"Everyone in Winters and the surrounding area is invited to attend our banquet and get a feel for the many Centennial activities scheduled during the year," said Bonnie Lee, Chamber manager.

WISD Board considers closed campuses at January meeting

During the regular session of the Winters Independent School District Board of Trustees meeting January 9, 1990, the issue of closing the campuses of the Winters schools was discussed. Closing of the campuses would mean that all students, P-K through 12, would remain on campus at all times throughout the school day, including lunch break. Concern for students' safety and the need for responsible supervision of students at all times during the school day were seen as the main reasons for the possible adoption of such a policy.

Superintendent of Schools T.D. Lancaster, was instructed by the Board to formulate guidelines for their consideration toward the implementation of this program.

This item was tabled and will be brought to a vote at the March meeting of the Board.

Fire Department thanks donors

The Winters Volunteer Fire Department would like to say "Thank you" to the following people who have responded so promptly to the letters sent with their generous donations.

In November 1989 approximately 800 letters were mailed to rural property owners, suggesting a 20¢ per acre or $20 minimum donation to be made to the fire department to help pay off the '88 truck bank loan, purchase much needed equipment and upgrade equipment.

City Council sets new rate for water supply corporation

The Winters City Council set a new rate for the North Runnels Water Supply Corporation during its regular meeting Monday night. The new rate will be $2.05, up from the previous $1.98.

Council members voted to donate $500 to Crimestoppers.

Two other items were also discussed, but no action was taken on them.

As of January 19, 1990, only 245 of the 800 have responded to the letters. For the plan to work to the fullest, the fire department encourages all those who have not responded to do so. "If you can't send the amount suggested, please send what you can," said a fire department spokesman. "Any amount will be appreciated, for so much is needed by your fire department."

"It is a good feeling to live in a community that is willing to help their fire department in a time of need," said Janice Merrill. "It is with great appreciation that we acknowledge the following donors:"

OIL BUSINESS

By Reg Boles

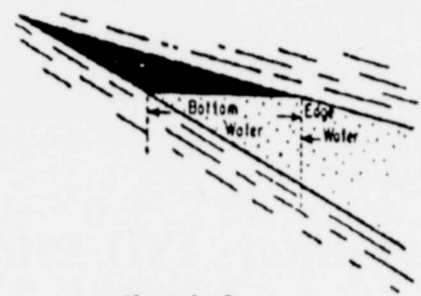

As a service to our readers, I will dedicate one column per month to the basics of the oil and gas business. And, you guessed it, this will be the first of that series. The fourth week of each month will be the designated time for our review. Hopefully, the articles will be of interest to "worms" and "old hands", alike. (Definition: Worm=someone who knows nothing about the oil patch.) The topics will begin with basic geology and continue through the legalities and engineering concepts to the daily headaches that must be overcome. I hope it is of some interest to you and yours.

Our first topic will be the origin and geology of petroleum. It sounds boring, but it really is interesting and it will be short. Trust me. Besides, it might come in handy when you are trying to impress relatives.

Let's discard some myths and misconceptions, first. Oil is not in some hollow underground cave just waiting to be pumped out. It is called a reservoir, but it is not like Lake Spence. The oil is contained in small spaces be-you are the messy sort). Oil reservoirs are very similar, only the reservoir rock is hard, unlike a soft sponge.

Another common misconception is that oil occurs everywhere just like the water table encountered in water wells. I only wish that were true—we would all be rich. Actually, a trap of some kind must have formed and oil must have migrated there at one time. Oil is the carbon and oxygen result of the melting and transformation of dead plants and animals. It is fluid and will move until it is trapped. It could be trapped by a big fold in the earth that traps oil as shown in Sketch 2 or it could be something more complex. Suffice it to say that the oil must be trapped or it will have slipped under some-one else's land (about a million years ago) where a trap existed.

Now that we have a better idea of what oil reservoirs are, let's think about how they are located. A little geology primer will help us.

We are sitting on top of several million years of old dead animals, and various other bits of trash and discardables. It is laid down in layers according to when the refuse was discarded. The periods of time when the layers were formed are grouped together into formations and/or zones. The longer ago it was discarded and formed, the deeper it will be. (There are exceptions, but that is the basic idea.) Several oil reservoirs can exist at several different depths if traps were formed in several different formations and organic matter happened to be in the vicinity. I think you get the idea. Any geologist will tell you that it is much more complicated than this simple explanation (especially if he is charging a tidy fee as a consultant).

