W.B. YEARY, COTTON SPECIALIST ON MARKETING

W. B. Yearly, cotton specialist, representing the State Department of Agriculture, was in Brady Wednesday, and in the afternoon at the courthouse addressed farmers and citizens upon the state's plan of pricing and marketing cotton. Mr. Yearly has given years of his life to the study of marketing conditions, and has secured much valuable data upon the subject of price control. His figures show conclusively that the farmers have within their power the controlling of the price of cotton or any other commodity they raise, if they will but co-operate and market their cotton judiciously.

The State Department of Agriculture is lending its efforts to aid the farmers in securing adequate pay for all crops they produce, and State Commissioner Fred W. Davis has evolved what is known as the "Texas Plan" of marketing cotton. It was this plan, along with other facts of interest to farmers and producers, which Mr. Yearly presented at the meeting Wednesday afternoon.

This is the plan, briefly set forth by Mr. Davis:

"Seeing the critical condition of cotton prices in 1917, and knowing railroads and ships would be commandeered for war purposes, and that shipping would be restricted to the monthly needs of mills, thus probably forcing the recurrence of prices of 1917, the State Department of Agriculture began the work of placing cotton on a commercial system of sale which would keep in the producers hands all the cotton the world was unwilling to take at a price equal to cost of production plus a fair profit. This work, up to January 1, 1920, was to a great extent, preliminary, or educational. Since then, we have been more compactly organizing, with the direct object of selling cotton and later other commodities on the basis of cost of production and a fair profit on investment.

"There is no mystery about selling cotton for its value. I can see why certain selfish interests oppose its being done, and why it is not done, but the way to do it is very simple. Cotton is produced to sell. No portion of it worth mentioning is used in the home or on the farm in the form in which it is produced and sold. Those who produce plows, automobiles, clothes, nails, lumber, paints, in fact everything we use, do so for the same reason. They are called manufacturers or commercial products. Cotton is a much so as any of them. The other commercial producers have long since adopted what they and all men acknowledge to be the only business system that can be devised for marketing commercial products.

"The system is not complex or hard to understand. It is simple, and consists of a place in which to produce or manufacture the product; of finding the cost of production, to which a profit is added; sell all that is possible at the price as rapidly as produced; provide a storage place for that which cannot be sold as rapidly as produced, so as to protect it, and borrow money on it if necessary, in order to prevent a sacrifice in price. If a surplus is accumulated, it is carried in storage and production is reduced accordingly.

"Our farms are the producing plants of raw cotton. The storage places must be provided and financing arrangements adjusted to care for all that can't be sold for a profit at harvest time.

"Where a great number of people produce the same class or kind of article, they have found it necessary to have an organization thru which to systematically work. The State of Texas, through its Department of Agriculture, has made provision for this necessity by appropriating money for organizing institutes. It is through the institutes that the Department's work has been carried on. The Department of Agriculture has consistently organized institutes, and all confusion as to different farmers' organizations comes from the multiplicity of organizations of various names. Although the Department has had the one name and purpose, some have tried to make it the victim of the confusion which has been created by the multiplied efforts to have organizations other than the one backed by the State. I believe the Department is doing the right thing for the State of Texas, and what every other state should do, because our every effort is dependent upon the success of our producers of raw material.

"As Commissioner of Agriculture of Texas, and head of the State's organization of farmers, I have undertaken this work believing it is my proper duty as representative of all the people. Private organizations should be secondary to the State's efforts. To be sure they can be of great assistance, but their endeavor should be to help the State in its public efforts, rather than expect the State to assist them in, probably a duplicating, private effort. If the State's policies are not sound, men who are capable of leading private efforts should offer their assistance in order to bring about improvement. The efforts of the State Department of Agriculture are different from those of any other force in the State, either public or private, wherein it is endeavoring to apply business principles, with definiteness, to the marketing of farm products. In this effort the entire citizenship is asked to join. I have nothing but the friendliest feeling for private organizations that are endeavoring to help the farmers, and will give them all encouragement possible, but it must be kept in mind that I have legal duties to perform, on oath of office to satisfy, and public funds to expend, and I cannot surrender these responsibilities to any privately selected committee, it matters not how highly

PROMISES RAIN WEDNESDAY NIGHT MATERIALIZES INTO REGULAR MARCH WINDSTORM

After several days of increasing cloudy weather, the promised rain all but materialized Wednesday night. About 7:00 o'clock a good shower came pattering down, but before the rain had made any progress, the wind rose in the west and blew the clouds away. All night long and continuing up into the day Thursday, the high west winds prevailed, and to a great extent, dried up what little moisture had fallen. The total rainfall in Brady amounted to less than one-tenth of an inch.

A good shower of rain would have been very timely and much appreciated in general. Many farmers complain that breaking of land is next to impossible on account of the top surface being so hard as to form big clods. There is ample moisture in the ground, but a good shower is needed to soften the top surface. A shower would also serve to bring up the corn that has been planted the past week or two.

CHICAGO CAPITALISTS VISIT DAY WELL—BUY TWO BLOCKS ACREAGE

TWO WELLS TO BE DRILLED—FRANCHOT & CO. ALSO TO DRILL AT ONCE—DAY PURCHASES STAR RIG AND WILL DRILL ALL THREE WELLS.

A deal of considerable magnitude and of vast importance to McCulloch county oil interests, was consummated the past week, when Thad O. Day sold a five-eighths interest in two 160-acre tracts, lying within the Day block on the Dutton tract, 11 miles north of Brady, to Messrs. Maurice E. Daley and John Ahern of Chicago, representing an association of capitalists in the Windy City. The deal was closed after Messrs. Daley and Ahern had visited the Day tract and had seen Thad O. Day well No. 1 put on the pump, during which time 25 barrels of oil were pumped in about a two-hours' run. Both gentlemen were highly enthusiastic over the Day producer, and predicted McCulloch county would soon take rank with the best oil fields in the state.

Two wells are to be drilled on the acreage purchased, the first to be begun immediately upon completion of Day well No. 2. Both wells are to be drilled to the Day sands, and Mr. Day will be in charge of the drilling. The acreage is located near the Day producer, and both tracts are in the Day block. Mr. Daley is owner of a string of restaurants in the north and is one of the best-known and most highly thought-of financiers of Chicago. Mr. Ahern is a retired merchant of Chicago, and is also prominent in Chicago financial circles. Both gentlemen came well recommended, and their standing in financial circles was evidenced by the excellent letters of introduction to the local banks.

Messrs. Daley and Ahern are expected to make a very flattering report on McCulloch county's oil opportunities to their Chicago associates, and no efforts or expense will be spared to put McCulloch county on the oil map of Texas in big letters. Their visit here covered Thursday, Friday and Saturday of the past week, and their investigation of the local field was thorough and most carefully made.

