Police offenses double this year

Winters Police Chief L.C. Foster said that the number of offenses handled by his department during September exactly doubled the number for the same month of last year. Foster said that a total of 50 offenses were handled in the past month compared with only 25 a year ago.

Police officers issued two citations for no drivers license, two for contest of speed (drag-racing), one for failed to stop at stop sign, one for failure to yield right of way to a funeral procession, five citations for unsafe control of vehicle, one for excessive speed and fleeing from a police officer, 23 speeding cases filed using radar, one expired drivers license, one charge of no validation sticker on the license plate and no motor vehicle inspection sticker, and two charges for blocking two lanes of traffic.

Other charges filed in September by the police department included four for public intoxication, one disorderly conduct, one driving while intoxicated, and one possession of marijuana. Police also filed two cases alleging aggravated assault and one for simple assault. One other case filed by police involved the use of bucket-truck on a local parking lot late at night. Police said the truck was used to work on utility lines normally, but it was being used to give rides to un-authorized persons in what was termed by police officers, as a hazardous manner.

Chief Foster said that the increase in the number of offenses over the past year could not be attributed to any one thing. He said that although the department has the same number of patrolmen, the patrol duties have been stepped up and that rather than using one patrol car exclusively, two cars are being used during peak traffic times and on some nights.

Foster again emphasized that the school zones were being closely watched in an effort to keep the speed down, and that other areas with posted speed limits are also being worked.

One injured slightly...

Joe Earl Merrifield of Ballinger lies in the middle of Highway 83 just south of the Highway 53 intersection after his van was in collision with a large cattle truck. Merrifield was apparently thrown from his van when the collision tore the driver's door almost completely from the van. Merrifield was treated and released from North Runnels Hospital. The truck was owned by G & G Livestock Hauling of Abilene. The driver of the truck, Norman Ray Welks, was not injured in the accident.

Literary Service Club makes gift to City

Members of the Literary Service Club of Winters met with the city council this week to notify the council members of a project to pinpoint fire hydrants in the city and to make the hydrants easier to spot at night.

The project involves placing brilliant blue reflectors in the center of the street adjacent to the fire hydrants. The reflectors are similar to those used on streets and highways and are held in place with an adhesive. The blue reflectors, when illuminated by vehicle headlights, shine very brightly and can help firemen to locate the water connection quickly. This alone can at times cut minutes from the time that firemen spend preparing to fight a fire and could also save lives and property.

The council gratefully accepted the gift from the Literary Service Club. Mayor Lee Colburn called the gift a "real fine gesture," and said the Literary Service Club certainly lives up to it's name as a service club.

Ballinger Mayor Bud Everett was named county treasurer Monday by the Runnels County Commissioners Court. Everett replaces Bobby Bryan, who resigned the position on September 15.

Everett will serve as county treasurer until the next general election.

Twelve applications for the position were received by the county commissioners. After the applications were reviewed by the commissioners the names of Everett and Sue Barkley, an employee of a

Both Everett and Mrs. Barkley received two votes from the commissioners for the position and the tie was broken by County Judge Bill Stultz who voted in Everett's favor.

Stultz said that Everett would be sworn in as county treasurer later this week.

Everett who has been serving as the Mayor of the City of Ballinger submitted his resignation to the Ballinger City Council in their regular meeting Tuesday evening.

Changes made in delivery of mail

On October 1, 1981, all post office boxholders became subject to the one year forwarding provisions that apply to all other postal customers.

Winters Postmaster Ann McDorman said that this means that mail will be delivered as addressed. In the past, if someone had a post office box, their mail was placed in the box even though the mail was addressed to their home. Mrs. McDorman said the Postal Service requires that mail be delivered as addressed and if not deliverable to that address it is to be returned to the sender.

The postmaster said that if a person expects to continue to receive mail addressed to your street location, you must have a receptacle or mail box established at that location. The postmaster suggested that persons notify their correspondents as to where they want their mail delivered—either to their post office box or their street address—and ask them to address it accordingly.

The postmaster said that every effort would be made to get the mail delivered to the addressee, but said that Postal Service directives would have to be followed.

Anyone having questions concerning this change in the mail delivery should contact the local Post Office.

WHS Blizzards chill Merkel with 6-0 win

The Winters Blizzards played very good defense last week to preserve a 6-0 win over the Merkel Badgers. The Blizzard defense led by Joe Escolona, Ralph Austin, Don Kvapil, and Ronnie Lujano held Merkel in check for the entire game. Merkel could never get their offense going as they lost their fifth game in a row and the Blizzards defense spoiled the Merkel homecoming.

The Blizzard offense sputtered all night long, but it did finally get untracked late in the fourth quarter with a scoring drive that began on Winters' own 25 yard line. A pass interference call gave the Blizzards a first down on their 40 yard line and then hard running by Ronnie Lujano and Dwight Hubbard moved the ball to the Merkel 25 yard line. The Blizzard offense, which just could not get moving earlier in the game, rose to the oc-casian and began to get their act together. Hubbard swept left end for a 10 yard gain and a first down on the Merkel 10 yard line, but a penalty moved the ball back to a fourth down and 15 yard situation.

