MONUMENT DIST. LEADS ACTIVITY

Public Production Corp. Gets Good Western Extension; Acid Fails In Deep Test Well of South Eddy County.

The Monument district still has all Lea county oil fields in its hands and in the number of companies made. This week the Republic Production Corp., completed well in a western extension, the Maveety No. 1, sec. 35-24-36, at a depth of 3940 feet. The treatment of 4,000 gallons of acid, the Maveety flowed six barrels of oil an hour through a 3/4-inch choke on tubing. Production of this well is estimated at 4,000 barrels daily. It is enough in the same section of a northeast extension of the monument district, the Maveety No. 3 of the Sun Oil Co., sec. 35-24-36, failed to respond to acid treatment when acidized at 3945 feet. When placed on the pump the well made 240 barrels in ten days. Oil men say the peculiar phenomenon is probably due to a formation.

Headplant Plant for Monument

It is understood here the Atlantic Oil Co. is building a casinghead line plant in the Monument district and will soon have the plant completed and ready for operation.

Deep Well Shut Down

The deepest well yet drilled in Eddy county is shut down pending further orders, after acid treatment failed to bring commercial production from two small wells found below the 5,000-foot level. The Dooley No. 7 of Getty Oil Co., sec. 24-20-29, drilled to a total depth of 5,000 feet. Small showings of oil were found at 5302 and 5319 feet.

Another Eddy county well has been abandoned at a shallow depth pending field information. The Eddy Commerce Trust Co., sec. 24-20-29, has been abandoned at 3,247 feet.

The Lea county wells will also be plugged and abandoned, these being the Woolworth No. 1, Block of the Phillips Petroleum Co., sec. 24-20-29, drilled to a total depth of 4200 feet and plugged at 3540 feet and abandoned at 3,540 feet and abandoned at 3,540 feet.

Other Lea county producers completed include the Gypsy Oil Co., Arnott No. 1-C, sec. 21-21-36, drilled to 3900 feet and on initial production test flowed 440 barrels of oil in twelve hours and 8,000,000 feet of gas through a two-inch tubing. The Sun Oil Co., sec. 21-21-36, drilled to 3935 feet and made an initial production test of 440 barrels of oil an hour through 2-inch tubing and 8,000,000 feet of gas.

The Gypsy Oil Co., South Graham No. 1, sec. 2-20-36, was drilled to 3903 feet and gauged 407 barrels in two and a half hours with 8,000,000 feet of gas.

New Locations Made

Six new locations were made during the past week. These include the Skelly Oil Co., State 6-B, sec. 16-21-36; Amerada Oil Co., State 1-1, sec. 2-20-36; Repollo Oil Co., Barber No. 1, sec. 2-20-37; Gypsy Oil Co., Bell-Ramsey No. 7, sec. 4-21-36; Atlantic Oil Co., State 4-H, sec. 5-21-36; Continental Oil Co., State C-20, No. 8, sec. 21-36.

ARTIFICIAL LEG PROVES TOOL KIT

MULESHOE, Texas—In his artificial leg, B. L. Simms, alleged burglar, carried tools, with which he actually wrecked Muleshoe's new leg last week.

Simms was searched when he was placed in jail, but Sheriff Jim Cook did not suspect the artificial leg. In it, Simms had a veritable mechanic's tool kit including hammer, hacksaw and blades, chisel, wrench, and an acid that softens steel.

Simms' efforts to escape, in which he cut through bars and jail doors, was discovered as he was working his way through the last barrier between him and liberty.

Simms is now hopping around in his cell on one leg.

Miss Vera Goodwin spent the week-end in W. T. S. T. C. at Canyon, Texas, and enjoyed the home-coming celebration. Friends motored home with her for a short visit.

Poison Soda Is Fatal To Three People In San Francisco, Calif.

SAN FRANCISCO—Mysterious circumstances surrounding poisoned baking soda, which was blamed for three deaths here, caused city officials to seek a police investigation on the theory contamination of the product was not accidental.

Dr. J. C. Geiger, city health director, said he was "worried" over how so much poison could have been accidentally mixed in the soda, sold in bulk by a San Francisco department store.

Nine hundred pounds of the product, including that which contained a deadly poison, has been marketed since October 23, and an additional 800 pounds not sold was confiscated.

"I can't understand how so much poison could be mixed in the soda by accident," Dr. Geiger said in warning that lives of many other San Franciscans may be threatened if the contaminated product is used.

HELD FOR DISTRICT COURT

W. W. Parnell, charged with embezzling a calf from J. W. Burke, was given a preliminary hearing Thursday in justice court at Roswell and bound over to the district court.

A Permanent AAA Policy Forecasted

Present Program To Be A Permanent Set-Up, Davis Thinks.

WASHINGTON—A "grass revolution" in the form of a permanent AAA intended to promote an era of sound farming practices was forecast Tuesday by AAA Administrator Chester C. Davis.

"We have turned too far from grass and good farming," Davis told delegates to the convention of the Association of Land Grant Colleges and Universities. "Now we are turning back."

At the same meeting, Governor William I. Myers of the Farm Credit Administration predicted that federal land banks would shift from federal to private sources for funds within a few months.

"We have arrived at the point now," Myers said, "where we can see clearly that within a few months the federal land banks will return to the bond market to obtain the funds with which to make new farm mortgage loans."

The land banks had $1,000,000,000 in farm mortgage loans in 1933, Myers said, all of which was obtained by sale of bonds to the public. Since that time, he added, the loans had doubled—but thru sale of bonds to the government.

Myers said he believed emergency phases of the farm loan program were diminishing and said the FCA should within a few years have only the activities of a permanent, cooperative institution.

Discussing a permanent AAA, Davis said:

"Some effective economic main-spring, such as the processing tax and rental and benefit payments now afford, must be maintained. All transition steps must be based on education and understanding support, not only on the part of farmers, but the general citizenry."

DOE HUNTING IS SET FOR NOVEMBER 20th

SANTA FE—State Game Warden Elliott S. Barker said at Santa Fe Monday that about 125 permits for doe hunting have been issued, with the special season to open November 20th on does in the Magdalena division of the Cibola forest. The season will close November 24th. Barker and his assistant, George F. Ellis, will aid in watching the area.

It is still too early following the end of the regular hunting season, Barker said, to announce his report, which will be available in a few days. The latest report from the Magdalena station showed 1,528 hunters had checked out with 709 bucks.

ADAMS RULES ON BANK LOANS TUESDAY

SANTA FE—The law permitting banks to make loans on real estate up to seventy-five per cent of their savings deposits, providing they do not exceed thirty per cent of their total deposits, was held applicable to all banks in an opinion by Assistant Attorney General Quincy D. Adams, Tuesday.

"If the provision was to apply only to savings banks, it would have been very simple for the legislature to have said so," Adams wrote Woodlan P. Saunders, state bank examiner.

The law also limits similar loans by trust companies to seventy-five per cent of their "general deposits," a term interpreted by Adams as meaning the same as applied to banks in general, namely, deposits for which only a general liability exists.

ORPHAN HOME GROUP AT BAPTIST CHURCH

A group from the Orphan's Home at Portales will be at the Hagerman Baptist church on the first Sunday in December, at the 11:00 o'clock hour, and instead of a sermon that morning, they will give a program. ## North China Area Is Lost To Japan

Chinese officials at Peiping said they had agreed to the autonomy of North China because of fear of the Japanese army.

The five provinces making up the area were to receive financial and economic independence from the republic, although still acknowledging the nominal sovereignty of the national government.

From Tokyo came word that the new state is to operate under Japanese control, with Japanese commissions, both civil and military, "advising" the new government.

The Japanese news agency, Rengo, reported from Nanking that the five provinces of North China expected to declare their independence within the week.

The community with genuine regret gives up Mr. and Mrs. Price Curd and young son, Price Wilson, Jr. Mr. and Mrs. Curd left early Sunday morning for Virden, where Mr. Curd has accepted a position in the schools there, the transfer being made because of the promotion for Mr. Curd. This estimable couple will be greatly missed in both educational and church circles, always taking an active interest in both, and very willing to assume their share.

Roswell Seed Co., is publishing this week a fruit cake recipe for putting in tin cans. The manager, Walter Gill, says he knows it is the best fruit cake he ever ate, for he sampled some recently. Anyway, it is a very new way, and well worth trying. The cake comes out of the can moist and rich, and that is what is desired in fruit cake.

Mr. and Mrs. Velmer Fletcher of Roswell spent the week-end in Hagerman at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Goodwin and other relatives.

The D. D. club was entertained with a turkey dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Sweatt Monday evening. Miss Frances Welborne substituted for Mr. Welborne. Cliff Hearn won the cup.

30 PROJECTS IN 3 SE COUNTIES ARE UNDERWAY

Entire Relief Load May Be Absorbed Shortly; To Discontinue FERA By December 1; Close Canneries.

Thirty WPA projects are underway in Eddy, Chaves and Lea counties, Fred Brainard, district projects manager, announced this morning. All of the relief load in Eddy county has been absorbed and the load has been practically absorbed in the other counties. County roads and highway improvements will absorb the entire load within the next thirty to forty days. Officials will be permitted to take fifty percent of the laborers from men not on relief if necessary.

In commenting on the current opinion that relief labor cannot accomplish as much work as the same number of men in private employment, Mr. Brainard stated that all projects in the districts are ahead of schedule and he believes that the accomplishments of the district have set up a yard stick to measure similar projects by.

On December 1st, the old FERA will be liquidated and the state is setting up an organization to care for direct relief and organization plans are expected to be completed in time to take over the direct relief as soon as the FERA set-up is abandoned.

The chief problem connected with the operation of the WPA in this district, Mr. Brainard says, is due to the fact that there has been a sufficient number of projects set up to care for the employable men, but there has not been a project set up for the employable women.

Yesterday afternoon just before dusk, smoke was noticed coming from the roof of the cotton house at the Greenfield gin and immediately the roof seemed to burst into flames. Before help could arrive, the whole building was burning. Between thirty and forty bales of cotton were stored in this building.

With the exception of being minus a storage place for the unginned cotton, this will not prevent the gin from ginning as usual. They have ginned over two thousand bales this season.