There is no question but what the Day well will produce 25 barrels daily. When Day well No. 2 is running, twenty barrels of oil are consumed every 24 hours, and No. 1 has no trouble whatever in keeping the oil tanks filled to the brim. Lack

I may hold them in my esteem. My duty is to ask the people to back the State in its public efforts to assist her producers. It should be kept in mind that our efforts will not be confined to cotton, but will be extended to wheat, livestock, etc. We have taken up the cause of cotton first because it is the universally grown money crop.

"I invite all organizations and in-

STORK AN UNEXPECTED VISITOR TO THE FAMILY OF TRAVELING PEDDLER

The stork made an unexpected call in the family of Phil Levin, traveling Jewish peddler. Tuesday night, and left a fine baby girl at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Helge, where the family had sought shelter in their hour of need. Levin, who stated he was traveling through this country in the hopes of benefiting his health, being a sufferer from asthma, carried with him a stock of goods which he sold in order to pay his expenses and make a living for his family. Besides the new arrival there are three other children.

Local members of Mr. Levin's race very charitably made up a purse and carried out food and supplies to the family Wednesday.

CHRISTY BROS. WILD ANIMAL SHOWS HERE APRIL 2; REMARKABLE FREE ACTS

To every reader of The Standard this announcement brings a message of supreme interest, a message fraught with tidings both great and joyous, for the Christy Bros. Greater United Wild Animal shows will give two performances on Friday, April 2nd at Brady.

For over a score of years Christy Bros. have stood for all that is biggest and best and supremely novel in the world of amusements. Beginning in a modest way they have slowly, but surely, built up that institution to vast proportions, so familiar to the American public. In addition to introducing many innovations in the amusement world in the form of splendid new methods of presenting arenic performances and magnificent pagentry, the Christy Bros. were the pioneers in a policy which insisted upon the public being treated with the utmost consideration.

This year's program offers many new features and displays, presenting scores of America's foremost artists; a colossal exposition of wild animals from every clime; clowns—a gay giddy and glad-chain of spontaneous side-splitting laughter with their newest stunts and sketches; most unique congress of wild and domestic beasts superbly schooled in an endless variety of tricks and new attainments that will captivate the hearts of every man, woman and child. Made a part of and included in the program of wonders are the funny four-legged jesters of Pony-Land, Bear-Land, Pig-Land, Donkey-Land. These clowns of animal-land present a program that tickles young and old with their unmistakable comedy.

These are but a few of the features named at random which follow the marvelous introductory pagent.

Christy Bros. presentation of "The Prince of the Jungle" a pagent of colorful magnificence, a wealth of color, pomp and glorious music, with scores of characters, both animal and human, lavishly costumed, makes this a truly wonderful display.

Twice daily, immediately preceding the opening of the doors, a monster free act will be given, when upside-down Zenaldo will make his thrilling slide on a slender thread of steel from a height of fifty feet, balancing on his head, a top a roller skate, Zenaldo presents the most thrilling attraction every offered the public as a free attraction.

The shipment of sheep and bulls that Mr. Shultz had at the Fat Stock show won honors for the Shultz ranch and for Concho county. The sheep, muttons, won first and second prizes against all comers, and were sold for about $18.00 per head after the show. They also won first and second in Swift's special prizes. One bull pulled down a prize. The bulls were registered Herefords—Herald, Paint Rock.

ANOTHER DELAY IN SHIPPING OF NEW GENERATORS

In response to his anxious inquiries, W. O. Kirchner, superintendent of the Brady Water & Light Co., has just received a letter from the Fairbanks-Morse Co. advising that another delay in the factory has resulted, and, as a consequence, it will be impossible to make shipment of the new generators before the early part of the coming month. The Fairbanks-Morse Co. further advised that they understood the urgency of Brady's need, and were exerting every effort to have the factory rush completion of the generators, and that delivery would be made at the earliest possible moment.

Since the factory has been promising shipment of the generators ever since the early part of the year, Mr. Kirchner is rather dubious of its present promise, and thinks Brady will play in luck if shipment is made by the middle of the coming month. Allowing thirty days in transit (barring all delays) and a couple weeks to complete installation, it is barely possible that the new plant may be in operation 60 days hence.

The new engines, which were unloaded the past week, have both been placed at the plant, and are being installed as rapidly as possible. It was anticipated that the generators would be in Brady the early part of next month, by which time all preliminary work was expected to be completed. As it is, the work will, in all probability be completed, and a period of waiting will intervene before the generators are finally received.

NORTHWEST PART OF COUNTY GETS HEAVY RAIN WEDNESDAY NIGHT

Pear Valley and Lohn communities received a heavy drenching from the rain which began falling about 6:00 o'clock Wednesday night. Parties enroute to Brady state the rain fell so fast and so heavy that they had their cars mired down several times before getting out of the lane leading from Pear Valley to the Lohn road. Indications are that all the northwest portion of the county was included in the heavy rainfall.

Prospects Good for Rain—Lohn Fire Damage.

Brady, Texas, March 24.
Editor Brady Standard:

Looks like we might get that much needed rain this morning. It is a little dry to plant and if we could just get a rain there would be lots of seed put in the ground.

Mrs. Ferris Woodard and baby and Misses Willa Mae and Olive Dillard visited homefolks Saturday night and Sunday.

Miss Lela Bray returned home Sunday night after visiting a week with Miss Anna Lohn.

A jolly crowd enjoyed themselves at B. D. Dillard's Saturday night.

The young people had a singing at Chas. Hilliard's Sunday night.

Mrs. Jess Bissett visited Mrs. J. Newton Sunday.

Mrs. Waddle and Newton spent the day with Miss Anna Lohn last Friday.

Fire at Lohn Saturday night destroyed three buildings. Dr. Land's drug store, Mr. King's store and Odd Fellows lodge over the store and a building of Mr. Shelton's, which was full of feed, and badly scorched the meat market, just north of the other store. Most of Dr. Land's drugs and fixtures were carried out and saved. The fire started in the building occupied by Mr. King; whether upstairs or down is hard to tell as it was in flames when discovered at 2 o'clock Sunday morning. It also burned a feed stack of Mr. Overby's several hundred yards northwest from Lohn.

Mr. and Mrs. Shaffner from Bangs visited at Mr. Huie's Saturday and Sunday.

The Lohn basket ball girls played Rochelle team at Brady Saturday and won the game as usual.

Grandpa Huie has been right sick the past week.

John Fullager and family visited at the oil wells and at Jack Huie's and N. J. Huie's Sunday.

N. C. McShan and family and Miss Lucy Purdy visited Mrs. Tom Woodress and saw the fire damage at Lohn Sunday afternoon.

Quite a crowd was disappointed Sunday afternoon watching for the aeroplanes that were to be at Lohn, but they didn't come.