Jeff Butts completed a key pass to Gabriel Ibarra for a first down on the Merkel 12 yard line. A sweep left gained very little yardage then Jeff Butts completed a pass to Brett Mikeska for the winning touchdown. The extra point try was unsuccessful but the Blizzards led 6-0 with four minutes remaining on the clock.

The Blizzard defense held on the first series after the touch down and forced Merkel to punt. The Blizzard offense then took the ball and ran out the clock.

Dwight Hubbard carried the ball 14 times for a total of 65 yards, Ronnie Lujano carried nine times for 31 yards, Alfonso Campos carried two times for six yards, and Jeff Butts nine times for 19 yards. Butts also completed three of 12 passes for 47 yards. Brett Mikeska caught one pass to gain nine yards, Gabriel Ibarra caught one pass for 27 yards, and Kent Billups caught one pass for 11 yards.

The Blizzards play Albany here this Friday night. Albany has a good football team and this should be an exciting game to watch. The Blizzards are making a strong move to win the District 8-AA Championship and everyone is urged to support the 1981 Winters Blizzards.

Letter To The Editor

You hear alot of criticism these days about our school, the system and the way things are done. I would like to take this opportunity to say I'm proud of our football field, stadium coaches, team, cheerleaders, and band. We have equally nice stadium for our visiting team and two concession stands that are run by concerned parents. We have coaches who care about our boys. They want to be on top when the game is over; but more important than that they want to say, "that was a real team effort, you did your very best." We have cheerleaders that work hard whether we are winning or losing to promote school spirit among the school body as well as the town people. A band that went from top honors to bottom; but is working hard to get back on top. It sure sounds good to hear The Pride of West Texas again. Parents encourage those kids to stay in there and keep working with the attitude that we are going to be No. 1 again. It takes dedication, hard work and cooperation from the parents, kids and director. I'm proud of the crowds that we have at home as well as out of town games. Let's keep on supporting our school and kids.

Keep working, Blizzard! Let's make this a year to remember. We have been on the low end of the totem pole for too many years. Let's make this a joint effort of the school and town to put real Winters Blizzard Pride in all our school efforts.

Jim McCord Traces Roots

There is another history buff in town. He is Jim McCord who owns and operates Jim's Stop & Go on Main Street. He also reads stories of the old West and is tracing his roots.

Jim knows he is related to Lieutenant-Colonel J. E. McCord, an early commander at Camp Colorado, and he is trying to find out just how. There are not many McCords and Jim says he has always understood that there were two brothers who came to this country. He has found a family of McCords at Coleman and one at Eastland who are businessmen and bankers. "Our family is the only poor McCords that I've found," he says.

Jim's grandfather, William Henry McCord, ran away from home when he was a boy and came to Texas. Before he died 40 years ago, he wrote a letter back to his home town in an effort to locate his relatives, but records had been lost or destroyed by fire. Jim, christened Jimmie William, was born in San Angelo. His parents were J. O. and Annie Haynes McCord.

When Jim read about Colonel McCord in a history of Camp Colorado, he said, "he has all of the McCord traits."

A story of Colonel McCord follows:
Governor Francis R. Lubbock named James M. Norris, a Gatesville lawyer, as Colonel and Commander at Camp Colorado. He assumed authority on January 25, 1862.

The administration of the regiment under Norris was stormy from the day he assumed command. He was legalistic in his approach to military problems and attempted to interfere with company officers in the discharge of their duties and lost their respect as a result.

Protests from officers of the regiment regarding Norris convinced the governor that a reorganization of the state troops was necessary. Norris had sensed the trend of events and resigned a year later.

Lubbock recognized that in Lieutenant-Colonel J. E. McCord and Major James B. Barry were two officers around whom an effective regiment could be built. Barry could handle the men. The governor expected McCord to organize and administer the regiment. He announced the appointment of Colonel McCord and Major Barry, effective on February 13, 1863.

Colonel McCord spent nearly a month in Austin after his appointment, and not until March 8 did he assume field command at Camp Colorado. Twelve days later he instituted a new policy which involved company organization and assignments. In the past, Colonel Norris had assigned one company of 60 men to two camps with each detachment sending scouts daily in two directions to meet like groups from nearby stations. McCord directed that the detachments would combine at one station; that scouting parties of 40 men would keep constant watch at strategic points; and that daily scouts between stations would cease. He directed further that Camps Pecan and Collier would be abandoned and Co. 1 would concentrate at Camp Colorado. The governor rejected the proposal and directed that the former practice be resumed.