Jones was instantly killed when a truck in which he was traveling with "Shorty" McWhorter and R. Riggs, all of Weed, overturned after the truck is said to have hit a soft shoulder on the highway. ## GOVERNOR REFUSES TO COMMENT ON SESSION

SANTA FE—Neither confirmation nor denial of reports of an impending special legislative session was made by Gov. Clyde Tingley Tuesday, the chief executive declaring press dispatches were "the first I've heard of it."

Carlsbad Paving Suit Is Filed

First of Series of Twenty Foreclosure Suits Filed Saturday.

The first of a series of nearly twenty foreclosure suits seeking the recovery of Carlsbad paving bond assessments was filed in district court at Carlsbad late Saturday evening for J. D. Ackerman, of Colorado Springs.

Involved in the first suit are fifty-eight individuals and five firms. Foreclosure of seventy-two pieces of property is asked, covering assessments totaling about $60,000.

The additional suits, to be filed during the next thirty days, will involve 1,006 pieces of property and probably as many individuals and firms, it was said. A total of $303,000 in assessments is involved in the entire issue.

Ackerman was paid $25,000 by Carlsbad recently, it was said. About $30,000 was paid into the clerk's office after a notice of the intention to file the suits was made several weeks ago.

Ackerman still holds $165,000 in bonds. Foreclosure is sought on the entire amount of money outstanding against all property, including that delinquent and that due in the future under the provisions of the contract stating that in case of delinquency all unpaid portions should become due and payable.

The paving bonds involved are each of $500 denomination of the issue of July 1, 1929. The complaint states that the plaintiff is given the right under the law to maintain an action because the city of Carlsbad, the governing body issuing such bonds and levying such assessments, has failed and or refused to cause the lots and parcels of land alleged to be delinquent to be foreclosed.

Delinquent interest at the rate of six percent from date due until paid is asked as well as reasonable attorney's fees.

The complaint asks that the property be foreclosed and ordered sold and proceeds be applied to the principal and interest assessments, interest at the rate of six percent per annum on all delinquent interest payments from date of delinquency, and attorney's fees.

The first suit filled 434 pages and indications were that more than 5,000 pages would be filled when suits are filed involving all of the 1,006 pieces of property.

SEEK FUNDS FOR SURVEY STATE RIVER

$50,000 Needed for Survey Project for Diversion of San Juan River to Rio Grande River and To Cost $8,000,000.

SANTA FE—Gov. Clyde Tingley announced yesterday that an organized effort will be made to obtain necessary funds for a survey of the proposed San Juan river and tributaries diversion project. The sum of $50,000 will be needed for the survey and Senators Carl A. Hatch and Dennis Chavez are making efforts to obtain the money from the United States Reclamation Bureau, the attempt will be made to get it before next spring.

"The Colorado river compact allotted seven and a half million acre feet of water to the upper mountain states, Wyoming, Colorado, Utah and New Mexico, and if New Mexico doesn't get its share, the states of California and Arizona will make use of the water with new projects and by the time New Mexico is ready to take its share of the water it will be unable to get it," the governor said.

Tentative estimates have placed the possible diversion at about 300,000 acre feet a year.

"This will not injure either Indian reservation lands or lands in San Juan county," the governor said, "and it will be a blessing to the farmers of the Rio Grande valley from the Colorado line to Mexico."

"It means bread and butter for the present and future generations of New Mexicans."

The governor said the project is likewise important from an employment standpoint since it has been estimated that it will cost at least $8,000,000.

The proposal is for the construction of a series of diversion canals from the east fork of the San Juan, the Rio Blanco and the Navajo rivers in Colorado to the headwaters of Willow Creek in northern New Mexico and to build one or more reservoirs north of the El Vado dam.

Another proposal is to construct the diversion canal from these rivers to Stinking Lake, west of El Vado.

The first plan would permit future power projects because of a drop of 400 feet from the proposed reservoir to El Vado dam.

The governor said it had been estimated there are 300,000 acre feet of unappropriated water yearly from San Juan tributaries. The state engineer's office this spring established seven gauging stations and a check on these will determine the accuracy of the figure.

HOSTILE VALLEY

By Ben Ames Williams

SYNOPSIS

Jim Saladine listens to the history of neighboring Hostile Valley, with gossip of the mysterious, enticing "Huldy," wife of Will Ferrin. Interested, he drives to the Valley for a day's fishing, though admitting to himself his chief desire is to see the reputedly glamorous Huldy. "Old Marm" Pierce and her nineteen-year-old granddaughter Jenny live in the Valley. Since little more than a child Jenny has at first admired and then deeply loved young Will Ferrin, neighboring farmer, older than she, and who regards her still as merely a child. Will takes employment in nearby Augusta. Jenny is disconsolate. Bart Carey, something of a "nerf-do-well," is attracted by Jenny, but the girl repulses him. Learning that Will is coming home, Jenny, exulting, sets his long-empty house "to rights," and has dinner ready for him. He comes—bringing his wife, Huldy. The girl's world collapses.

CHAPTER III—Continued

But when Jenny woke in the morning it was composedly. She was older; older even to her grandmother's accustomed eyes. But there was no longer any panic of repentance in her, nor any vehemence of outcry at the blow that had struck so shrewdly home. Her world might be broken at her feet; but her head still was high. She went calmly about the common daily tasks, which can so often by their familiar monotony bring comfort to a distracted mind; and she and Marm Pierce spoke not at all of Will that day or the next. When they did, at last, it was Marm Pierce who asked the question, Jenny who answered her.

"He's married, Granny," she said, in a tone of finality. "That's all there is to it, or ever can be. I didn't grow up soon enough for him, that's all."

"You'll have a main of men to pick and choose from, Jenny," Marm Pierce told her stoutly. "Any man with sense . . ."

Jenny smiled faintly. "Like Bart?" she suggested, amused. "Well, there'll be others," the older woman insisted. "Wait and see."

So they spoke no more of Will for a while thereafter; but a week after Will's homecoming, on a Sunday afternoon, the old car in which he had returned from Augusta came bounding in from the main road and stopped in the yard by the doorstep; and Huldy and then Will descended.

Marm Pierce and Jenny were in the kitchen, and the old woman would have protected Jenny from this encounter, but the girl went bravely to the door and opened it and stepped out upon the porch to greet them.

"Afternoon, Miss Ferrin," she said. "Hello, Will. It's neighborly of you to come over. Granny and me, we'd have come to see you, before now, but Granny can't walk so far."

Huldy smiled, a slow, deep smile, with slumber-lidded eyes. Will said: "We came to say much obliged to you, Jenny, for fixing up the house and all." He touched Huldy's arm, proudly. "Huldy's a housekeeper her own self; but she ain't found a speck of dust anywhere."

"Come in and set," old Marm Pierce invited briskly, and they did come in. Huldy moved indifferently to her surroundings; yet even Jenny was conscious that there was a powerful disturbance in the very air about this woman. She had not, the other night, seen Huldy clearly; she saw now that Will's wife was beyond question beautiful, as a flame is beautiful. Hair black as ink; and black eyes half-veiled yet bright and warm; and her cheek a fine brown from long acquaintance with the sun. Jenny would wonder at the other's beauty, and at the same time fear it and shrink from it with an instinctive alarm. Without knowing why, she wished to draw away from Huldy; and as though in proof of herself that she had no such desire, she spoke to the woman.

"Take off your coat," she said. "You and Will, you'll have to stay and visit; stay to supper."

Huldy smiled with faint amusement, yet obeyed; and Will sat down and talked in the old friendly fashion for a while; of his long absence, and his work in Augusta.

"I done well there," he said. "Saved good money. But I'm glad to be back, just the same."

He looked at Huldy proudly. "Huldy, here, she had so many beaux after her all the time, when I finally talked her into marrying me, I fetched her away from them quicker's I could. Dunno how I ever got her, but I aim to keep her now."

Marm Pierce made a noncommittal sound; and Jenny said politely: "I hope you'll like, here, Miss Ferrin!"

Huldy looked at her husband. "I'd like being anywhere with Will," she said in slow deep tones. "I like big men."

The two other women were uncomfortable; but Will was not. He beamed, and talked on, contentedly; but Huldy in the end would not stay to supper.

"I've got beans on the stove," she reminded Will. "We'd best get along." And as they said good-by, she explained to Jenny: "You can't blame me for going on home. I'm still a bride, and I'd like to have Will all to myself. I guess you know how that is!"

And led Will, like a captive, away.

When they were gone, Jenny was silent, hurt without knowing how she had been hurt, wounded without being able to put her finger on the wound; but Marm Pierce was not in the least mystified.

"She's a hussy!" she exclaimed. "Will's cut him off a bigger piece than he can chew. She'll make him dance a pretty tune."

Jenny whirled toward the older woman. "If she's not good to him, I'll kill her!" she cried.

So Marm Pierce perceived the girl's distress, and sought to ease her. "There, Jen," she said quickly. "Don't you mind! There's nothing to do for Will now. You go read the Book of Proverbs! You'll find a heap of wisdom there. Wormwood will be his dish, soon or late. Maybe if he'd read his Bible, he'd have knowed better than to marry her; but I dunno. Many a man's led a woman take him with her eyelids, like the Bible says. Pore Will!"

"I'll . . ." Jenny whispered. "No and you won't," the old woman interrupted stoutly. She shook her head. "Nought you can do but would make it worse for Will, and for you, too, Jen. Stay away from him, from the both of them. Let fire burn, Jen. It will come to ashes by and by."

And Jenny was hushed and silenced; and the wise old woman went to get the supper on.

Summer was upon them now, and during the months that followed, Jenny saw Will not at all. There was a stir of new activity in the Valley, which served in some degree as a distraction. In July, a man named Seth Humphreys, from Augusta, set up a steam mill not far below Marm Pierce's farm; and now and then some one of the men who worked there, with a minor cut or wound, came to ask Marm Pierce to heal his hurt for him. She had a salve with virtues which were famous, and she could minister to the lesser physical ailments which sometimes attacked them.