LOVE AND LILACS

By MILDRED WHITE.

Homer Brant drew his car up suddenly at sight of the lilac bush. To him in the roadway came the sweet haunting odor. Indefinably the perfume brought to mind the girl he had so recently and so quickly learned to love.

Homer had stopped there, on his way to an engineering camp higher up. He had intended to remain over night, but with Justine Jordan's coming, his visit had been prolonged.

During the first day they had visited together, upon the hotel veranda, the second found them roaming the wonderful country in his car: at the end of one short enchanted week, Homer caught the girl in his arms, speaking out his love for her. And that had been the end. Like some startled bird she had escaped and flown from his embrace, and when after a troubled night, he awaited her morning appearance, humble in his apology—she had not appeared at all. Instead the hall boy had handed him a note in peculiarly characteristic handwriting.

"Dear friend," it said, "when this reaches you, I shall be up among the hills, fulfilling a mission which has been postponed just one week. Spring time, and lilac time, tempted me to linger. When I meet you again, I hope it may be in the more prosaic and less romantic atmosphere of the city. With best wishes ever—Justine Jordan."

Whereupon, Homer, inwardly fuming at his admired one's practical coolness, bade the inn good-by, and began a searching tour of the hills.

What could be the delayed mission at which she mysteriously hinted and which brought her to this isolated country?

He alighted and made his way to the lilac bush which grew beside the open window of a vacated log cabin; looking inside, he was surprised to see a reclining camp chair in the center of the room. Entering cautiously, he sank into the chair, idly drawing from its side bracket a recent illustrated magazine. Some person evidently made this rude shelter a reading place.

Gazing through the open door across the vista of glorious scenery Homer mentally complimented the reader on his choice of location. Then as he replaced the magazine a pad of writing paper fell from the rack, one glance at the bold and pleasing handwriting brought a quick flush to his face. Surely this and the penmanship of his own hasty note of dismissal were the same.

So Justine had found her way to this deserted cabin; then her stopping place must be in a nearby farm house. The heading of the closely written page caught his attention, "Dearest," he read, "Oh, my dearest!"

Homer Brant's heart pounded furiously, as his eyes forcibly followed the line: "Across the miles I have traveled to our trysting place, and you are not here. Instead, I find the loving note you braved danger to leave. Beloved, let not your courageous spirit falter. Without one look into your eyes, without a touch of your dear hand, I could not go back to the world. Some way I shall manage our meeting. Never in my heart can there be room for other than you, I am.—Your Own."

The pad slipped from the man's trembling fingers. So this was the secret of the softly brooding eyes; and love after all these years had but found him to make mockery.

Homer sprang to his feet, as a girl came through the doorway, came and stood a moment, surprise and diffidence in her gaze.

"Justine!" he cried out sharply, then still inwardly raging, pointed to the written pages at his feet. "I read your letter through," he said, "I even forgot about scruples and it has showed me why you ran away from my love. But I want to know," he straightened before her, "I demand to know, why any man dare to ask a woman to meet him in secret, dare bring her into threatened danger?"

Across the girl's somber eyes flashed her transforming smile. "That man, is a German spy," she replied.

Brant came suddenly close, fiercely he caught her wrists in his grasp, "And you," he breathed, "you—"

For a time she stood, looking steadily into his face. "Let me go," she said at last, "and I will explain."

When he loosed her hands, she smiled, and going to the camp chair, brought back an open magazine holding it out before him.

Dazedly he read the title of a story, "In Love and War," and beneath it, "new serial, by Justine Jordan."

"You are more privileged than others," she laughed, "for you have read the beginning of a later installment. That is what I came out here to write. The cabin is my study."

"So," he said slowly, "you are a great author, little Justine."

"Not great," the girl replied, "very simple, love and lilacs—that sort of thing."

"And in your own life, you have no use for love?"

She looked from the lilacs nodding through the cabin window, back to the man's tense face. "Six days were too short a time in which to be sure," she murmured, "the country confuses with its enchantment."

"But now?" his eyes burned into hers the question.

Helplessly she put out her hands, "Never in my heart can there be room for other than you," she quoted, "I am, your own."

HER VIGILANT AUNT

By JACK LAWTON.

Miss Tuxberry had long been considering the idea of a companion, with whom to spend her later days. The great difficulty lay in finding one of suitable disposition, various maidens of apparently "suitable dispositions" having been tried, the most promising failing to remain "suitable" under Miss Tuxberry's exacting needs.

The death of a far-away and half-forgotten brother seemed the answer to the solution. "Thomas, neglected by his fortune-favored sister, in leaving this world was obliged to leave his beloved daughter. Drusilla would be alone and penniless. Thomas, easy-going and visionary, had not prospered. His sister was his last hope of help in time of need. To her, therefore, with an apologetic letter, he sent his only daughter.

Drusie, he had called her tenderly; in Aunt Tuxberry's home began a new and sterner order of things.

Drusilla's disposition changed not by her aunt's fretfulness, but from each trial emerged again sunnily, like flowers after rain.

One morning a bulky letter arrived. Its postmark was that of the city where Drusilla had made her home. The address was undoubtedly in a man's chirography.

The blue eyes of her niece seemed suddenly illumined by an inner light as she reached for the envelope and her dimples came into play, as she perused the letter.

"It is from Jack," she murmured happily; "he and I have known each other all our lives. He really felt dreadfully when I came away. We—might have married, but the war and all made things so uncertain. Now—" Drusilla jumped up and whirled about in a joyous sort of dance. "He's coming here," she ended.

All the hard lines came back to Miss Tuxberry's face, but being wise in the ways of women, she said not a word. Being unscrupulous, also, where her own wishes were concerned, Miss Tuxberry merely watched for, and failed to deliver Jack's next letter.

Drusie's eager face grew perplexed. "I cannot understand," she said, "why Jack does not write the date of his coming."

Miss Tuxberry had learned the date of Jack's coming.

"Well, if I were you," she advised briskly, "I'd have more pride than to moon about it," and that evening she summoned her physician.

"I want to go away to rest my nerves," she told him. "What sanitarium can you recommend, where patients are merely healthy people laboring their imaginations? I don't care to be shut up like sick folks."

The doctor, knowing his patient, smiled as he scribbled an address. So Drusilla was dragged away.

"Surely," the girl answered her troubled conscience, "I could not be so ungrateful as to refuse this service. If only Jack would write—"

Jack's second peremptory letter had been disposed of. Miss Tuxberry hoped secretly that hot-headed youth would find in this apparent indifference upon the part of his sweetie-heart cause sufficient for long and injured silence. When she and Drusilla returned from the sanitarium she would consider further means to prolong that silence. For faithful and undivided attention to herself, the girl should inherit her entire estate. That would be reward for present deprivation.

