Beef in Belgium.

Washington, Aug. 4.-Official letters Presidio. received here from the representatives of the United States in Germany bring many details concerning the recent action in that country looking to the exclusion of beef slaughtered in Belgium from the home German markets, and leave little room for doubt that this is done for the purpose of preventing the indirect introduction of the American product. The letters state that proclamations have been issued by the authorities of the Prussian Here they will remain for several provinces of Aarchen, Dusseldorf, Osnabruck, Luneburg, Schleswig, Danzig when they will be taken to their Pennand Gumbinne, and also in the grand duchy of Oldenburg and Mecklenberg and the ministry of Alsace-Lorraine against the admission of beef slaughtered in Belgium. These subdivisions of territory cover the entire Belgium frontier of Germany, and render it imbeef into the empire. While the central government of Germany takes no official action in the premises, it is pointed out that the course of the subordinate governments is inspired from Berlin and some of the proclamations set forth that the action is taken at the instance of the imperial chancellor. ### IN THE SOUTH SEAS.

By Frank T. Bullen, in "The Cruise of the Cachalot": When between Cosmoledos and Astove, the next island to the northward, we sighted a "solitary" cachalot one morning just as the day dawned. It was the first for some time -nearly three weeks-and being well seasoned to the work now, we obeyed the call to arms with great alacrity. Our friend was making a passage, turning neither to the right hand nor the left as he went. His rising and number of spouts while up, as well as the time he remained below, were as regular as the progress of a clock, and could be counted upon with quite as much certainty.

Bearing in mind, I suppose, the general character of the whales we had recently met with, only two boats were lowered to attack the newcomer, who, all unconscious of our coming, pursued his leisurely course unheeding.

We got a good weathergage of him, and came flying on as usual, getting two irons planted in fine style. But a surprise awaited us. As we sheered up into the wind away from him, Louis shouted: "Fightin' whale, sir; look out for de rush!" Look out, indeed! Small use in looking out when, hampered as we always were at first with the unshipping of the mast, we could do next to nothing to avoid him. Without any of the desperate flounderings generally indulged in on first feeling the iron, he turned upon us, and had it not been that he caught sight of the second mate's boat, which had just arrived, and turned his attention to her, there would have been but scant chance of any escape for us. Leaping half out of the water, he made direct for our comrades with a vigor and ferocity marvelous to see, making it no easy matter for them to avoid his tremendous rush. Our actions, at no time slow, were considerably hastened by his display of valor, so that before he could turn his attention in our direction we were ready for him. Then ensued a really big fight, the first, in fact, of my experience, for none of the other whales had shown any serious determination to do us an injury, but had devoted all their energies to attempts at escape. So quick were the evolutions, and so savage the appearance of this fellow, that even our veteran mate looked anxious as to the possible result. Without attempting to sound the furious monster kept mostly below the surface; but whenever he rose, it was either to deliver a fearful blow with his tail, or, with jaws widespread, to try and bite one of our boats in half. Well was it for us that he was severely handicapped by a malformation of the lower jaw. At a short distance from the throat it turned off nearly at right angles to his body, the part that thus protruded sideways being deeply fringed with barnacles and plated with big limpets.

Had it not been for this impediment I verily believe he would have beaten us altogether. As it was, he worked us nearly to death with his ugly rushes. Once he delivered a sidelong blow with his tail, which, as we spun around, shore off the two oars on that side as if they had been carrots. At last the second mate got fast to him. and then the character of the game changed again. Apparently unwearied by his previous exertions he now started off to windward at top speed, with the two boats sheering broadly out upon either side of his foaming wake. Doubtless because he himself was much fatigued, the mate allowed him to run at his will, without, for the time, attempting to haul any closer to him, and very grateful the short rest was to us. But he had not gone a couple of miles before he turned a complete somersault in the water, coming up behind us, to rush off again in the opposite direction at undiminished speed. This move was a startler. For the moment it seemed as if both boats would be smashed like eggshells against each other or else that some of tion. us would be impaled upon the long lances with which each boat's bow lance, the foe was becoming wearier, while the strain was certainly telling upon our nerves. So Mr. Count got out his bomb gun shouting at the same time to Mr. Cruce to do the same. They both hated these weapons, nor ever used them if they could help it; but what was to be done?