Upon receipt of the governor's order, McCord resigned, but Lubbock refused to accept the resignation and notified the Colonel that he would accept the change but with misgiving. McCord directed a circular letter to all company commanders and requested their personal opinions of the merits of his plan and of the former practice. The ten captains replied promptly and all strongly supported the new plan.

So many problems faced Colonel McCord that he decided to seek the solution of the more pressing ones at the state capital. He traveled by army ambulance to Austin, where he acquainted various state officials with his difficulties. Although he personally made requisition for lead, caps, and powder upon his arrival in Austin on March 10, it wasn't until July 8, 1863 that he wrote to Barry he would soon be on the way to "Camp Colorado with 1,200 lbs. of powder; 10,000 caps; 3,000 lbs. of lead and buckshot in proportions."

State officials were in no position to appreciate the necessity of keeping horses well shod for the constant rides over rocky areas that had to be covered in scouting. Month after month the Colonel appealed for bar iron from which his blacksmiths could fashion shoes for the tender-footed horses. His appeals brought only excuses for "no iron on hand." Finally, in September, McCord made a trip to Austin and visited state warehouses. He found ample supplies of iron that were covered with bales and boxes of other supplies. The adjutant general was absent from the capital city, and McCord was unable to present his request personally, but he prepared his claim in writing and all but demanded of his superior that the iron be sent immediately.

Predatory Indians presented a constant problem for the men of McCord's Regiment. McCord and Barry led a movement in the summer of 1863 that aroused opposition on the frontier and grave misgivings in Austin when they brought nearly 200 Indians into Texas, nearly all of whom encamped on the Jim Ned adjacent to Camp Colorado. In 1859 the Tonkawas were moved from Texas and placed on a reservation near Fort Cobb in Oklahoma. All went well until October 23, 1862, when roving Comanches and Kiowas, 200 in number, attacked the reservation headquarters. The Tonkawas fled but were overtaken the next day by the enemy and about 150 of their number slaughtered. The rest managed to escape.

Company officers at Camp Colorado were enthusiastic over prospects of using the Tonkawas as guides for scouting parties. And by November 1 all but nine of the band was encamped on the Jim Ned about a half-mile below the military installation.

Food for the tribe was a vexing problem as no state funds could be spent for their benefit. But McCord furnished them with beef and salt on which they got along very well. Rains had covered Coleman County with grass and buffalo had drifted in the section in great numbers. McCord arranged for the Indians to hunt buffalo for two weeks under the charge of a scout from the company.

Governor Murrah suggested an appropriation of $10,000 for the tribe but the legislature declined to act, insisting that the Tonkawas were the responsibility of the Confederacy. The Confederate authorities agreed to accept the Tonkawas, and the band at Camp Colorado journeyed to Waco, where they remained for over a year.

Attempts at rigid enforcement of the Confederate Draft Law drove those who desired to escape army service to the frontier. McCord had a premonition of widespread desertion in his regiment. He notified the adjutant general in March of 1864 that he expected to make a personal investigation of deserters on the Concho about the first of April, but if he made an inspection of the area, no mention of it appears in his correspondence. It remained, therefore, for Captain Fossett, who succeeded to command at Camp Colorado, to take the initiative in investigating the rumors that disturbed McCord.

Baldwin Homecoming

More than 150 people attended the first Baldwin school homecoming at the Community Center Saturday and there was so much enthusiasm that the group voted to continue the reunions each year on the first Saturday in October.

Officers elected were Edna England, president; Floyd Millioern, vice president; and Henrietta Lewis, secretary-treasurer.

After much visiting and a bountiful lunch, the program began with a pledge of allegiance to the flag led by Willie Bell Cornett, teacher from 1929-1933, wearing her purple and gold Hardin-Simmons sweater. Mrs. England recalled that Mrs. Cornett led the pledge each morning at school wearing her sweater and it wouldn't see right to begin without this ritual.

Omar Hill led the singing of America and Billie Bishop accompanied at the piano. Recognition of teachers, families and various individuals followed with gifts being presented.

Vera Jennings, 88, received a gift for the oldest teacher present. The award to the oldest student went to Carl Kirby, 87, and to the youngest, Jo Evans, who started to school when she was five the last year that Baldwin existed. Mrs. Willie Patterson, 88, received a gift for the oldest parent present. Three of her children were with her, Milton, Ima Jene Onkin and Betty Joe Brown. The distance award was given to Ruth (Wood) Rowland who traveled 1400 miles from Kalamazoo, Michigan. Runner-up was Lessie Ray (Finch) Bethune who came from San Diego, Ca., 1160 miles.

Morris Coward of San Angelo made a trip to Colorado and brought back some big red apples which he presented to the teachers attending. They were Mrs. Jennings, Mrs. Cornett, Mrs. Eva Kelly, Alma (Herrington) Davis, Katie (Herrington) Vinson, Mabel Williams, Walker Bailey and Pearl (Williams) Davidson.

