Dear Sir:

Inclosed find $2.00 for my subscription to The Messenger. I always look for Sunday morning to come as that is when The Messenger gets here.

We sure are having very dry weather here and no rain in sight. Please send us up some of the rain you are having too much of. Oats are up from 3 to 6 inches high and almost ready to cut.

I am not doing any farming but if the farmers do not make anything we can not expect any trade from them.

If things do not look better by next year I am going on a farm and that will mean New Mexico. So if there is anyone that would like to trade for a place here in Missouri, let me know.

Yours truly,
A. F. SCHROEDER.

HOW LONG WILL THE DEPRESSION LAST

A business depression started in—

1857 and lasted 12 months
1869 and lasted 8 months.
1873 and lasted 30 months.
1884 and lasted 22 months.
1893 and lasted 25 months.
1903 and lasted 25 months.
1907 and lasted 12 months.
1914 and lasted 8 months.
1921 and lasted 14 months.

The men who emerged from those cycles rich and successful were those who took advantage of the knowledge that when everybody was depressed and devoid of confidence, then was the time for action.

The same situation exists today. The men who control the industrial affairs of this country are those whose eyes look toward the dawn; they equip themselves with devices that add to their personal efficiency and also to the efficiency of their organization.—It's Said and Done.

REV. HEDGES HOME FROM THE SANDIA MOUNTAINS

Rev. J. A. Hedges returned last Thursday from attending the meeting of the Synod of New Mexico and conference for Presbyterian young people held at the Sandia Mountain conference grounds east of Albuquerque. Both the synod and conference were held much earlier this year than usual. As a result it was unusually cold though dry and those who were unfortunate enough not to take along ample bedding and warm clothes suffered greatly. Rev. Hedges had on all of his heavy winter clothing and overcoat thru most of the day-time and then was not too warm. Coming back to the high temperatures of the Pecos valley was jumping out of the frost into the fire.

The meeting of the synod was well attended and much business was transacted and the inspirational and devotional services were very fine. Among the many who were there, were several of the Presbyterian church's foremost men. Among these were Secretaries Somerdike and Klier of the Sunday school department and Evangelistic Department of the Board of National Missions both of whom are live wires and gave inspiring addresses. Others were Rev. John C. E. Fry of Hollywood, California and the pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Boulder, Colorado representing the Boards of Pensions and Foreign Missions respectively; Rev. Asa Ferry of Chicago and Rev. Robert H. Morris of Haddonfield New Jersey, gave inspiring addresses.

In spite of the depression and other things the attendance at the young people's conference was larger than ever before and many courses were offered in Bible study, church history, leadership training, daily vacation Bible schools, missions, home and foreign and the practice of Christian living. To adults were offered courses in Christian education, Bible and parish problems. Taking it all in all it is one of the best conferences ever held.

Rev. Hedges went with Rev. and Mrs. John G. Anderson of Dexter and returned with them.

Ellen Meets Peggy's Brother
By RUTH ARNOLD

ELLEN BURKE, sitting in her chair in the pullman as the long train drew into the station at Philadelphia, tucked Peggy O'Connell's letter safely in her handbag. Ellen and Peggy had met on shipboard going to Europe a few months before with their respective parents, and had formed an enthusiastic friendship. It was helped along because Mr. and Mrs. Burke and Mr. and Mrs. O'Connell found each other congenial.

On the way home—for the Burkes and O'Connells had purposely returned to America by the same ship—Peggy had exacted a promise from Ellen to visit her as soon as she had unpacked her trunks. Ellen lived in a New York apartment. Peggy lived in a country house outside Philadelphia. And the two girls planned many good times in exchanging visits.

"As soon as you reach Broad street station," Peggy had written, "you telephone my brother John." And then she had given his telephone number and his office address. "He'll be expecting you, and will pick you up at the station and bring you out home in his car. As I've told you, I'm sure you and he are going to be crazy about each other."

Ellen had heard much from Peggy. In their many talks together that summer, about her brother John. And it must be admitted that part of her excitement at again seeing Peggy was that she would meet this paragon of a brother.

Ellen knew something of Philadelphia. And when there was some delay in getting John's office by telephone, she realized that she was only a few steps from his office.

"I'll just pop around and wait there," she thought. "It will save him trouble, and I'm early. I'd rather wait than here."

So, carrying her small suitcase and matching hat box, Ellen walked the square or two to John O'Connell's office. She hesitatingly opened the door labeled "John O'Connell, lawyer," then she entered the small waiting room. The room was full of girls, girls about her own age.

"I'll just wait here until Mr. O'Connell is free," she said to an office boy, who grinned in answer.

Ellen wore, of course, sheer, light silk stockings. She wore gray suede shoes, trimmed with bands of snake-skin. Her hat was of soft gray velveteen that was lovely above her fair hair and blue eyes. Her frock was of gray crepe de chine.