When one of these men appeared, Jenny stayed usually in the background; but they were a harmless lot, rough and strong and spending their days in hard physical toil, yet toward a woman gentle and shy. Sometimes she saw one or two of them slipping through the open land between the house and the woods toward the brook. A path from the mill cut through the woods direct to Carey's bridge.

"Going up to sample Bart Carey's rum," Marm Pierce guessed with a grim disapproval. "Jen, you keep away from them. Stay out of the woods, down that way. None of 'em to hurt you, less'n they was drunk; but I never did believe in putting ideas into a man's head. You stay away."

She had in fact some reasons for concern which she did not explain to Jen. People were apt to confide in this wise old woman, and she heard things Jenny did not hear. Amy Carey, Bart's sister, came one afternoon when Jenny had gone toward the brook, so that the old woman was alone; and Amy was troubled.

"The mill crew, they're around the house all the time," she explained. "And Bart, he's had a couple men staying there from Augusta, that let on they come to fish; but they don't bring home any trout. They go off down the brook every day, and come back at night, and no fish to fry. And they never come before."

Her eyes were uneasy. "It's that woman," she said. "I've heard 'em talk about her. They knowed her in Augusta; and Seth Humphreys, he did, too. One of 'em said the other night that's the only reason Seth come and put a mill in here; so's to be handy to her. He was hot after her, to hear their tell, before Will come along and married her."

Marm Pierce said assentingly: "I c'd see the kind she was, first time I laid eyes on her."

"Bart says she ain't more'n half decent to Will," Amy reported. "He says she's always taking a dig at him, and him too blind to see. Bart says he'd like to take a hoop-pole to her, the way she treats Will. Him and Will was always friendly."

The older woman nodded. "Will, he'll go along blind about so long and then he'll wake up," she predicted. "When he does, the fur's bound to fly. The Ferrins was always slow to get mad, but it ain't safe to face 'em when they get their dander up. Man or woman, it ain't wise to make too big a fool of Will."

"Bart says he acts like she was made of gold and cream," Amy confessed. "She's got Will walking tiptoe around the house." She was a moment silent, shivered faintly. "The men act funny, after they've seen her," she said. "It scares me, some . . ."

Marm Pierce nodded grimly. "I know," she agreed. "Talking loud, and bragging and blowing, and then a-whispering. But you're all right, Amy, with Bart there."

Amy turned homeward presently; but Jenny did not return for a further while. When she did appear, she gave no sign of what had happened; but she had learned, that afternoon, to understand Huldy through and through.

Leaving the house, she had set out at random toward the deep shade of the woods. She came to the brook below Will's farm, and stayed there by the stream a while, leaning against a tree, her hands behind her, her eyes shadowed, deep in long thoughts of him; and presently she crossed the footing where boulders gave a footing. Above her, a rocky precipice rose fifty or sixty feet abruptly from the head of the brook; but to one side there was a path she knew, where by a steep scramble she might come to the gentler slopes above. And it occurred to her that, going cautiously, she might have some far glimpse of Will, busy in his fields. The thought drew her irresistibly; she began to climb.

She meant not to speak to Will or show herself to him; yet to see him, even from far off, would be happiness.

The trail was steep and she was warm and panting. At the top of the rise, the path swung to the right, where broken ledges served like a flight of stairs, to debouch at last upon a smooth ledge like an epaulet on this shoulder of the hill. Below the ledge there was a straight fall for sixty feet or more; and the ledge looked out across the lower trees across the sweep of valley. Jenny knew the spot of old, and loved it, too.

But when she came there today, Huldy was before her. Jenny saw her in a confused impression of naked flesh golden from the sun. Huldy lay at length on a mossy bank at the head of the ledge, where low junipers served as a screen on the side toward the house; and she must have heard Jenny's panting approach, for as the girl appeared she half-covered herself with a garment caught up quickly. Yet did not rise, but still lay there, looking at Jenny with that smile the girl found so disquieting.

Jenny for a moment could not speak; she stared at Huldy, and stared all around, and Huldy said in amused derision: "There's nobody here only me!"

"Somebody might come along," Jenny protested, her cheek crimson with shame for the other woman. "You hadn't ought to lay there like that. They'll see you!"

Huldy's dark eyes widened. "What if they did?" she countered, smiling.

And Jenny found no answer that could be uttered calmly. Then Huldy spoke again. "I guess you're looking for Will," she said mockingly. "He's in the upper field."

Deep color stained Jenny's cheek and brow, and drained away and left her white and still. She shook her head. "No," she said, huskily. "No."

"You've trailed around after him plenty," Huldy insisted, in complacent scorn. "If you wanted him, why didn't you get him, Jenny?"

Jenny had no weapons adequate for this encounter; she could not hope—or wish—to meet the other woman on even terms. Yet there lay in her that long devotion to Will which was like a rock of strength upon which she could lean; and she found suddenly that she knew many things she had not guessed before.

"I'd not want what you want from a man," she said steadily. "Nor halt him the way you do."

Huldy's eyes narrowed in dry anger. "Nor you wouldn't get him, either," she retorted. "But if I did, I'd know how to keep him," Jenny countered. "And that's one thing you'll never know!"

And she turned on her heel, so swiftly that she left Huldy in a sort of frenzy of rage. Jenny, dropping down the trail to the brook again, heard the other's harsh, strangling objurgations hideous in the sunned beauty of the afternoon; till the sweet brook song filled her ears, drowning ugly sounds.

And from that day Jenny understood Huldy, completely; and without word from Marm Pierce, or from Amy, or from any other at all. Yet, she went no more to the brook, or up the scrambling trail. Between her and Will there was a barrier raised which she could never seek to pass or set aside; and she accepted this fact, and found a way to cloak her grief and sorrow.

Only her heart brooded over Will in an agony of longing to protect him from the hurt she knew must some day come.

After that day in June when he and Huldy returned to the little house in the Valley, Jenny did not see Will till October. Ordinarily, by the third week in October, the alders and the birch saplings are stripped; the oaks and beeches are losing their topmost leaves. But this year the first deep frost was followed by no rain nor wind to tear the bright leaves from their tenuous hold, till in the last week of October frost gripped the land again. It settled heavy in the Valley; and when the sun rose, the leaves were locked in an icy clasp, held in place by the very frost that was their destruction. Then as the sun climbed higher and the day warmed, the frost melted and at first by ones and twos and even by dozens and by scores, the leaves came down, falling silently, like a bright rain of color through the woods.

Jenny, at mid-morning, left the house and went past the barn toward the young second growth of birch and beech at the meadow-side, to watch this silent falling rain of bright leaves; and she was there, sitting on the stone wall, warm in the sun, when she saw a movement, in the deeper shadows of the black growth, some two hundred yards away. Saw a man running!

Her heart swelled with the quick perception that this was Will. He came at speed, his hands clenched and pounding at his sides, his head forward as though reaching out to fill his lungs with air; and she thought he came to seek her, and thus thinking she rose to her feet and stood waiting in a tender readiness to receive and comfort him.

But he emerged from the spruce wood, and without pause swung to the left and disappeared again.

She understood, after a moment, that he had gone toward the steam mill down the Valley; and he was in such a haste of passion that even from this distance she seemed to feel the fury in the man.

It would not be fear that drove him! Will would not thus run in fear. It must be anger, then; and swift conjecture lashed her with biting strokes, while she went slowly, like one dazed, across the open to the house, and into the kitchen there.

Marm Pierce, at her coming, looked up, and saw her countenance. "What's the matter, Jen?" she asked sharply. "What's wrong with you?"

"Will," the girl whispered. "He came running along the path, and went down toward the steam mill. Running, like he was awful mad."

Silence for a long moment, and Marm Pierce nodded in slow comprehension. "Well, it was bound to come," she said, half to herself. "Seth Humphreys."

"But Granny," Jenny cried. "I . . ."

Marm Pierce shook her head. "Nought to do, child," she said gently. "Nought but set and wait. Will's found out he's made a bad trade; but he's the only one can get him out of it."

And she came to the girl, and put her arm around Jenny's shoulder. "Rest you, Jen," she said. "It's the hard part a woman has, to stay quiet while her man's in danger; but there's no other way!"

Singing Sands

Recently a patch of sand has been discovered in the United States which emits a melodious whistling noise when anyone walks on it. In the entire country there are some seventy similar areas, but most of them make singing noises. America is not the only country where the earth has a voice. Travelers in the deserts of North Africa have been misled by a hideous mocking laugh. In Chile, there are sands that rumble, and a mountain that moans and groans, which the natives say is haunted. Nevada has a mountain that emits a distinct bell-like note, and certain portions of the Hawaiian beaches make barking sounds. Many plausible explanations have been put forward by scientists for these phenomena, but there is nothing that covers the riddle satisfactorily, especially as echoes are practically non-existent on sandy stretches.—Tit-Bits Magazine.

In Huddle on Budget

Washington.—About this time every fall, the President calls the director of the budget to the White House and they go into a huddle about the finances of the government, about the needs for money of the various governmental agencies who must pay their employees and the other expenses to which they are put and in addition they discuss general questions of policy. It is, as I said, an annual affair that presages a new tempo in the movement of activities in Washington because it occurs some weeks in advance of the reconvening of congress. Congress, under the Constitution, must appropriate the money which is spent by all branches of government.

Well, the annual huddle has just been held by President Roosevelt and Daniel W. Bell, acting director of the bureau of the budget, and Mr. Bell has gone back to his office in the treasury with instructions to begin formation of budget estimates for submission to congress.

Of course, budget making goes on throughout the year. The huge staff of experts and accountants who work under Mr. Bell's direction are busy the year round examining the proposed requirements of the various agencies and arriving at conclusions as to what their needs reasonably should be. The White House conference, therefore, represents the second step because those were the figures that formed the basis of the discussion between the President and his budget director.

In drafting the budget for submission to the next session of congress, the administration is confronted with a variety of problems, not the least of which is the political phase. It is to be remembered that the budget now under consideration covers money that will be appropriated for use after July 1, 1936, and the succeeding 12 month period. Therefore, half of the Presidential campaign next year, indeed, the heated part of that campaign, will take place after governmental agencies have begun to use the new appropriations. It is easy to see, therefore, that politics can hardly be kept out of the forthcoming budget in some form or other, even though every President says politics does not influence budget making. Nevertheless, New Deal spending and future taxation constitute questions which the President cannot overlook and which are vital to every man, woman and child in the nation.

