VALLEY VIEW

All liars shall have their part in that Lake that burns with fire and Brimstone.

It is reported that I received twenty five dollars for conveying Arthur Sykes to San Angelo for treatment, in reply will say to the good people of Coke Co., that is a willful lie and is told for the purpose of injuring me.

People that will stoop so low as to make and tell such a lie as this, is mean enough to rob the dead and if I hear any more such lies I will make some body hard to catch. I never received a cent for this service, neither have I had the promise of a cent.

Yours truly,

PEERLESS COLORADO

TENS OF THOUSANDS OF TOURISTS TREKKING THITHER.

A Brief Description of Some of the Attractions, Among the Chief of Which is the Boulder Chautauqua.

(Denver Correspondence.)

Colorado has gained the title of "the peerless state of the mountains." The title is fairly given, as no other state under the domain of the stars and stripes presents so many advantages of climate, scenery and variety of products. The gold and silver mines of Colorado are hardly less famous than the magnificent sweep of mountain, park and plain. The region embraced by this queenly domain is each year becoming more noted as a summer resort. The great lines of railway leading from the East and South have this year granted rates and privileges to summer tourists not granted before, and it is expected that the flood of travel to the shades of the Rockies will far exceed that of any previous year. The attractions of the Paris exposition are to many persons worn with the toils of business less alluring than the music of mountain stream and the indescribable charm of life amidst the rugged grandeur of the sublimest handiwork of the Creator. The change of altitude and pure air are marvelous physicals. No tired worker can make a mistake by spending the summer in the Rocky Mountains, and no mortal who yearns for communion with mother nature in her most attractive forms will regret a season in this land of wonders.

At Boulder, Colorado, under the mighty peaks whose tips are crowned Chautauqua, Mrs. Noble L. Prentiss of Kansas City will have charge of the former and Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker of Palestine, Texas, of the C. L. S. C. Meetings will be held daily, and many women of talent will address the meetings. The department of domestic science, under Miss Theodosia G. Ammons, professor of domestic science in the State Agricultural College, is already attracting wide attention. Miss Ammons will have four assistants, and she is now erecting a house on the grounds to be known as the "Model Home." This building is to be maintained from year to year as a model after which a well regulated home should be conducted. The home is to have five rooms, and the furniture is to be loaned by public-spirited women of Colorado.

Passing by the various departments, full information of which may be obtained by addressing Texas-Colorado Chautauqua Office, Denver, Colorado, it may be stated that the musical department is one of the most attractive of the claims of the Chautauqua. The teachers of this department—piano, voice, violin, mandolin and guitar, etc., are thoroughly equipped and prepared to advance pupils rapidly. But the Chautauqua band and orchestra is one of the engagements of which the management is proud. Ellis Brooks, the great band leader of New York and Chicago, will be present during the entire season with his celebrated band of sixteen pieces. This is the most accomplished musical organization secured by any summer assembly of the United States. The orchestra is made up of soloists, and Brooks himself is a wonder. He is recognized as the peer of Gilmore or Sousa, and that is saying a great deal. The musical repertoire will be as complete as was ever brought in-the building. The interior decorations of this structure at the time of the assembly are beautiful and effective.

This handsome and commodious building is a lasting monument to the public spirit of the people of Boulder.

A number of special days will be announced. The Fourth of July will be a big event. Dr. Thomas E. Green of Iowa, the coming orator of the nation, will deliver the principal address on that occasion and Colonel George W. Bain, the great platform speaker of Kentucky, will appear twice the same week.

Hon. J. P. Dolliver, the star orator of the present national administration, will hold forth on the afternoon of July 20th, and one week later Hon. Champ Clark of Missouri will appear before the Chautauqua. Rev. Dr. Elijah P. Brown, editor of the "Ram's Horn," Rev. Dr. Robert McIntyre of Chicago, Rev. Dr. A. W. Lamar of Nashville and Rev. Dr. S. Parks Cadman of New York are among the pulpits lights of the Chautauqua.

HON. J. P. DOLLIVER.

What will it cost to attend the Chautauqua? Full details are given in the Texas-Colorado Chautauqua Journal, which is published from the general office in Denver. The association controls 125 handsome new blue-striped tents and fifty cottages, many of which are now for rental. The rates are as low in all branches as at any of the large Chautauquas and much lower than at some of them. It costs only $5 for a season ticket admitting to 100 entertainments and lectures, and board at the dining hall, under charge of the association, is $5 per week. Dormitory or tent accommodations for lodging range from $2 per week upward.

This Chautauqua is a boon to numberless families and hundreds of persons who need a change of climate and occupation. The atmosphere of the mountains is wonderfully exhilarating. It is a tonic and a source of health and happiness to many who seek its influence. Boulder is one of the most attractive resorts in the mountains. The little city of 8,000 lies at the mouth of half a dozen canons which lead to the center of the range. Camping and fishing parties are organized daily and the appetite which one soon acquires is amazing.

If you come to Boulder once, you will want to come again. This is what one writer says of Boulder:

"There is no place in Colorado which offers more variety of scenery than the region of Boulder. From the Chautauqua grounds the view is magnificent, but not until the visitor climbs the hills, penetrates the numerous canons in the neighborhood or traverses the valley, does he begin to realize the magnitude of the undertaking. Every day may be spent in sightseeing, and each day new discoveries will be made, and the beauty and variety of the scenery will grow upon one as the season advances."

A stranger, who for the first time looks upon the mountains, is generally disappointed. The range does not appear to tower to the sky and the lofty clouds may not be toying with the summits. The patches of snow appear small—about the size of the hand—and on the whole, the mountains are not so grand as imagined.