Our chief had hardly got his gun ready before we came to almost a dead stop. All was silent for just a moment, then, with a roar like a cataract, up sprang the huge creature, head out, jaw wide open, coming direct for us. As coolly as if on the quarterdeck the mate raised his gun, firing the bomb directly down the great livid cavern of a throat fronting him. Down went that mountainous head, not six inches from us, but with a perfectly indescribable motion, a tremendous writhe, in face; up flew the broad tail in the air, and a blow which might have sufficed to stave in the side of the ship struck the second mate's boat fairly amidships. It was right before my eyes, not sixty feet away, and the sight will haunt me to my death. The tub oarsman was a poor German, and that awful blow put an end to all his earthly anxieties. As it shore obliquely through the center of the boat, it drove his poor body right through her timbers-an undistinguishable bundle of what was an instant before a human being. The other members of the crew escaped the blow, and the harpooner managed to cut the line, so that for the present they were safe enough, clinging to the remains of their boat, unless the whale should choose to rush across them.

Happily, the rushing was almost over. The bomb fired by Mr. Count, with such fatal result to poor Bamberger, must have exploded right in the whale's throat. Whether his previous titanic efforts had completely exhausted him, or whether the bomb had broken his massive backbone, I do not know, of course, but he went into no flurry, dying as peacefully as his course had been furious. For the first time in my life I had been face to face with a violent death, and I was quite stunned with the awfulness of the experience. Mechanically, as it seemed to me, we obeyed such orders as were given, but every man's thoughts were with the shipmate so suddenly dashed from among us. We never saw signs of him again. . . . We got the whale cut in as usual without any incident worth mentioning, except that the peculiar shape of the jaw made it an object of great curiosity to all of us who were new to the whale fishing. Such malformations are not very rare. They are generally thought to occur when the animal is young, and its bones soft; but whether done in fighting with one another, or in some more mysterious way, nobody knows. Cases have been known, I believe, where the deformed whale does not appear to have suffered from lack of food in consequence of his disability; but in each of the three instances which have come under my own notice, such was certainly not the case. Those whales were what is termed by the whalers "dry-skins;" that is, they were in poor condition, the blubber yielding less than half the usual quantity of oil. The absence of oil makes it very hard to cut up, and there is more work in one whale of this kind than in two whose blubber is rich and soft.

GUNS THAT DON'T KILL,

Guns have plenty of uses apart from killing. For instance, the signal gun of a ship is intended solely for announcing her arrival on a coast.

Again, in desert countries, where waer is difficult to collect out of a mere dampness of sand, a gun barrel sunk into the ground will collect moisture in the bore, and many a life has been saved by a timely suck at the muzzle.

In many an English town the 1 o'clock gun fired by electricity from Greenwich observatory is used for setting all the clocks; while the minuteguns are fired for public mourning and national rejoicings take the form of a royal salute.

A slaver captured with a cargo of slaves in the tropics was put in charge of a prize crew. On her voyage the water ran short, and both slaves, slavers and prize crew were dying of thirst. This set one of the marines-a sergeant-thinking, and he hit upon a brilliant idea.

After gaining reluctant consent from the captain he took all the available gun-barrels, plugged up the breechends of a few of them, filled their bores with sea-water, and set them end up among the coals of the galley-fire. As the steam rose he ran it through over gun-barrels until it got cool. The cooling steam collected in the shape of excellent fresh water, of which he procured a steady though small supply.-Answers.