It seems to be pretty well settled now that the Republicans are going to make spending and taxation the major ammunition against Mr. Roosevelt and his New Deal. In fact, it seems reasonably sure that the Republican slogan will be "Throw the Spendthrift Out." That being the case, Mr. Roosevelt obviously must have in the back of his head considerable concern over the current budget making.

Knowing "Danny" Bell as I have known him for nearly 20 years, during which time he has grown up in the treasury service, I think it ought to be said in his favor that politics is farthest from his thoughts.

I mentioned the issues of spending and taxation. The American Liberty League, which has consistently warned about the possibility of future heavy taxation has not been silent since the President some weeks ago made public a pre-budgetary summation. The league insists that while present tax rates soon will provide enough money to meet what the President terms as "ordinary" expenditures of the government, the rates are insufficient to meet the spending which Mr. Roosevelt calls extraordinary in that it covers relief. Further, the league, in a statement the other day, asserted its belief that the present tax level was high enough to meet "legitimate relief if present un sound spending policies are abandoned." But it is emphasized by the league that even "if un sound spending policies are abandoned," the present tax levels are insufficient to make possible any appreciable retirement of the gigantic debt that has been built up through the New Deal relief program.

So it is easy to see that a head-on collision between two schools of thought is inevitable. Mr. Roosevelt and his brain trusters have contended and will continue to contend that federal spending in the volume that has taken place was the only means by which the nation could be carried over this period of depression. On the other hand there will be the vicious attacks of Republican campaigners, the shots by such men as Lewis Douglas, former director of the bureau of the budget, who broke with Mr. Roosevelt over "reckless spending," and all of those groups of which the Liberty League is typical. These have plenty of campaign material, and you can make sure that they will use it.

My experience as an observer of politics and government prompts me to say that there is nothing that strikes the heart of the average taxpayer quite so fundamentally as displays of waste with the accompanying forecasts of greater taxation. Thus, if the New Deal opposition goes ahead on the course that appears to be charted for them—actually it is made to order for them—they can cause the administration many anxious moments. I say this, knowing full well that the administration has much argument on its side, and that it is equipped with the finest layout of machinery for influencing public opinion that any administration ever has had. It has at its command all the machinery used in crop production control, the thousands of persons on the federal pay roll and the millions who believe Mr. Roosevelt is earnestly seeking to make this a better country in which to live. It is, therefore, no small task for the New Deal opposition if it is to succeed even in turning the New Deal strength in the house of representatives to anything near an even distribution of seats.

Apparently, New Deal opposition will be concentrated as much in the congressional districts as against the President himself. The reasons are simple. First, the senate is going to remain Democratic whether Mr. Roosevelt is re-elected or defeated. Only one-third of the 96 senators come up for re-election next year, and the bulk of these are from normally Democratic states. Unless a cataclysm follows the Democratic party, the senate majority for the Democrats will continue to be ample.

Such is not the case in the house of representatives where the entire membership must seek election every two years. There are in the house membership possibly as many as 75 Democrats who can be called pure political accidents. That is, they were elected from districts which are normally Republican during the landslide that swept Mr. Roosevelt into office. A considerable number of these naturally will be retired by the voters just as a considerable number of Republicans were retired after they had held house seats in the early 1920's by virtue of election in the Harding landslide. Consequently, changes may be expected in the house New Deal strength. In concentrating the fight in congressional districts, the New Deal opposition is battling for position. If the New Deal majority in the house can be whittled down, it will then become impossible for the President to drive through his program of legislation as he has done in the last three sessions. From the Republican standpoint this would be important since it would place Mr. Roosevelt in much the same position that President Hoover found himself in the last half of his administration when he had an adverse congress on his hands. No political leader likes that situation.

When the New Deal opposition jumps onto the questions of spending and taxation, therefore, and when it goes back to the grass roots of congressional districts, it takes no stretch of the imagination to see that a real political fight lies ahead. Developments between now and the nominating conventions next June may change the general perspective.

While several of the federal courts, including the Supreme court of the United States, are considering questions revolving around President Roosevelt's program for development of Muscle Shoals in the Tennessee river as an electrical power project, government owned, a newly discovered letter written by President George Washington takes on unusual interest. It seems that even in 1791, there was argument about the development of Muscle Shoals. The letter, which was addressed to the attorney general of the United States at that time, called attention to the efforts being made by individuals to effect trades with Indians and suggested the necessity for federal laws which would afford some protection for the Indians in their dealings with the white men. It will be remembered, of course, that the Tennessee river valley in those days was populated by Indians, but the problem that existed then exists today, namely, protection of the rights of the individual.

Man Slays Wife by Gun; Court Imposes $10 Fine

Called upon to pronounce on the case of a man who killed his wife because he had discovered that she was unfaithful, an Assize court jury sitting at Lille has returned a thorough French verdict. It found him not guilty of murder, but guilty of carrying arms illegally.

Charles Simmoneau, an accountant, was the accused man. Suspecting his conjugal misfortune, he had engaged a detective to follow his wife's movements. Informed on day that she was in a certain hotel he waited near until she left and then followed and shot her. She died in three months. In court Simmoneau said that he deeply regretted his act, and also expressed his grief at not having been allowed to go to his wife's bedside to beg her forgiveness. Acquitted of the murder charge he was fined $10.

Thrice the Slaves in World as Century Ago

The world may be improving in some ways but in regards to human bondage it is growing steadily worse, according to figures gathered by Lady Simon, wife of Britain's foreign minister. There are three times as many slaves in the world today she says, as there was 100 years ago (not counting those in the United States).

Slave trading is carried on openly in most of the larger cities of Arabia and a slave market adjoins the Great Mosque of Mecca. Oddly enough, Liberia, which at one time was a refuge for escaped and liberated slaves of the United States, has nearly 800,000 slaves numbered among its 2,500,000 population. Slavery still exists in many parts of Ethiopia, many parts of China and northern Africa.

OSTRICH BOA

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Reports come from Paris that Lucien Lelong and other leading couturiers are sponsoring the feather boa, not only in renaissance colors but also in white and black. In the picture a long boa of dyed ostrich is flung nonchalantly across the shoulders. A large ostrich fan is carried to complete this very formal costume. The white, heavy satin gown with its extremely deep front and back decolletage is beautifully complemented with the rich renaissance-red feathers of the boa and the fan.

BUSTLE IS TRYING TO STAGE COMEBACK

We've seen timid attempts, in the last few years, to revive the bustle of grandmother's day. But this season there is no doubt about it—the bustle has arrived.

It's all in line with the new trend to back fullness in the swish evening gowns.

Sometimes the bustle takes the form of a looped back drape, with a trailing panel.

Sometimes it is a peplum-like bit of shirring.

Sometimes it's part of a sash that ties in back, or a flange stitched from the center seam.

But a bustle it is, and there's no argument about it.

The new idea of back fullness has given the designers a lot of new ideas in silhouette.

Usually the front of the evening gown is slim, straight and fitted with the fullness concentrated at the back, where the gown flares forth in surprising fashion.

Shops in Paris Display Expertly Tailored Undies

Paris shops are showing expertly tailored underwear in a wide range of styles. Crepe de chine and satin creations are trimmed with delicate embroidery, which is considered much smarter and more practical than lace. Taffeta skirts with a design of ruching around the hem are worn as petticoats under evening gowns. The skirt of the evening gown hangs far more gracefully over the stiff taffeta, which is not at all unattractive if it happens to swirl out during a dance.

ETHEL W. MCKINSTRY Managing Editor

Apparently the other afternoon, not so many miles from here, a young man suddenly went violently insane, and all because of a thwarted desire. He wanted to do something and "get away" with it, and when he saw his fond hopes being blasted he just went "bloody" and committed a heinous crime, and in the wake of his atrocity, lay three people, one a little sick boy.

Maybe he was insane, we're not denying that. Seems as if any one under like circumstances would be insane, but should society forever be punished with such characters? We believe if more drastic measures of punishment were meted out to a few of these "would-be crazy" individuals, that it might influence others in the future to practice a little more of self-control, in other words "not go crazy." Every known alibi is used to give reason for committing crimes, but seems the most popular modern one is insanity, usually it has its appeal too, for the majority of sentiment is in sympathy with one who does not have control of his mental faculties, but the idea has been over-worked, until it has become a "racket."

The reason for this particular case, possibly may be one of the mysteries of life, whether it was in the method of rearing, or the environment of outside associations, but whatever it was, it has resulted in tragedy and it is time that something is done, to show others that may feel so inclined, that it is best, to keep control of mental faculties, and not go wandering off into unknown paths, thus committing injury or death to their fellow man. If the cure be severe, possibly the better.

The Modern Wedding Write-Up Heretofore the brides have rather monopolized the wedding write-ups with a detailed description of their wedding paraphernalia; however, since men and women have been placed on the same plane, socially and otherwise, the groom may get a prominent mention in the future. And here is a sample of what future write-ups may be like:

"As Mr. McWhistle approached the altar, he was the cynosure of all eyes, blushing slightly as he replied to the clergyman's questions in steady and firm tones. He was handsomely garbed in a three-piece suit, consisting of coat, vest and pants. The coat, of fine dark material, was tastefully draped about the shoulders and gathered under the arms. The collar was turned back and lapels laid back against the chest. The sleeves were long. Black buttons adorned the front and the coat tails swept gracefully backward.

"A pretty story, circulated among the guests, was to the effect that the same coat was worn by the bridegroom's father and grandfather at their weddings. Mr. McWhistle did not deny the sentimental touch.

"The vest was sleeveless and cut low at the neck. It met at the front, where it was fastened with buttons. The pants were of dark worsted and cut rather full, in the prevailing trend. They were suspended from the waist, falling in a straight line almost to the floor. Each leg was of equal measurement but the severe simplicity of the garment was relieved by one pant-leg being caught on the top of the shoe, daintily revealing the ankle. This artistic touch called attention to the shoes of genuine black leather, laced with strings of the same color.

