Veterans Memorial Monument

Veterans Memorial Monument Dedicated To All Veterans

Editors Note: The sketch of the Veterans Memorial Monument, pictured above, will be erected on the South Side of the Court House. Money for this monument is being raised through donations. Various people around town have donated labor, and materials to help keep the cost down. Donations may be made to Nancy Kidd at the Muleshoe Chamber of Commerce Office. This is not a chamber project, but a community project.

The Veterans Memorial Monument Committee reports that the project is moving right along. The fund is growing very good. "We are pleased with the response from the private citizens on this project," said Nancy Kidd. The rock pile is getting bigger at the north entrance of the court house.

Chunks of rock that have been treated, are in several businesses so that everyone can see the beautiful colors.

"We will have a trailer in the parade on July 4th for all the veterans and those who are still serving in the armed forces to ride on" she continued. "This entry will be the Parade Honored Marshall. After the parade, we ask for all military people to stay on that trailer, and they will be taken to the Court House where a special Patriotic Tribute will be given. Representatives from each branch of the services will be there. This will be a part of the day you won't want to miss."

If you want to have a uniform or you have some item that is very patriotic, and would like to have it on display that day; call Billie Downing at, 272-4567 or 272-5169.

Everyone is asked to do their part to make our service people

Local Hospital To Receive Satellite Dish In Near Future

Muleshoe Area Medical Center will soon be equipped with a Satellite Dish and equipment allowing the local hospital to participate in the Physicians Ongoing Continuing Education Program. This dish and equipment is being made possible in part with a grant for up to $2600 through Texas Communities Cooperation.

South Plains Electric Co. is also providing a grant to help pay for the $4800-$5000 dish and equipment. Jack Bonds with the South Plains Electric Co-Op said that the balance of the money needed had been pledged by 5-Area Telephone, Bailey County Electric, First Bank and Co-Op Gin, in the way of a grant.

Purdy Shows Video Tape At Rotary

About forty-five members of the local chapter of the Rotary Club met at the Bailey County Civic Center Tuesday. The noon luncheon included an announcement by Dr. Bruce Purdy, president, on the Hawaiian drawing.

Several visitors were introduced. Included in the visiting group were Randy Field's son Douglas, Cindy and Aaron Purdy, wife and son of Dr. Bruce Purdy, and Lee Thompson, guest of Richard Murphy. Thompson is in the medical field and will be working with Murphy on several projects in the next few days at the local hospital.

Tom Bond was celebrating his anniversary. A message was phoned in to the Rotary group regarding the celebration.

Purdy introduced the videotape that served as the program. It was received from Rotary International and concerned the AIDS epidemic. "AIDS is with us," noted Purdy. "We can no longer ignore the fact that there are now several cases of AIDS in our community," Purdy said. Times have changed with the AIDS epidemic. It is no longer only someone else at some other place who has AIDS.