If you are looking for a place to drill, there are several methods for locating a potential reservoir as explained above. The most used method is really hard work. If you have wells in the area of interest, you can look at "well logs". These "logs" are, simply put, recordings by depth of certain electrical, chemical, and nuclear properties of rock as measured by a tool which has been lowered into a well. It turns out that well log responses have certain characteristics in certain formations and certain oil reservoirs. Thus, the possible occurrence of oil reservoirs can be predicted by mapping the measurements indicated by existing well logs in an area. Interpretation plays a big part, but if a place to drill exists where you think an oil reservoir might exist, then you have a proposed location for a new well.

Other more complex methods exist for locating an oil reservoir, especially in areas where no current wells exist and no log data is available. That type of exploration is called wildcatting and you will be right only 10% of the time. Seismic measurements (bouncing sound waves off underground structures with surface charges) and satellite prospecting (looking for underground structures by photographing surface features) are two of many examples of the more exotic methods.

There are a million other pieces of data that can be used to propose a new well, but the above scenario leads you through a typical methodology to find oil and drill wells. Next month, we will talk about how to get rights to the land where you want to drill, which is the next step in drilling your very own gusher.

Now, my disclaimer: By reading the above, you do not become an expert in oil and gas exploration. I provide no guarantee to the accuracy of the above information, and I am not rep-sponsible for any actions by any reader of the above information. Anybody who thinks so is a ninny or a lawyer. (Disclaimers are the first things you learn to do in college.)

FROM A GOLDFISH BOWL

BY PASTOR STEVE BYRNE

Last week both our cows had calves. These were the first offspring since we owned the cows. So, not only was it a first for the calves who were born, but it was a first for the Byrne family, as well.

It was an exciting time. Seeing those two beautiful black calves running and romping behind their mothers.

We had to watch them from a distance. The calves are not too sure about these strange animals of a different color, which walk on two legs.

It takes time to develop trust. Folks who know these things tell me that there will come a time when the Mamas will bring their offspring up to us at feeding time. They will show their little ones off to us. No less proud than any mother of a first born. Only the calves will be dancing and prancing like debutantes showing themselves off to society.

The trust will come. It will be slow.

Then one day I will betray that trust. In eight or nine months, I will separate the calves from their mothers. Then I will load them up. Take them to the auction. Or else take them down to Jack Smith's place to be processed into nourishment for the family.

Sometimes it seems that this is the way of all of us. We work hard to build trust with one another. And then, in a moment of weakness, or not thinking, we betray the trust. Or we are betrayed. Or both.

If we really want to continue the relationship, God has given us the prerequisite for such an option. Forgiveness. Then we slowly begin to build the trust again. And it all starts over again. If the betrayal was not fatal.

This is the way of human trust. Human relationships. This is as good as it gets.

Ultimate trust belongs to God alone. Placing our ultimate faith in human beings (even ourselves) can only lead to frustration and alienation. We need ONE who is faithful. ONE who is more faithful than we are. None of us are worthy of being the source of this ultimate faith. Sooner or later, we will all betray one another. Just like I am one day going to betray the future trust of those cows and their calves.

IF WE SAY WE HAVE NO SIN, WE DECEIVE OURSELVES, AND THE TRUTH IS NOT IN US. IF WE CONFESS OUR SINS, HE IS FAITHFUL AND JUST, AND WILL FORGIVE OUR SINS AND CLEANSE US FROM ALL UNRIGHTEOUSNESS. (1 John 1:8-9)

CHAD GRISWOLD

Why I Am Proud of America
By Chad Griswold

I am proud of America because it is a free country. I am especially proud of all the people who gave up their lives so that we may be free.

This country gives me freedom of religion. My religion is Christianity. In other countries, you have to worship in one way. But in America we can worship the way we want to which is why our forefathers founded this country. Not being told what to do, when to do it, and how to do it is also important to me. In Christianity, the Holy Spirit is your guide and not the government, forcing their beliefs upon you.