"The bridegroom also wore a shirt of spotless white and his neck was encircled by a collar, pure white, around which a cravat was loosely knotted and rode under his left ear with that studied carelessness which makes for supreme artistry in dress."

After a paragraph on the ushers, the story closed with the lines: "As the bride was led from the altar, it was noticed that she wore the conventional white satin frock with veil and orange blossoms."

Mother: "Now, Willie, I want you to go in and get acquainted with the new nurse and kiss her nice."

Willie: "Yes! And get my face slapped like papa did!"

"I see you're letting your little boy drive your car."

"Yes, he's still too young to be trusted as a pedestrian."

Special Session of New Mexico Legislature Likely After Jan. 1st

From reliable sources, it was announced at Santa Fe Monday, a special session of the state legislature would likely be convened shortly after the first of the year.

The call will be three-fold at least. First, there is the matter of relief—to find new money, or divert present revenue, to bridge the gap between federal participation and the state carrying the load. Second, there is the old age pension, social security, legislation which, though on the statute books now, is doubtful of execution. Third, is the matter of paying $165,000 advanced by the federal government for the Conchas dam right-of-way.

Present funds for relief are inadequate. Figures are not available, but at best the money expected, if all received, would be only a part of the sums needed, and only a part of the total heretofore available by way of federal grant. The state money, if all received from expected sources, amounts to only about $6.00 a month, it has been figured, as compared to some $40 of federal funds.

One of the principal reasons is that the franchise tax has not produced as predicted. No one would fix a reason for this—whether because estimates were too high, or corporation withdrawing from the state, or because stock was being reduced. The original estimate of revenue from this source was a quarter of a million dollars—but the revenue has fallen far short of this estimate. Another quarter of a million has been diverted from liquor revenues and this money, naturally, is all available.

Chapter 86 of the 1935 session laws is not clear enough to handle the social security program and its inadequacy must be remedied if federal money is to come for this purpose, it was agreed.

Although there has been some talk of impeachment proceedings, it is very doubtful if such would be included in the call of the governor for a special session. Of course, in this, as well as the other issues, there always is a possibility—but those "in the know" say the chance is very, very remote.

This special session possibility raises some fine points too along strictly legislative lines. No less than seven solons (four in the senate and three in the house) may have some obstacles ahead of them they have not considered heretofore. It is the matter of their having other employment.

New Mexico's constitution does not provide for resignation of members of the legislature. They may die, or be impeached and thrown out—but they have to serve as long as they are elected and there is no valid reason shown against them. So it would appear several legislators would have to quit their state employment to sit in a special session.

Reports of American cotton show a gain of 119,000 running bales in October, 1935, over the same month in 1934, with the outlook that exports should be somewhat greater for this season than last, according to an announcement of the AAA just received by R. R. Will, of the New Mexico State College.

The seasonal exports tabulated a gain of 62,000 bales, indicating that August and September exports were running behind the same two months of last year. Exports in October, 1934, were 592,000 bales; in 1935, 711,000 bales.

W. B. Camp, assistant director, division of cotton, states: "This increase in exports is due in some degree to the change in the U. S. cotton loan policy which has made a larger percentage of American cotton available to world trade. On November 1, but 33,193 bales had gone into the ten-cent loan. The change in loan policy also has brought the price of American cotton more nearly in line with the prices of all foreign cotton. Another factor entering into the increase of exports of American cotton was the depletion last year of the foreign supply of American cotton; more was consumed from stocks than was purchased.

Market prices of these cattle, says the bureau, are likely to decline seasonally during late winter and spring and to average lower than in the corresponding period of 1935. Prices of the lower grades are expected to advance seasonally during this period.

The sharp advance in cattle prices this year was due mainly to short supply of hogs and high prices of hog products, it is stated. The hog situation is expected to continue to be a strengthening factor to cattle prices during most of 1936.

The Hog Outlook The downward trend in hog production ended last spring. Production is now increasing and this will be reflected in increased slaughter supplies next summer, according to the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in its annual outlook report.

Slaughter supplies are expected to decrease between now and next April as compared with the corresponding period a year earlier but to increase thereafter to the end of the season in September. Heavier weights, however, are expected to offset somewhat the decreased slaughter.

Whiskey is very commonly regarded as a pick-me-up. Yet the scientific evidence nearly all shows it to be a knock-me-down. The effect of small quantities is uncertain. Some scientists claim that at first and for a short time small doses act as a tonic; others claim that small doses have no effect on the circulation. The probable explanation of this disagreement is that alcohol injected directly into the blood or passed by a stomach tube into the stomach never stimulates the heart, but that when it is sipped in small quantities and not much diluted there is a temporary stimulation due to its action on the lining of the mouth and throat.

All experiments agree that in amounts of 30 c. c. (two tablespoons of alcohol or four of whiskey) or more alcohol depresses the heart and lowers the blood pressure. Now when people faint or suffer from shock after an accident it shows that their blood pressure is too low. If they are given four tablespoons or more of whiskey their blood pressure will go lower. This is not pick-me-up but knock-me-down.

So it is really rather remarkable that people still give alcohol as a remedy for faintness or shock. Probably it is because alcohol is a sedative: it blunts anxiety and befoodies our fear. Now anxiety itself will cause a fall of blood pressure and faintness and in such cases alcohol may make a person feel better even if it does them no great physical good. Snake venom causes a fall in blood pressure and for that reason whiskey is a dangerous remedy for snake bite. But it may give the person who has been bitten a little Dutch courage.

To sum up: a small dose of whiskey taken strong by mouth probably is a temporary pick-me-up, larger doses to a frightened person may be both a pick-me-up and a knock-me-down, large doses to a person who is not frightened are after the first few minutes nothing but a knock-me-down.

Number of Cattle On Range Is Same

The number of cattle on farms and ranches at the beginning of 1935 will be about unchanged from 1935 but the trend thereafter is likely to be upward, says the Bureau of Agricultural Economics in its annual outlook report. By 1939 a larger increase is in prospect, fewer cattle and calves will be slaughtered next year, but the supply will be of better quality and of heavier weight since a larger proportion of the slaughter will be of grain-fed cattle.

Most of the increase during the next few years, it is stated, will be in states west of the Mississippi river where cattle were reduced sharply by the 1934 drought and government cattle buying programs. No material change in production is in prospect in other areas unless hay and pasture production should greatly expand.

More cows and heifers and fewer steers were slaughtered during the first nine months of this year than in seventeen years of government records, says the bureau. Slaughter of cows is expected to continue large the remainder of this year to be reduced thereafter.

The bureau is informed there will be a material increase in cattle feeding this fall and in the corn belt and other areas where many cattle are finished for market. There is a widespread tendency to turn to cattle feeding to utilize available feed, it is stated. But with prices of feeder cattle and corn relatively high, the cost of finished cattle next winter and spring will be the highest since the winter of 1930-31.

Market prices of these cattle, says the bureau, are likely to decline seasonally during late winter and spring and to average lower than in the corresponding period of 1935. Prices of the lower grades are expected to advance seasonally during this period.

The sharp advance in cattle prices this year was due mainly to short supply of hogs and high prices of hog products, it is stated. The hog situation is expected to continue to be a strengthening factor to cattle prices during most of 1936.

New Mex. Cotton Grade and Staple Is Still Improving

Cotton classed this week from the irrigated states shows an increase in the proportion of good middling and strict middling in New Mexico, and a noticeable increase in the proportion of good middling in California. A slight decrease in these grades is reported in Arizona and Texas, District 1. Preparation has improved steadily and very little spotted cotton is reported to date.

The proportion of cotton classed as 1-1/16 inches and longer increased in Texas, District 1, and New Mexico, whereas Arizona and California show a slight decrease. With the exception of Arizona, the proportion classed as 1-1/8 inches and longer remained about the same as the previous week.

NEW MEXICO: Cotton from this state shows an improvement in grade over that of last week, 35 percent having been classed as good middling and 95 percent as strict middling and above.

The proportion of cotton classed as 1-1/16 inches and longer increased from 96 to 98 percent this week and that classed as 1-1/8 inches and longer increased from 13 to almost 18 percent. Ninety-five percent has been classed as 1-1/16 inches and longer for the season to date.

The AAA Program Is Now Before Court

WASHINGTON — Exhaustive arguments seeking to uphold the New Deal's farm program as a constitutional exercise of financial and general welfare powers were placed before the supreme court Monday by administration lawyers.

Attorney General Cummings headed the battery of attorneys aggressively defending AAA processing taxes in the Hoosac Mills case, which will be argued orally December 9th.

The AAA brief asserted that efforts by individual states to solve the farm problem had failed, but that expectations of general benefit to the nation through the AAA "have been verified by subsequent results."

In addition the court: Heard administration lawyers cite the "general welfare" clause of the constitution in support of validity of a section of the Home Owners Loan act which gives state building and loan associations the right to apply for federal charters. New Dealers plan also to use this relatively uninterpreted constitutional section in behalf of AAA processing taxes.

Consented to hear arguments December 19th on a case involving constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority law. Advancing this case ahead of schedule at the government's request set three New Deal cases for argument before Christmas—AAA taxes, Bankhead cotton (a case from Texas), and TVA.

Gave the government until today to answer the suits of eight southern rice millers seeking to enjoin the collection of September processing taxes.

Glencoe Rancher Commits Suicide

D. N. "Nelson" Bonnell, 56, a pioneer resident of Lincoln county and rancher and farmer for approximately thirty years near Glencoe, died Saturday morning at 9:00 a. m., from a pistol wound in the head, alleged to have been self-inflicted, according to a coroner's verdict given at the scene.

No explanation of the act was given, it was revealed, no word having been left by Bonnell, with the possible explanation having been given as despondency over financial matters, by those near the family.

It was said his family was under the impression he was on his way to Roswell when he left his home in his automobile, but he drove only a hundred yards up a dry canyon and his body was found there with a pistol beside him.

Nelson Bonnell, brother of J. B. "Bert" Bonnell of Glencoe, and the Bonnell Ranch, was born at White Oaks, New Mexico, in Lincoln county in 1879, and lived there for a number of years prior to his father's death. Following his father's death his mother and the family moved for a time to Kansas but the brothers, Bert and Nelson, came back to that section while young men.