Seventy of those present had attended the Baldwin school and the family with the largest number was the Kirby family with eight; Carl, Otis and two girls and three from the Roy Kirby family, Elvis, Olga Meyers and Viola Lewis.

There were three families that had five each attending. From the Claude Coward family were Wanda Daniels, Merle Kennedy, Waldine and Ralph Martin, Morris and Ida and Hortell McCaughan. Those representing the Millioerns were Gertie Teten, Ada Teten, Charles Bill and Floyd. Those from the Charlie Wood family were Ila Mae Cotton, Virginia Powell, Lavenia Aley, Vernon and Ruth Rowland.

All of the W. J. Gardner children were present. Eunice Lail, Bernice, John, and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Gardner brought Mr. and Mrs. Morris Sowell with them from Coleman. Mr. Sowell said he was the last child and they left Winters when he was too young to go to school.

The J. S. Neely family members present were Lucille Prince of Fort Worth, Auburn from Texarkana, Arkansas where he serves as associate pastor of the First Methodist Church, Benton and wife from Canyon Lake and Gattis and Marie.

The Oscar and Ada Williams children attending were Buna Crow from Morton, Pearl Davidson, Wilson,

Sandra Day O'Connor: Madame Justice

The Senate confirmation of Sandra Day O'Connor as a justice on the United States Supreme Court is a milestone in a process begun many decades ago in our nation's accepting the fact that all persons are created equal.

At 51, the former Arizona appeals court judge will be the youngest member of a court now dominated by men in their late 60s and early 70s, a court assembled by six different presidents.

In the end, the Senate vote came without real debate and the 99-0 approval made clear the prevailing sentiment. Thus, what began in July as one of the President's most controversial decisions ended on a note of harmony with the Congress and the American people.

Some suspense had remained about whether a few senators might cast negative votes but even that doubt was swept away by her sterling performance during Senate confirmation hearings.

The appointment of Mrs. O'Connor — Madame Justice, as she will be called in the nation's highest court — is an historic event. On the part of the President, it shows a flexibility and bigness that dashes the stereotype of the single-issue politics espoused by some. It also tells us he is a man of his word. Many presidents have had the opportunity to place a woman on the Supreme Court yet none did.

Her appointment should bother no one because we must make a distinction between the electoral process and the judicial process.

It is the ability to understand and apply the law that counts. Her competence in this respect is not questioned.

There are those who have demanded and will demand that Justice O'Connor decide cases to their liking, and that is not what our system is all about. A Supreme Court justice does not have to stand for this, or for that, or the other thing. These individuals dispense justice and provide for us those most cherished guarantees of our Constitution. Those who sit on the Supreme Court interpret the laws of our land and do leave their footprints on the sands of time long after the policies of presidents, senators and congressmen of a given era have passed from public memory.

In my judgment members of the federal bench should be strict constructionists of our laws and the Constitution. Their roles should be interpreting the law, being ever mindful that legislatures make laws.

Justice O'Connor is, according to her colleagues in the Arizona State Senate where she learned to make laws, a perfectionist rooted in the law. Her legislative background should instill in her the importance of interpreting not making law.

What of the woman herself?

Mrs. O'Connor has a reputation for treating the law in a businesslike way, not an ideologue operating from a set point of view. Her former colleagues on the bench say she has good judicial temperament. She can be tough. Those who practiced in her court describe her as practical, conscientious, fair and open-minded.

President Reagan described her as possessing those unique qualities of temperament, fairness, intellectual capacity and devotion to the public good which have characterized the 101 "brethren" who have preceded her on the high court.

In the case of Sandra Day O'Connor, she really is a pillar of the community: a consistent, decent, hard-working lawmaker, politician, mother, wife, lawyer, public servant and judge.

I, for one, say welcome aboard and Godspeed!

WE ARE ENJOYING A WHOLE LOT OF A GOOD THING

For many years now, most of us have taken a plentiful supply of electricity for granted. We've found more and more uses for electricity, because, as Reddy Kilowatt kept telling us:

- Electricity is Reliable
- Electricity is Clean
- Electricity is Efficient
- Electricity is Quiet
- Electricity is Flexible
- and
- Electricity is Low in Price

Electricity is still all of these things... even low in price compared to other goods and services. But there's no escaping the fact that costs of supplying it are constantly going up... and so is usage.

People in WTU territory are using more electricity than ever before (9,020 kilowatt-hours per residential customer in 1980, compared to 5,856 in 1970).

With the demand for its product steadily increasing, WTU can't stand still. It must grow, too.

The growth is carefully planned, with the customer's welfare foremost in mind. WTU is considering only the necessities. But to keep giving the kind of service you're used to, we're going to be involved in some costly updating of production, transmission and distribution facilities. And, of course, we must maintain a staff of people qualified to keep the system operating. You can depend on WTU to continue providing a reliable supply of electricity. But let's all realize what it takes to produce it, and use it wisely. It's too good to take for granted.