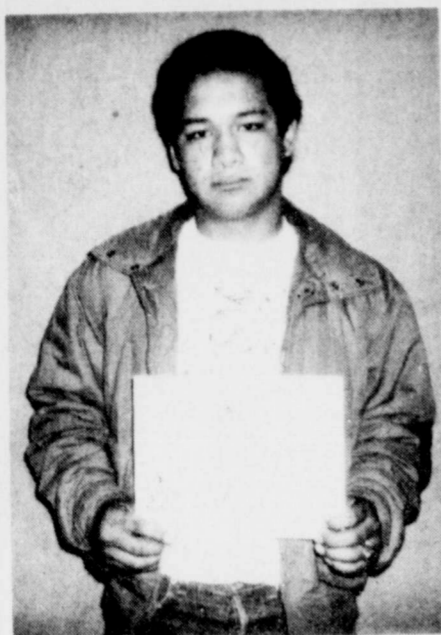

Speech is another great freedom I enjoy. I can express myself in any way I want except saying untrue things that can hurt or upset or even ruin a person's reputation. If I don't like what the government is doing, then I have the right to voice my opinion. I can tell the people who represent me how I feel and why I feel this way because our government is made up of people elected by the people (that's me). If we do not express our feelings, our country could be taken over by others who may not allow us this freedom. Our opinion is needed to keep our nation free.

I am free and safe because of my country's armed forces. These men and women are willing to give their lives for me and my family. I bow my head and give thanks to those who died so I can be free. I am especially proud of my forefathers who guaranteed me this feeling of safety.

The right to bear arms means a lot to me because of the feeling of security it brings -- I feel like I could protect my family if someone was trying to harm us. Also, I am a sportsman, and I enjoy hunting deer, pheasant, dove and quail. In other countries, the only weapons are in the hands of the police and the crooks and the innocent people are in danger because they have no protection.

Education is a very important part of my life -- if it were not for free public education, we would be a nation of ignorant people. I realize that kids gripe about going to school, but a person can make it a refreshing or depressing time. It is a great place to learn and make friends. We all need to be thankful that we have this free education because not all children in the world can say that their education is free and that it is for all!

I am proud of this country because we are free -- free to go anywhere, free to do what we want to do, and free to get an education. One dream that I have is for all the world to be free so that we can get along with each other, and all can experience what we Americans have enjoyed for so long. Freedom is something that is so wonderful -- it is hard to show the importance of it, but by living our lives in freedom we can be a good example to the world. God bless this country in which I live, for she is wonderful in every way. And finally, I would like to say thanks to all the people who have died for all of the things I enjoy -- thank you for all the freedoms you have given to me, and I just wish you could be here with me today sharing all these wonderful things. In a special way, you are heroes -- heroes to everyone in America.

Why I Am Proud of America
By Chris Perez

Have you ever considered the thought of living in Russia? I have; I've thought about how their government runs everything for the people. I, myself, wouldn't want somebody else making decisions and telling me what to do. But I'm glad that I live in America, and I'm given the right to do many things. My country has a Constitution which grants and protects me and my actions. The Constitution under Amendment I gives me these rights. I am proud to live in America because America is a democratic government -- that means the people get to elect and vote on the people who run for office or who control our country.

Under Amendment I, I have many rights granted. Amendment I states, "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the Government for a redress of grievances." This clause means that I have the right to free speech, religion, and the right to get a governmental official out of office. If any of these rights are violated, I then can take it to the Supreme Court to have something done. By doing this, I am being protected. As an American, I can claim whether my rights have been violated.

America being a democracy is another reason why I'm glad to be an American. Being in a democratic government, I have the right to elect the people who I feel will serve the purpose of the office. I can elect a person who will hear me and try to get the things that I want accomplished. I, myself, would elect a person who I feel would do his best in the position elected. I'm also proud to be an American because our country has a well-developed government. Our government has been the most stable and the most highly regarded one in the world.

I'm also proud of America because we are one nation under God, with liberty, and justice for all. I'm proud because I don't have to run and hide just to worship my God. I have the freedom to worship whom I see fit. I also have the right to worship anything; it doesn't have to be God. I have the right to express how I feel in public. If I don't like the way something is, I can have it changed or make it stop. I can do this in many ways. For instance, I can vote against it; I can also have it changed through petition. Under Amendment I, I have the right to have these changes made through freedom of speech. This clause gives me these rights, but this clause is limited -- not absolute. This means that I'm protected to a certain extent. Then the courts must decide whether it is constitutional or not.

I'm proud of America because I am granted many things, which are limited and not absolute. I'm also proud because my country is a democracy, and I'm granted many more rights because I can vote on what I want to happen or who will serve a term in office. If I don't like the way it is run, I then can change it through votes, petition, and other ways.

RV hook-ups needed

ATTENTION: Anyone who has a RV hook-up which could be used during the Winters Centennial celebration is urged to notify the Winters Chamber of Commerce office.