He had been a rancher and farmer in that section for many years and married Miss Agnes Coe, daughter of Frank B. Coe, prominently connected with the Lincoln County War, and from that union nine children were born.

Chaves District Court Opens At Roswell Monday

The fall term of the Chaves county district court started in Roswell Monday. Judge J. B. McGhee will preside over the court session with exception of November 26th when Judge Harry L. Patton of Clovis will go to Roswell to preside at a civil jury case: Samuel J. Reid versus S. E. Caint. He will also hear a number of non-jury cases. Other non-jury cases will be heard by Judge McGhee until December 3rd.

In three cases changes of pleas from not guilty to guilty were filed and Bob Whittle, (colored), was given a hearing and entered a plea of not guilty to a charge of selling intoxicating liquor to minors, with his case set for sometime during the present term of court.

Whittle was arrested last Saturday night and charges of operating a liquor store without license was filed against him before Dan C. Savage, U. S. Commissioner at Roswell, and he was released on a $1,000 bond.

A. L. Hamner was freed from a charge of assault with deadly weapon as the first case Monday morning, and Zepharino Garcia, held on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon was found guilty in the only other case appearing as a jury case.

Mortie Cobble entered a plea of guilty to a charge of grand larceny and Richard E. Sinclair also changed his plea to guilty on a charge of embezzlement. Charles Evans, charged with operating a game of chance, changed his plea from not guilty to guilty to end the day's proceedings.

The civil suit of E. M. Stephens versus Walter Denison, et al., set for yesterday morning, concluded the petit jury trials of the November term of district court of Chaves county for this week.

A verdict of guilty was given by the jury in the case of the state versus C. C. Brummel, charged with driving while intoxicated and a guilty verdict was also brought against Bob Whittle, charged with selling liquor to minors.

Martin Chaves changed his plea to guilty Tuesday afternoon on an amended information filed by the district attorney and his sentence was pronounced by Judges James B. McGhee for eight months in the penitentiary and costs of court.

Of the cases set for this term, numbering eight criminal cases, one acquittal was given by the jury, three verdicts of guilty and four pleas of guilty to charges were made.

Health Column

Conducted by Dr. J. R. Earp, Director, New Mexico Bureau of Public Health.

A Knock-me-down Whiskey is very commonly regarded as a pick-me-up. Yet the scientific evidence nearly all shows it to be a knock-me-down. The effect of small quantities is uncertain. Some scientists claim that at first and for a short time small doses act as a tonic; others claim that small doses have no effect on the circulation. The probable explanation of this disagreement is that alcohol injected directly into the blood or passed by a stomach tube into the stomach never stimulates the heart, but that when it is sipped in small quantities and not much diluted there is a temporary stimulation due to its action on the lining of the mouth and throat.

All experiments agree that in amounts of 30 c. c. (two tablespoons of alcohol or four of whiskey) or more alcohol depresses the heart and lowers the blood pressure. Now when people faint or suffer from shock after an accident it shows that their blood pressure is too low. If they are given four tablespoons or more of whiskey their blood pressure will go lower. This is not pick-me-up but knock-me-down.

So it is really rather remarkable that people still give alcohol as a remedy for faintness or shock. Probably it is because alcohol is a sedative: it blunts anxiety and befoodies our fear. Now anxiety itself will cause a fall of blood pressure and faintness and in such cases alcohol may make a person feel better even if it does them no great physical good. Snake venom causes a fall in blood pressure and for that reason whiskey is a dangerous remedy for snake bite. But it may give the person who has been bitten a little Dutch courage.

To sum up: a small dose of whiskey taken strong by mouth probably is a temporary pick-me-up, larger doses to a frightened person may be both a pick-me-up and a knock-me-down, large doses to a person who is not frightened are after the first few minutes nothing but a knock-me-down.

Lesson for November 24

THE MESSAGE OF HAGGAI AND ZECHARIAH

LESSON TEXT—Haggai 1:2-8; 2:1, 9; Zechariah 4:6-10. GOLDEN TEXT—I was glad when they said unto me, Let us go into the house of the Lord. Psalm 122:1. PRIMARY TOPIC—A New House of Worship. JUNIOR TOPIC—Building a House of Worship. INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Why We Build Churches. YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Building Adequate Churches.

After the returned captives had settled down in the towns surrounding Jerusalem, the people were called together for the purpose of establishing the worship of the Lord God. This movement was led by Joshua the priest and Zerubbabel the governor. In view of the fact that the clearing away of the debris of the old city and temple and the erection of the new temple would take a long time, an altar was erected where sacrifices might be offered at once to God.

I. The Laying of the Foundation of the New Temple (Ezra 3:8-13). This was an auspicious occasion and was impressively celebrated.

1. The priests in their official apparel (v. 10). These garments symbolized their consecration to the Lord's service.

2. The priests with trumpets (v. 10). Trumpets were used in calling the people together.

3. The Levites with cymbals (v. 10). This was according to the arrangements made by David (1 Chron. 15:16-21).

4. They sang together by course (v. 11). This means that they sang to one another responsively. The one company sang, "The Lord is good." The other responded, "For his mercy endureth forever."

5. Mingled weeping and singing (v. 12, 13). Some of the older men who had seen the magnificent temple of Solomon wept when they saw how far short the present foundation came of the former temple. Others were glad because of the favor of God which had brought them back and that an encouraging beginning had been made in the new house of worship.

II. The Building of the Temple Hindered (Ezra 4).

The leading adversaries were the Samaritans, a mongrel people, the offspring of the poor Jews who were left in Palestine and the foreign people who were sent into Palestine after the Jews were taken captive. The three perils which delayed the building of the temple for about fourteen years reveal the persistent methods which the enemies of God use to hinder the building program of God's people in every age.

1. An unintelligent pessimism (3:12). Because things were not as promising as they should be, some were not disposed to go forward with a constructive program and even hindered those who possessed a hopeful outlook. Under the circumstances, a glorious beginning had been made which had promise of great things in the future.

2. Worldly compromise (4:2, 3). The adversaries said, "Let us build with you: for we seek your God." This is Satan's most common and effective method. The help of the unregenerate in forwarding the Lord's work should not be accepted by the Lord's people.

3. Open opposition by the world (4:4-24). When refused a part in the work, open and violent opposition was resorted to. Intimidation and political scheming were used to divert the building plan of God's people.

III. Assurance of the Completion of the Second Temple (Zech. 4:6-10). By means of the golden candlestick is represented the restoration of the Jewish nation and the fulfillment of its divine purpose. It was to be a light in the world. There were insuperable difficulties in the way of accomplishing their restoration, represented by the great mountain, but assurance was given that God by his Holy Spirit could easily accomplish their restoration. The mountain would be displaced by a plain. The two olive trees represent Zerubbabel and Joshua. The Holy Spirit was to accomplish this work through them.

IV. The Temple Finished (Ezra 6:13-15).

Through the ministry of the prophets, Haggai and Zechariah (Ezra 5:1; Hag. 1, 2), the people were encouraged to resume the work of the building of the temple. When the temple was finished, they solemnly dedicated it to God (Ezra 6:16-22).

V. The Blessedness of Dwelling in God's House (Ps. 84:1-4).

1. The longing of the soul for God's house (v. 1, 2). It is most refreshing when people have a longing desire to meet God in his house.

2. The sparrow and swallow find protection in the sacred precincts of God's house (v. 3).

3. At home in God's house (v. 4). Those who have a heart for God find their chief delight in dwelling in his house.

BEDTIME STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

THE THREE WATCHERS

WHEN Paddy the Beaver slapped the water with his broad tail, making a noise like a pistol shot, Lightfoot the Deer understood that this was meant as a warning of danger. He was on his feet instantly with eyes, ears and nose seeking the cause of Paddy's warning. After a moment or two Lightfoot stole softly up to the top of a little ridge some distance back from Paddy's pond, but from the top of which he could see the whole of the pond. There he hid among some close-growing young hemlock trees. It wasn't long before he saw a hunter with a terrible gun come down to the shore of the pond.

Paddy Watched the Hunter.

Of course, there would have been something very wrong with his ears had he failed to hear it. "Confound that beaver," muttered the hunter crossly. "If there was a deer anywhere around this pond he probably is on his way now. I'll have a look around and see if there are any signs."

So the hunter kept on to the edge of Paddy's pond and then began to walk around it, studying the ground as he walked. Presently he found the footprints of Lightfoot in the mud where Lightfoot had gone down to the pond to drink. "I thought as much," muttered the hunter. "Those tracks were made last night. That deer probably was lying down somewhere near here, and I might have got a shot but for that pesky beaver. I'll just look the land over and then I think I'll wait here a while. If that deer isn't too badly scared he may come back."

So the hunter went all around the pond, looking into all likely hiding places. He found where Lightfoot had been lying, and he knew that in all probability Lightfoot had been there when Paddy gave the danger signal. "It's no use for me to try to follow him," thought the hunter. "It is too dry for me to track him. He may not be so badly scared after all. I'll just find a good place and wait."

So the hunter found an old log behind some small hemlock trees and there sat down. He could see all around Paddy's pond. He sat perfectly still. He was a clever hunter, and he knew that so long as he did not move he was not likely to be noticed by any sharp eyes that might come that way. What he didn't know was that Lightfoot had been watching him all the time, and was even then standing where he could see him. And another thing he didn't know was that Paddy the Beaver had come out of his house and, swimming under water, had reached a hiding place on the opposite shore, from which he too had seen the hunter sit down on the log.

So the hunter watched for Lightfoot and Lightfoot and Paddy watched the hunter.

Through A WOMAN'S EYES

by JEAN NEWTON

ONE PATH TO CHARM THAT IS EASY TO ACHIEVE

I HAVE been reading an article about how dancing improves posture and carriage.

It is advised that we start in early childhood the training that brings about good posture and a graceful carriage. We are told of the rhythms which many schools are now teaching in the kindergarten, how proper breathing helps, the importance of good physical condition and always that paramount matter of example—letting the children see good posture and graceful walking so that they will imitate it.