Reddy Supplies the Energy... But Only You Can Use It Wisely.

ADVANCES IN INFANT HEART SURGERY

Major advances in detecting and repairing heart defects in newborn infants have greatly improved the chances for survival and a normal life for this small group of very ill babies, medical authorities report. For every one thousand live births, eight babies are at risk for being born with a heart defect of some kind. About four babies out of every 10,000 live births may require immediate surgery for this problem. In most cases, doctors have not been able to learn why such defects occur, according to researchers at The Upjohn Company, the worldwide pharmaceutical manufacturer based in Kalamazoo, Mich. Discovering them early enough, however, can make a big difference in the infant's chance for survival. Such heart defects are often diagnosed using a catheter placed in the heart. A dye is then used and when x-rayed the extent of the defect can be seen. Doctors also use sound waves beamed directly at the heart then converted into an electronic image (echocardiography) to help them diagnose problems. Another advance is in the area of medication. In testing that began in 1976, doctors have used a man-made version of one of the body's naturally produced chemicals, prostaglandins, to help save the lives of an estimated 1,200 heart-damaged newborns. U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) approval of the drug is expected this year. The medication, Prostin

Echocardiography, microsurgery and treatment with prostaglandins has helped improve survival rate of infants with heart defects.

VR Pediatric Sterile Solution made by Upjohn, is useful in treating critically ill infants whose normal path for blood flow from the heart is obstructed. The medicine helps keep open an artery near the heart for blood to flow to the lungs and pick up adequate oxygen. The infant then becomes a better candidate for corrective surgery. Surgical techniques also have progressed dramatically. Surgeons using powerful microscopes can operate with probes and tiny instruments to graft two different unobstructed vessels near the heart together to re-direct blood around a blocked stretch of coronary artery. In certain cases, according to Upjohn, the combined effect from improved diagnostic equipment, medicine and surgical techniques has reduced the mortality rate of certain heart-damaged infants.

Texas children to receive TDH vision screening

Approximately a quarter-million children entering Texas schools will have their vision screened this year, and if past history repeats itself, some 24,000 of them will need more comprehensive tests.

The screening was mandated by the Children's Vision Screening Act of 1979. Aim of the legislation is to detect early eye problems while they are treatable and make referrals of students to ophthalmologists or optometrists for further tests. The Texas Department of Health (TDH) administers the Children's Vision Program.

Through the first year of the program, reports Dr. Malcolm L. Mazow, more than 100,000 children were screened in 628 school systems in 246 of the 254 Texas counties. Dr. Mazow is chairman of the TDH Advisory Committee on Children's Vision and a Houston ophthalmologist on the faculty of the University of Texas Medical School.

Dr. Mazow said that slightly more than 10 percent of those screened — more than 10,000 students — were referred for further testing.

Although the current program is aimed at school children, it is hoped that screening will become available for preschoolers in the future. The TDH advisory committee is studying ways to lower the screening age to include child care facilities, said Donald J. Tausch, Coordinator of the TDH Vision Screening Program. He said statistics from the current program could demonstrate a public health need for expanded services and a follow-up program.

"One of the primary objectives of testing young children is detection of amblyopia — called lazy eye blindness," said Tausch. "If it is caught earlier, a child has a better chance to overcome it."

In amblyopia, the lazy eye isn't used by a child and the dis-use often results in a non-functioning eye. Treatment includes "patching" — placing a patch over the good eye to make the lazy eye work. Prescription glasses also may be used in treating the problem.

Dr. Ronald L. Price, with the American Association of Ophthalmology, said ages 4 to 6 are the prime time for detecting amblyopia for the best results. It frequently cannot be treated if detected in a child over the age of 6, and if discovered after a child is 9 years old the treatment is rarely successful, says Dr. Price.

Dr. Mazow said it is crucial to spot an eye problem at the earliest possible moment — ideally before kindergarten — so the youngsters will have a better chance of doing well in school.

During the past year the TDH has been training and certifying instructors for the screening program. The certified instructors then train approved screeners, said Tausch. The approved screeners may be school nurses, aides or volunteers, he said.

At the start of September, training activity reports show that 1,169 certified instructors and 4,257 approved screeners have attended 235 vision workshops.

The TDH has regional vision coordinators in six Public Health Regions and plans to assign them in each of the 12 Regions by fiscal year 1983.

Hightower announces candidacy

Speaking from the back of his pickup, Jim Hightower announced Monday in front of the State Capitol that he was a Democratic candidate to be the next Commissioner of Agriculture.

Hightower said he is running for this office because "I'm angry at seeing consumers gouged and farmers going out of business, while giant middlemen corporations are making a killing off both of us. An Agriculture Commissioner has the power to help farmers and consumers alike, and it is time we put that power in gear to help us, instead of just sitting idle all the time."

After his announcement at the Capitol, Hightower headed off for a two-week campaign tour that will take him to 29 Texas cities.