The CoC has received calls and visits from RV owners wanting to know if there will be hook-ups in town for the celebration.

"This is a great opportunity for Winters people to show their hospitality and friendliness," said Bonnie Lee of the Chamber.

Call the Chamber office at 754-5210 if you have an RV hook-up which might be used or if you know of hook-ups now available in Winters.

The need for hook-ups is year-long, added Mrs. Lee.

Pirate's Log

Report cards will be issued on Wednesday, January 24. Everyone has worked hard this semester so hopefully there will be only good grades to report.

Mrs. Sneed's class has begun a new library project. Each student has adopted a shelf in the library. The student is responsible for keeping the books on his/her shelf neat and in the proper order. This helps students learn how books are arranged in the library and gives them extra practice on alphabetical order. When they have a few spare minutes between classes, they come by the library to check their shelf. So far, the whole class is doing a great job of keeping their shelves in order.

Monday, January 22, the Pirates will travel to Paint Rock. The girls' game will begin at 6:00. Thursday, February 1, will be the first day of the Paint Rock Tournament. Our first opponent on the bracket will be Menard "A".

Literary and Service Club hears about Bryan's African visit

The Literary and Service Club met in the parlor of the First Methodist Church Thursday, Jan. 1, at 6:30 p.m. Hostesses were Mary Stanfield, Linda Dry and Jean Owen.
The meeting was called to order by club president, Mrs. Eula Mae Kruse. Litany for Club Women was led by Lela Thormeyer.
Speaker for the evening, Grady Bryan, was introduced by Jo Olive Hancock. Bryan, a former Winters High School student, now a senior at Abilene Christian University, gave a slide presentation of his three month stay in Kenya, Africa, which he said made a deep impression on him.
He offered a true insight into the country -- its land and their beliefs and customs, from their thatched roofed houses and ox-drawn plows, to their belief that being rich is to be healthy and have all your body parts intact.
Bryan said it is quite common to find Kenyans who are quite fluent in five different languages; however, the role of women is limited and general sanitary conditions there are poor.
The business meeting that followed was called to order by Mrs. Kruse. Minutes from the December meeting were read by club secretary Noma Eoff and the treasurer's report was given by Billie Middlebrook.
Corresponding secretary Darlene Sims read a letter of thanks from the Education Service Center of San Angelo and also one from The Winters Food Pantry.
Betty Wessels, Federation counselor, reminded the group of the upcoming Heart of Texas spring convention March 23-24 at Lone Star Country Club between Eastland and Ranger.
Library chairman Jean Owen reported that books were advancing in price and urged the group to keep saving cans.

Ethel Mae Clark, chairperson of the nominating committee, submitted the following names for officers for the coming year: Betty Wessels, president; Teressa Patterson, vice president; Gwen Andrae, recording secretary; Darlene Sims, corresponding secretary; Billie Middlebrook, treasurer. The vote for acceptance of these officers was unanimous.
Betty Wessels then spoke on the Winters Centennial Celebration and made a suggestion that the club participate by selling Centennial buttons. The suggestion was acted upon and accepted.
Mrs. Kruse asked all department chairmen to please turn in their reports as soon as possible and, after thanking the hostesses, declared the meeting adjourned.
Those present were: guest speaker Grady Bryan and members: Eula Mae Kruse, Billie Middlebrook, Darlene Sims, Noma Eoff, Jo Olive Hancock, Ethel Mae Clark, Gwen Andrae, Estella Bredemeyer, Selma Dietz, Lela Thormeyer, Shirley Brewer, Sheila Paschal, Teressa Patterson, Lou Ann Hatler, Betty Wessels, Jean Owen, Mary Stanfield and Linda Dry.

Medicare revamped for 1990

With the repeal of the Medicare Catastrophic Act of 1988, Congress has shifted more of the burden of financing health care for senior citizens to the private sector.
In 1989 Medicare members were required to pay a $560 deductible per year for hospitalizations. The new 1990 ruling requires $592 of deductible for each hospital admission. Hospital stays separated by less than 60 days will not require a new deductible. In addition the new ruling requires daily deductibles of as much as $296 for hospital stays exceeding 60 days.
The 1990 Medicare Guidelines also have reduced the number of days members will receive benefits in a skilled nursing care facility - last year's limit being 150 days to this year's 100 days.
Benefits provided by Medicare for physicians, services, supplies, physical and speech therapy, ambulance, and other "part B services", remain unchanged; eighty percent of approved charges after a $75 deductible each year.
According to Abilene-based insurance broker Craig Gehrels, inexpensive supplemental coverage which helps "bridge the gaps" left by the new Medicare rulings is available to all Big Country senior citizens.

