one of them is that I know how orders get to the Public Printer about the public documents. They don't come thru the president. They are address to the Public Printer by the committees on printing of the Senate and House—that's where they come from. The President's authority does not extend in that direction. If new-fangled spelling is sent to either House of Congress, it may be printed as either committee desires. That's all there is about that."

"Are you sure you're right thruout?"

"Sure; and if you won't be vext I'll give it to you with my name suffix, like a seal to a subpoena. I cannot be tript or trap on a question like that."

"There's a hope then. But how about the departments?"

"That's another matter. Ther's the horse that hast to be lasht, the paragraf be skipt, the lest be slipt, the mile be stept, the noise be husht, the car be stopt, the waiter bo tipt, the champagne he sipt, and the girj be kissed while she blusht."—Washington Post.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local application, as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give one hundred dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars free.

HONOR IN PARTISANSHIP.

There has been no time in the history of the world's politics when there was not honor in partisanship. In the United States from Washington to Roosevelt all the presidents have been strong partisans and were each honored with the highest office in the world. If it is an honor to the man to hold a high office by election because he stands for a certain political principle, it is likewise an honor to every man who assists with his vote in the promulgation of that principle. There is the same honor in being a staunch partisan on the losing side of a question, except perhaps, the often questionable credit of victory.

A political campaign causes every voter in the State and Nation to give more or less attention to political matters. True enough, there is, in almost every voting precinct in the land, an element who do very little thinking and drift about with every freshening gale upon the political sea. This element does not exist to such an extent in Texas, as in the more populous States, having many large cities. Texans are, as a rule, reading and thinking people and know what their political preferences are and why they are so. The man who reaches his majority in this State, has, as a rule, by the time he is entitled to cast his first vote, definitely made up his mind as to what his political principles shall be and with what particular party he will affiliate. Men sometimes, though rarely, change their political faith and become staunch partisans on another platform. This, of course is a privilege that must be accorded to every man, and is a credit to the man so changing, if the "change of heart" is sincere and is made on principle, without hope of other remuneration than that which he believes to be the common good of the country resulting from the promulgation of the principle of the party he has espoused. It has, however, been rather the rule than the exception, that new political converts are in a manner "taken on probation" by staunch partisans.

A man, who is a straight forward, honorable partisan, who has convictions and courage to back them at all times and under all circumstances, is entitled to the respect and esteem of every honorable man regardless of faith or creed. On the other hand all men are a "bit shy" of a man who attempts to "ride two horses at once." In our great civil war in the sixties brothers were arrayed, one against another in battle; they did not hate each other; they were fighting for a principle and men were not considered. A man, who is a man, likes another man, who is manly, even if he disagrees with him. In that war there was an element who turned from pillow to post like a weather vane, now fighting on one side of the quarrel and again on another. These men were called "bush-whackers" and were hated by the real manly men on both sides who were fighting for principle. We do not know that there has ever been such an expression used as "political bush-whacking," but it is a fit term for that shifting, undependable element, who have not the courage to stand boldly upon the principle they believe to be right and to the best interest of their State and Nation. That is the element that creates a doubt as to the result of elections, the fact that the greater part of their political thinking is done by men who pay them, one way or another for the privilege, makes the "bush-whacker" vote a menace to the foundation of the Nation and makes it possible for factions, or large interests to put men in office who are not there for the common good of the people.

It is an extreme gratification to thinking men, whether they be Democrats or Republicans, that Texas has no large element of "political "bush-whackers." The voters of this State and especially of this section of Texas, are intelligent, thinking people, who know what they want and why they want it, and have the manly courage to say so. It is true enough that in many counties of Texas, especially in the West and Southwest part of the State, where the country is sparsely settled, party lines have never been drawn—as regards the election of County officers. This, however, is held in the broadminded and we think in a sensible light, that County officers have no other than ministerial duties to perform and do not in any way assist in shaping the policy of the State or Nation, and hence, knowing the candidates personally, they select for their public servants the men they think best fitted for the positions to which they aspire. This rule does not apply in any section of the State in the selection of Legislative officers, either for the State or Nation. Of course it could not, unless the people were all of one mind. When men se-select a ministerial servant they select him for his qualifications for that particular ministerial duty, but when they vote for a legislative officer, whom they expect to represent them in shaping the policy of the State or Nation they have in mind the political principle that they believe to be best for the State and Nation, and vote for the men who represent those principles, and who stand up boldly for the platform demands of his party.