The videotape told the story of a Rotary family whose son

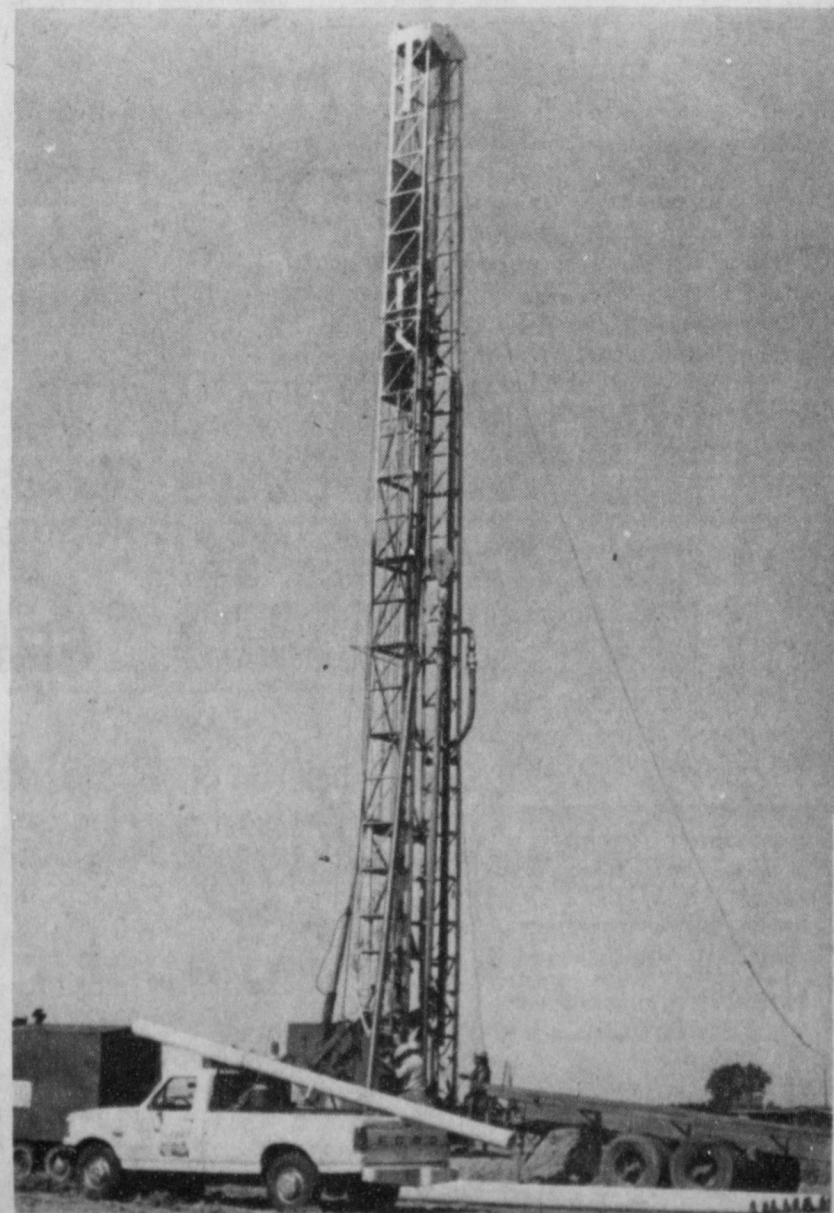

Richard Murphy, manager of the local hospital explained that 144 hours of training will enable participants to receive one year credit, they are required to have. "One of its advantages is you have a VHR recorder, which will allow the programs to be taped and participants get the same credit as they would in live presentation," Murphy said. "The cost will be $450 per month for Texas Tech participation and it will pay for itself."

"It will require a local Satellite person to install it," he continued.

Following the approval of the minutes of the previous meeting of the hospital board Tuesday night, a group of volunteers of Muleshoe Health Care Center were introduced. Betty Ramage, Joyline Costen, Lona Embry and Joy Stancell represented a group of volunteers at Muleshoe Health Care Center.

Mrs. Ramage asked for permission to use the original vending machines and operate under their own (volunteers) tax exempt number. "We supply extra things for the nursing home that have not been budgeted in." When asked why two tax numbers, Mrs. Ramage commented "so we can control the money in the machines. I buy when things are on sale using different suppliers. The vending machines were given to the nursing home when the hospital was not in operation."

When reminded that they would have to be an organized group to obtain a tax number,

CEMETERY GETS NEW WELL--The Journal learned late this week that the drillers had struck water in a new well for Muleshoe Memorial Cemetery. The well was dug in the Southern portion of the cemetery. The well will be completed in the near future. (Journal Photo)

Rylant, Air Boss During Combat

Navy Captain Arboth Andrew Rylant, recently returned from duty in support of Desert Storm aboard the carrier USS Ranger, has a prediction he'd like to make. The son-in-law of George and Evelyn Ritchie of Sudan, Rylant said, "Hollywood will probably try to capture Desert Storm on film but they won't come close to the real events as they occurred. They won't be able to touch those intangibles -- heart, discipline, bravery and love of country that I observed aboard Ranger during the 43 days of combat."

Rylant has had a distinguished career as a naval aviator, flying the A-6 Intruder but this time his expertise was needed not in the cockpit but on the carrier. He heads the Ranger's Air Department a unit of 530 men who man the control tower, handle the aircraft, fuel airplanes and work the carrier's catapults and flight lines. It is dangerous work in peacetime, dangerous and grueling in wartime, for without Rylant and his men the planes of Ranger's air wing cannot fly.

The Ranger, a flattop based in San Diego, Ca., arrived on station in the Persian Gulf the day before hostilities began. Its planes flew the first strikes into Iraq two hours past midnight on January 17.

"The more sorties the carrier launches the more hours we spend in the tower and the more grueling the schedule is for the flight deck guys," Rylant explained. "On a normal cruise we work 12 hours on 12 hours off. During Desert Storm the first few days we worked round the clock and finally cut back to 16 to 18 hours a day."

