GEORGE BOWLES

Discusses Great Men, and Says That All Cannot Be Cardinals Who Are Good Enough to Be, and All Cannot Be Famous Who Are Wise and Great.

OR sometime I have had it in mind to tell the people about some of the great men and women I have known in life, but have been held back because some might think I was a bit proud. Well, I am proud of them, because I think it has made me much better than I would have been had I not known them.

To begin with, I want to say that I have never seen a president, a pope, a cardinal, duke, admiral, king, queen or—I like to have said jack, but a fellow must stop some where. Any way, I have never seen any of the things with unusual clothes and unusual names that make them great. However, I think I have known some very great people in my life.

The first great man I ever knew was a red headed fellow, whose face looked like a turkey egg that had gotten a double dose of freckles. He was about three feet six inches tall, and about nine years old. He was a school boy, and a poor boy. I am pretty sure that he was a member of one of the poorest families in the country at that time. The way I found out that he was a great man was like this. He had a way of listening very intently at what his teacher said to him. One day the teacher was telling quite an interesting story about the duties we owe each other while we are sojourning in this world, and among other things he stated that helpfulness to others, and a disposition to kindness was one of the chief attributes to true greatness. This boy's name was Robert Clancey, and I suspect from the name and some things I saw him do, that he was not very far removed from some scion of a noble, old Irish family. He didn't need to have any particular name; however, to be great, and besides the boys all called him "Red" and "Speck." There was another boy going to the same school, whose name was Frank Callet, and who was a good looking fellow, and was popular when you first got to know him, but some how he didn't wear well. He called the Clancey boy "Speck," but he said it in a way that you can't explain, but you know the way people say things sometimes makes more difference than what they say.

On the day the teacher told the story about the good of being unselfish "Speck" was in an unusually receptive mood. A tear glistened in his blue eyes, and there was a tender tremor in his voice when he said to the teacher, "please sir, and are we to live that way every day?" No one had ever "lived that way" toward him. The first intimation he had ever known of the matter of helpfulness being a duty, and at the same time a pleasure, was from his teacher.

On the day the story was told it came up quite a cold rain, and after school as the children wended their several ways homeward through the October woods, the dead leaves lay thick like a carpet upon the ground, and the rain drops fell soft and sad. Several children, of different families, went the same road that "Speck" had to travel, among them being Frank Callet and two brothers by the name of Lewis. The Lewis boys were both delicate children, and were always poorly clad, because their mother was a widow. As the boys went along the road the rain got heavier and heavier. At last they stopped under a big tree that was full of dead leaves, and afforded some protection from the big, cold, rain drops. After a little while poor little Joe Lewis began to cough, and complained of being cold. Like a flash off came "Speck's" coat, and he gave it to Joe, saying as he did so, "Take my coat, Joe, I don't feel cold. Once I got wet when I was over at the back of the field huntin' the calf, an' it didn't make me feel a bit bad."

"Speck" put the coat on the little boy, although it was a good deal too large for him, and as he buttoned it up he felt that there was much truth in the statement that it makes one happy to do good for he felt that peculiar swelling in his heart that nothing else will bring. Just as he had finished his good deed Frank said:

"Better keep your old coat on, 'Turkey Egg,' don't look to me like you had any rags to spare. I've got an old coat at home that's better'n that one, but I ain't going to wear it any more."

"Please, Frank," said "Speck," "lets don't talk that way. Joe is cold, and if my old coat will keep him warm it will be all right, and maybe some time I will have a good one."

"Huh," said Frank, "you are trying to be 'goody boy', your maw ought to make you a dress, and give you a yaller head band."

As Frank continued his taunts, two glistening bright specks came in the Irish lad's eyes, and he looked as if he was going to cry. Again he plead with his companion to "let's not quarrel." But Frank was obstinate and kept on taunting the other boys. Finally, when it got beyond endurance, Frank got a sound thrashing in about a minute, although he was much the larger of the two. Then he said:

"I'm goin' to tell teacher on you in the morning, Mr. Speck," and away he went home, the rain having quit.

The next morning poor "Speck" was down cast and heavy hearted. When he reached the school house he stayed out by the wild cherry tree where the big boys played base and didn't go in the house until the bell rang. Just as soon as "books" took up Speck arose in his seat and swallowed a few times, then he said to the teacher, who had noticed him by that time:

"Please, sir, may I tell you something?"

"Certainly, Robert. What is it, my boy?"

"Why, sir, I broke the rule."

"Broke the rule! Which rule, Robert?"

"'Bout fightin'. I fit on the way home."

And then Robert told the whole story, not knowing that the other boy was too big a coward to even tell of doing wrong.