The whole world hates a coward—a physical coward who shrinks from real bodily danger, is a saint compared to a moral coward who has not the courage to assert his rights as an American citizen by voting his sentiments like a man, and the only kind of a man who can be in any way beneath him, is one who would make a personal matter of politics. It is a source of congratulation to the people of this section that there are not enough of either class in any county in Southwest Texas to play a game of "three cornered cat."

Hon. Henry M. Nowlin of Center Point, was in Kerrville Thursday. Mr. Nowlin brought to the Sun office some genuine winesap apples grown on his farm near Center Point. The fruit was uniform in size and delicious in flavor and the average weight was about six ounces, which is very fair size for apples of that variety. Mr. Nowlin says this variety was about the only kind of apples in his orchard that bore a good crop this year. The fact has been thoroughly demonstrated that good apples can be grown in Kerr county.

FUNNY THINGS

FROM THE PAPERS.

A father fearing an earthquake in the region of his home, sent his two boys to a distant friend until the peril should be over. A few weeks after the father received this letter from his friend: "Please take your boys home and send down the earthquake."—McCall's Magazine.

A man, the bridge of whose nose had been broken down sometime in the past, was one day asked by his curious son: "Father what is the trouble with your nose?" "My son," answered the man, with a far away look, "that nose is the result of an unwise thirst for knowledge. When I was younger and less experienced it undertook to stick itself into another man's business. It has never been so handsome or so ambitious since that time."

Silencing a Ghost.

Pat Donovan once had a very bad habit of going home nearly every night in the week the worse for drink. His patient wife tried many means to cure him, but without success. At last she thought of a plan.

On his way home Pat had to pass through a churchyard, and she got a neighbor to try and frighten him.

The man arrayed himself like a ghost, and hid himself in a newly made grave. As Pat went by he began to groan terribly.

"What's the matter?" asked the Irishman.

"I'm cold! I'm cold!"

No wonder," said Pat, "you're not half covered up."

And with this he took hold of a spade that was handy, and began to fill in the grave. The ghost was soon silenced.—N. Y. Weekly

A Sad Ending.

A young clerk grown up in the employ of a prosperous German grocer, was by reason of his ability and knowledge of all the details virtually intrusted with management of the business, and although given frequent advances of salary, began to feel that his services were absolutely indispensable and not properly appreciated from a money point of view, says Harper's Weekly. He laid the matter before his employer, placing particular stress on what a difficult matter it would be to operate the business without him. This claim was admitted by the employer, who inquired further:

"But, Chon, vat if you should die?"

"Oh, then you would have to get along without me," remarked John.

After a few minutes deep thought the employer looked up at John and said:

"Vell, Chon, chust consider yourself deat."—Karnes County News.

Why She is Called Miss.

A teacher in one of the Indiana schools relates the following incident of an Indian boy's quick thought. He had asked the meaning of the word "miss."

"To miss," I told him, "is the same as to fail. You shoot at a bird or at a mark, and do not hit it—you miss it. You go to a tailor for a coat, and your coat fits badly—it is a misfit. You hope to enter the middle class next year, but you cannot pass the examinations, and so you miss the promotion."

His face wore a puzzled air, and he shook his head.

"Then," said I, "there is another meaning of 'miss.' We called a married woman 'madam,' but an unmarried woman 'miss.'"

His face brightened. Then he smiled and nodded:

"Ah, I see!" said he. "She miss the man."

At the breakfast table a man found his wife in a depressed frame of mind. "My darling," he said, "what is the matter?" "I have such a horrible dream." Her husband begged her to tell it to him in order that he might console her, and after much persuasion she proceeded: "I thought I was walking down the street and I came to a shop where there was a large placard, 'Husbands For Sale!' You could get beautiful ones for $1,500 or even for $1000, and very nice looking ones for as low as fifty." "Did you see any that looked like me?" he asked. "Lots," she replied with a sigh, "tied up together and sold at a dime a dozen!"