Some evil fortune aided Miss Tuxberry's plan. She had barely become established in her luxurious room in the sanitarium, with Drusilla near by, when a servant brought to the place evidence of a dreaded germ, and quarantine was declared.

Aunt Tuxberry felt none of the apprehension of other guests.

Drusie, pale and sad-eyed, gazed wonderingly down the road.

"Why, oh why did Jack not answer her letters?"

"Absence had brought forgetfulness," her aunt insisted.

"If Jack forgot," Drusilla felt desperately that she could not bear her longing heart ache.

"A telephone message at the office from your housekeeper," a nurse informed Miss Tuxberry.

"Asking some tiresome question," that lady surmised.

"You answer it, Drusilla."

But it was not the housekeeper's voice which greeted Drusie's ears. "This is Jack," came decidedly over the wire, "and I'm not going to stand any more of this hide-and-seek. I'm on my way to the sanitarium, be there in fifteen minutes; look for a runabout at the entrance."

"But—" wailed Drusie.

"No buts," answered her impatient lover, and cut off connection. Evidently Jack was ignorant concerning the quarantine law. She would not be permitted to see him.

Across the office couch before Drusilla's eyes was thrown the visiting doctor's auto coat.

Near the outer door, his face bent over a paper, was the quarantine guard. Swiftly she slipped into the doctor's long coat, down over her ears came his soft felt hat. When she had adjusted the high gauntlets, Drusie reached with a smile for the doctor's small bag. She would rush across the hall in that frantically busy way of his—and dare, escape.

The great door opened and closed. A runabout waited near the entrance.

—Miss Tuxberry's vigilance was ended.

A Smart Colorado Fox.

A Colorado subscriber who read in the Youth's Companion the little story of the cleverness of an English fox in capturing a duck writes to tell us of an American fox that he believes quite as clever as his British brother.

Being something of a nature student, he writes, I was in the hills one afternoon looking for a certain bird that I wished to classify. There was a party of trappers in the hills, too, and I had to be on the lookout for traps. The wind was from the east and I was walking directly toward it. On rounding a bend, going north at that time, I saw a white chicken with a reddish form beneath it. I was too far away to see them very distinctly, but I knew instantly there were traps round that chicken. Whether the fox was caught or not, I could not tell.

I slipped round so that the wind would be toward me and came up directly in front of the fox, concealing myself in some bushes. The fox had puzzled me greatly in his movements. I had discovered that he was not caught. When I got to the bushes I saw what he was doing. He was slowly and carefully uncovering that trap! When he had it wholly exposed to view, the fox, seeming to know that no other trap would be on that side, carefully stepped over it, got the chicken, stepped back over the trap and vanished in some bushes directly opposite me.

Do you not think that that will equal the other story?—Youth's Companion.

You Do More Work.

You are more ambitious and you get more enjoyment out of everything when your blood is in good condition. Impurities in the blood have a very depressing effect on the system, causing weakness, laziness, nervousness and sickness.

GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC restores Energy and Vitality by Purifying and Enriching the Blood. When you feel its strengthening, invigorating effect, see how it brings color to the cheeks and how it improves the appetite, you will then appreciate its true tonic value.

GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC is not a patent medicine, it is simply IRON and QUININE suspended in Syrup. So pleasant even children like it. The blood needs Quinine to Purify it and IRON to Enrich it. These reliable tonic properties never fail to drive out impurities in the blood.

The Strength-Creating Power of GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC has made it the favorite tonic in thousands of homes. More than thirty-five years ago, folks would ride a long distance to get GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC when a member of their family had Malaria or needed a body-building, strength-giving tonic. The formula is just the same today, and you can get it from any drug store. 60c per bottle.

FOUND HOME PAPER IN HEART OF THE ROCKIES AND THRU IT RELATIVES

"Publishing a country newspaper reminds me of tossing a pebble into the ocean. We never know how far the circles which it sets in motion will reach," said Williston Manley, publisher of the Plaindealer of Canton, N. Y., the other day. "I had a good reminder of this not long ago."

"One day there appeared in the Plaindealer office a short, stout, robust man of probably sixty. I knew the minute I saw him that he had come in from the big outdoors in some section. He told me that he had taken the paper for many years, probably forty, ever since he left Canton, where he was born. He told me where I would find the paper going, and I found it. His post office was in a little town in the Rockies. He said he had come back to the old town to live. He paid what he owed, and a year over for good measure, and then he sat down and I knew something was coming."

"Say," said he, "newspapers are great things. You can never tell what they are going to do to or for you. I have been a peddler out in the mountains for 40 years, making my trip, me and the little burro, about once in six months. There were a lot of long jumps between houses. For fifteen years I had been going out of my trail, about five miles to one side, to sell a family that had moved in. You get rather well acquainted with people for that long, so when I got there one afternoon and didn't find anyone at home, just the door unlocked, as all doors were there, I went in and made myself comfortable, and when supper time came I didn't hesitate about hunting around for grub. And while I was doing it I found a copy of the Plaindealer on the kitchen shelf, and one or two more around the house. The Plaindealer, mind you; the paper I was taking right from the old home town! And I wondered who these fifteen-year-old friends of mine were. I suddenly realized we had never talked over our pedigrees any."

"When the family got home that evening, I asked questions, and what do you think? That wife was a sort of grandniece of mine. She hadn't heard of her old uncle off stubbing around in the rocks of the Rockies, and I hadn't ever heard that anyone related to me had ever married and was out there living under another name. Your paper introduced us to each other. I just thought you might like to know about it."

Why Colds are Dangerous.

You are often told to "beware of a cold," but why? We will tell you: Every cold weakens the lungs, lowers the vitality and paves the way for the more serious diseases. People who contract pneumonia first take cold. The longer a cold hangs on, the greater the danger, especially from the germ diseases, as a cold prepares the system for the reception and development of the germs of consumption, diphtheria, scarlet fever and whooping cough. The quicker you get rid of your cold, the less the danger of contracting one of these diseases. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy has a great reputation as a cure for colds and can be depended upon. It is pleasant to take.

SIMPSON & CO. REPORT LARGE NUMBER SALES OF STUDEBAKERS-CHEVROLETS

Burl Wiley, salesmanager for Simpson & Co., is highly pleased with the demand for the popular Studebaker and Chevrolet automobiles, the more so since the owners of these beautiful and serviceable cars invariably are boosters for the cars and the first sale so confirms the owner in his faith in his particular car, that he is certain to want the same make when he gets ready to make a new purchase. Very likely much of this satisfactory service results from the attention given the cars by Mr. Wiley even after they have passed from his hands into those of the owner. Whenever Mr. Wiley notices a Studebaker or Chevrolet running badly or needing adjustment, he makes it a point to call the driver's attention to the fact, thereby easily remedying the trouble and adding service and satisfaction to the use of the car.