"Very well, Robert, you and Frank may stay after school this afternoon and we will see what can be done about it," said the teacher. Several times that day, when "Speck" would be studying his lessons, the teacher looked at him with a queer shiny look in his eyes. When school was out all went home except the teacher and Frank and Robert.

I never did know what the teacher said to them, but the next morning the two boys were the first one's at school. When they got there Frank walked over to Robert and said:

"Hello, Speck, I found a 'moss agate' in my old last winter's coat this morning while I had it on settin' by the cook stove to get warm fore breakfast. I got another one, an' you can have this'n if you'll take it."

"Speck" took the "moss agate" and the two boys became friends.

That was the beginning. Speck did many things after that to convince me that he was a great man. He finally became—not a bishop—but a section boss, and the last great thing I knew of him doing was to thrash a teamster for beating his own horses because they could'n pull a heavy load over a soft dump where they were putting in a new siding.

"Speck's" picture will never get in the hall of fame, but he was a great man, and I am sure that if he is still living he is still doing great things. If he had been placed in the line of political promotion he might be a colonel, or a judge, or something of the kind. I don't know where he is now, but I hope he is a road master at least.

There are too many good folks in the world to all become great and famous. There is not enough room in the hall of fame for all the pictures of men that are good enough to have a showing there. There are a lot of folks who are good enough to be anything, but who are satisfied with just being good, and making other folks happy—and that is being great. Every one of that kind of people has a private hall of fame of his own—in somebody's heart.

Happiness.

Don't wait to be happy tomorrow, Lay hold on the joys from above, Untangle the tresses of sorrow, With the gentle fingers of love.

There is no entry fee in the race for happiness. The further you go the less weight you carry, the main trouble is in getting away from the post.

Religion won't make you happy if you ain't good. A good stomach is conducive to happiness, and happiness is a fine medicine for a bad liver. Making some one else happy, is a fine way to get started in the race for better living, and better thinking.

A Travelling Man's Experience.

"I must tell you of my experience on an East bound O. R. & N. R. R. train from Pendleton to Le Grande, Ore., writes Sam A. Garber, a well known traveling man. "I was in the smoking department with some other traveling men when one of them went out into the coach and came said, 'There is a woman sick unto death in this car. I at once got up and went out, found her very ill with cramp colic; her hands and arms were drawn up so you could not straighten them, and with a death like look on her face. Some ladies were working with her, giving her whiskey. I went to my suitcase and got my bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy (I never travel without it), ran to the water tank, put a double dose of the medicine in the glass, poured some water into it and stirred it with a pencil; then I had quite a time to get the ladies to let me give it to her, but I succeeded. I could at once see the effect and I worked with her, rubbing her hands, and in twenty minutes I gave her another dose. By this time we were almost into Le Grande, where I was to leave the train. I gave the bottle to the husband in case another dose was needed, but by the time the train ran into Le Grande she was all right, and I received the thanks of every passenger in the car." ## Some Rare Bargains.

By JOE SAPPINGTON.

While going through the family trunk the other day I ran across a lot of valuables that I had almost forgotten about ever owning. I found five articles that cost me $69.85 in spot cash, but in order to raise some ready cash I have decided to sell the entire lot at a great sacrifice.

The most expensive thing that I found was a deed to a business lot in a West Texas town, bearing the poetical name of "Lallah Rhook." This deed is made out in regular form and for the small consideration of fifty American plunks in hand paid, the town site company of whom I bought my lot, warrants and defends to one "Joe Sappington, his heirs, executors and assigns all legal claims to said lot as long as time lasts." There is no question but what my title is perfect. If Lallah Rhook is ever discovered on the map there will be but little trouble in locating my property, from the simple fact my deed calls for a corner lot on the principle street of the town and the agent I bought it of showed me a plot of the town and my lot joined the one the National Bank was to be built on and faced the "Opera House" on the opposite street that was to cost $75,000. It is true I give $50 for the lot, but it was listed at $500 and anyone with as much sense as a doodle-bug ought to know that a lot 30x11 feet right in the heart of the town, joining a bank that was to be cost $200,000 and so close to the Metropolitan Opera House (that was the name the agent gave it) that you could hear the music from its orchestra, was worth twenty times the price I paid for it. The only reason on earth the agent sold me the lot for the paltry sum of $50 was for my influence. He frankly told me so and made me promise to keep the price a secret, which I have done for seven long years. Something must have happened to the agent soon after he left the town for I never heard hair nor hide of him afterwards; and the town itself must have happened to some awful calamity for I never heard of it any more after the agent departed. I wrote several letters to the company of whom I purchased my lot, but my letters all turned up at the dead letter office at Washington and were returned to me with the short inscription, "No such postoffice in the United States." It may be the name of the town was changed from Lallah Rhook to something else, if so it will in no wise effect the title to my lot, for I can locate it by the bank and opera house. But as I said at the start I am needing some ready cash and will take $1.65 for the lot if the party buying it will pay for writing the deed.