Just, Talk, Talk.

A Wall street man with an absorbing love for two nephews told these stories of them recently: "My little three-years-old nephew was playing in a pile of sand the other day, and his mother saw him through the widow. She called to him, and told him if she saw him there again she would have to whip him. He replied:

"Well, mamma, you had better not look out of the window, then 'cause I'm going to do it again."

"Another one, aged six, has been visiting his aunt, and after a spell of misbehavior, on his part, she took him into the parlor to reason with him. In telling his mother about it afterward, he said: "I thought at first she was going to lick me, but she just talked, talked, talked."

This Joke Was on Mother.

A certain well-known Chicago man dearly loves a joke, and is especially delighted if he can get one on his wife, who is an estimable lady not gifted with the sense of humor. The two have just returned from a brief trip east, and the husband is delighted in telling his friends an incident of the journey home. Husband and wife occupied sections directly opposite each other in a Pullman car, and on the morning of their arrival in Chicago the wife arose at seasonable hour awoke her sleeping husband across the aisle, telling him that it was time to get up. Then she went to complete her toilet, and, returning in 10 or 15 minutes, found her section restored to its daytime appearance, while her husband's with curtains hanging, was quite undisturbed by signs of life behind.

With determination she parted the concealing draperies, and mercilessly grasping the scanty locks of the offender, she reiterated her statement that it was time to get up. Then, to make sure the awakening process she proceeded to shake him again and again, until in self defense the sleeper bestirred himself and let out an expression horrifying to good lady's ears. Then came the awful discovery that the victim of her torture was not her husband, but an utterly strange person in the adjoining berth, who looked ready to annihilate her—as well he might!

A Bad Practice.

One of the most, perhaps the very worst practices that prevails in rural sections is the sending away of money to mail order houses that belong in the legitimate channels of home trade. Right now is the season of the year when this unjust practice is at its ripest stage. It is possible that some money may be saved on purchases from foreign concerns, but the fact remains, the business as well as the social fabric of a social community is a mutual proposition—when you invest money from home trade you weaken the institutions upon which you rely for the support of local public institutions. Mail order houses do not assist in building up this country—what money they give to public interests they give in a town where they are located, which is right and proper. A dollar sent away from your home town never returns as purchase money for something that is worth more than a dollar.

The stores in Kerrville carry such complete stocks that you can get almost anything you want at prices that will compare favorably with those you get elsewhere. Besides this you can see the article you buy and judge of its merits and if it does not suit you, you don't have to buy it. You rely on your neighbors for your trade whatever your business may be and it is morally wrong to take business from other people and refuse to reciprocate.

The Sun has no complaint on individual grounds. The merchants of Kerrville, as a rule, are people who believe in fostering home enterprises, and if one of them ever sends away from home for anything we can supply we feel pretty sure he feels bad about it afterwards.

It would be a great thing for everybody, buyer and seller alike, if a move of pride, in home enterprises, and a season of resolve to keep our money among our own business men would come over Southwest Texas.

FROM TOLAR, NEW MEXICO.

DEAR OLD MOUNTAIN SUN:

As I have been on the road for some time, we have missed the welcome little paper that was always heartily received by every one in the family. We are now quite a little ways from where I wrote last.

We started from Christoval August 20th, Monday evening, went to a little place called Pecan where we spent the night with some of our good friends, Mr. and Mrs. Sims; the 21st we went to San Angelo where we stayed till late Wednesday morning, then another member joined our little camp, a Mr. Foester, who was a prospector too.

At night we camped on the North Concho, it too, like the South Concho is a very beautiful stream. It claimed so much of our time and attention that we could not leave until we had caught and devoured so many of its nice, fresh fishes that we went away Friday, the 24th, like the young W. O. W. who had taken all the side degrees and were fully satisfied. Friday evening we went through a little town on the North Concho called Water Valley, and when night came found us within one mile of Sterling City, which I must say is one of the healthiest cities in the state, for, while we were resting at one of the cool shades we saw a sample of the young children raised in that place; at first we could not tell whether he was rolling or being pushed, but when he came near enough we could see he had two little short but stout and well dependent legs, which carried him on past us and soon out of sight.