Miss Susan Wymar, teacher in the Richmond school, Chicago, Ill., writes the following letter to Dr. Hartman regarding Pe-ru-na. She says: "Only those who have suffered as I have can know what a blessing it is to be able to find relief in Pe-ru-na. This has been my experience. A friend in need is a friend indeed, and every bottle of Peru-na I ever bought proved a good friend to me."-Susan Wymar

Mrs. Margaretha Dauben, 1214 North Superior St., Racine City, Wis., writes: "I feel so well and good and happy now that pen cannot describe it. Pe-ru-na is everything to me. I have taken several bottles of Pe-ru-na for female complaint. I am in the change of life and it does me good." Pe-ru-na has no equal in all of the irregularities and emergencies peculiar to women caused by pelvic catarrh.

Pe-ru-na is an absolute specific for these ailments, which are so common in summer. #### IT COSTS 35 MILLIONS.

An Enormous Sum Spent in Rebuilding and Re-equipping the B. & O. R. R.

The receivership of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, which has just come to a close, was remarkable in many ways. Messrs. Cowen and Murray did not follow precedent, but went ahead and placed the property in first-class shape, instead of attempting to maintain it in the condition that they found held by a majority of the security holders and the court, but the Baltimore and Ohio receivership marked an epoch in such affairs that will be historical. The vast sums expended were put out in '96 and '97, when trade was at a low ebb and money scarce. During their administration the receivers purchased 15,350 box cars, 6,751 wooden gondola cars, 6,000 pressed steel cars, 310 miscellaneous freight cars, postal, express and dining car equipment, at a total cost of $17,000,000. The 216 locomotives cost nearly two and one-half millions. The steel rail purchased amounted to 123,010 tons, costing $2,142,152, and there were bought over 3,000,000 cross ties, costing $1,200,000, and 750,000 cubic yards of ballast amounting to $525,000. The new steel bridges aggregate in value $750,000, and fully as much more was spent in improving the several terminals, erecting new buildings, reducing grades and changing the alignment. The maintenance of way payrolls, or the amount paid directly to men employed in making improvements on the tracks, etc., in three years was nearly twelve millions of dollars. The total amounts to about $35,000,000, of which about $15,000,000 were secured by the issuance of receivers' certificates and the balance through car trusts, earnings from the property and from the reorganization managers. Most of the purchases of equipment and rail were made when material was low in price and manufacturing concerns were in great need of orders to keep their plants in operation. Steel rails are worth now from $6 to $9 a ton more than when the receivers made their purchases, and locomotives have advanced from $2,000 to $30,000 in price. The equipment alone, if purchased today, would cost $5,000,000 more and the other improvements $1,000,000 more. President Cowen is authority for the statement that the new company intends spending $10,000,000 more in improvements in the next year or two.

LED A STORMY LIFE.

THE LATE GEORGE W. JULIAN WAS A FIGHTER.

That Is in a Political Sense-His Early Adherence to the Abolitionist Cause Won Him Fame, Friends and Foes in Large Numbers.

George W. Julian died at his home in Irvington, near Indianapolis, the other morning. He was 82 years of age, but he had not been in poor health. until a few days before his death. A stroke of apoplexy brought unconsciousness, and the certainty to his friends and family that the end was near. His daughter, Mrs. Grace Julian Clarke, his son Paul, and the family physician were with him when he died.

In Appleton's American Biography there appears after the name of Mr. Julian the word "statesman." If questioned on the subject he himself would probably not have desired other appellation descriptive of the purpose of his eventful life. The generation of today has little if any recollection of his deeds, but the generation which is passing away knew him as a virile, rugged, uncompromising constructionist of reforms during the period from 1850 to 1875. A hater of shams, of false political pretenses, of slavery, mental or to the organization of the free soil movement of Indiana; the upbuilding of the Republican party and the abolition of slavery. In his days Indiana was not as strong an abolition state as | times. some historians would now have it ap-the slave-holding states was one of absolute resistance to slavery and no compromise with its exponents.