Monday Simpson & Co. unloaded a carload of Chevrolets, the shipment being made up of five Model 490's and one Baby Grand. Tuesday the company unloaded a carload of four Special Six Studebakers.

During the month, the following have become owners of cars:

Speaking of gentle zephyrs, what did Wednesday night's breeze remind you of?

MRS. LIGHTPLANT'S ILLS.

The many friends of Mrs. Brady Lightplant will be pleased to learn that, while her condition is still regarded as serious, it is thought she will pull through and may possibly survive for several months yet. For the past six months or more, Mrs. Lightplant has been lying almost at death's door with chronic dyspepsia, paralysis of practically all her limbs, incurable constipation, palpitation of the heart, bright's disease and a complication of other troubles. During the latter part of last year she contracted a bad case of the flues, and since has suffered numerous relapses. Her most recent attack occurred on Wednesday of this week. Dr. Kirchner was called in attendance and with his assistants, displayed such engineering skill as to bring the patient around within a period of 24 hours. Mrs. Lightplant has submitted to numerous surgical operations, having various parts of her anatomy removed at diverse times by Surgeon Kirchner and other noted specialists, and, despite fears for the worst, has each time made a remarkable recovery, sometimes being enabled to get back on her feet for days at a time.

In addition to her numerous attacks of the flues, Mrs. Lightplant, during the past winter, has suffered from numerous bad colds (coals) which invariably attack her digestion, and confine her to her bed, often in a semi-comatose condition. At such periods, all light and reason appear to have left her, and nothing clear or understandable can be learned from her. In such emergencies, liberal doses of crude oil appear to offer the only remedy, but after taking such doses, she appears soon restored to fair health and vigor.

About three months ago, just after a very severe attack of bronchial pneumonia, Mrs. Lightplant, while barely convalescent, over-exerted herself with the result that she ruptured her service. Since then she has been so badly paralyzed in her upper limbs as to be unable to do any ironing whatever. Despite all these handicaps she has continued to draw water so that the families' washings might still be done, and in addition has operated the meat grinders, printing presses, air compressors and has done various other heavy manual labor.

The condition of Mrs. Lightplant has been the cause of great concern to members of her large family scattered all over town, and numbers of them have in times past, sat up all night at her bedside. Recently such action has been deemed unnecessary, as the patient has been passing very restful nights.

Mrs. Lightplant has been the sole support of her large family for a score of years or more, and during all this period the venerable dame has done excellent work, supporting her children by means of washing and ironing, as well as doing general house and office work. When her condition first became serious last fall, her children held a confab, and it was generally conceded that the old lady's days were numbered. About this time, after being in great labor for a number of weeks, and much to the surprise of many of her children, Mrs. Lightplant gave birth to a son—a healthy, vigorous and active little chap, who has been christened New Lightplant. In time, it is expected that the newcomer will take the place of his mother, relieving her of her heavy burdens, and enabling her to spend her last few days on earth in peace and rest. However, the youngster will have to be nursed through a period of colic, teething, play and other childish ills and habits before he can be expected to take a serious part in life and fulfill the anticipations of adoring relatives and friends.

In the meantime, everything possible is being done to keep Mrs. Lightplant from a premature death and burial, inasmuch as her life insurance policies have all been allowed to lapse, and her death at this time, without anyone to fill her capable shoes, would leave her entire family destitute and dark and dry.

YOUR SUBSCRIPTION.

There will be no advance in the subscription price of The Brady Standard this year. By careful maneuvering, and by mortgaging almost everything in our possession, The Standard has managed to accumulate enough stock on hand to supply all our needs during the year 1920. Our plan was simply to send in an order for a ton of paper to each of the half-dozen paper supply houses with whom we had been dealing. On each of these orders, if not cancelled, we received shipments in lots ranging from 500 to never more than 1,000 pounds. After waiting a week or ten days we would repeat this process, with the result that we may now sit steady in the boat (for this year only) and let Rome howl. The trend of the market is shown by the fact that while the last two shipments were but two weeks apart, in the meantime the price had advanced $10.00. The Standard's present stock ranged in price from $7.50 to $8.50 per cwt. The price today in New York is $11.00 per cwt.—and scarce and hard to get even at this price.

As before said, there will be no advance in the subscription price of The Standard this year. What it will be next year depends entirely upon market conditions—the supply and price of newsprint being a prime essential. If the price on January 1st is above $10.00 per cwt., then The Standard's subscription price, of necessity, will have to be set at $2.00 in McCulloch county and $2.50 out of the county.

CONSERVING PRINT PAPER.

A bill was recently introduced in the House of Representatives by our congressman, Thos. L. Blanton, to limit the use of print paper by both daily and weekly newspapers, until such a time as the present shortage and scarcity of paper may be overcome. We believe this bill will have the enthusiastic support of every country newspaperman, and as well as the smaller city dailies, both of whom have had a hard scramble to keep supplied with this essential, while the big dailies were grabbing off the big end of the production and squandering it on mammoth editions which few, if any, of their readers read. The bill was referred to the Committee on Post Office and Post Roads, where, in all probability, it will remain until the dust of ages shall have gathered upon it.

The text of the bill reads as follows:

"To meet the present print-paper emergency by directing the Postmaster General to establish proper rules and regulations limiting the number of pages in newspapers entitled to transmission through the United States mails.

"Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That the Postmaster General of the United States be, and he is hereby, directed to establish and put into force and effect rules and regulations whereby newspapers hereafter entitled to transmission thru the mails shall be limited in number of pages as follows: Daily editions, weekly editions, and semi-weekly editions shall not contain more than sixteen pages; Sunday and special editions shall not contain more than thirty-two pages.

"That such regulations shall be rescinded by the Postmaster General as soon as, in his judgment, the print-paper emergency is over.

"That such regulations shall be put into effect by the Postmaster General on the tenth day after the passage of this measure."

SAN ANGELO'S WAY.

San Angelo's purpose seem to be to set everything in order while they are at it. They are building, paving, parking, beautifying, etc. The establishment of a central market place in the city is the latest step toward the general progress of the city. They propose to erect a building on the market square where farmers and truck growers can bring their products and dispose of them more readily than by going from store to store. This plan ought to enhance the reputation of San Angelo as a market for such products. It will certainly be an accommodation to those who are already patronizing it.—Temple Telegram.

No one can for a moment deny that San Angelo and San Angelo citizens are live wires. The ideas set forth are not only practical, but they are invaluable aids to the citizenship, as well as to the building of a market which should be the pride of any city. With Brady, the primary need now is lighting. Once we have our new light plant in operation, may we not hope to have well-lighted streets? Then building, paving, parking, beautifying, etc., will naturally follow.

HEAVEN HELP US!