The professional voice of the fighter, attack, helicopter and reconnaissance pilots heard inside their helmets is always the voice of Rylant or his assistant, the mini-air boss. In the critical set up to an approach the veteran aviators are there, like a second set of reflexes for the pilots.

Since the majority of the pilots who flew in Desert Storm has never flown in combat including some who were making their first cruises as naval aviators, the professionalism of the 44-year-old former test pilot was doubly appreciated.

I talk to the pilots and bring them in," the air boss said. "Once they're 10 nautical miles or less from the carrier I control them. Outside of the 10 miles the control is done by instruments.

To hear Rylant talk about the Ranger's part in the war is almost to believe that the operation was an easy one. He sounds so confident, so relaxed, but Rylant is quick to point out that preparation for war doesn't alleviate tension, it only reduces the possibility of error.

"We were preparing for war from the time we left San Diego last December," he said. "Actually each time we go to sea the Navy performs as if it were at war. Our training has been as tough and maybe tougher than what we did in combat."

He continued, "Everyone had to have discipline that extra 110 percent, to make things work for the air wing. The Ranger had the oldest equipment of the six carriers in the war and everything worked beyond our expectations."

Still even with excellent training and motivation the hazards to the carrier were increased by its wartime footing. Aside from the mines and the missile threat the carrier had its own explosive problems to contend with.

"The sheer amount of ordnance aboard increased the hazards of the flight deck," said Rylant. "Even a minor accident could have been disastrous and the large number of planes we were launching also increased the obstacle hazard. The biggest enemies on the flight deck are space and time."

During the 43 days of combat squadrons from the Ranger jettisoned more than two million pounds of ordnance over targets in Iraq and Kuwait. This did not include the weapons carried by fighter aircraft used for air-to-air combat.

In almost a surreal form of choreography the men in different colored jerseys each representing a particular specialty loaded and unloaded bombs, moved airplanes and launched them without a single mishap.

"During the war we never even had a rig the barricade to trap a damaged aircraft," said Rylant still marvelling at the carrier's good fortune. "If a pilot had come back with a damaged plane we would probably have diverted him, if possible to Bahrain, we couldn't take the risk of having a fire on the ship or damaging the deck."

Rylant remembers that when the Ranger's commanding officer announced last January that barring message traffic to the contrary the Ranger would launch the first air strikes of the war at dawn there was no noticeable difference aboard the floating airfield.

"Everyone went about their business," he recalled. "There was no big attitude change. Everyone was already on top of the things that they were responsible for."

Although attitudes didn't change aboard the carrier, viewing habits did. Normally at sea, sailors are voracious off-duty movie watchers. This time they watched the news in real-time. Shortly before leaving homeport the Ranger had, had a satellite dish installed which allowed them to capture CNN.

"All eyes were on the television," Rylant said. "In the tower we have a monitor to watch the flight deck but we were watching the news."

What Rylant saw gave him the courage and inspiration. He first served with the Navy during the period of the Vietnam War; this time the feel was much different.

"Watching the news was exceptional," he said. "We all gained a sense of pride for the whole allied operation and for U.S. forces."

And then there was the mail, so much of it, that at times, according to Rylant, the mail from families was slowed down.

"America remembered," he said still obviously impressed by the out pouring of support. "Most of the letters were from kids, kids who wrote to say that they supported us and hoped we would come back. Others thanked us for being there. Every sailor on the ship took time to answer the "Any sailor" mail. I answered several myself."

Time to answer the mail was scarce, though. "Normally we can launch 18 airplanes using three catapults in 16 minutes. During the war it took longer because we had to rearm the planes so heavily. At times we also had to reshuffle the planes to get another one off," he said. "I think for a civilian to really appreciate the importance of what we do aboard the Ranger he'd have to see us perform our jobs at sea. The intensity level, the hazards and personal sacrifices the sailor lives with daily are all part of service to our country."

Now back in California, Rylant has the time to reflect on his experiences at war. "I take special pride in the fact that the carriers and the planes made the ground war a short and less costly in American soldiers and Marine lives," he said.

