Roger Brown Wins Seat in Legislature

No. 26

Roger Brown, Big Spring attorney, won himself a seat in the Texas House of Representatives last Saturday when he carried a special election held all over the 78th Legislative District by the narrow margin of 110 votes over

Brown had the outcome pretty well figured when he predicted that if the race was close in his home county of Howard, the smaller counties of the district would turn the tide in his favor.

Coming in second was Frank Hardesty, Big Spring drug store operator and long time Howard County Democratic leader. Harold Hall, the other candidate, who was dubbed a Republican during the campaign, came in third.

Total vote in the seven-county district was Brown, 1,376; Hardesty, 1,266; Hall, 925.

Brown picked up nearly a third of his lead over Hardesty in Coke County. He received 85, Hardesty had 53 and Hall polled 42 votes. Brown also outran his two opponents in Irion and Martin counties. Howard County, home of all three candidates, gave Hardesty the lead with 1,081, Brown 1,057, and Hall 639. Only 182 persons in Coke County bothered to vote in the special election.

A German scientist did this very experiment in 1927 and came up with these findings:

One person will pull much closer to his total capacity of strength if he is the only one on the rope. As the number of fellow pullers increases, the effort of each person drops.

"So that when you have three people pulling on the rope," Dr. Willems said, "you find that each is pulling about three-fourths his capacity.

"When you have eight pullers, one-half his capacity."

Now what could all this have to do with how big - or smalla school should be?

Dr. Willems, a Public Health Service rerearch fellow at the Midwest Psychological Field Station in Oskaloosa, Kan., explains it this way:

Taking the rope-pulling "law" of the German scientist, a study was conducted at five Kansas high schools on how much participation per student there was in re-Continued on back page strength of concrete depends primarily on the ratio of water to cement. For example, a ratio of six gallons of water per sack of cement to 20% stronger than a ratio of seven gallons of water per sack.

Mr. Allen states that floors subject to heavy wear should be made with a ratio of five gallons of water to one sack of cement. Driveways and areas with less wear would be satisfactory with a raito of six to one, while areas such as footings on foundations that are not exposed to the elements and are not subject to wear could be satisfactorily produced at a ratio of seven to one.

And a final note, he adds that water should not be added to ready mix to make it flow easier.