They Take The Kinks Out.

"I have used Dr. King's New Life Pills for many years, with increasing satisfaction. They take the kinks out of stomach, liver and bowels, without fuss or friction," says N. H. Brown, of Pittsfield, Vt. Guaranteed satisfactory at Rock Drug Store. 25c.

The next most valuable thing that came to light, was a receipt that I gave $10 for that was guaranteed to make the hair grow all of a sudden on bald heads. The poor fellow who sold me the receipt had had luck the very day he struck town. He had been in the town less than three hours when he received a telegram, conveying the sad news that his wife was lying at the point of death at some place in South Texas. He came to me with tears streaming down his face holding his telegram in one hand and his hair recipe in the other, and sobbingly asked me to loan him $10 to go to his dying wife. He said the only thing he had to put up for security was his hair recipe which he had refused $3,000 for time and time again. Of course I let him have the $10 and promised to hold his recipe until he returned and paid me back my money.

Ten years have elapsed since that receipt was left to my sacred keeping and I still have it. I have a theory that the gentleman who owned it found his wife in the cold embrace of death when he arrived home and his grief was so crushing that he forgot to return the $10 to me and get his recipe. Just think what the poor fellow has lost. Notwithstanding the great value of this "Boon to Bald Heads," I will take 35 cents for it in cash and give the purchaser exclusive rights to the United States, the Hawaii and Philippine Island, Alaska and Porto Rico.

The next article of value brought from its hiding place and costing $7.50, was a chart to cut men's clothing by that my wife bought a few years after we were married. The agent that sold it convinced her that with this chart she could cut and make all my clothes to a queen's taste, thereby saving me at least 50 per cent on my clothing bill every year. I will take "two bits" for the chart and it's just as good as new as my wife never used

A Sure-Enough Knocker.

J. C. Goodwin, of Reidsville, N. C., says: "Bucklen's Arnica Salve is a sure enough knocker for ulcers. A bad one came on my leg last summer, but that wonderful salve knocked it out in a few rounds. Not even a scar remained." Guaranteed for piles, sores, burns, etc. 25c at Rock Drug Store.

it on but one garment—a pair of trousers. She must have got her chart figures tangled up when she cut the cloth for my "breeches" for when she sewed the pieces together she discovered that she had the seat in front and to have gotten into them I would have had to approach them from the rear and backed into them. Positively that was the only time the chart was ever used.

Another article I discovered while going through the trunk is a safety razor I bought in 1902 and costing me $1. Like the chart the razor was never used but once but I am sorry to say that it is not in as good working order as the chart. When my wife made the discovery that she had ruined three yards of good cloth with her chart, she gave way to tears and took to her bed, but when I tried to shave with that safety razor and it began to chew my whiskers and bite at my nose, I dashed it on the floor and stamped the most of its teeth out. I wouldn't let my own wife tear and rend my beard without resenting it, let alone a darned insignificant safety razor. I am now offering it and a pocket looking glass that I also found in the trunk for a nickel.

The next and last thing that I found in the old trunk that I am now offering to sell at a bargain is a musical instrument technically known as an accordion. I ordered this musical apparatus from Sears Roward & Co., Chicago, and it cost me $1.35 not counting the postage which was 13 cents. This instrument is also as good as new as I never used it at all told more than two months. I still have the original instructions that came with it, which shows you how to play all sorts of profane and sacred tunes. If my family had not thrown all sorts of obstacles in my way, in all probability I would today be enjoying music pulled from my own accordion with my own hands, instead of having to stand around the drug store and listen to music made by a lot of cheap phonographs. The very night that my family drove me out to the barn with my accordion I had just learned to pull the tune of "Maggie" out of it and sing the words all at the same time. But if a man's family is out of harmony with his musical efforts, he had just as well quit, especially if he has to go out to his cow lot in order to soothe his soul with his own music. I will take 13 cents for my accordion and throw in a song book I bought at a circus in the fall of 1889.

Good For Biliousness.

"I took two of Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets last night, and I feel fifty per cent better than I have for weeks, says J. J. Firestone of Allegan, Mich. "They are certainly a fine article for biliousness." For sale by all druggists. Samples free.

Death Is Near to Mrs. Bragg.

New Orleans, La., Sept., 20.—Mrs. Elizabeth B. Bragg, widow of Maj. Gen. Braxton Bragg, of the Confederate Army and victor at Chickamauga, is very ill here. Mrs. Bragg is 83 years old and her illness is due to weakness from old age.