It now appears that the new water and light plant will not be ready for another 60 days. A factory delay in completing the generators is the cause of the additional delay. If anything further was needed to make one feel down-in-the-mouth, cause one's heart to drop into one's boots and turn one's hair gray, it is supplied by this latest pronouncement. Please pass the patent medicine bottle.

FARMERS CONTRACT ADVERTISING SPACE.

It would appear that any man with something to sell all the time could use a permanent portion of his home paper successfully, if a farmer can do so. This is from the Big Stone City, South Dakota, Headlight:

"There is something new in the Headlight this week, H. L. Wyatt came down from his home ten miles up the lake and inquired what our rate would be on a certain amount of advertising space by the year. We told him and he said he would take it. He said he always had something to sell or trade, or else wanted something, and he believed that a regular space in the Headlight in which he could put anything he pleased at any time would be just the thing to get results. So there you are. We have done a great deal of advertising for farmers in the last twenty years, but this is the first time we ever sold a farmer a year's space."

Sunk his bit through the outer shuck, Struck it hard and there he stuck.

An Artist's Conscience.

France can never hope to compete with the United States when it is a matter of quantity production; but, up to date, the United States has shown no sign of either being able or wishing to compete with France in art craftsmanship. The following little story is an illustration of the seriousness with which a French craftsman takes his art and himself.

There are sprinkled over Paris watchmakers who make watches at home, making every part by hand, working as many or as few hours a day as they choose, with neither a foreman nor a union leader to say them nay. The big jewelers of the Rue de la Paix know all these men and await their work eagerly; but not even they can make one work faster or otherwise than he will.

Before the war an attaché of the Turkish embassy bought one of these watches and presented it to his royal master to curry favor with him. He in turn wished to give it to his favorite wife. But there are grave practical disadvantages about polygamy; he dared not give her the watch without remembering at least five other wives. So the attaché was bidden to go back and get five more watches just like that one. He went to the jeweler, and the latter sent for the man who made the watch.

"You made this watch for me, monsieur?"

"Yes. Does the purchaser say that there is anything the matter with it? If he does, he is crazy."

"Oh, no! On the contrary, he likes the watch so much that he would like five more just like it."

"I told you he was crazy. I never duplicate my work. I am making another watch now!"

And rather than lose the sale, the jeweler, more clever than scrupulous, had to send the watch to Switzerland, where the Swiss watchmakers made him the five reproductions for about the same price as he had originally paid for the watch, and the Sultan never knew the difference. But the old artist would have known!

Sport in Mesopotamia.

There are two classes of sportsmen in Mesopotamia, says a correspondent of the London Times—those with cars and those without. Those without cars take their pleasure under difficulties, but those with cars can have an amusing time without unduly exerting themselves.

Just before his death, Gen. Maude issued orders that laid down definite seasons for game shooting, and in the First Corps area at Samara gazelle shooting became very popular. Parties of two or three officers, armed with ordinary service rifles, used to drive into the desert toward the Euphrates and invariably return with two or three bucks.

In the writer's forty-horse-power car, in which he used to chase gazelles, it often took twenty minutes to bring down a single buck. The desert consisted of undulating hard earth, sparsely covered with dry shrubs that were just thick enough to hide depressions, sometimes two or three feet deep.

It was often impossible to pull the car up before one of these holes, and bent axles were by no means the worst damage sustained. On one famous occasion the floor boards of the body gave way after a particularly bad bump, and the miserable sportsman in the tonneau almost dropped through on to the differential with the car going forty miles an hour in full pursuit of a magnificent herd. The driver was too excited to hear his shouts, and he had to hang on as best he could until a gazelle was dropped. His congratulations on a particularly fine shot lacked sincerity.

There is a famous story of an aeroplane pilot who reported a herd of gazelles or an enemy column advancing on Samara. Corps headquarters naturally credited the report, and one brigade of cavalry and two brigades of field artillery spent a pleasant morning scouring the desert. Their comments on the value of aerial observation can be imagined.

Bustards are numerous and wonderfully cunning. They let a car approach nearly within range and then rush along the ground for a few yards, for all the world like an old Voisin biplane taking off, and then away over the next hillock. The car comes at full speed, radiator sizzling and driver perspiring, and the same performance is repeated for perhaps three quarters of an hour. They have to be shot on the ground with a service rifle, as they never fly high. The difficulty of hitting so small a mark from a moving car can be imagined. The old bustard has a very sporting run for his money, and in nine cases out of ten escapes.

A Precarious Job.

The recent merger of the New York Herald and Sun, which resulted in the closing of the old Herald office, caused no little disturbance and mental anxiety among the newspaper men affected, several of whom had spent half a life-time at the desks they then held.

An old copyreader on the Herald, who had been on the desk for a little more than forty years, threw down his blue pencil in disgust at the announcement that the old shop would go out of business.

"I knew darn well when they got me to take this job," he said petulantly, "that it would not be permanent."—Saturday Evening Post.

Illness Costs U. S. Wage Earners Billion Dollars Every 12 Months

The annual sick bill of 30,000,000 American wage earners is $1,000,000,000. The time clock of the nation shows that each worker, through sickness, loses an average of nine days. This means that the working time of the nation is decreased by more than $50,000 years. Half of the billion-dollar sick bill represents wages lost—subtracted from the total of earnings expected to finance the budgets of millions of families. The other half represents the bill for doctors, nurses and medicines. And the total is twice the amount given annually in the United States for all philanthropic purposes, in normal times. This is the problem of illness as it is presented by the survey now being made by the Inter-church World Movement. The survey has formulated a program as a proposal for the co-operative effort of the evangelical churches. An increase in the efficiency and capacity of existing denominational hospitals is the first provision of this program. Construction of 31 new hospitals include 12 general hospitals for white people; twelve for negroes; one tuberculosis sanitarium for Arizona; four hospitals for incurables and two children's hospitals.

NEGRO MURDERER TRIED, CONVICTED AND HUNG 14 HOURS AFTER ARREST

San Augustine, Texas, March 23.—John Hood Price, a negro, was legally hanged on the public square here, fourteen hours after his conviction for the murder of John Kennedy, a farmer.

Price was tried at a special court session at 9 o'clock last night, the grand jury having convened specially in the evening to return an indictment. Price maintains he did not commit the murder.

Price was captured late yesterday and placed in jail here at 4:30 p. m. A special grand jury indicted him on a charge of murder; a jury was immediately sworn in and court held last night by District Judge T. J. Adams of Orange. The negro was found guilty and sentenced to hang.

Kennedy was shot and killed last Thursday night at his home three miles northeast of this city. Two charges from a shotgun were fired into his body from a window, as he sat reading a paper. Kennedy lived alone, and it was not until the next morning that his negro cook discovered his body.