Let the new arrival withhold his judgment. Let him restrain his soul in patience until he has had opportunity of making an excursion into those low-lying "hills." Better not undertake the trip on foot if the starting point is Denver, for the mountains are fifteen miles away, and distances in this thin, dry, electric air, are woefully deceptive. Make the initial journey on burro-back, on backboard, in a carriage, in an easy-riding railway car. Traveling by the latter method at the rate of twenty-five or thirty-five miles an hour, climbing, climbing, no limit to the strain on the panting locomotive. At the close of ten or twelve hours the sightseer finds himself fairly in the range. Vast gorges have been conquered. Mighty ascents have been accomplished. The ingenuity and skill of man have overcome appalling difficulties of canon, precipice and steep-winding trail. The parks and peaks of the inner range, shut out from view by the foothills, are opened to the gaze of the wondering mortal. Never again will he complain of the insignificance of the mountains. God Himself wrought these marvelous masses of porphyry or enduring granite and man stands awed and silent in the presence of power divine.

The railway rates during the summer are the lowest granted in any state of the Union, for Colorado is the resort of thousands of tourists and special arrangements have for years been developed for their comfort and convenience. Fishing, hunting and camping parties are found on all the mountain streams. The people are law-abiding and the mountain passes in remote districts are safer than the streets of the great cities. Miners leave their cabins open without lock or key and the hospitality of the people is proverbial.

Such is Colorado, peerless state of the mountains.

FARM AND GARDEN.

MATTERS OF INTEREST TO AGRICULTURISTS.

Some Up-to-Date Hints About Cultivation of the Soil and Yields Thereof—Horticulture, Viticulture and Floriculture.

Cow Peas.

Probably no forage crop has attracted more attention in recent years than the cow pea. It was slow in getting a foothold in public esteem, but when that position was once obtained it advanced very rapidly in public favor. This is largely due to the fact that the experiment stations took up the cow pea and investigated it. They found it to be a very good plant for the collection of nitrogen and its introduction into the soil. The farmers are now in close touch with the experiment stations and the value of the cow pea was pressed on the notice of the farmers wherever the pea can be successfully and safely grown. We do not hesitate to say that if we had no experiment stations the cow pea would be still struggling for recognition. Without doubt the cow pea is destined to play a much larger part in our agriculture than at present. There is no reason why the farmers that have ground in the early crops in the spring and first part of the summer should not plant cow peas afterward. Of course the pea vines will not in such case mature seed, but the vines and roots will greatly improve the soil.

Horticultural Observations.

There is to be a big crop of fruit this year, as the trees and vines are setting very full with few exceptions. If all the fruit on the trees is left to grow, the harvest will show a large amount of very small fruit that will bring almost nothing in the market. The well-formed fruit of good size will get the prices that pay the profit. This is the time for reading and calculating orchardists to consider if it will not pay them to thin their fruit. If one-fourth the number of apples, peaches or pears be grown on a tree that blooms full the weight of fruit produced will be the same, and it will sell in the market for more money. Some of our enterprising orchardists have been thinning their tree fruits for many years, and have made that operation a part of their system. What they have found profitable others may imitate with hopes of like success.

It is to be hoped that the time is not far off when the producers of fruit will find some way of controlling the sale of it by the middlemen to the extent of seeing that the fruit reaches the consumer in as good condition as it leaves the hands of the grower. It is exceedingly discouraging to the ambitious grower to know that if he sends beautiful fruit to the Chicago market it is more than likely to be repacked and used for facing poorer fruit. It is one of the problems that will have to be settled by the collective action of fruit producers. The consumers in the great cities will hail the advent of such a day with gladness. At the present time Chicago buyers have become almost hardened to being swindled in fruit purchases. One of the great reasons for the extraordinary development of the banana trade is that people are able to purchase them without trusting to luck. If a man gets swindled when he buys bananas, it is his own stupidity that is at fault, as he can see every banana before he buys it. But with most of our native fruit, like the peach, a man must view it through red netting. If he pulls off the netting and finds fine-looking fruit, when he gets home he is likely to find inedible green fruit making up the bulk of the basket. One day last summer the writer desired to secure a basket of the best peaches on the market. He found a dealer with a large quantity of fairly good fruit, and with a few baskets of fancy peaches marked up to a fancy price. He was assured that the price was high because all the peaches in the basket were as good as the ones on top. When the baskets were opened at the home of the buyer it was found that the bulk of the fruit consisted of green peaches the size of walnuts, with just enough fine peaches over them to conceal them. The result was in this case a lessened purchase of peaches, the preference being given to fruit that could not be dishonestly packed.

Canadian Bacon.

A word about Canadian bacon and ham, for nowhere have I found such beautifully marbled pork, and most certainly I have never tasted such luscious meat, says J. C. Mills in the Farmer. Much as I dislike to admit it (for the farmers of the United States ought to be able to produce the best of everything), the facts are, we have forgotten entirely that the ultimate end to be reached in producing pork is the meat. We have thrown aside the prime end to be sought and are breeding the lard pig, and have forgotten what our Canadian friends know as the true end to be sought, a meat that will please the palates of the meat-eating public. The English and Canadians are excellent judges of all kinds of meat, and especial attention seems to be given to the production of fine bacon and hams, and well do they profit by it. This question is certainly a problem for the American people to solve, and especially our own state and the Dakotas, for these states are natural bacon and ham producers. On investigation, I learned that in the production of the fine bacon and hams found in Canada, that breed was necessary first and then feed. Yorkshires and Tamworths seemed to be the breeds for this purpose, and the feeds consisted of oats, barley and peas. Pea-fed bacon was the best.

The Buck Woth.

The scientific name is hemileuca mala. The caterpillar is very poisonous. A report of the Minnesota Agricultural College says: It is very common in Minnesota, and feeds on the wild cherry and apple, but chiefly on the red oak and willow, where it can cause considerable damage, as it is a voracious feeder. The caterpillar is brownish black, with six spined tubercles on each segment, except on the eleventh, where there is only one dorsal tubercle; an additional one is found on segments one to five, and also on segments ten to twelve. When full grown the caterpillar measures a little over two inches in length. The sting of these caterpillars is really quite severe, and it is not easy to handle them with impunity. When mature all the caterpillars enter the ground, and there, in a simple, oval cell, each one sheds the prickly skin and assumes the pupal state. The pupa is of a deep, brownish black color.