The date for the annual barbecue was set for Nov. 7 at 6:30 p.m. at the community center.

Tickets for the barbecue will be $8.00 per family. This will entitle the holder and his immediate family to attend the barbecue.

Tickets may be purchased from any officer or director of the association or at the door. The proceeds from the barbecue will be used to finance the Junior Livestock Show in January.

The next meeting of the association will be held Oct. 12 at 8:00 p.m. at the Vo-ag Building. All directors are encouraged to attend.

Shannon Hospital adds centralized registration

Shannon West Texas Memorial Hospital in San Angelo has initiated a new service for outpatients, with the addition of a centralized outpatient registration department.

According to Business Manager Lawrence Leonard, the registration desk, located in the Magdalen Street lobby of the hospital, will make registration for outpatient services more convenient for those who utilize them. "This service is going to be particularly useful in our new hospital," Leonard said, adding that the service was initiated in the current facility to "allow both the patients and the hospital staff to become accustomed to the procedure before the move."

All outpatients, including those receiving physical therapy, cardiopulmonary tests, lab work, and x-ray tests or treatments now should report first to the centralized area, where all paperwork will be taken care of. Those scheduled for outpatient surgery will also register there first.

"At the present time, our outpatient admitting clerk is seeing about thirty outpatients daily," Leonard said. Diane Adams is the new admitting clerk, staffing the desk from 7 a.m. until 4 p.m. on weekdays.

Leonard said the only outpatients not required to register in this department are emergency room patients—they will continue to register at the entry to the emergency room.

War on Drugs honors Jones and Nabers

State Senator Grant Jones of Abilene and State Representative Lynn Nabers of Brownwood, were recently honored by the Texans' War on Drugs Committee for their leadership in the battle to curtail drug abuse by children and adolescents in Texas.

The Texans' War on Drugs Committee, established by Governor Bill Clements and chaired by H. Ross Perot, was formed to combat illegal drug trafficking in Texas. The committee's weapons are the education of parents, support of anti-drug legislation, and improved communications among state law enforcement officers.

"Jones and Nabers along with several other legislators went above and beyond the call of duty to support the Texans' War on Drugs program," said Perot, chairman of the Dallas-based Electronic Data Systems Corp. "They heeded the call from parents all over the state to protect the children of Texas from the drug culture."

Perot emphasized that without the effective teamwork of state officials like Jones and Nabers and the concerned Texas parents, the five-part legislative package developed by the Texans' War on Drugs Committee would never have been passed. Perot also stressed that support from House Speaker Billy Clayton and Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby was also an integral part of the program's success.

"The record number of letters and personal visits to state officials from their constituents during the regular legislative session indicates that illegal drug trafficking is a major concern for Texans," Perot said.

New statutes passed in the session toughen penalties for delivery of drugs to minors, tighten the laws against drug trafficking and make it illegal to manufacture, deliver or possess drug paraphernalia. Also passed was a triplicate prescription bill that will help identify persons who divert prescription drugs to the illegal market. The fifth new law permits immediate revocation of licenses of health care professional convicted of drug-related felony crimes.

All of the laws became effective September 1, with the exception of the triplicate prescription bill.

Jerry Lackey's Country Folk

The other day I pulled one of my rockers up on the screened porch at my Caparrosa Ranch in the Texas Hill Country and for an hour or more enjoyed the peace and quiet away from my typewriter and phone.

Looking toward the hills in the distance through the Live Oak trees that encircle my two-story house, one could see the changing of the seasons. The autumn haze hung over the creek valley and to the hills. The fall crispness was in the air.

Yet, taking a spin through the pasture it was obvious, that with a month of autumn behind, it was a different season from recent years. Usually, generous rains have come in September.

Copperas Creek has stopped running. The grass in the pasture has turned brown. In places, the dusty ground has cracked open, like the day it did in the drought years of the 1950s.

Still, stockfarmers of that area are breaking ground and planting oats and wheat with the hope that October will bring much needed moisture to get the crops up.

But dry times are not exclusive to the Hill Country. On a trip to Abilene from San Angelo last week, the only ground cover that was still green was the broomweeds, and boy is there a broomweed crop!

Henry Clark says it's dry in the Del Rio area, "all the way to Mexico. It's so dry the ground is cracking open a few feet from Amistad Lake," he added.

Lawrence Bledsoe, a Sutton County ranchman, commented in the coffeeshop the other morning, that it's so "dry down around Juno that all the green is in the cedar bushes. Last year it was this dry in the spring and summer, but we received seven inches down there during September."

Mrs. Emmett Brosig Sr. says a few ranchmen around Lowake have started feeding livestock already.

D. K. McMullan of Big Lake says he has about wore out the knob on his radio trying to get weather reports. "Everyone of those early cool spells have played out before they got to Big Lake with any moisture," he said, "but we are going to get some rain...it won't be in time to grow any grass for cows, but a rain in the next few weeks will grow a little of something for sheep."