It was declared that the negro and Kennedy had a dispute the day before the shooting and search immediately was instituted for Price. A deputy sheriff caught him at Alto and officers brought him to the jail here.

Considerable feeling was evident in the crowd that quickly gathered at the jail, but any likelihood of violence was averted when a brother of Kennedy asked that justice be permitted to take its course as speedily as possible.

Judge Adams was holding court at Hemphill and he was at once notified. He came here by automobile, court was immediately convened, a Grand Jury impaneled, and his indictment and trial followed. When the verdict of guilty was returned, all rights of the prisoner were waived and he was sentenced to death.

Early today work on a scaffold on the public square was started, and crowds began to gather long before 11 o'clock, the hour officially set for the execution. There was no demonstration on the part of those who watched the death device go up. Kennedy was 41 years old and was well known throughout this section of East Texas.

"For Better or For Worse"

By Mary L. Parrish

(Copyright, 1917, by W. G. Chapman.)

Richard Hooker let himself into his apartment with his latchkey and paused to hang his hat in the hall. Suddenly he stopped, with the hat still in his hand, and listened. It was his wife's voice in earnest, pleading entreaty.

"Oh, why won't you wait? Why won't you be a little patient?" she begged.

A man's voice broke in with passionate protest.

"Wait?" he cried. "Do you think when a man loves with his whole heart and soul, he can be put off this way?"

"But if you care so much, you will see—"

"No! No! I don't see! I thought you would—"

"But listen to me!" she broke in.

"Not now—I'm too desperate," he said.

There was a movement as though the man were leaving, and Richard Hooker quickly stepped into his bedroom and waited. He did not hear any more conversation, only the quick closing of the outer door. He felt dazed and cold. He stood still, trying to pull himself together. His first impulse was to go directly to his wife and ask her who this man was, and what the words he had overheard meant. Then he concluded to say nothing. He would wait for her to speak. If she remained silent he could draw his own inferences.

As he entered the room he observed her keenly. She was sitting with both elbows on the table and her face bowed upon her hands. When she looked up her features betrayed the ordeal through which she had been passing. Instantly she tried to mask it with a smile of welcome, and began talking about inconsequential happenings of the day.

It was plain she meant to tell him nothing. Seeing this, he thought best to meet her on her own ground, and pretended he had heard and seen nothing.

Richard and Lucy Hooker had been married about six years. He was in his early thirties, and his wife was some five years his junior. His love for Lucy was deep and strong, and had never cooled with the years of married life. The only clouds that had for a short time obscured their happiness had been caused by his jealousy, which up to now had been proved to be groundless. After the last unpleasant experience of this kind he had vowed never to let anything shake his confidence in his wife, and to try to root out from his disposition this curse of jealousy. But lately he had noticed in her a kind of restlessness and despondency which he had laid to the thought of separation from a dearly loved sister, who had determined to enter the Red Cross service, and was soon to sail for Europe. Now he believed he had found the real reason for this. How could he doubt the evidence of his own ears? Even though he had meant never to doubt her again, what other possible construction could he put upon what he had heard?

The torture of it burned into his very soul, and tore him like a mad beast. He determined to hide all this as far as possible from Lucy till he had more proofs. Several days went by, and although he came home at all sorts of unexpected times, he failed to again find the man. He shrank from as yet putting a detective on the track of his wife. The strain under which he was living, in spite of his efforts to conceal it, was felt by Lucy, and she began to ask him if he was not well. He immediately laid this softitude to a desire on her part to cover up her unfaithfulness to him.

One evening when Lucy had gone to see a friend, he determined to search among her belongings to see if he could find a note or anything which might lead to further proofs. He turned over gloves, ribbons and clothing in the different drawers, and was about giving up the search, when he spied an envelope down in one corner of a drawer under some articles of clothing. He drew it out, and saw that it was addressed to his wife in a man's hand. Inside were four letters without envelopes which had evidently been thrust into this one for safekeeping. He opened the letters and read them. They all began: "Dearest," "Darling," or "Adorable Girl," and breathed the tenderest, most undying devotion. He put them in his pocket and went back to his room utterly crushed. This was the most staggering blow of all. The letters bore date of several months back, but the postmark on the envelope was a date of only about two days before the day he had found the man with his wife. No doubt she had destroyed that letter, and put these she wished to save in the envelope.

He asked himself what more he could want for proof. Perhaps on these other occasions when it had all been smoothed over he had simply been hoodwinked like the blind fool that he was. Well, it could not be done again. The end had come—the end of love and happiness. He meant to have it over that night, and waited for her to come in.

She entered in better spirits than usual, and came up to him with:

"Why, Dick, dear, you look awfully tired! Have you had a hard day?"

"Yes," he said, looking accusingly at her, "the hardest I've ever had in my life. I don't want to ever live through another such a one."

She gave him a questioning look, then seeming to think he referred to some trying business, she said: "Now, darling, forget it while I tell you something nice. Oh, I'm so happy over it! You know how I've felt about Ann going over there for a nurse. I just felt as though I'd never see her again. It seemed like a presentiment. And poor Spencer—you know she's engaged to him, felt the same way. He wanted her to marry him before she went, but she wouldn't hear to it, and the poor boy came here the other day just frantic, beside himself, begging me to make her change her mind; just as though anyone could make Ann change her mind."

"What day was he here?" asked Hooker.

She told him a bit wonderingly. It was the day he had overheard.

"I didn't tell you," she added, "because you've been so put out with me for feeling so about her going, and I knew you would be dead against poor Spencer, too. You see, they can't carry much baggage with them over there. It has to be light marching order, and Ann, poor dear, brought me a few little treasures she feared to lose. Now I can hand them back, for, what do you think? Since war has been declared by us, Ann thinks her duty lies here with our own men, and she's going to marry Spencer next month. Now, listen. Just to show Spencer how mad she was about him the whole time, I'm going to present him with four letters she gave me to take care of; letters from him, you know. Won't it be a joke?"

Hooker nervously fingered the letters in his pocket and wondered if he could get them back before she missed them. Then he took her in his arms and kissed her in extravagant jubilation over Ann's approaching marriage.

Not as Green as He Seemed.

Several young "society girls" of Columbus, Ind., went camping near that city last summer. They wished to do something shocking, so they picked out a young man who was plowing in a neighboring field and "made eyes" at him. The young man blushed and grinned. The girls grinned and blushed. The man was chief engineer of a riding plow and one of the girls asked for permission to ride with him. They had a good time with the supposed young farmer and the field was soon plowed. The girls confided to each other that he was a very nice fellow, "if he wasn't so terribly green." The young man didn't seem to have been anywhere and they told him a great deal about the wide, wide world. Recently the girls learned that the "young farmer" lives in a big city, knows all about the white lights and can call show girls by their first names. He is a plow salesman, and was running the plow just to get some actual experience to use in his selling talk.—Indianapolis News.