The moths, which appear in the north in September and October, are elegant insects, and fly in mid-day.

Their wings are so lightly covered with scales that they are semi-transparent, and look like delicate black crapes. The bands across them are creamy white, and brightest on the hind wings. The female moth deposits her eggs in naked belts of from 100 to 200 eggs; these are only fastened together by a little glue, and are not deposited in perfect order.

Avoid "New Treatment" for Hogs.

Bulletin 63, Indiana Experiment Station: Several years ago, when lecturing before Indiana farmers' institutes, Mr. S. H. Todd of Ohio advocated the feeding of meat from hogs that had died of cholera to healthy pigs. The claim was that feeding this diseased flesh produced a mild form of the disease, and the pigs fed the same thereafter would be free of cholera. This view advanced by Mr. Todd caused considerable comment. Apparently, however, the method of treatment adopted by him was not entirely a success, for in March, 1899, he wrote the undersigned that his hogs took sick and died so easy. I say it was not cholera. It was much worse. I lost forty head of hogs. This, however, was perhaps just as much a case of cholera as many swine breeders report on.

At the present time an attempt is being made by Indiana parties to sell on the market much such a method of treatment as that adopted by Mr. Todd. The claim is made that pregnant sows fed flesh from cholera-diseased swine will have the malady in a mild form, and that the unborn pigs will also be affected, so that thereafter they will be free from cholera and be "immune," as it is termed. While no experiments have been conducted by disinterested parties to prove the effectiveness of this method, reasoning from comparison, as shown by experience with other diseases, both with humans and animals, it is entirely unlikely that this method will prove a preventive. Further, this station is in possession of facts proving that pigs born from sows affected with cholera while pregnant have died from the disease long after.

Subsolling for Root Crops.

Subsolling for root crops frequently pays largely, for the reason that the ground is put in a shape that permits the roots to develop without resistance in all directions. In addition most of the root crops have tap roots that strike downward for moisture and additional nourishment. Experiments, even in the arid and semi-arid regions, have shown great advantage in subsolling for such crops. Not only are the root crops benefited, but the potato crop is also benefited. The subsolling helps through times of drouth, and thus prevents a check to the development of half-formed tubers.

MOUNTAIN VIEW NEAR CHAUTAUQUA GROUNDS.

with eternal snow is the spot to which many eyes are looking in this year of our lord 1900. The Texas-Colorado Chautauqua is the name of the institution which is destined to draw thousands from distant homes to the Rocky Mountains. This young sister in the galaxy of summer assemblies is growing to be a bright and particular star. The growth of this institution is phenomenal. Although only in its third year, the platform of the Texas-Colorado Chautauqua is sought by the brightest talent of the continent. The Chautauqua opens July 1st and continues forty-six days, ending August 15th with a series of grand entertainments, musical, oratorical and dramatic, that can be equaled nowhere else west of the Mississippi river.

The Boulder Chautauqua was founded by a committee of leading educators of Texas. The work soon grew to such magnitude that an equal number of business men of Colorado was invited to assist in the management and today the Chautauqua is established on a permanent basis. It has fourteen departments in its educational system, a series of platform entertainments of a popular character that surprises visitors, and has connected with it a number of clubs which are also permanently identified with the Chautauqua. Each year new advances have been made and changes effected to meet the requirements of patrons. More than twenty states were represented at Boulder last year. Every facility as to accommodations was called upon. This year the work of preparation has been going forward steadily and Chautauqua guests may expect ample facilities and satisfactory service in all respects.

The educational department at Boulder during the summer session of the Chautauqua will include about all the subjects usually taught in the schools and many subjects of direct interest to all intelligent persons. The following schools, in charge of an efficient corps of instructors, will be maintained:

School of Sacred Literature and Religious Teaching, School of English Language and Literature, School of Modern Languages, School of Ancient Languages, School of Mathematics, School of Science, School of Pedagogy, School of Ancient and Modern History, School of United States History and Civics, School of Art, School of Music, School of Expression, School of Physical Culture, School of Domestic Science.

The teachers have been selected from the leading colleges and universities, and all the departments will be in charge of specialists.

The Woman's department and C. L. S. C. are important features of the

to the West, and, under the leadership of Ellis Brooks, the musical part of the summer's program will be more than satisfactory. Chautauquans will have opportunity of listening to great violin solos, exquisite cornet solos, trombone, cello, saxophone and other solos, adding a pleasing variety to the musical evenings. Duos, trios, string quartets, and almost anything in the musical line that may be desired. The vocal artists engaged by the association will assist, and pianists of well-earned reputation will be heard at different times. The Chautauqua auditorium is perfectly adapted for music, and the concerts—no two of which will be alike—will lend a charm to the assembly which not even the greatest oratory could excel.

The Boulder Chautauqua is fortunate in the possession of one of the largest and most attractive auditoriums of any assembly on the continent. The structure stands on a commanding eminence at the base of the mountains, overlooking the plains, and may be seen for a distance of twenty-five miles. The auditorium will seat 5,000 people and 8,000 or 10,000 listeners may gather within range of the voice of the speaker on the platform. Some of the greatest orators and musicians of America have tested the Boulder auditorium. They pronounce it equal in acoustic properties to the noted tabernacle in Salt Lake City. The stage is large enough to seat 500 people. Back of the stage are rows of seats which rise in the form of an amphitheatre, for the accommodation of large choruses. The seats in the main body of the building rise so that the benches in the rear are ten feet above those near the platform. The auditorium is lighted with electricity and is provided with sliding doors, which can be raised so as to admit the free passage of air from three sides of

REMARKABLE NERVE

DISPLAYED BY A SHOOTER IN AN OIL WELL.

Picked Up a Can of Glycerine and Ran Saving Twelve Lives and Much Property — Took His Life in His Own Hands.

One of the bravest acts that has ever been performed in the history of the oil fields was that by which William Bowers the other day saved the lives of a dozen people and prevented the destruction of considerable property on a farm near Franklin, Pa.