Just as she had taken in all her surroundings a door marked private opened, and a homely, thirty-year-old woman, dressed in blue serge, serviceable and plain, emerged.

Behind her came a young man. Ellen's heart skipped a beat. It was John—she knew from a photograph Peggy had always carried with her. "You can all go now," he said to the other waiting girls. "The position is filled."

The other girls went out of the room. Ellen flushed and half smiled at John.

"What are you waiting for?" he asked crisply. "Here, come in here a minute."

"But," stammered Ellen, "I'm—" She followed him into his office.

"I know, I know. But the job is filled. And just for your own good, let me tell you you'll never get the kind of job a nice girl like you wants if you dress in fads like those. Plain and reliable. The kind of a woman a man likes to have around all day. Not ugly, but just not noticeable and sure to have her mind on something besides clothes. Now you—anybody'd know you were thinking more about your good looks than your work—and that doesn't do in an office."

"Don't feel offended," said the young man. "I'm just trying to give a bit of advice."

"But you're so stupid," said Ellen, as the door marked "Private" closed. And she picked up her two pretty little gray bags and walked back to the station. There she boarded the next local train to Peggy's home and explained to Peggy, when she got there, that she hadn't been able to get her brother on the telephone. So Peggy promptly telephoned her brother not to wait.

When Ellen and John met that evening, John's eyes were openly admiring. Ellen, in pink tulle, with bare arms and no hat, did not at first recall the vision of gray that had disturbed his office that afternoon.

It was not until the next day when she and Peggy had luncheon with him at a hotel that he recognized the again gray Ellen as his office visitor.

"Well, by jove," he said in the middle of a mouthful of grapefruit, and he flushed and stammered more than Ellen had done the day before. "Why—what must you have thought?"

Ellen, by this time was sure that John was all that Peggy had claimed for him—and more—smiled shyly.

"Well, what I thought then—doesn't matter—any more than what you did, does it?"

And then they both laughed and told Peggy the joke. And all three knew, though they said nothing of the knowledge, that Ellen and John would laugh all their lives together over their first meeting.

Majority of Headaches Traced to Eye Strain

Seven out of ten headaches are caused by eye strain due to neglect of ordinary eye care, pointed out M. J. Julian of the Better Vision Institute, in a speech in Boston before a group of eyesight specialists. Other ills, such as insomnia and indigestion, are also traceable to this cause, he pointed out, and yet 40 per cent of the people of this country need glasses and are trying to do without them.

Greek Legend Gave Us Augean Stables Story

In Greek legend Augeas was a king of Elis who possessed a herd of 3,000 sacred oxen whose stalls had not been cleaned for 30 years. The cleaning of these stalls in a single day was one of the 12 difficult and dangerous labors imposed upon Hercules by Eurystheus, king of Argolis. Hercules, who was promised a tenth part of the cattle in payment, succeeded in performing the task within the required time by turning the rivers Alpheus and Peneus through the stables. Augeas refused to turn over any part of the cattle to Hercules on the ground that he had carried out the commission in the service of Eurystheus, whereupon Hercules sent an army into Elis and destroyed the insolent king and his sons. Figuratively, cleaning the Augean stables means to clear away an accumulated mass of corruption or filth or to reform wrongs almost past the power of man to remedy.

First Skates Were Shinbones

The art of skating has come a long way from the original skatins which was the forerunner of the present sport. Where the long knife-like blades of speed skates permit speeds of a mile in less than three minutes, and the broad blades rounded at each end, allow a fancy skater to outdo the ballet dancers in the performance of their graceful and speedy figures, the original skater was forced to push himself along with sticks in order to get motion.

The first ice skates were made of shinbones of animals which were fastened to the feet. The motor was as slow and as awkward as poling a boat along through the water. The first dry-land or roller skates were invented in 1863.

Manila Up to Date

Venice of the Orient is one of the names given to Manila of the Philippine Islands. The name comes to it because it is situated on both banks of the Pasig river and enjoys some canal life from the river. These waters provide a lot of bridges for the city suggestive of the Rialto of the Old world.

Thirty-five years ago the city had no drainage system and a heavy rain made boats on the streets a necessity. Around the intermuros or walled city, which is most typical of its Spanish days, were walls and a moat dating back to 1500 two miles long and 25 feet high. Today the moat is given up to fine driveways and only the bridged river and canals remind the tourist of a city of islands.

Ye Ed's Explanation

The fellows who poke fun at that little meerschaum pipe which we have dug up after years of disuse may be interested in learning that a philosopher of considerable discrimination says he don't think he ever heard of a crook who smoked a pipe and doubted that anybody ever planned a murder or holdup while smoking a pipe. Now, that's consoling and takes away some of the smack of ridicule which our friends have been using in their efforts to determine whether we are practicing economy in our smoking or just "putting on" with the jimmy pipe.—Atehison County Mail.

BUNCO PARTY