Well, I thought about all that. It started to bug me the more I puffed on my pipe and rocked on that porch. So, I finally got up and went into the den and watched the rest of the Cowboy football game.

New event for Joint Venture

A new event has been added to the Joint Venture for Crippled Children series of events for this year: the International Petroleum Show for Public Education is scheduled for November 6-8 in the Round Building of the West Texas Fairgrounds in Abilene.

The third annual Oil-field Equipment and Services sale will be November 10 in the Round Building.

The Joint Venture for Crippled Children is a partnership between the petroleum industry and the West Texas Rehabilitation Center to benefit the handicapped of the Southwest. Goal for this year is to raise $1,025,000.

Two JVCC events have already taken place: the Benefit Dinner which this year starred Glen Campbell and the LaJet Classic, the PGA-sanctioned golf tournament at Fairway Oaks Golf and Racquet Club, Abilene.

Booths will be available at the oil show for any petroleum-related business. More information about reserving booths may be obtained by contacting the Central Office of the West Texas Rehabilitation Center, 4601 Hartford, Abilene, Texas 79605, or (915) 692-1633.

The sale will feature donated equipment and services. The highpoint of previous sales has been the auctioning of a wildcat prospect donated by an Abilene geologist. Diesel fuel, pipe, drilling mud, well service time, dozer time, and testing were auctioned in the 1980 sale.

The West Texas Rehabilitation Center is a private, non-profit treatment center for handicapped children and adults. More than 8,000 patients were treated in 1980 at its campuses in Abilene, San Angelo, and Snyder, all without charge.

Armed Forces Chili Cookoff set Oct 17

Preparations for the 8th Annual Armed Forces Chili Cookoff are picking up steam. The event is scheduled for October 17 at the Goodfellow Air Force Base Recreation Camp on Lake Nasworthy in San Angelo.

Since it is billed as the "Armed Forces" chili cookoff, at least one member of each team must be either active duty or retired military.

The chili chefs must prepare their chili from scratch on that day. Contestants must provide their own equipment and ingredients. They also must make at least one gallon of their "concoction", enough to provide a hearty sampling for each of the brave, if not unsuspecting, judges. Judging will be on palatability, presentation, showmanship and flair.

The winner of this cookoff will be able to compete for the World Chili Championship at Terlingua.

But, while chili cooking is the main reason for the gathering, it is not the only reason. Chili teams will be eligible to perform skits and compete for a showmanship trophy. There will also be awards given for the best site preparation.

Chili team members can also enter the "Miss Faded Authentic Rose of Texas" beauty contest.

Goodfellow officials expect more than 50 teams to cook up a pot of what they think is the finest chili in the Armed Forces.

Services held Monday for Irene Wood

Irene Wood, 85, of Tyler, and formerly of Ballinger, died at 7:25 p.m. Friday at a Tyler hospital.

Services were held at 10 a.m. Monday at First Baptist Church in Ballinger, with Rev. Ferris Akins officiating. Burial was in Old Runnels Cemetery, directed by Rains-Seale Funeral Home.

Born Nov. 16, 1895, in Salado, she was a homemaker. She married F. M. Wood Aug. 22, 1913 in Ballinger. He died Jan. 14, 1961. She was a member of the baptist church, and had moved to Tyler in March.

She is survived by five daughters, Frances Neely and Mae Dell Smith, both of Tyler, Addie Beth Stanley of Winters, Maxine Jones of Kosse and Willa Faye Roper of Spring; two sons, Chester of Cedar Creek and Joe Buford of Portland, Ore.; two sisters, Elizabeth Ellis of Fort Worth and Mary Chase of Santa Rosa, Calif.; a brother, Leo A. Smith of Dallas; 20 grandchildren; and 35 great-grandchildren.

New drugs give new hope for hypertensive people

New drugs being tested at Baylor College of Medicine may extend the lives of people with high blood pressure (hypertension), says a Baylor specialist in blood vessel disease.

The new drugs undergoing clinical testing at Baylor's National Heart and Blood Vessel Research and Demonstration Center offer hope of better blood pressure control with fewer bad side effects than drugs now in use.

"Hypertension affects 50-60 million Americans and is the leading preventable cause of death and disease," said James Pool, M.D., assistant professor of medicine at Baylor.

Although there is no known cure for hypertension, a major risk factor in heart disease, stroke, and kidney failure, it can be controlled with diet and drugs.

The new drugs are important because some present hypertension drugs aggravate other medical conditions or have side effects ranging from headache and sleepiness to impotence. One group of drugs can cause cold hands and feet, a major discomfort in winter.

Pool is seeking 500 volunteers to help test the new drugs that he thinks patients will more easily tolerate.

Advances that could cause patients to be more willing to take drugs for high blood pressure are coming at a critical time, Pool said, because recent studies show that even mild hypertension can shorten life.