How Fish Are Counted.

The Wood river, in Alaska, has been closed to fishing for many years and is resorted to for breeding purposes by red salmon escaping the nets in Nushagak bay. The counting of the salmon was first undertaken in 1908 and has been continued annually since that time except in 1914.

The counting is made possible by throwing a rack across the stream and compelling the fish to pass through a narrow gate where they are easily visible to persons immediately above. Agents of the fisheries bureau in relays are kept on duty day and night for the entire period of the run, and the tally is kept by an automatic counting device manipulated by hand.

The highest count for any one day in recent years was 25,554.

Old Newspapers in Warfare.

In Italy the scaldarancio, or "ration warmer," as it is called, is composed of old newspapers. These are rolled together as tightly as possible and the edges gummed so that they form a compact stick of paper. This is then steeped in paraffin and cut up into segments, one of which is sufficient to heat a soldier's rations. All over Italy old newspapers are being collected for the scaldarancio.

CHURCHES NOT HARD TO FILL

Religious Edifices in England Where the Congregations Are of Necessity Rather Small.

There are many churches that attract attention by their size and grandeur. There are a few that are remarkable by reason of their smallness and simplicity. One of these is at Lullington, Sussex, England.

It is a primitive and quaint stone building with a roof of red tiles and a tiny weatherboarded turret at its west end. This miniature church is only 13 feet square.

Its pulpit is a pew with paneled sides and door and the furniture is of the plainest. Five narrow, diamond-shaped windows give light to the interior. When the church is full 30 persons are gathered together.

Only a little larger is the meeting house at Crawshawbooth, a village near Dunley. It is known as the Friends' meeting house and is covered with ivy and surrounded by a well-cared-for burial ground. Inside may be seen half a dozen oak benches that could, if necessary, accommodate 60 persons. The attendance is rarely more than six.

Somewhat smaller than this chapel is one that has been called the shrine of Quakerism. It is in the hamlet of Jordans, in Buckinghamshire. Thither in June of each year come Quakers from all parts, for here lie the remains of William Penn. If this were not enough to make the place interesting, it has the further attraction of being the neighborhood in which Milton lived after writing "Paradise Lost," a cottage in the vicinity affording him a resting place.

EVIDENCE OF LITTLE WORTH

Ineligibility of Shakespeare's Signature Does Not Prove He Did Not Write the Immortal Plays.

Some years ago, when the Shakespeare controversy was at its height, one of the contentions of the party who declared that the bard not only had not written the immortal plays but could not even write his own name, gave as evidence the existing signatures that are of undoubted authenticity.

On the same grounds it might be argued that Richard III was unable to write, if one decided the matter from the signature to a treaty of peace with Francis, Duke of Brittany, which is reproduced in a London dealer's catalogue just received.

It is a mystery how the cataloguer managed to make "Richard Rex" out of the shaky scribble which is there reproduced. It would be quite as likely to stand for Will Shakespeare, were it not that the smaller word stands second and the longer one first.

Barnum Generous Manager.

According to the original contract which Barnum made with Jenny Lind, she promised to sing 150 concerts in the United States and Havana for $1,000 a concert, the contract providing, however, that if Barnum made a clear profit of $15,000 sterling from the first 75 concerts, Miss Lind should, for the remaining 75 concerts, receive, in addition of $1,000 a concert, one-fifth of the profits; but that, on the other hand, if the first 50 concerts fell short of Barnum's expectations, she could have half of the gross receipts from the remaining 100 concerts. Before the concerts began, however, that contract was, at Barnum's instance, rescinded and a new contract made which resulted in Miss Lind's receiving in profits from the concerts which she gave under it almost twice as much as she would have received under the original contract.

Hypodermic Syringe in Crime.

Dr. Chaillon, who invented the hypodermic syringe, seems to have been a sort of Faquin. He established in Paris a school of crime from which such youngsters as "Charley Bates" and the "Artful Dodger" graduated. Stimulated by an injection of morphine or some other drug, they went out to do great deeds in the criminal line. When the "school" was raided the principal escaped, but evidence was found to show his part in some daring crimes. Physicians attached to the criminal bureau saw the great advantage of the hypodermic syringe, and it has ever since been a recognized agency in medical practice.

Unexpected Destinations.

People who like holes in dikes must not complain if they are swept away in the floods they loose. For they generally are.

When Talleyrand was asked what he did during the reign of terror in the French revolution, he replied: "I lived." That, for one of the original leaders of the revolution, was no slight achievement. And the French revolution itself, beginning as an earthquake of radicalism and ending with an emperor and imperialistic conquests, remains a classic instance of an historic landslide terminating not at all where its propellers intended.

Winnipeg's Growth.

Prior to 1870 Winnipeg was nothing more than a chief trading post of the Hudson Bay company, whose headquarters were at Fort Garry (erected in 1835), on ground now included in the city. The first house of the hamlet was built in 1860. The city was incorporated in 1873, and its growth since has been marvelous. The area of the city by 1912 was 12,700 acres. The population in 1870 was 300; in 1916 it was 162,990.

W. T. SHEPPARD SUFFERS BROKEN LEG---KNOCKED OFF 25-FT. TRESTLE BY ENGINE

Carl Sheppard returned Wednesday morning from Fort Worth, where he went Sunday night in response to a message announcing the serious injury sustained by his father, W. T. Sheppard, on Saturday while at work as a member of a bridge-building crew. Carl reports his father suffering with a broken left leg, the bone having been snapped between the knee and the hip, and the doctors at St. Joseph's Infirmary, where Mr. Sheppard is being cared for, state that it will be some six or eight weeks before the unfortunate man will be able to be about again.

The accident occurred while Mr. Sheppard was at work on a trestle about one and one-half miles out of Fort Worth. The track is used jointly by the Frisco and Rock Island railways. Following the passing of a Frisco train, Mr. Sheppard walked out on the trestle to inspect some rotten timbers, when a Rock Island switch engine, heading back into Fort Worth suddenly borne down on him. Members of the bridge crew testified that the engine was running at least 25 miles an hour. Mr. Sheppard saw he did not have time to run off the trestle, so he stuck his handspike down between the ties and leaned out over the edge of the trestle as far as he could. In spite of his desperate effort, the engine struck him, knocking him off to the bottom of the ravine 25 ft. below. He was in an unconscious state for 20 minutes. The switch engine never stopped, but continued its mad run into Fort Worth.

Members of the bridge crew, who hastened to Mr. Sheppard's aid, at first thought he was dead, and one of the men started in search of the engineer, who, when advised that he had struck the man, said that he was unaware of the fact and that he had never even seen the man on the bridge.

Aside from the broken leg, Mr. Sheppard fortunately sustained no injuries besides a bad shaking up, a fact little short of miraculous.