An incident in her sickness is the fact that the apparent crisis had arrived on the anniversary of the day of her husband's great victory, which occurred September 20, 1863, after two days' fighting. Mrs. Bragg is at the home of her brother, W. C. Ellis.

How To Get Strong.

P. J. Daly, of 1247 W. Congress St., Chicago, tells of a way to become strong. He says: "My mother, who is old and was very feeble, is deriving so much benefit from Electric Bitters, that I feel it's my duty to tell those who need a tonic and strengthening medicine about it. In my mother's case a marked gain in flesh has resulted, insomnia has been overcome, and she is steadily growing stronger." Electric Bitters quickly remedy stomach, liver and kidney complaints. Sold under guarantee at Rock Drug Store. 50c.

Run Trains by Water Power.

Spokane, Wash., Sept. 20.—T. A. Edison, who with his wife and daughter, is touring the Pacific Northwest, said today that the available water power in the State of Washington, estimated at 3,000,000 horse power, of which only a small percentage is used, and that in adjoining States and British Columbia, will be fully utilized within twenty years by the trans-continental railroads in moving their passenger and freight trains from the Rocky Mountains to the Pacific Coast and Puget Sound, and he added, "when the water falls are harnessed the trains will be operated faster and much cheaper than at present.

"I may say, too, that within a few years the electrically propelled motor car will be the automobile most in use. It will not supplant other forms of automobiles until provision is made for renewing the storage batteries at convenient places, but in Spokane and other cities, where electrical energy may be had cheaply and easily, electric cars will do the work of truck horses and in general furnish transportation for the people."

PURELY POLITICAL.

There are just thirty-seven more days in which the great political parties may wrestle and run for the great prize. There has been no time since the election of Grover Cleveland in 1892 that the outlook for the election of a Democratic president was so flattering as it is at this time.

The Republican party has had a wonderfully strong hold upon the governmental affairs of the country for the last twelve years. That state of affairs was, in greatest measure due to the fact that the world has not known such another gigantic political machine as has been operated by that party for the purpose of holding onto the reins of government in the interest of its great campaign for self. It seems strange that the American people, who are people of more than average intelligence as compared to the people of the world, have not long ago discovered the inconsistency of complaining against trusts and combines, and at the same time keeping that party in power, which with its protective tariff policy, is the very father of trusts and monopolies.

We have heard wonderful tales of the prosperity of the country under Republican rule. The Nation's expenses, under Grover Cleveland, the last Democratic President, required revenues amounting to about $6.00 per capita of the population of the country. The appropriations made by the first session of the 60th Congress, after twelve years of Republican rule, show the amount to have been double. Further than that, the cost of living is now more than double, while the increase in pay for the wage earner, who constitutes the great part of the population of the country, has not been material.

The last twelve years of Republican rule have ruined more men of towering mental strength than any like period of history. There has arisen, in our own Republic, a condition similar to that which existed in the Imperial Republic of Rome a short time before its disruption, and unless a halt is called in the extravagance of the government, unless men in positions of public trust are given less incentive to corruption, and greater reward for political justice, there are dark days ahead for this Nation.

But there is a rift in the cloud, and the bright sun of national reform is breaking through. Bryan, the matchless commoner and advocate of the people, is making headway against the hosts of greed and oppression. That the hordes of the "Federal office trust" fear him and those for whom he stands is evidenced by the fact that they are putting forth all their strength; are calling to their aid all their old schemes and subterfuges, and as many new ones as possible. It will not avail, the people are becoming too well educated. On the 3rd of November the sovereign people of America will issue a mandate in tones the like of which have not heretofore been heard, carrying from Maine to Texas a voice that says, "This shall be a government of the people, for the people, by the people; and not a government of the trusts, for the trusts, by the trusts."

We predict that Bryan will be the next President of the United States. That within eight years United States Senators will be elected by popular vote, as they should always have been. The present method of electing Senators was perhaps wise in the time when the Constitution was framed, but conditions have changed. The United States Senate for many years has been little more than a congregation of trust attorneys and corporation lawyers, standing between the House of Representatives and the people for the purpose of preventing the enactment of such legislation as the people have demanded.

In the matter of State politics there is little to comment upon. The Republicans have their usual bi-ennial spasm of political virtue. A ticket has been placed in the field for State offices. In a few counties there is a Republican county ticket. Some of these aspirants to public office are Republicans from principle, others because they hanker after the flesh pots of federal patronage, and the largest element of them by far, because in their ignorance and blind unhappiness they are against something or somebody, the Democratic party in this State is the biggest thing they can oppose, so they are against it for the purpose of appearing to battle with a giant, and because they are ashamed to be Socialists.