"Before these studies, doctors wondered if borderline cases should be treated. The answer is clear now: They need to be treated," Pool said.

Until better drugs are available, Pool advised those who have problems with their medicine to tell their doctor, who can probably change the dose or prescribe a different drug. People with high blood pressure often don't feel sick, Pool said, because they can't "feel" any ill effects, which is why the disorder is sometimes called the "silent killer."

High pressure slowly injures the cells that line blood vessel walls. As the body repairs the injury with new cells, fatty substances such as cholesterol accumulate. Over a period of years the cell layers become thick enough to obstruct the blood vessels (atherosclerosis).

Besides drugs, blood pressure can be controlled by keeping weight down and eating less salt.

CAREER EDUCATION

Career Education, what is it? Is it career awareness? career exploration? career skill development? Is it the process of a young person making one of life's most critical decisions — the choice of a career? The answer to these questions involves the creation of a curriculum that addresses a crucial need in education, realistic guidance, and preparation of students for the world of work.

Vocational education has been challenged to develop curriculum based on the relatively new perception that career choices are made as a part of a continuing process that begins in early childhood and extends over a lifetime. Vocational education should offer students a systematic way of looking at possible careers and at themselves in relation to the various careers. Students should learn to make personal choices as they explore various job opportunities in many different fields and discover the job requirements of the occupations, including skills, attitudes, interests, experience and background.

In today's complex society where the numbers and kinds of jobs are proliferating, the role of student decision-making has become more important than ever. Vocational educators have long been aware that traditional programs while effective in themselves, have not gone far enough in education for career choices. Students must be made aware of the various career choices available before entering a skill development program, if possible. Certainly, before leaving high school to enter the world of work or college, all students should be provided the opportunity of career awareness and exploration in all occupational areas.

To meet the needs of students in broadening and isolating their career decision, the Winters High School Vocational Education departments provide for a wide array of experiences, including the major employment areas. Career development experiences in the following areas are offered to the high school students in Winters:

- Home Economics
- Vocational Agriculture
- Building Construction
- Trades
- Marketing and Distributive Education

These programs represent a hands-on career exploration and career skill development implemented for a comprehensive school setting. In the following weeks, there will be articles on each of the career education programs offered in Winters High School and the different areas each one covers.

In other business, the council okayed a change order calling for some increased expenditures in the construction of the new city lake. The change was necessary to allow for an increase in a drainage blanket near the dam. City Administrator Glenn Brown told the council the need for the increase in the drainage blanket was found during a computer re-run by the city's engineering firm. He emphasized that the increase in cost was not due to inflation.

The council was also brought up to date on the construction program at the lake and learned the project was approximately 30 per cent completed. The completion time allowed in the contract on the project is 23 months, but city officials are hoping the lake can be completed in time to receive runoff from the fall rains of 1982.

The council determined that before it can approve a requested zoning change on a block of north Main, the Planning and Zoning Commission must first hold its hearings. The city has scheduled its hearings for November 2, at 5:30 p.m. in the City Council Chambers. The property in question is located at 406 and 408 North Main. The zoning re-classification is being requested by a convenience store chain who is wanting to construct a store at that location.

The council nominated Billy Joe Colburn to serve as the City's representative on the Runnels County Tax Appraisal District Board of Directors.

The council members finished their meeting with a rather lengthy discussion on the Community Center. The city administrator told the council that the Community Center is not generating enough revenue to meet its expenses. Brown said that expenses over the past ten months totaled $5,200 and that revenue generated by the renting of the Community Center totaled only $1800.

The council agreed to table until the next meeting changing the rates charged for the use of the center. In further discussion, the council members expressed a desire to clarify the rules governing the use of the Community Center. The council said the rules need to be revised and that some of the rules were very vague. Any changing of the rules at the Community Center also was tabled until a later meeting.

City Administrator Glenn Brown was given the go-ahead by the council to refurbish the offices in the city hall. Brown had asked for approval of replacing of the old window shades with 'mini-blinds', installing carpeting, and adding

Junior Varsity posts 13-12 win

The Winters Junior Varsity won a thriller last Thursday against the Merkel Junior Varsity with a 13-12 final score.

The passing of Bill Wheat, the catching of Baron Guy, and the strong running of Greg Gueverra formed the right combination for the win. Kevin Busher, Greg Gueverra, and Baron Guy led a strong defense that stopped a goalline attempt by Merkel.

The junior varsity fell behind 12-7 with only 51 seconds remaining in the game and then Kelly Hood returned the kickoff to the Merkel 40 yard line. A pass from Bill Wheat to Baron Guy put the ball on the 24 yard line, and from there, Greg Gueverra scored the winning points with only one second to go in the game.

The eighth grade team won their second in a row to up their record to 2-0-2. The seventh grade lost and their record reflected the loss with a 1-3.

All three teams play in Albany this Thursday beginning at 5 p.m.