Saturday, the 25th, we traveled 25 miles and for our first time camped on the open prairie, all in camp were soon in a deep slumber, which was undisturbed till four o'clock Sunday morning, when suddenly you could see every one, by the flash of lightning, hunting their quilts that had been so suddenly took and other very necessary articles. The wind and sand blew for about three hours, then we got a good breath, turned our hair loose and got a good breakfast, well sprinkled with sand. We had grit enough to face anything then. After going 25 miles further we entered the streets of Big Springs, which is a very beautiful town, but we were soon all heart sick, for Old Slick, our famous watch dog was not to be found anywhere; we all waited until eleven o'clock, but no Slick appeared; two of the boys went on a search for him and to the joy of all old Slick was soon brought to take his stand as night guard.

Monday, the 27th, we left Big Springs and traveled seven miles through deep, soft red sand and at night stopped at Buzzard Wells, a very lonely place—three wells out on a prairie, not even a stock pen or a hut. Tuesday we ate dinner at Sparringburg and at night camped six miles east of Lamesa.

Wednesday night was forced to camp on the plains between Lamesa and Brownsfield. Thursday ate dinner at a stage stand and saw some skillful wheel riding; don't know whether the boy was trying to learn to ride the wheel or whether he was trying to learn to carry it; looked all right for the West. Friday at noon entered Brownsfield.

Saturday, September 1, we went through Gomez and traveled nineteen miles. Sunday traveled thru heavy sand all day and pitched camp Sunday night at what is called the Lone Well. Monday, the 3rd, about three o'clock we entered New Mexico. The first town is Bronco. There we saw a very large herd of antelopes drinking at a tank. Tuesday, the 4th, ate dinner at one of New Mexico's famous alkali lakes, then traveled till eleven o'clock that night and did not get out of the sand and sage grass, reptiles of all kinds, of course, could not think of sleeping; ate a bit of lunch and sat up till nearly day-break, when the bravest of us went and slept; when we took up the beds, found we had only slept with one centapede. Wednesday, the 5th, we tried the same all day again pulling one wagon at a time and it took all hands and all the teams too, and drank some sulphur water for refreshment, and when night came we halted tired and worn out at the Twin Wells.

Thursday got a late start; we hated to leave the water; it was so good and grass so fine, however, we nooned at the D. Z. ranch, a well-known ranch in this country. At night come to the old dug wells where they had been dug probably by some pilgrims on the plains and are still in use by the travelers. We used the tree water and grass till Sunday and then went to Portales, N. M. Monday traveled 13 miles, then three or four days brought us here at Tolar. We are now located and like this place just fine. They raise everything they eat through the winter and it is a very healthy country; not much fruit raised here as this is a new place, only a few farms now, but next fall it will be over four times as much. The Rock Island is here now; work is plentiful, wages good, a fine place for poor people.

REPUBLICANS RALLY.

State Chairman Lyon and Other Prominent Party Leaders Met in San Antonio Last Saturday and Set October 13 as Date for County Rallies
Throughout Texas.

San Antonio, Tex., Oct. 1.—A large number of prominent Republicans met in San Antonio Saturday evening last, in caucus over the situation in Texas.

A meeting of those interested in the senatorial campaign was held immediately in the afternoon and the meeting to look into the congressional race in the fifteenth district was held at 4 o'clock. At the 4 o'clock meeting matters of interest to the whole state were discussed and acted on. The matter of finance was discussed and a plan evolved for supplying campaign funds. It was decided to concentrate the efforts of the party on the fifteenth congressional and this senatorial district.

Hon. Cecil A. Lyon presided at the meeting. It was decided that on October 13 a republican party rally will be held in every county in the state and an effort made to thoroughly organize those who believe in the principles of the party. The consensus of opinion was that on account of existing conditions in this state there is an opportunity for the party to get on a solid footing and become a power to be reckoned with in political calculations. The opinion was expressed that the fifteenth congressional district and this senatorial district can be carried for the ticket with proper interest on the part of republicans.