Whatever the purpose of the men who compose the Republican ticket may be, certain it is that, with the possible exception of a few minor offices, the chief distinction they will secure will be that of having their names on the ticket. There will be no Republicans elected to offices of consequence, because there are not enough Republican votes in Texas to elect them. The men who are trying to persuade themselves that the late Bailey controversy, and the Prohibition quarrel in the Democratic party of Texas is going to cause a falling off in the Democratic voting strength of the State will be sorely disappointed. Notwithstanding much apparent evidence to the contrary, men who are Democrats in this State are Democrats from principle, and do not let the matter of mere men influence them. Men who vote the Democratic ticket are Democrats, those who vote the Republican ticket are Republicans. A man who adheres to no political party is a free lance, a class that has rarely possessed the balance of power upon any occasion, in any country, and certainly never in Texas. He who attempts to procyte you from your political faith, by reminding you that some man who professed to be a Democrat was a scoundrel, would as logically attempt to dissuade you from your belief in the tenets of Christianity because Judas was a betrayer.

The man who becomes the nominee of a political party is a partisan, and has a right to expect the support of the party nominating him. The man who enters the race for a party nomination, and is defeated, is worse than a traitor if he fails to support the nominees of his party.

The National Republican campaign committee is making a strong effort to ring a few democrats into the Foraker trouble.

The republican party appears to be having a hard time all the way round. The National Campaign Committee has kicked Foraker out of the amalgamated association of spellbinders on account of his alleged unholy alliance with the Standard Oil Company. The nigger contingent of the republican party in the south, which is almost the entire party in those states south of Mason & Dixon's line, except a sufficient number of white men to hold the federal offices, are very sore over the disgrace of their hero. Verily, the republican party seems to have fallen on hard lines.

The republican party, after teaching the nigger for the last forty years to say his prayers to Abe Lincoln, at night—when he was not busy with some white man's chicken roost—has suddenly become so anxious to shake the colored brother that they are looking in all kinds of places to find excuses. Foraker is hardly mentioned by people of decent instincts, but he is not worse than the great majority of the party that has promulgated the principle that a nigger is as good as a white man, and has bred into the American republic such human misfits as Ida Tarbell, Ray Stannard Baker, and a long list of other celebrities whose chief distinction from the American nigger is their color.

Sensational Suicide.

Mount Pleasant, Tex., Sept. 20.—After cutting his throat with a pocket knife in the presence of his wife this afternoon, A. S. ### BUSINESS IS NOT AN EXPERIMENT

PEOPLE SHOULD NEVER SAY I'LL TRY IT, BUT I WILL DO THIS THING.

When men go into business as an experiment they are very likely to fail. The figuring should be done first. Think and figure. It is just as essential for the farmer or ranchman to think and figure before he buys, as it is for the merchant or banker to do the same thing in his business. Don't let anybody persuade you to experiment in buying. The fall season is now here; you will need to buy your winter stuff. There is no reason why you should waste money, but really save it. Go to the merchant and discuss buying with him. There is every probability that you will find that the home man, who is your neighbor and whom you know you can trust, is the man who will do the best part by you. Sending to mail order houses is a leap in the dark; you don't see what you are buying. In this connection let us say that our firm—Mosel, Saenger & Co.—is a new firm in the general merchandise field, but all of us have been in business in Kerrville for almost a score of years. Mr. Mosel in the saddlery business, Mr. Saenger with the Beitel Lumber Co. We have been in the general merchandise business a little more than a year. We have had a good business, but we are not satisfied. We want our business to grow; there are doubtless many people who have been "peeping around" wondering what Mosel, Saenger & Co. would do. We have not been wondering, we have been building to the plans we made. We hope that the buying public is now satisfied of the stability of the house and will continue to increase our business as they have been doing—come on in and buy something—we will treat you right. We have no new methods; we are merely practicing the old custom of a full yard and a full pound. Absolutely fair dealing and a little profit on every sale we make.

We know we are buying as cheap from the wholesalers and selling as cheap to the trade as anybody, and we frankly invite you to come to our store and let us have a chance to convince you.

As a parting word let us say, don't experiment; don't try to buy low, but think and figure, and actually buy where you get the best service and the best goods in quality and quantity, for your money. We will help you.

FUNNY THINGS

FROM THE PAPERS.

Schuyler Zeigler was telling me of a fellow who owed him a bill for a long time, and whom he heard was doing well and paying off some of his creditors. Schuyler got after him hot foot, but was disappointed by being told, "Les' see, your name is Zeigler, ain't it? Well, you'll have to wait some time as I am paying off my creditors in alphabetical order."