Bowers, who is only twenty years of age, is employed by Harper Torpedo company, and was sent to shoot a well for William McClintock on the latter's farm. He filled one shell with thirty-eight quarts of nitro-glycerine, and had just got the long, tin tube straightened in the hole, preparatory to lowering it to the bottom of the well, when the ball on the top of the shell pulled off and the torpedo dropped. Lying beside the shooter was a can containing several quarts of glycerine, and standing near him in the derrick were a dozen interested spectators. In an instant Bowers realized that when the shell exploded the shock would discharge the glycerine in the can beside him.

Bowers grabbed the can in his arms and ran rapidly from the derrick. In a few moments there was a mighty roar, and oil, gas and stones came rushing out of the casing, tearing the top off the derrick and shattering the floor. Thanks to the presence of mind and remarkable courage of young

WILLIAM BOWERS.

Bowers, the can of glycerine was so far removed from the derrick that it did not explode.

STRONG FRATERNAL LOVE.

It Prompted Bad "Jim" McCauley to Make Confession of Murder.

A most vivid illustration of the old adage that "blood is thicker than water" is the story of how "Jim" McCauley, a tough character of one of the low districts of Brooklyn, gave himself up to the police the other day in order to save his brother, "Mike," from trial and possible conviction for murder. A murder had been committed. A woman who was the common law wife of James McCauley had been found dead in her home and it was clear that she had been murdered. "Jim" was anything but respectable, while "Mike" was looked upon as a model citizen. But the bad man at last "made good" when he saw that by so doing he could save his brother from trouble. When the woman who lived with James was killed it was said that Michael McCauley was fleeing from justice. He heard about it and went at once to a police station and gave himself up. When James heard that his brother was in the custody of the police he hurried to the station, found the sergeant and made a confession which secured his brother's release. "Jim" stated that he himself was the murderer of the woman and that he was willing to die for it that his brother might go free. Jim McCauley is now confined in a cell in a Brooklyn jail and will probably be electrocuted.

Bride's Veil Caught Fire.

During the marriage of M. G. de Staal, daughter of the Russian ambassador, to Count Alexis Davidoff, in the Russian chapel at London, at which the Prince of Wales, Lord Rosebery and most of the members of the United States and other embassies were present, the bride's veil caught fire from a candle which she was carrying in her hand. The bridegroom seized the veil and put out the blaze by crumbling the gauzy fabric between his hands. The interruption of the ceremony was only momentary.

Another Count in Jail.

Richard W. Frankle is confined in jail at Belleville, Ind., on the charge of theft. It is charged that he pawned a musical instrument belonging to his employer. Frankle has attracted much interest by his persistent declarations that he is the Count of Schwargonfelds of Germany.

A Lesson to Mothers.

How a Daughter's Life Was Saved By the Timely use of a Household Remedy — It Should be Known to all Mothers.

Mothers, look to the health of your daughters as they approach that perilous period of their lives when they undergo that marvelous transformation from girlhood to womanhood. Guard them closely, their whole future depends upon the care you give them.

The system is weakened by the changes that are taking place, and it is often at this stage that the deadly consumption fastens upon its victims.

The cause of the majority of weaknesses of women can be traced to this critical period of the girl's life.

MISS FLORENCE CLUTE.

Mrs. Ella Clute, of 319 Wilkinson St., Syracuse, N. Y., tells how her daughter Florence was saved. Doctors had failed entirely, and it is to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People that she owes her life. She says:

"When my daughter Florence was 13 years old she was pale and thin and suffered severely with stomach troubles and bearing down pains. She became so weak that she could just get around the house. We feared that she would never get through this first critical period of her life. Our doctor thought that she was going into quick consumption. He treated her without success, and nothing seemed to do her any good. One day we read an advertisement in the paper of a case similar to Florence's which had been cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. We tried the pills, and by the time half a box had been used she was greatly improved. Her appetite was better, she began to have a better color and the pills seemed to regulate her system and cure the female trouble which was the worst feature of her condition. She continued taking the pills and was soon completely cured. There has been no return of the trouble and she now enjoys perfect health."

"I have used the pills myself as a regulator and have been greatly benefited by them. I have recommended Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to many people, for I know that they are an excellent remedy for all women who are suffering from the disorders peculiar to our sex. MRS. ELLA CLUTE, Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or direct from Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., postpaid on receipt of price, 50c. per box, six boxes $2.50.

Sam Jones' Good Points.

Rev. Dr. Frank Bristol, pastor of the Metropolitan church in Washington, which is attended by President McKinley, tells a story which he heard one evening while dining at the white house with the president and Bishop Chandler of the Methodist church, south. The party was talking about revivalists and revivals, and the case of the well known exhorter, "Sam" Jones, was brought up.

"The best characterization of Sam Jones' preaching I ever heard," said the bishop, "was that of a good colored brother in Virginia. He had just heard Jones preach, and was describing it to some of his fellows."

"Just as long as Bre'r Jones sticks to de scriptures," said the colored man, "he ain't no better preacher than eny uv de rist of us. But when he cuts loose from de scriptures and jist lets 'er sail den he's de doggondest preacher dat ever pounded a pulpit."

China-Faced Hag.

People who advocate woman suffrage as a means of making things better here below will be pained at the feminine amenities introduced in a local election at Weisner, Idaho, where women vote. Mrs. Martinson, electioneer at the polls, is said to have called Miss Harris, also there and engaged in the same work, "a china-faced hag." In the "mix-up" which immediately followed both ladies lost some hair and some hide. The jury which tried them when they had each other arrested was composed entirely of women, and after they retired to deliberate the balliff was unable to force the door quick enough to prevent more hair-pulling and scratching among the jurors. When brought into court they reported a disagreement.

Bermuda Lily Bulbs.

The housewives in a certain section of Omaha would very much like to interview the kindly-faced and eloquent gentleman who recently sold them Bermuda lily bulbs. They have a few things to say to him and are prepared to say them in proper style.

The kindly faced and eloquent gentleman in question recently passed through this section of the city and gathered up a goodly quantity of shekels, the same being currency coin of the realm. In return therefor he left bulbs that were warranted to produce lilies that would cheer the hearts of the housewives and make home a veritable bower of beauty.