One thing which has added interest to the efforts of republican leaders is the contest between the Green and Lyon factions for pre-eminence. It would be rather awkward should the bolting Green faction poll more votes than the Lyon faction in view of the fact that the Lyon faction is in control of the party machinery and is recognized by the administration. Chairman Lyon is of the opinion that there will not be a grease spot left of the Green-McDonald faction when the votes are counted. The white republicans are with the Lyon faction.

HAPPY CENTER POINT.

The Senior Editor of the Sunbeam objects to being styled Junior—he is the model of inconsistency since, he thinks all is in a name, that a rose by any other name would not smell as sweet, yet insist that a Bertha worn by a gentleman would look as well as if donned by a sweet, brown-eyed young girl, while all the ladies known it to be an article of wearing apparel designed for this use exclusively. Imagine the Senior with a Bertha around his shoulders!

The Ladies' of the Christian church gave another of those enjoyable affairs last Friday night, by which a neat little sum was added to the Aid Society's treasury, and a good time was indulged in by young and old; the lawn at Richardson House was beautifully decorated with different booths and Chinese lanterns. A vote was taken for the most popular young girl on the grounds, resulted in awarding the lovely bouquet of cut flowers to Miss Ethel Jack.

Blue-bonnet spent Thursday afternoon at the home of Miss Kate Vaughn, the occasion being a Methodist tea—drinking—in the absence of Miss Kate, her sister, Mrs. Rufus Ridley played hostess in an exceptionally charming manner, fully entertaining her sister's reputation as being a dispenser of old-time Tennessee prodigality of good things to eat. Bro. F. A. White honored the occasion, and being the only gentleman present, of course gave tone to the affair.

Mr. Sam Moore's new cottage is almost ready for occupancy—glad to see so many of the young folks owning their homes—this is as it should be.

Services at Methodist church last Sunday consisted of a fine program. Rev. White giving way for the occasion; the music was especially fine, and altogether it was an hour of unusual interest.

Mrs. R. L. Wellborn and Mrs. L. S. Crockett attended the millinery display in Kerrville last week. The fair sex can scarcely complain of the styles this season, for they seem to be more varied and swifter than ever.

Miss Sallie Surber has returned to her old home, after an absence of over a year.

Our wide-awake fellow townsman, James Crotty, has lighted his large hall, meat market and restaurant, with gasoline lights, 7 burners, each of five hundred candle power; hope this will stimulate others to do likewise.

Owing to an engagement consuming all her time, Blue-bonnet will have to beg of this week in writing news from Happy Center Point. Our little town is still on the boom, new dwellings and stores are in course of erection which will soon be filled with full stocks of goods.

Mrs. T. A. McBride has old-time friends from Alabama visiting her, and any who visit Bonnie View Ranch may consider themselves especially fortunate.

Miss Annie Comer of Waxahachie—an elocutionist of rare ability—is visiting her sister, Mrs. Henry Griffin.

Mrs. Wellborn will have her dress hat opening Friday and Saturday.

Mrs. Luella Coeke of San Antonio, is enjoying a prolonged welcome among her relatives and friends.

Miss Sallie Horn is visiting out at Stoneleigh ranch.

Miss Ellie Dobbs is now installed as Assistant Postmaster.

Center Point is now enjoying as fine a weekly newspaper of any town of its size in the State, for the Sunbeam is beautiful and welcome as a spring day, fresh and joyous in its efforts to serve the people. May the shadow of its editors never grow less!

Ladies' Aid of the Christian church will serve dinner on election day. Particulars later.

BLUE-BONNET.

Cotton Destroyed By Fire.

J. J. Sublett, a well-known farmer of the Sherman's Mill vicinity, drove in to the city late Tuesday evening with his wagon loaded with four bales of cotton, and stopped at Anderson Bros. store, near the depot. While Mr. Sublett was negotiating with Mr. Anderson, concerning the sale of same, a young man by the name of Sherley of Rock Springs struck a match on his wagon tire, a spark from which ignited the cotton. Immediately it was in flames and a fire alarm was turned in. Kerrville Hose Co. No. 2, stationed near by, responded and extinguished the fire, before the other company could arrive. The cotton was partly saved but will have to be rebaled.