An Englewood girl was being quizzed by a would-be smart fellow who remarked he had heard that a kiss without a moustache was like an egg without salt. Then he asked her opinion about it. She modestly said she did not know, as she had never tried it. "What, the kiss without the moustache?" he asked. "No, the egg without salt," she blushing admitted.

Casey was very sick at one time and the doctor told him that he needed a stimulant and advised an ounce of whiskey three times a day. Calling in a few days, he found Casey no better, but he was undoubtedly drunk. Knowing that his directions had not been carried out, he demanded an explanation, and Casey answered: "Ut's all roight, docthor; Oi telephoned to the drug store to find out how much an ounce was, and the clerk told me it wor sixteen drams, and Oi hev been taking just forty-ate drams a day iver since."—Western Publisher.

The troubles of a newspaper man are aptly described in the following item, clipped from an exchange: "If you know of an item or a piece of news, tell us about it. That's what we want. But a newspaper man sometimes experiences more difficulty in gathering news than one would imagine. This was the case with the reporter in a neighboring town who a few days ago was sent to write up a fire in a residence. Going to the door, he inquired for the lady of the house. The maid said she was out. "Are any of the family at home?" inquired the scribe. "No, they are all out," was the reply. "Well, wasn't there a fire here last evening?" "Yes, said the girl, "but that's out too."—Ex.

Not a Nature Fake.

"You certainly run up against funny things in the country," said the young man who had just returned from up the state, where his uncle had a large farm. "On the way up to my uncle's house I had to pass the stock yards, where he kept a lot of pigs. As I passed those hundreds of pigs seemed to be having a regular stampede or panic some kind—they were rushing madly about, apparently looking for something. I watched them for quite a while, but could see nothing but a small woodpecker sitting on the fence. When I got to the house I asked Uncle Jim what on earth was the matter with the hogs, they seemed so excited.

"That's so? Well, it was this way—there was a spell back some weeks when I had a bad cold, lost my voice, and couldn't call those critters to their feed, so I got the idea of bringin' them to the trough by tappin' my stick on the wooden fence, and ever since then pesky woodpeckers came around the hogs just go crazy, thinkin' I'm callin' them to give them somethin' to eat."

Not to be Disturbed.

"Sody crackers? Yes'm," said the country storekeeper. "I got 'em. I'll-er send 'em up to you!" "Well," replied Mrs. Medders, "I did 'low to take 'em with me." "Yes'm, but, you see, Bill Brusser he's a dozin' on top o' the bar 'I jest now an' he ain't in the best o' humor today."

Irish Economy.

"Begorra," said Patsy, "Oi couldn't pay me five shillin's foine, and Oi had to go to jail for six days."

"An' how much did yez spend to get drunk?"

"Oh, 'bout five shillin's!"

"Yez sool, if yez had not spent yez five shillin's for drink yez'd a' had yer five shillin's to pay yer foine wid."

Blowing Some.

Alderman Tracy of Chicago has a son who was boasting one day of his father's official position.

"My father," he said to a companion, "is an alderman."

"Huh!" snorted the other boy; "that's nothing! My father blows the whistle at the mill!"

That settled it.

Accommodating.

The champion orator stepped from the train and bowed to the ruralites congregated about the station.

"I have come," he said solemnly, "to stump the state."

"By heck, we welcome you with open arms," shouted Farmer Hardapple. "We have been trying to get rid of the stumps in this state for the past ten years."

Dull Days.

"The only news I have to tell you," wrote the Billyville citizen, "is that the river has riz an' drowned all yer cattle, an' yer uncle has broke jail; likewise the widdier woman you wuz agoin' ter marry has runned off with a book agent. Outside of these here things, we air all adoin' well."—Atlanta Constitution.

Took His Oath On It.

This writer remembers the protest he made against the awful language from certain mews in Clifton that awoke ladies of the house in the early morning. The proprietor was most courteous about it when he called, and apologized "if any offense had been found." But as he explained "the men say they can't remember ever having swore. They say they just talk ordinary." And then, with a polite bow to the ladies he concluded: "And, dammy, I don't believe they know when they are swearing."

Heroic Measures Adopted.

The Colonel of a volunteer regiment camping in Virginia came across a private on the outskirts of the camp, painfully munching on something. His face was wry and his lips seemed to move only with the greatest effort.

"What are you eating?" demanded the colonel.

"Persimmons, sir."

"Good heavens! Haven't you got any mose sense than to eat persimmons at this time of the year? They'd pucker the very stomach out of you!"

"I know, sir. That's why I'm eatin' 'em. I'm tryin' to shrink me stomach to fit me rations."