His customers now have choice lots of well-developed onions which they will dispose of at ruinous prices.

Clara Kopp Wrote for Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Tells what it did for Her.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have seen so many letters from ladies who were cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies that I thought I would ask your advice in regard to my condition."

I have been doctoring for four years and have taken different patent medicines, but received very little benefit. I am troubled with back-ache, in fact my whole body aches, stomach feels sore, by spells get short of breath and am very nervous. Menstruation is very irregular with severe bearing down pains, cramps and back-ache. I hope to hear from you at once."

CLARA KOPP, Rockport, Ind., Sept. 27, 1898.

"I think it is my duty to write a letter to you in regard to what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me. I wrote you some time ago, describing my symptoms and asking your advice, which you very kindly gave. I am now healthy and cannot begin to praise your remedy enough. I would say to all suffering women, 'Take Mrs. Pinkham's advice, for a woman best understands a woman's sufferings, and Mrs. Pinkham, from her vast experience in treating female ills, can give you advice that you can get from no other source.'—CLARA KOPP, Rockport, Ind., April 13, 1899.

Dear RUSTLER—

Our people are all very busy in their crops. Cotton has had a hard time with the wet weather and worms; but the last week has been very favorable to cotton, and people are in fine spirits, out of the weeds, up with their work ect.

Corn is looking fine just now but will need rain in a few days. Our people who sowed wheat have it cut. There has been two reapers running in our neighborhood. Some wheat was damaged by the rust, but the most of it is fine.

Mr. Jas. Alsop has a new well. Mr. Bert Cosper is now riding his best girl in a brau new buggy. Mr. Jas. Allen, across Oak creek, bought 7 yearlings from Mr. Bert Cosper a $13.50. Cattle are doing fine.

The Presbyterian people will their protracted meeting at Rock Springs school house beginning on Friday before the 4th Sunday in July.

Dr. McClelland, of Brownwood, will help Bro. Smith.

The Correspondants of the RUSTLER must all be farmers and some what in the weeds. Hope you are all out of the weeds now and will let us hear from you more often.

The candidates I suppose think the people too busy to be bothered, so they have made themselves scarce in our neighborhood, at least very thing politically seems to be quiet in our neighborhood. Hope Coke County may elect first class officers in the coming election, and I would hope that the Democrats would put in the next President, if I had any ground to hope on.

Success to the RUSTLER and Coke County.

SLAIN ON SUNDAY.

Bloody Work Done in St. Louis on the Sabbath.

FOUR STRIKERS WERE KILLED.

Deputies Discharged Weapons Loaded With Buckshot into a Party and a Number of Casualties Resulted.

St. Louis, Mo., June 11.—Sunday just ended has been one of the most eventful and bloody since the great strike of the St. Louis Transit company began, more than one month ago. There were numerous encounters between strikers and other riotous persons and the constituted authorities, resulting in four deaths and wounding of five or more persons, mostly strikers. One of the latter will die.

The dead:
C. Edward Thomas, striking conductor on the Choteau avenue line. Shot in breast by deputy sheriff, died on way to hospital.

Ed. Burkhart, striking conductor on Delmar avenue line; shot in the head.

Geo. Ryne, striking motorman on Delmar avenue line, shot in abdomen by deputy sheriff; died at City hospital.

Fred Boehm, aged citizen, shot and instantly killed while standing in his front yard, by deputy sheriff.

Wounded:
Oscar Marvin, conductor on the Lee avenue line, shot in right hand and arm; serious.

August Smith, shot in right arm and breast; not serious.

Chas. Ludwig, shot in hand; not serious.

The day was quiet until Sunday afternoon, when the police were taken off a number of street car lines for the purpose of giving them a rest and to test the ability of the Transit company to operate without friction. Cars were in operation during the day time on all the lines of the Transit company except the Southwestern.

The most serious trouble broke out at 7 o'clock in front of the six-story store building on Washington avenue, occupied by the sheriff's posse comitatus as a barracks and headquarters. Several hundred striking street car men had gone to East St. Louis earlier in the day to attend a picnic given for their benefit, at Wolff's Grove. Toward evening they began returning home singly, in groups of two or three, or in companies of a hundred or more. No serious trouble occurred until one of these companies, composed of nearly 150 street car men in uniform and headed by a drum corps came west on Washington avenue. In their caps some of them had cards bearing these words: "Union or nothing; liberty or death."

The men were marching along the sidewalk on the south side of Washington avenue, opposite the posse barracks. They were in a jocular mood and as near as can be learned had no intention of making any trouble. Just as they were passing the barracks a car of the Park avenue division was going west. A number of the men broke from the line and rushed for the car with the intention, it is said, of boarding it and taking a ride. Another statement was made that it was the intention of the strikers to assault the motorman and conductor, whose car was without the usual police guard. A brick was thrown through the car window and a shot was fired. Members of the sheriff's posse swarmed from the building and surrounded the crowd of strikers about the car, calling upon them to disperse.

Other shots were fired and then some of the deputies turned loose their repeating shot-guns loaded with buckshot.

Double Lynching.

Biloxi, Miss., June 11.—Two negro men were lynched, possibly for one man's crime, early Sunday morning at Mississippi City, and it is not absolutely certain that either victim of mob law was guilty. Henry Askew and Ed Russ, held as suspects, were taken out and strung up to a tree in a thicket, just outside the railway station. The law-abiding people of this section, while confident the necessity existed for vigorous action, deplore and condemn the dual lynching. District Attorney White had promised that they would be brought to trial on Monday and Saturday, at a mass meeting held at this place, the citizens promised to support the district attorney in his efforts to have justice done through the proper legal channels.

On June 2, Christina Winterstein, a 13-year-old school girl, was outraged and murdered, about two miles from Biloxi, while on her way home from school exercises. Askew and Russ, both of whom had been in the vicinity of the place where the outrage was committed that day were charged with the crime.

Boer Envoys Welcomed.