When in 1852 the free soil party placed in the field a presidential ticket Mr. Julian was the nominee for vice president and made the canvass. H was not a brilliant speaker, but a vigorous fighter, and set in his notions favoring old-fashioned, downright honesty in political as well as private affairs. Having also great physical courage, he proved himself a foeman of feared power to the slave owners.

When the first reports of the organization of the national Republican party in Cleveland came west, Mr. Julian studied its platform, and then announced that he believed in it, that both the whig and free soil parties were to be replaced by the Republican, and that from thence on he was a Republican. He was elected a delegate to the first national convention of the new party, held at Pittsburg in 1856, was made vice president of the convention and chairman of the committee on organization. Returning to Indiana and regarding was as inevitable, he campaigned for the cause of abolition until 1860, when he was again elected to congress, this time as a Republican. For the next ten years he was a prominent political character in Washington, noted for his unswerving honesty, his bluntness, a slight disposition to be crabbed when opposed, but always having his face set toward the physical, he gave the best of his talents | right. He served on the joint committee on the conduct of the war and for eight years was chairman of the committee on public lands. He was re-elected to his seat in congress four pear. Julian's experience there in produced by conditions on the then combating the slave-owning influence was little different from that of Lovejoy in Illinois, except that he was not assassinated. His public meetings were routed, buildings stormed in which he was sheltered, and many times his life placed in peril.

He was born near Centerville, Ind., May 5, 1817, educated in such common schools as there were in those days, studied law, taught school and was admitted to the bar in 1840. He was a whig as a young man, and as such was elected to the Indiana house of representatives in 1845. From the start of his legislative experience he was rot in harmony with his party on the great questions of the hour. For that matter he was never a strenuous party man. He accepted party organizations so long as they conformed with his ideas of justice and right, but no longer. The whig party in Indiana in 1845 was undergoing the same process of dissolution that overtook it in Ohio in 1852-53. The free soil party seemed to be the coming organization for men determined to prevent the extension of slavery. In 1848 Mr. Julian attached himself to the cause of the free soilers. He was a quaker by birth, and slavery was therefore especially repugnant to him as an institution. He found the free soil people not well organized and in need of a leader. He took that position, and in reality gave the party its first permanent form through which it was enabled to assume a national character. He was a prominent delegate to the Buffalo free soil convention, and from 1849 to 1851 served in congress as a free soil representative. His attitude then toward frontier. The type has been almost obliterated now. As early as 1847 he was an advocate of woman suffrage, and in 1868 proposed in congress a constitutional amendment giving women the right to vote. He believed from the day the emancipation proclamation was issued that the negro should have the right to vote, and while his judgment on that point might be seriously questioned now, he never wavered in his support of the proposition until it was an accomplished fact. The first administration of Grant did not please him, because he believed the Republican party was drifting away from its original aims. In consequence he supported Greeley in 1872, and after that never really returned to the Republican fold.

The homestead policy of the government, elaborated after the war, was strongly supported by him while in congress, as also the doctrine that the public lands should be preserved for the use of all the people. After 1875 he did not take an active part in national politics, but in recognition of his great services in the past, President Cleveland made him surveyor-general of New Mexico in 1885, which was the last public office he held. His political speeches were published in Chicago in 1884. His life and speeches on political questions appeared in 1872, edited by Lydia Maria Child. He wrote often and freely for the magazines and reviews upon political topics, and was a valued contributor. As an abolitionist he enjoyed the confidence of Abraham Lincoln and often presented the policy of the president in congress on important pending questions

"The doctors treated me for female troubles, but I got no better. One doctor told me that I would be insane. I was advised by a friend to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial, and before I had taken all of the first bottle my neighbors noticed the change in me.

Him to Be President.

1000 MEN WAITING FOR HIM.

He Desires to Be on Friendly Terms With the United States Government and Expects American Sympathy.

Havana, Aug. 5.-Gen. Juan Jiminez, when his attention was called yesterday to a cable summary of an alleged declaration made by him here recenty and published i nthe United States to the effect that he was about to proceed to the United States to organize an expedition against the existing government of San Domingo, replied that he had not made the statement attributed to him. He went on to say that it was quite unnecessary for him to proclaim himself hostile to the present government as it could not possibly last beyond the 15th of this month.