Mr. John White, of 38 Highland Ave., Houlton, Maine, says: "Have been troubled with a cold every winter and spring. Last winter I tried many advertised remedies, but the cold continued until I bought a 50c bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery; before that was half gone, the cough was all gone. This winter the same happy result has followed; a few doses once more banished the annual cough. I am now convinced that Dr. King's New Discovery is the best of all cough and lung remedies." Sold under guarantee at Rock Drug Store, 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

The Poisonous Snakes of Texas

Some people have an idea that all animals in the shape of a reptile that crawl upon the ground are poisonous. This is far from true. In fact, there are very few poisonous snakes in Texas. Among them we might mention the following: The Harlequin, or Candy Snake. It is very highly colored and has around it a succession of black and red rings. Its home is chiefly in the Coastal region. Then there is the Dry Land Moccasin, or what is commonly called the Copperhead, with which we are all familiar. Its home is usually in the timbers along the rivers and creeks. Among the Moccasins the Cottonmouth, or Stump-Tail moccasin, is the only one whose bite is at all dangerous. This snake can easily be recognized by its dark, rough and rusty appearance. It ranges over the entire State where there is sufficient moisture. Edwards' Massasauga, a yellowish, brown snake, is not very common in Texas. There are seven different kinds of Rattle Snakes, all found in Texas. The Ground Rattle Snake is common in all parts of the State. The Diamond Rattle Snake frequents the timbered bottoms of the Coast Regions. The Texas Rattle Snake is found principally in Western Texas. The Banded Rattle Snake receives its name from "A dorsal series of more or less irregular and imperfect transverse bands or blotches." The Dog Faced Rattle Snake seems to be found only in the Rio Pecos region. The Prairie Rattle Snake, occurs chiefly in Northwest Texas. The Green Rattle Snake lives in the Rio Grande Valley.

"CHOWDER"

The Entertainment Given by the Kerrville Woman's Club a Pronounced Success.

On Friday night of last week the Kerrville Woman's Club, assisted by local talent from other organizations and by gifted sojourners in the city, gave a performance at Pampell's Opera House that was the success of the season. The play was called "Chowder," in honor of Capt. H. M. Newton, formerly of this place, but now a resident of San Antonio. It was a combination of music, recitations, readings, tableaux and other "ingredients."

In the tableaux their were eight scenes. They were: Columbia, Mrs. G. F. Schreiner; Germany,
Mrs. W. H. Morelock; Ireland,
Mrs. Patti Hannis; Mexico, Miss
Clara Herzog; America, Mrs. C. A.
Schreiner; the Club Woman, Mrs.
A. C. Schreiner; Queen Louise, Miss Nannie Allen; Rebecca at the Well, Miss Ruth Robinson.

There can be little said in special mention of the features of these tableaux. They were subjects that permitted strong expression. Each woman, beautifully costumed for the occasion, and each performer was a veritable masterpiece of living statuary. Mrs. A. C. Schreiner won storms of applause for her living demonstration of the Woman's Club, wherein she represented a wrathful mother in the act of wielding the slipper as a messenger of correction upon the convenient section of little Morriss Han-nis' Sunday trousers. There were abundant encores for all the ladies, and not one received more praise than was due.

Mrs. Walker's music was greatly enjoyed by those present. Miss Herzog, the gifted singer, was on the program for a song. She was encored to the echo, and the audience would not desist until she sang a second song. Evan Stevenson, of Illinois, who is sojourning in the city, delivered a very pleasing humorous address. T. C.
Johnston gave a humorous dialect reading that was an enjoyable feature of the evening's entertainment.
Mrs. G. H. Coleman sang in a voice of unusual sweetness that captivated the audience and called for repeated encores. Miss Sand-ridge recited a dialogue supposed to have occurred in the mountains of East Tennessee, and the language was very realistic to men and women who in their rambles have some time visited the hill country.
"Something to Say," a little farce, by Dr. E. Galbraith, and Miss Weir, was liberally applauded, and added greatly to the pleasure of the audience. The closing number on the program was a chorus of "Chowder" and club feet.

The entertainment was for the benefit of the newly organized "Crusade for Health." The attendance was the largest seen in the Opera House this season. The proceeds will be used for the purpose of calling attention to the need of a State Sanitarium for tuberculosis in Texas. A letter has been sent to every woman's club in Texas, making a strong plea for the movement and beseeching all good people to join in the "Crusade for Health." The Club will next address a personal letter to every county judge and mayor in the State. Between this and the first of January a letter, folder, or other matter will be sent to every public official in the State.

After January 1 this Club, with the assistance of the Federation of Women's Clubs of Texas, will take the matter up at Austin, and will perhaps establish headquarters there and insist that some action be taken by the Legislature in regard to the Sanitarium.