Omaha, Neb., June 11.—Envoy Wesels of the Orange Free State was given a big official reception by Omaha Saturday. It was marked as being of a wholly non-partisan character. Gov. Poynter (Pop.) presided over the mass meeting. Mayor Moore (Pop.) welcomed the envoy to the city. Capt. H. E. Palmer, chairman of the Republican state central committee, was secretary of the meeting and read a number of communications; T. J. Mahoney, a Cleveland gold Democrat, made a stirring speech and W. J. Bryan was present and on call from the audience expressed his sympathy for the struggling republics.

Shot to Pieces.

Sneads, Fla., June 11.—Ernest Hardwick, a white farmer, was set upon by a gang of negroes several days ago and beaten so badly that he died in a few hours. Only one of the negroes was caught and sent to jail. Two nights after the murder a mob went to the house of John Sanders, a supposed accessory to the crime, and shot him to death. Another negro, said to be innocent of the murder, was also killed. Both bodies were literally shot to pieces.

TRULY THRILLING.

Corporal Carson's Courageous and Clever Comrades

BACK HIM UP IN ELEGANT STYLE.

Thirty Americans Hold Six Hundred Filipinos at Bay for Four Days, With Bullets Whizzing and Whistling.

Washington, June 9.—Perhaps the most thrilling and picturesque incident of the entire Philippine war occurred at Catubig, on the island of Samar, where, on Sunday, April 15, last, when a party of thirty-one enlisted men of company K, forty-third infantry volunteers, held at bay a force of some 600 insurgents during four days of fierce fighting, reinforcements arriving just in the nick of time.

The war department has received reports from Capt. H. M. Day of the forty-third volunteer infantry and Lieut. Sweeney of that regiment, who commanded the rescue party, giving all the details of the attack, the siege and the relief. According to these reports the attack on the garrison at Catubig began without warning. From the hills on all sides, from every point of vantage in the town, and from a deserted church directly adjoining, came a rifle and cannon fire of terrible intensity. On Tuesday morning handfuls of burning hemp were thrown into the barracks from the insurgents in the church and soon the soldiers' refuge was on fire. All efforts to subdue the fire failed and finally the little band made a dash for the river bank.

Some were killed before the bank was reached, others fell dead in a boat in which they were attempting to make the opposite shore and when a trench finally was dug with bayonets there were only sixteen of the thirty-one left to man it. Here for two more days Corporal Carson, handling his men with the judgment of a veteran, held out under a terrible fire until Lieut. Sweeney's command, which had been ordered to supplement the garrison at Catubig and was on its way up the river on the steamer Lao Ang, arrived. Not until within a quarter of a mile of Catubig, says Lieut. Sweeney in his report, did they hear the noise of the engagement. Then he realized that he and his men were sorely needed and he ordered the captain of the steamer to run his boat at top speed. The Lao Ang steamed up to Catubig under a rain of Mauser bullets from both shores. The small boats were lowered, a landing effected and the rescuers fought their way through the open to their besieged comrades in the trench, buried the dead within reach, brought back to the boat the besieged party, numbering now only thirteen men, and then steamed down the river. Capt. Day bestowed the highest commendation upon Corporal Carson as "displaying extraordinary good judgment in the handling of his men, thereby saving the lives of the survivors and protecting the wounded until relief came."

To each of the little command and their rescuers he gives the highest praise. "Their zeal and ability," he says, "were a fitting example of the worth and courage of the American soldier."

Indignity to a Girl.

St. Louis, Mo., June 9.—A mob of furious women and boys beat and denuded Lena Keater, a young woman who makes her living by peddling lunches among the employes of the California avenue street car line. When the mob had stripped her to the waist one woman daubed her with green paint while two others held her, the jeering boys and women of the mob applauding the outrage and throwing mud. Two other girls were attacked.

NEW WAR SONG.

"We Are Marching Into Pretoria, It Belongs to Queen Victoria."

London, June 9.—Gen. Buller has at length taken the offensive, and by maneuvering he has secured a position west of Laings Nek, by which he believes he can make the Boer positions untenable. Presumably he will immediately follow up his success.

Lord Roberts has communicated nothing for three days, nor permitted the correspondents to wire what is going on. London's inference is that he is resting, although he is possibly disposing his army for a reach after Commandant Gen. Botha.

A blockade of the wires, owing to the crush of official correspondence, may account for the scanty press dispatches. Some things filed a week ago are only just now arriving. Among these are spirited descriptions of the fighting at Elandsfontein. According to one of them, the streets were filled with women and children. Rifle shots could be heard everywhere. The British soldiers would stop firing and join in the chase after chickens. The burgers surrendered to any one. Kaffirs went about looting the Jewish stores, and mounted infantry galloped hither and thither.

Blind Institute Exercises.

Austin, Tex., June 9.—The closing exercises of the state blind institute were held at that institution last night. The attendance was large and the program well rendered, reflecting great credit on the pupils and their instructors. An interesting and instructive feature of the program was an address by Judge B. R. Webb of Fort Worth on the subject of the "Education of the Blind." The governor's medal was won by Miss Adele C. Cordes, a graduate.

THE UNDOING OF HILTON

WHY, hello, George," said Tom Gaddis. "Been out to get a little beefsteak for your suffering family?"

"Did she say you could come up to the wicked club for a minute, George, dear?" taunted John Stroply.

"Say, old man, what have you got in that bundle? A pound of butter or a package of self-rising oatmeal? These family cares are terrible, eh, George?" Fred Atkinson smiled pityingly as he spoke.

It was the first time George Hilton had been in the club since his marriage six weeks ago. Before that "happy event," as the local newspapers had called it, he had been one of the club "regulars." The boys were all glad to see him when he hurried in a little before 4 o'clock one afternoon last week, carrying a small package in his hand.

It was that bundle which prompted the derisive questions which greeted him, and it is with the strange adventures of that bundle that this painfully true tale has to do.

"It won't do you fellows a bit of good to try to 'josh' me," said Hilton. "Just go ahead and do your worst. If you want to know what is in the bundle I'll tell you. It's a phonographic record."