As I read this it came to me that not enough has been said about the carriage of our women. We hear a good deal about our bad voices, how unfavorably they compare with the voices of women of other countries, how important is a good speaking voice in a woman. But of a woman's walk, which is no less important than her voice in the impression she creates, in any hope she may cherish for that elusive quality of charm—it seems that far too little notice is taken, or expressed.

If we observe the walk of the average woman from the viewpoint of grace and charm, we must be struck with horror; so few women except those who are in some way athletic walk in a way which is satisfying to the eye. So few women have that stride from the hip that means freedom and poise in walking; so few have animation in their walk, so few, so very few, have rhythm.

No woman can have poise with a mincing little hop of a walk. No woman can have charm who waddles from side to side, no woman can have beauty who seems to be dragging one foot after another.

QUESTION BOX

by ED WYNN, The Perfect Fool

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I go with a crowd of boys and girls and once a week we meet and those who can sing do so, while others just tell jokes and stories. I tell jokes. There is one girl in the crowd who doesn't like me and every time I tell a joke she always says: "That joke is 40 years old." How can I cure her?

Truly yours, JOE KING.

Answer: The next time you tell a joke and she says: "That joke is 40 years old," you say to her: "And you remember it all this time?" That'll cure her.

Dear Mr. Wynn:

A friend of mine was invited to a party at a young lady's apartment, and he went. During the evening he told the young lady, quite frankly, that he did not like her apartment. The young lady had my friend arrested and he was charged with assault. How did the judge figure out an assault charge?

Yours truly, Y. SHOODHE.

Answer: The judge probably figured as long as your friend had said nasty things about the young lady's apartment he was guilty of "knocking her flat."

Dear Mr. Wynn:

I am forty-four years of age and a single woman. Met a man last night who asked to call on me. He is coming to see me next Saturday. I have never had a man call on me before. In case he wants to kiss me shall I call for help? Sincerely, MAY DIN.

Answer: By no means call for help. If you are forty-four years old and have never been married, and a man tries to kiss you, don't call for help. Call for witnesses. © Associated Newspapers.—WNU Service.

THINGS THAT ARE NEW

WE ALWAYS enjoy hearing or reading of something new in the art of entertaining, especially if it is food. Everybody likes to eat, and the better the food is the better we like it. The following are a few good suggestions which may be used when preparing a menu:

Jiffy Frosting.

Take one cupful of sugar, three tablespoons of water, one tablespoonful of dark corn syrup, one egg white unbeaten and one teaspoonful of flavoring. Place all the ingredients in a double boiler over rapidly boiling water. Beat for eight minutes, then add the flavoring. Remove and beat more, then spread on the cake.

Oriental Peach Stones.

Place large, perfect halves of peach in cup-shaped lettuce leaves. Fill the cavities with chopped dates, pecan meats, one-fourth of a cupful of preserved ginger, all finely chopped and mixed. Add the ginger syrup to moisten, make into balls and arrange in the peaches. Serve with mayonnaise dressing.

Porters Who Shoulder Burden of Half a Ton

To become a porter in the Central Markets of Paris one must pass drastic weight-carrying tests. One such is to walk the whole length of the market carrying at least 400 pounds on the back. Would-be porters must show also that they are capable of carrying, for a shorter distance, half an ox, weighing about 500 pounds. The knack of balancing various kinds of burdens has to be painstakingly acquired. Several of the star porters can carry 600 pounds—more than a quarter of a ton. Standing still, some of them can hold across their shoulders a burden of half a ton.—Pearson's Weekly.

Unions State and City Elections Give Cheer to Both Parties—Greece Votes for Restoration of King George II.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
Western Newspaper Union.

REPUBLICANS shouted loudly that the victory of their party in the New York state election was a terrific blow to the New Deal and a repudiation of President Roosevelt. The Democrats declared it was no such thing. James A. Farley, who is both national and state chairman of the Democrats, gave them their cue when he declared recapture of control of the legislature by the R. O. P. was "normal" and that the Democratic vote for assembly candidates taken as a whole exceeded the Republican vote by more than half a million, which was something of an exaggeration.

The Republicans gained nine additional seats in the assembly, giving them 52 to 68 held by the Democrats. Only two senate seats were gained in the contest, both to fill vacancies. One of them went to a Republican and the other to a Democrat, leaving the setup of the upper legislative body unchanged.

In 45 cities of the state, the Republicans elected 33 mayors, including Roland B. Marvin of Syracuse, possible nominee for governor next year. The President saw Hyde Park Republican and Farley failed to hold his own district in Rockland county.

The Democratic organization in New York came through strongly and menaces the prospect of a reelection for Mayor LaGuardia, observers hold. The Fusion forces, which turned Tammany out two years ago, crumbled.

In Philadelphia S. Davis Wilson, Republican, was elected mayor but the vote was close enough for the Democrats to call it a virtual victory for the New Deal. Cleveland, Columbus and 23 out of 42 other cities and towns in Ohio chose Republican mayors, and so did a number of municipalities in Massachusetts. Socialists of Bridgeport, Conn., elected Jasper McLevy mayor, and Democratic mayors were returned in Hartford and New Haven. Republicans gained control of the New Jersey legislature, but Hudson county, including Jersey City, went Democratic by a record vote.

Results in the spectacular election in Kentucky gave the New Dealers a real reason for rejoicing. A. B. Chandler, known as "Happy," the Democratic candidate for governor who had the support of the national administration, handily defeated Judge King Swope, the Republican nominee. This despite the fact that Democratic Governor Leflon had declared himself against Chandler and threw his support to Swope. The referendum on repeal of the state prohibition amendment gave the repealists a good majority.

In Virginia and Mississippi all the Democratic nominees were elected, which was to be expected.

"It's more glorious than I'd imagined. The expression of popular will to favor restoration was foreseen, but results exceeded all expectations."

The cabinet met to swear a new oath of allegiance to the exiled monarch. All armed forces were called to take a similar oath.

A delegation sailed aboard a Greek warship to present the official request for King George to return. Officials said they expected King George, who was in London, to come back within two weeks.

MACKENZIE KING, the new prime minister of Canada, was in Washington negotiating with President Roosevelt a reciprocal trade agreement between the United States and the Dominion. Completion of such a treaty was one of the planks of King's recent election platform.

Canada buys more from the United States than any other country, and America, in turn, is Canada's best customer. Last year America exported goods worth $302,000,000 to Canada and imported goods worth $231,000,000. These totals compare with 1929 totals of $348,000,000 and $503,000,000 respectively.

WHILE the invading Italians were pushing further and further into his realm, Emperor Haile Selassie I of Ethiopia celebrated the fifth anniversary of his coronation, and he did it in fine style, too. Escorted by a throng of feudal chiefs in barbaric attire, the king of kings and his queen passed through the streets of Addis Ababa amid wildly cheering thousands, and gave thanks to God in St. George's cathedral. Afterward, seated on his ivory and teakwood throne in the palace, he received the felicitations of the chieftains and the diplomatic corps.

The emperor holds that the big oil concession negotiated for American interests by F. M. Rickett, the English promoter, still holds good although the Americans relinquished it at the suggestion of Secretary Hull. "This concession," said Haile, "is an integral part of our national economic program. We purposely granted it to a neutral country like the United States in order to avoid political complications and international jealousies. It is unfortunate that war must delay its fulfillment. Through the benefits accruing to this concession we hope to raise the social level of people and provide them with honorable remunerative employment."

"I am sure that when our country is again at peace, and the circumstances are propitious, all the terms of the enterprise will be carried out by the original concessionaires, who never canceled the concession, but merely withdrew temporarily at the suggestion of the State department for the worthy motive of promoting international peace."

THE League of Nations set November 18 as the day on which the economic sanctions against Italy should be put into effect, and later decided that coal, iron and oil should be included in the embargo. The league appointed Premier Laval of France and Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign minister, to carry on peace negotiations with Italy. Sir Samuel still insisted any peace must be within the framework of the League.

The Italian armies on the northern front pushed further into Ethiopia, following the tanks and with bombing planes active overhead, and one column entered the city of Hauser on the way to Makale. The invaders met with no resistance of consequence. The government at Addis Ababa announced that Italian planes had killed 30 women, 15 children and 100 cows with bombs and machine gun fire at Gorahel. This place is the site of a military post in the south but all the men were at the front.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has accepted an invitation from Edward A. O'Neal, president of the American Farm Bureau federation, to appear before that organization in Chicago on December 9 and deliver an address. Mr. Roosevelt will arrive in Chicago at nine o'clock that morning, make his speech and start back to Washington three hours later. The President's promised trip to Indiana to take part in the dedication of a memorial to George Rogers Clark at Vincennes has been postponed until June of next year, when he will also visit the Texas centennial convention in Dallas.

SOVIET Russia celebrated the eighteenth anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution with a tremendous display of its armed strength in Moscow. Infantry, cavalry, tanks and all the other army services marched for hours past the tomb of Lenin, where stood Joseph H. Stalin and other leaders to review the long parade.

Voroshiloff, commissar for war and navy, declared in the order of the day that the Soviet army was ready to protect the frontiers of "our sacred land" at any moment. He warned the world that danger of a new general war hung over mankind.

The executive committee of the Communist Internationale published an appeal to workers of all countries to join hands to force an end to Italy's war in Ethiopia, protect the Chinese people from invasion, ward off danger of war in Europe and bring about a downfall of Fascism.

BILLY SUNDAY, the spectacular evangelist whose fiery eloquence led many thousands to "hit the sawdust trail" to the altar and seek salvation, died of heart disease at the home of his brother-in-law in Chicago. His wife, known all over the land as "Ma," was with him at the end and said Billy died as he had always wished, suddenly. Mr. Sunday, who was almost seventy-three years of age, was a professional ball player in his youth. He was converted in 1886 and in 1903 was ordained a Presbyterian minister.

One of America's leading scientists, Henry Fairfield Osborn, died in New York at the age of seventy-three years. He was eminent in many branches of science and was sometimes called "the successor to Darwin and Huxley." For years he was the president of the American Museum of Natural History.