A COMMON MISTAKE.

There Are Many People Who Are Unhappy Because They Are Afraid of Public Opinion. Men and Women of Intelligence Should Be Independent.

What would you think of a neighbor who would not have a doctor for one of his children, because the other neighbors might think he was putting on airs. What would be the general opinion of a man or woman who, knowing that he or she had rheumatism, would not have it treated because of the fear that some might find it out and say, "why, I didn't know you were getting so old." What should a person of intelligence care what any one else thinks about his personal affairs. You could not afford to have the opinion of some one else interfere with your happiness, or with your comfort. There is no one thing in which so much attention is paid to the opinions of other people, and in which such grave error is committed as in the matter of wearing glasses in order to save the eyes. You had probably not thought of the matter of saving the eyes. You have perhaps been under the impression that there was nothing in the matter of wearing glasses except that when people get so they cannot see any longer without them they must have spectacles. That is an error. If you saw a woman, one whose health was perfect, whose blood was pure and her satiny, white skin absolutely without a blemish, insisting upon being treated for a cancer upon her face when there was no indication of such frightful trouble, you would naturally think her mind was unbalanced. If you saw the same woman with a little spot of suspicious looking scale upon her beautiful face you would cry out, "go see a doctor at once," and you would be giving very proper advice. Eyes are very necessary, long after time has wrinkled and distorted the beautiful face. There is no greater boon to old age than that of being able to read, and to see well. When we speak of saving the eyes, we speak advisedly. Eye troubles are not necessarily of advanced age. Properly fitted glasses will save the eye, just as proper remedies, taken in time often save the health. A little strain at first may yield to treatment, and the eyes become perfectly sound, but if neglected there will soon come a time when you must wear glasses regardless of what other people may think or say, and the worst of it all is that by that time your eyes are probably in such condition that the greatest care can never make them good again. The loss of perfect vision is not the greatest trouble in the matter of neglecting the eyes. There are thousands of men and women, who are sufferers from headaches which are due, solely, to eye strain. If people paid proper attention to the eyes there would perhaps be a little more work for the optician, but there would be much less money spent for headache powders, which cannot possibly give permanent relief and which will in the end ruin the system by the unnatural practice of trying to remove an effect without striking at the cause. Every time a dose of medicine is taken for headache that is caused by eye strain it throws an unnatural burden upon the heart and the nervous system, and it is a continuation of these little strains that eventually cause disaster to the human machine, without having in any manner permanently benefited the trouble that was originally the cause of suffering. Don't wait a day longer. Come in and let us fit your eyes if they are in trouble. There is no use to have anything done for eyes that are perfect, but if there is any thing wrong with them, it is time right now that you have them fitted with correct glasses.

DR. J. B. LOVE,
Scientific Optician,
Kerrville, Tex.

Fine Showing For Kerr County.

L. A. Mosty shipped a full car load of Kerr county products to San Antonio Wednesday to be shown in the county contest for best exhibit at the San Antonio Fair. Mr. Mosty left the next day for the Alamo City to put the big exhibit in place. The showing made by this county will be a revelation to people who are not aware of the resources of this section.

Mr. Mosty, and those who have assisted him in the enterprise, deserve great credit. The thanks of the community are especially due to the ladies who expended much labor upon the beautiful decorations for the exhibit.

W. B. Leigh, of Center Point, was among the visitors in Kerrville Thursday.

A Special Day at Methodist Church.

Next Sunday morning at the usual Sunday School hour 9:45, we will observe "Rally Day," as ordered by the last convention of the Kerr County Sunday School Association. We desire the presence of all the Sunday School with the "Cradle Bell" and "Home Department," also all new scholars that may be induced to come and enroll. We would be glad to have present all members of the church, who are not connected with the school, to enjoy this hour with us.

And if there are those who are not in any Sunday school, who may read these lines, we give you an urgent invitation to come and enjoy the special program, and become regular members of our splendid school.

At the 11:00 o'clock hour we will have a special program in observance of Southwestern University Day. We desire a large attendance.

At the evening hour, 8:00 o'clock, Rev. T. Lee, presiding elder, will preach. This means a treat to all who may hear him.

Monday morning at 10:00 o'clock the Fourth Quarterly Conference will convene.

All official members are expected to be present at roll call and all others are perfectly welcome to attend.

There will be a Sunday school social next Friday evening, Sept. 25, from 8:00 to 10:30 p. m., on the parsonage lawn. We want the parents to come and bring the little folks. All of us are going to have a good time.

T. N. BARTON, pastor.

We have a telephone (No. 92) and we have groceries. If you have a mouth and just a little money there is a chance for a trade.