That was bold on Hilton's part, but not wise or discreet.

"Drop a nickel in the slot and hear the ravings of George Hilton," said Gaddis in an aside. "What are you going to do with it, George. Take it down to your happy little home."

"That is exactly what I am going to do," said Hilton, who did not know that he was tempting providence. "I bought it for my wife."

"And how does the little song go, George?" asked Gaddis. "Is it 'What Is Home Without Hardwood Floors?' Hum it for us, won't you?"

"I hope you'll excuse me," interrupted Hilton, "if I venture the opinion that the song on that record is none of your business. And now I'd like to buy you Indians a drink. Come on now, I've got to be over to the office by 4 o'clock and I'm in a hurry. Here, Edward," to the man behind the desk, "just put this package away for me. I'll call for it as I go home for dinner."

THERE WERE OTHER VERSES.

The phonographic record was put away in the clerk's desk and a few minutes later Hilton left the club, leaving behind him three desperate conspirators.

"He told us to go ahead and do our worst," said Gaddis.

"And said it was none of our business," added Stroply.

"Perhaps we'd better see about that," concluded Atkinson.

The clerk was called away from his desk and the precious record was deftly abstracted from the drawer where it had been put.

"Come on, now," said Gaddis, "we've got to work fast if we get this job done."

The three hurried down stairs with their treasure and went quickly to the office of one of the phonographic companies, where they had the record put on an instrument and listened while the somewhat squeaky music filled the room.

"When Clarence takes my hand in his And looks me in the eyes, I own this world is fair enough Nor long for paradise. I look across the coming years And dread the promised land. I think I've found my heaven here When Clarence takes my hand."

"Why did Hilton dare us to do our worst," shrieked Atkinson, as the three conspirators writhed in wicked mirth. "Why did he tell us it was none of our business? Here, Gaddis, there's no time to waste. Take a pencil and paper and go to work. See what you can do now in the poetry line. We'll all help you."

In half an hour, after much effort, mixed with bursts of laughter, they finished writing something on a long sheet of paper. Then it was turned over to one of the phonograph operators, who sang it into a receiver.

They tried the record on the phonograph amid renewed demonstrations of unholy mirth. Finally it was carefully wrapped up in the paper which had been taken from the original record deposited by Hilton in the clerk's desk.

Now, phonographic records are flat, thin disks of black rubber, and one looks exactly like every other. Therefore, when the job was completed not even an expert could have told that a change had been made without testing the record on a phonograph.

Gaddis, Atkinson and Stroply carried the new record back to the club, and, while the clerk was in another part of the house, put the little package into the drawer from which they had taken it. Then they sat down in uneasy attitudes about the library to await developments.

Hilton came in a few minutes later on his way home. He got his package from the clerk and stopped for a minute in the doorway of the library to speak to the boys.

"When we get settled, boys," he said, "I want to have you all out to dinner. I wish I could ask you out tonight, so that you could hear the new song that worried you so much."

"Yes," said Gaddis, "we wish you could."

Then the unconscious Hilton went blithely home to his destruction.

"Here it is, my dear," said Hilton, as he handed the fatal record to his wife. "I had a terrible time getting it. I went to every place in town before I found it. It took me almost two hours."

Hilton was properly rewarded for his devotion, and then dinner was announced.

"I'll put it on the machine right after dinner," said Mrs. Hilton; "I'm just dying to hear it."

At the table Hilton happened to mention that he had called at the club that afternoon, and he described how his old chums had tried to guy him about the bundle he carried.

"I told them it was a phonographic record," he said, "when they wanted to know what the song was I told them it was none of their business."

"This simple and entirely casual reference was, as Hilton afterwards admitted, all that saved his life."

When the dessert was finished Mrs. Hilton could wait no longer.

"Come on, George," she said. "We'll have our coffee in the sitting room. I must hear the new song."

Hilton will remember to his dying day every incident which followed. He moved a small table to the center of the room, took the cover off the infernal phonograph, unwrapped the record, put it in place, and started to turn the crank.

He still remembers the look of pleased expectancy on his wife's face as he began. He remembers even more clearly how it changed, first to surprise and then to horror and incredulity.

This is the song which the phonograph rendered to the tune of "When Clarence Takes My Hand":

"When George takes a drink or two And starts to paint the town, He isn't satisfied with red, But does the thing up brown. He shoots the windows full of holes, The lobsters all turn pink. Policemen die of heart disease When George takes a drink."

There were other verses in the same general tenor, giving further details about George's alleged misconduct. For the sheer horror of it Hilton heard the thing out to the end.

"How innocent and sweet he is, Some people doubtless think. We hope and pray they'll be away When Hilton takes a drink!"

That was the grand climax and close of the song. It would be sacrilege not to draw the curtain over what followed.—Chicago Tribune.

Unwelcome Friendship.

"I want to say to you," roared the red-faced passenger, "that I am a friend to the Boers, all the time." "Well," said the slim passenger, who was in a corner of the car, where he couldn't escape, "I hadn't thought much about it, but if you are with them I am sorry for them myself."—Indianapolis Press.

Life of a Car Wheel.

The car wheels made in Pennsylvania are generally run 4,000 miles on passenger coaches and are then put on freight cars. A 42-inch wheel now in the shops has been run over 700,000 miles and a 36-inch wheel has traveled 600,000 miles.

NOT YET WANTING

To Give Up to the British is President Kruger.

THE CHIEF MAGISTRATE TALKS

To a Newspaper Correspondent Freely in Regard to Existing Conditions in His Dominion.

London, June 8.—The executive offices of the Transvaal government are in a railway car, which is shunted on a switch at Machadodorp station. President Kruger caused the interior of the coach to be reconstructed some time ago with a view to contingencies that have now arrived. A correspondent of the Daily Express, who went to Lorenzo Marquez to see President Kruger, was received Thursday. The president sat smoking a long pipe. He looked worried, but his bearing was quiet and determined. He did not make the least objection to being interviewed.