Letter to the Editor:

We would like to express our gratitude and a big "thank you" to a Winters policeman, David Wheeler. Our one year old was accidentally locked inside our car. A policeman was summoned and David was there in just a few seconds. He was most patient, courteous, kind and very efficient. He is to be commended for his help.

You don't really appreciate someone until you really need them. The people of Winters should be proud to have him serve their community. Let him know you appreciate the work he does for you.

Thank you David for being there when we needed you. May God bless you in your work.

Sincerely,
Karen Hicks and Angela Hicks

Twain Talk

by Twyla Twain

Don't you just love to shop? I'm not talking about the kind of run-in-the-store-for-bread shopping. I'm talking about the all-day, twelve-hour marathon shopping trip that requires the physical stamina of Joe Montana, the financial genius of Donald Trump and the patience of Job.

And if you take along a 3-year old and a 5-year old, you've turned an ordinary day into a real adventure. Just getting everyone dressed and into the car without bloodshed is an accomplishment. And although you asked everyone ten times about going to the potty, not until you are 30 miles from the nearest restroom does anyone recognize this business.

So instead of having a relaxed drive while looking at the beautiful livestock, playing the alphabet game and singing along with the "Wee Sing", you get to drive like a maniac, all pressed up against the steering wheel, making constant threats to the little person who refused to potty just ten minutes earlier. But with years' experience of driving like this, you round the corner on two wheels and screech to a halt at the nearest convenience store and run to one of those questionable bathrooms that doesn't specify gender. Then after risking life and limb, the dear little one decides she "feels better now" and doesn't really have "to go".

So you all pile back in the car and you glance in the mirror to see that little vein on the side of your forehead beginning to bulge and you hope you didn't leave the iron on at home and that surely you brought enough aspirin for the entire day.

Things seem to brighten up when you finally reach the discount store and everyone makes it inside without mashing a finger in the car door. So far, so good. Get the list out-of-oh yes, the list. The list that you now remember you left on the counter at home with three million dollars' worth of coupons. Oh, well, you pretty well remember what you and everyone else (who knew you were shopping), need so you'll just wing it. So put the kids in the shopping basket. Don't even think about the searing pain in your back every time you turn and lift that chunky kid who seems to always put both feet in the same side of the seat area.

And the big kid refuses to ride in the safety of the basket so you secure him with all the mountain-climbing gear you brought and let him stroll alongside, reminding him gently "LEAVE THAT ALONE!"

Now you're off-almost. Seems that you got the 1-in-100 dreaded "possessed buggy". You know, the one that has a mind of its own and that no matter which direction you try to push or steer, that buggy is in command. So you hope Junior will pay attention and not succumb to the curse of the buggy and fall under the wheels, or that sweet sister will not get her first whiplash because you tried to go down the detergent aisle at the wrong time.

So after going from store to store, potty to potty, you finally decide you've "had enough" and after one last potty break, everybody gets back in the car. Almost. Seems that Junior's little finger was destined to meet with the car door. So you kiss it to make it well, play nurse all the way home while driving and try to remember what you forgot to buy, and wonder if that grinding noise under the hood is anything important. And as you glance back in the mirror, you see the purple vein now matches the circles under your eyes. But it all comes to a real high when you finally reach the sanctity of home and hubby says, "What in the world took so long?"

Wonder what the weather is like in Tahiti and if you need a buggy to shop there?

CONGRESSMAN and MRS. CHARLES STENHOLM

Cong. Stenholm will seek re-election

Congressman Charles W. Stenholm has announced his plans to seek a seventh term as representative of the 17th District of Texas.

The conservative Democrat from Jones County said he wants a two-year extension on his contract to serve the people of West Texas. He wants to continue strong support for rural health care providers and a 1990 Farm Bill that insures sufficient quantities of top quality food.

"Our system produces the safest food at the least cost of any in the world and we must keep it this way," Stenholm said.

"The people of West Texas are the best in the country and being their representative is a serious responsibility for me,"

Card of Thanks

We sincerely appreciate the compassion shown and the loving care given to our mother by Dr. Lee, the nurses and staff of the hospital. You are the best and we'll always remember you.

We want to thank our many friends for the kindness and all the wonderful food you've given us.

We treasure each and every one of you.

Family of Vicie Self

the Congressman added.