ADMINISTRATOR HARRY L. HOPKINS issued an order barring from work relief jobs all persons not on the dole as of November 1. He said, however, that despite this order 10 per cent non-relief labor could be employed on any project, and more in specific cases. The $330,000,000 public works non-federal program and the $100,000,000 low cost housing program have been exempted entirely from the relief labor requirement because of a shortage of skilled construction workmen on relief.

AFTER a conference with agricultural specialists and representatives of farmers, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace announced that a two year program for corn and hog producers had been determined upon, the main features of which are:

1. Prevention of an excessive production of corn in 1936 and 1937.
2. Allowance of an increase in next year's pig crop that would be at least as great as it is estimated would take place were no adjustment program in effect.
3. Prevention of an excessive increase in the 1937 pig crop.

Maximum and minimum hog production requirements will be imposed under the new contract particularly to prevent regional dislocations in production next year, according to AAA officials who said such "dislocations" would be certain to develop because of maladjustments in feed supplies and hog numbers brought about by the 1934 drought. The maximum and minimum requirements have not been determined.

The new contract will require that an area at least equal to the number of acres withdrawn from production of corn be added to the usual area of the farm devoted to soil-improving and erosion-preventing uses. This requirement was a part of the 1934 corn-hog contract, but was relaxed when the drought came.

MEDALS were awarded by the Carnegie hero fund commission to 47 men and children of the United States and Canada, or to their relatives in 11 cases. Most of the awards are for rescues of persons from drowning.

Two silver medals were awarded and 45 bronze. The silver ones went to James C. Martin, fifty-one-year-old Joplin (Mo.) laborer and Christine Stewart, thirty-five, of Brookline, Mass. Martin went into a sewage pit trying to save a fellow worker. Both drowned. Miss Stewart leaped into the sea near Bar Harbor, Me., in an attempt to save Emily McDougall, thirty-one. Rescuers pulled them out 40 minutes later. Miss McDougall died. Cash awards totaling $7,000 for educational purposes accompanied the medals in 14 cases, the commission announced. In 22 other cases, a total of $17,250 was granted for purchase of homes or "other worthy purposes."

MILWAUKEE, which had been terrorized for eight days by a succession of mysterious dynamite explosions, was relieved when the terrorist, Hugh Frank Rutkowski, was blown up by his own bomb as he was preparing for another outrage. Unfortunately a little girl was killed by the same blast. The bomber, described by the chief of police as "an extreme low type of individual with a warped, criminal mind," had at least one accomplice who may also have been blown to pieces by the explosion.

Something About Billions Earthquakes Marvelous New Cars News From Ethiopia

Silas H. Strawn, once head of the American Bar association and president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, says the country is spending $7,000 a minute, and thinks it is too much. Your small boy will tell you how much $7,000 a minute makes in one year. Once "all the world wondered," or at least we did, when there was talk of spending one-quarter of a billion on the Panama canal. Now, any professor could spend that, after three minutes' thinking, and news that the nation's deficit has increased fifteen hundred millions in the past few weeks startles nobody.

The world has passed through earthquake week. Earthquakes in Montana, greatest sufferer on this continent. Severe shocks are reported in Siam.

Earthquakes in Buffalo, N. Y.; Ottawa, Toronto, Guayaquil, Ecuador; a busy seismographic week.

And the moon is partly to blame. Its power of gravitation exercises a strong pull on the earth, as it shows in lifting the ocean tides. Dr. Harlan T. Stetson, of Harvard, says the moon causes "sub-surface adjustments of the earth."

The new cars of 1936, now on exhibition, are so extraordinarily beautiful that every American should see them, regardless of intention to buy a new car. Most encouraging is the determined energy that business men and engineers of the automobile industry have shown in fighting the depression, while improving that which seemed beyond improvement.

Rome gives confirmation of the slaughter of six thousand women and children by Ethiopian warriors taking vengeance on the fathers of the children who deserted to Italy. Rome also reports the killing of five hundred Ethiopians by Italian bombing planes, "an attempt to assassinate Haile Selassie by an unnamed American negro."

Haile Selassie of Ethiopia has "fired the last available man into the battle line," relying on old men, young boys and women to run his government, reminding you of the late czar's announcement that he was going to send "his last monk." He did not live to do that.

The national effort to "buy ourselves out of the hole" encounters difficulties. The President, to make his four billions cash spread as far as possible, announced top wages of $93 a month. But union labor says, "No; you must pay us full union wages," and New York may have a state-wide strike to back the demand. President Roosevelt, it is said, refuses to concede that public relief is a branch of union labor, and, even with 1936 looming ahead, may insist that two governments in the country are one too many.

Greece is ready to take back her king and many Greeks are growing "spike" mustaches like his. Many Germans grew mustaches, curling upward, to imitate their former kaiser. There is not much in imitating mustaches.

You wonder why the Greeks cannot find a Greek for king. If they must have a king. In days of "the glory that was Greece" it wasn't necessary to go outside among "barbarians" to find a ruler.

You may want to know that in England, where good times have really come back, the Tories have made heavy gains at the present election and the Labor party sustains heavy losses. Ramsay MacDonald, head of Britain's first Labor government, rejoices openly at labor's downfall. His work as prime minister seems to have changed his opinions. Experience often changes our minds.

"It is a very great rebuff for labor," says MacDonald. "The people are not being taken in by wild and reckless promises which they know cannot be carried out. In municipal or national government."

Ed Howe, an able writer of Kansas, is expected to "put aside his pencil and pen forever," because his doctor warns him that blindness is approaching.

Perhaps Mr. Howe will tell his doctor: "Milton did much of his important writing after he was totally blind, and I can do the same." Mr. Howe can use a dictating machine, whereas Milton dictated to his daughters, who, uneducated, found it difficult to write down his Latin dictation.

Sculptor Loses Fortune and Bemoans His Fate

A talented young sculptor was the last to arrive at the party. He seemed gloomy and dejected and the smile was missing from his usually cheerful countenance. As he seated himself beside the woman she found it unnecessary to ask the cause for his dejection, for he immediately informed her ruefully, "I lost $2,500 today."

The woman was surprised. Although he is a talented young man he has not yet reached the stage in his career where he can turn his talent into a means of livelihood. He has difficulty selling his work and the woman never would have suspected that he owned so much money. She said nothing and he continued, "I'm so mad at myself. It's all my own fault, too."

Her curiosity prompted her to put the question for which he was waiting. "What happened?" she asked. He seemed glad to unburden his troubled soul. "I wanted to bet on the horse that came in first today and if I had, I'd have won $2,500. But I didn't have the $12 to put on him—damn it. I'm as mad as hops at myself—all that money lost."—New York Sun.

MRS. ALICE M. HEDGES RETURNS TO VALLEY

Mrs. A. M. Hedges returned last Saturday afternoon from an extended visit in the state of Washington with the family of her daughter, Mrs. Gus Berry. Winlock, Washington, is in the heart of a lumber country, and in relating of her stay, Mrs. Hedges told of the strikes during the time and of the way it crippled business in that district. While the rainy season is not until winter, she tells of (what would seem to us) lots of rain, and the soil is of a substance that a small shower makes the ground very slick. When she arrived there, it was so muddy that their car had to be left, and they had to walk about a mile to reach the house. However, every country has its good points also, and she mentions that they had no flies, no wind, and the climate was delightful. She returned via Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Latta, formerly of Lake Arthur, have purchased a small farm near the center of the state. Potatoes are the principal crop and she told of the large number of "tons" of spuds in their cellar to be sorted and sacked. Mrs. Hedges came by train, leaving there on Tuesday afternoon and reaching Hagerman by bus from Albuquerque on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. M. V. Whorton of Roscoe, Texas, came in Sunday to visit at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Brannon. Mrs. Whorton is Mr. Brannon's oldest sister.

CANNED FRUIT CAKE

Fruit Cake in Tin Cans cooked in a Pressure Cooker.

Mix the cake in the regular way to suit your own particular taste. Use No. 3 plain tin cans. Grease the inside of the can and pack about two-thirds full. Put the cans in the pressure cooker with a small amount of water. Do not seal the cans, place something over them, preferably waxed paper, to keep out the water from the condensed steam. Put the lid on the cooker and open the pet-cock. Steam for 20 minutes. Remove from the cooker and seal. Replace in the cooker while still hot and process for 90 minutes under 15 lbs. pressure. To remove the cake from the can, open by cutting the can on the side, under the rim, leaving a smooth top. In this way, the cake will slip out of the can without breaking. Fruit cakes cooked in cans in this manner will keep indefinitely.

Cattle Growers Meet In Capital

A sentiment for an unchanged cattle valuation was indicated at Santa Fe Sunday night as members of the executive committee of the New Mexico Cattle Growers' Association discussed matters of concern to the livestock industry at the committee's regular quarterly meeting.

Although increased cattle prices prevail over last year, the cattleman's viewpoint as explained by Lee Evans of Marquez, association president, is that because of "about a twenty-five percent calf crop," cattle owners failed to benefit from the raise.

A nine-man committee was appointed to meet at Albuquerque Saturday, November 23, to confer with United States Senators Carl Hatch and Dennis Chavez on the Argentine trade pact agreement, a discussion which, Evans said, probably also will touch upon the new Canadian trade pact.

November 23 was selected when the senators were unable to meet with the cattlemen on a previously selected date.

The New Mexico Cattle Growers' Association, Evans told the executive committee, "is in a better condition financially than it was a year ago."

The date for the association's annual state convention, to be held next year at Silver City, was set at March 6th and 7th.

WASHINGTON—Sharp reductions in the duty on Canadian cattle exports to this county, provided in the new trade agreement, between the United States and Canada, were accompanied by quotas to limit cattle importations.

United States duties on cattle were reduced from three cents to two cents a pound on cattle weighing 700 pounds or over. On calves weighing less than 175 pounds the duty was reduced from two and one-half to one and one-half cents a pound.

The agreement does not affect cattle weighing between 175 and 700 pounds.

President Roosevelt estimated the quota for cattle weighing more than 700 pounds will be about 155,000 head annually and the calf import quota about 50,000 head a year. The present yearly importation from Canada is 140,000 beef cattle.

Imports in excess of quotas will carry the old tariff rates. The limitation is based on the total average number of cattle slaughtered in the United States from 1929 to 1932.