"I did hear," he continued, "that Heureux was sending men to Cuba to kill me, but I knew nothing whatever regarding the plot to kill me. I had no connection and have no connection with Roman Caceres, who did the shooting.

"I do not believe that the United States will interfere with my government in San Domingo, which will be a government peaceful and helpful to all, for the United States did not interfere with the government of Heureux, who robbed and murdered for fourteen years."

Gen. Jiminez admits that he has often been in the United States incognito, but says he has not had interviews with official persons. He considers that there is no need of promoting expeditions to land in San Domingo, as there already are 1000 men waiting for him a force which he deems sufficient for his purposes.

Referring to the future relations of San Domingo with the United States, he expressed a desire to be on friendly terms with Washington and said he believed he could count on American sympathy. Gomez he referred to as. esteemed by all classes of Dominicans in September. The warship, with the dicator was removed by a conductor of but not sought for as president. The Uncle Calope, or C. H. Dublin, Tex., Aug. 7.-Dublin has had the fortune of entortaining the Brath and Comanche reunion on previous occasions, but at no other time has she made herself more highly appreciated by the visiting people. She has furnished amusement and pleasure, both day and night, for three days. Every one met seems happy and glad that he came. Stephenville will have the grand opportunity next year of showing how well it can entertain, which fact insures a success for the coming year.

The crowd has been variously estimated, but one may feel safe in saying that the second day found fully 10,000 people here. The amusements were so diversified and scattered over so many acres of land, unless one should observe closely he would not fully appreciate the enormous crowd present. The entertainment on the last day was well attended.

The Nite Case.

Henderson, Tex., Aug. 7.-The Nite murder trial was ended at 7 o'clock Saturday evening by the jury rendering a verdict that Jim Nite was guilty of murder in the first degree, for which he must be confined in the penitentiary for life.

The verdict was rendered just six hours after District Judge Graham read his charge. No one had expected a verdict so soon after the trial was ended, and nearly every one had predicted a mistrial.

The town had been deserted by the hundreds of witnesses and visitors, and less than fifty people were in the courtroom when the sheriff announce to the court that the jury had reached a verdict.

Jim Nite sat alone and was seemingly indifferent when the foreman of the jury was reading the verdict.

In point of attendance the two days are thought to have been about the same. Large crowds, and orderly they were, and the old settlers go away with hearts full of thanks to the good people of this place for their > unbounded hospitality. The programme yesterday was rendered without one failure to respond upon the part of those named thereon. This has been an exception to many of the reunions-some were on beds of sickness, some were absent because of some other things over which they had no control, and these things have always tended to mar somewhat the pleasure of the occasions. The perfection of this meeting in this respect has been the subject of comment, and all are happy that it is so.

> At the conclusion of the exercises, the remainder of the evening was given to the Woodmen of the World, the members of which organization were very much in evidence. Sovereigns W. A. ### Gov. Sayers' Letter.

Austin, Tex., Aug. 4.-In response to an offer of and from the Red Cross society for the flood sufferers, Gov. Sayers has addressed the following letter to Capt. Scott:

Austin, Tex., Aug. 2.-Capt. W. S. Scott, War Department, Adjutant General's Office, Washington, D. C .- Dear Captain: Yours of the 29th ultimo has just been received and contents noted. From the best information that I have been able to obtain in regard to the condition of the flood sufferers in the Brazos valley in this state, I am led to believe that there is no necessity whatever for invoking the aid of the Red Cross society, with a view to procuring nurses for assistance to those suffering from illness from the effects of the flood. While the loss of property has been very great, yet the loss of life has been comparatively small, and the sickness resulting from the overflow has up to this date been only such as can and will be properly and successfully attended to through local means.

Thanking you and the committee very much for the interest that is bedncerely, JOSEPH D. SAYERS, Governor.