The correspondent was asked for the interview by cable.

"Yes," said President Kruger, "it is quite true that the British have occupied Pretoria. This, however, does not end the war. The burghers are fully determined to fight to the last. They will never surrender so long as 500 armed men remain in the country. I feel deeply encouraged by the fine work Steyn and Dewet are doing in the Free State."

The correspondent suggested that the war was over, inasmuch as the capital had been taken.

"The capital!" exclaimed President Kruger with energy. "What is a capital? It does not consist of any particular collection of bricks and mortar. The capital of the republic, the seat of government is here in this car. There is no magic about any special site. Our country is invaded, it is true, but it is not conquered. The government is still effective."

Referring to the reasons why he left Pretoria, Mr. Kruger said:

"I was not foolish to be taken prisoner. I provided this means of locomotion for the same reason as our burghers supply themselves with horses when they take the field."

"It is necessary that I should be able to move quickly from place to place. That is all. By and by this car will take me back to Pretoria. For the present it enables me to keep away from Pretoria, where I could be of no service and where I should only play into the hands of the enemy."

"They say, Mr. Kruger," remarked the correspondent, "that you have brought with you gold to the value of £2,000,000."

"It is not true," said the president. "Whatever monetary resources I have with me are simply those which we require for state purposes. At the same time I am not going to tell you where our treasure is. Let Lord Roberts find it if he can."

"They also say in England, Mr. Kruger, that you contemplate taking refuge on a Dutch man-of-war at Lorenzo Marquez."

"That again is a lie," retorted the president with vehemence. "I know of no such Dutch war vessel. I am not contemplating refuge anywhere. I shall not leave my country. There will be no need of my doing anything of the kind."

The correspondent—Then, sir, there is much surprise at you having left Mrs. Kruger behind.

President Kruger—But why? Mrs. Kruger is quite safe in Pretoria. She would only be put to personal inconvenience here. All communication between us is stopped, of course, but she will await my return with calmness and courage. She is a brave woman. I am here awaiting further information. We are surrounded by faithful burghers and are quite safe.

State Secretary Reitz remarked: "You may depend upon it that the war is not yet over. Guerilla warfare will continue over an enormous area. We intend to fight to the bitter end and shall probably retire upon Lydenburg, where we can hold our own for many months."

"Yes," replied President Kruger, "it is only now that the real struggle has begun. I fear there will be much bloodshed, but the fault is that of the British government."

CONGRESS ADJOURNS.

The National Legislature Completes Labors of Long Term.

Washington, June 8.—In contrast with the exciting incidents attending the bitter struggles of the closing hours of the session, Speaker Henderson laid down his gavel at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon at the conclusion of one of the most picturesque scenes which has ever occurred in the hall of representatives. Party passions and personal rancor, which have brought the house to the brink of actual riot several times during the last forty-eight hours, gave way in the closing hour to good fellowship, which found vent in a patriotic outburst that stirred the crowded galleries to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. During a brief recess taken within thirty minutes of the time fixed for the final adjournment to give the president an opportunity to affix his signature to the bills that were being rushed to him for approval, a group of members, led by Mr. Mercer of Nebraska, Ball of Texas, Fitzgerald of Massachusetts and Tawney of Minnesota, congregated in the area to the left of the speaker's rostrum and began singing patriotic airs. The entire membership of the house joined in the choruses. The galleries applauded each song until the strains of "Dixie" filled the hall. Then the unbounded enthusiasm broke out in wild cheers. But the enthusiasm "Dixie" evoked was not to be compared with the remarkable demonstration which followed when, in a clear, ringing tenor, Mr. Fitzgerald started the national anthem with the inspiring words, "Through the dawn's early light." In an instant all the men, women and children in the galleries were on their feet, joining in the singing. The speaker, pausing as he entered the hall, raised his voice also. The excitement produced by the scene overcame a white-haired old man in the gallery and when the song ceased he jumped upon his seat and shouted: "That is the song of the angels of heaven." He was plainly a crank, but as he showed a disposition to harangue the house he was quickly ejected. After Speaker Henderson had made a graceful farewell speech, thanking the members for their courtesy, and had declared the house adjourned the members testified to his popularity by singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and the newspaper correspondents in the press gallery celebrated their emancipation from the burdens of congress by singing the doxology.

The house reversed its action Wednesday night in turning down the conferees on the naval bill for yielding on the item relating to ocean surveys. It was a distinct victory for the old conferees, Messrs. Foss, Dayton and Cummings.

Shot From Ambush.

Houston, Tex., June 8.—Between 9 and 10 o'clock Wednesday night a negro fired with a pistol three shots at Mr. Matt Toole, a well-known citizen here, just as the latter was walking near the end of Sabine street bridge on his way home. One shot took effect. A negro suddenly sprang from some bushes with a revolver in his hand. He fired three times at a range of not more than twenty feet. He then turned about and ran rapidly away. A negro woman also sprang from the growth and bent a hasty retreat, screaming as she went. One of the bullets struck Mr. Toole, entering his left groin. He was able to walk some distance and until he met several persons, who had hastened to investigate the cause of the shooting and screams. The patrol wagon was summoned and he was moved to St. Joseph's infirmary.

Four Walls Arrested.

Nacogdoches, Tex., June 8.—There has been no more trouble at San Augustine. Four of the Walls, that is Buck Wall and his three youngest sons, have been taken into custody by Gen. Scurry and it is said were taken to Center. Borders and his backers are still in town. The Stone Fort rifles are on the way. Sheriff Roberts is here. The ball was cut out of his chin by Dr. Tucker of San Augustine, who is his cousin. For the sake of peace, Sheriff Roberts will remain here indefinitely. It is said that he will appoint one of the rangers to act as deputy.

Revolution in Water Travel.

Experiments have proven that vessels, fitted with propellers which imitate the fish's fin, develop remarkable power. It will cause a revolution in water travel. Men gradually learn that Nature's ways are best. One cause of the remarkable success of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is the fact that it is a sure cure for constipation, indigestion, dyspepsia and biliousness.