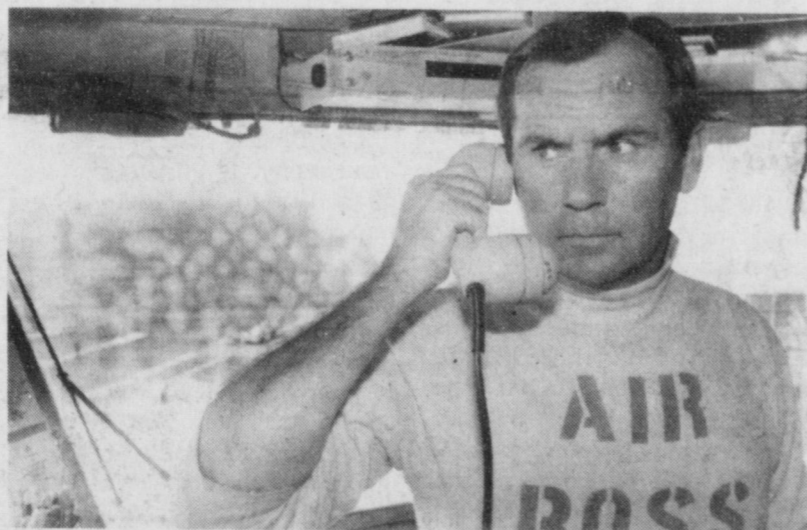

"I told my people think the thoughts of warriors. I think we all expected a worse war than we encountered. We had to be there and we were there for the right reasons."

"In hindsight," Rylant concluded. "I didn't see us do anything more than we ever do when we're at sea, just more of it. We did our jobs the way we were trained to do them and then we were ready to come home."

An alumnus of Springlake High School in Earth, Texas and of West Texas State University where he majored in education, Rylant tried to reach out to his family while deployed, to calm their fears.

"I'd send my son maps so he'd know where we were," he said. "I know they were all glued to the television set. I think it was comforting to them to know that things were going well."

Rylant, and his wife Andrea presently reside in Coronado, Ca. They have three children Kimberly, 24, Tammi, 21 and Mark, 14.

IN FASHION

One of the most important considerations when planning a beach vacation, other than a swimsuit, is sunscreen lotion.

UVA and UVB has been combined to produce a much stronger sunscreen that penetrates deeper and allows the sun-lover to stay in the sun much longer before burning occurs.

Researchers say the sunscreen ingredients are safe and do not give one cancer. Mothers should be aware that there is a safe sunscreen available for babies and small children.

It's still strange how serious public speakers are.

MICROWAVE TIPS

Some tips to remember when microwaving a pot roast include: Place the roast in a nylon cooking bag, to retain moisture. Cook slowly at a low power setting.

This allows the meat to better absorb flavor. Pierce the roast to let moisture reach the interior. And allow cooked roast to stand for ten to fifteen minutes in bag after cooking.

MRS. PAUL FRAZIER KING
(nee Vanda Michelle Berry)

Miss Vanda Berry, King Repeat Marriage Vows

Miss Vanda Michelle (Shely) Berry became the bride of Paul Frazier King in a candlelight ceremony at 7 p.m. May 24 in St. Michael's Catholic Church in Levelland. Double ring vows were read by Deacon Edward King, father of the groom.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Jerry L. Berry of Muleshoe and Mr. and Mrs. Edward King of Levelland.

Vows were exchanged before a 15 branch candelabra, trimmed with greenery and pink bows. A gold candleholder held the unity candle which was also decorated with greenery and pink bows. The sanctuary pews were decorated with pink over ivory bows, with the exception of the mothers' pews, they were done with candle holders with greenery and pink bows.

Pat Watson, organist, accompanied Debrah Harding of Plainview, solist, as she sang "Circle of Two", "Vows Go Unbroken", and "Colors Of Love."

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a gown of white satin featuring a fitted bodice of beaded Chantilly lace.

The gown also had a Sabrina neckline, satin beaded mutton sleeves, which came to a beaded lace point. The long full skirt was beaded in the front and had lace edges. Her detachable Cathedral train was also trimmed in the lace and beads. A candy box bow accented the waistline.

Her bridal veil was a wreath of white roses and gathered net that draped over the gown.

In keeping with tradition, the bride carried her great grandmother's handkerchief as something old. Something new was her gown. Something borrowed was her sister's earrings. Something blue was her garter.

Her bridal bouquet consisted of white and pink tiger lillies and small white roses and rose buds. The bouquet was highlighted with sprays of pink pearls, pink, white and gold ribbon were in set in the bouquet and extended down to the end of the bouquet.

Miss Selina Gonzalez of Denton served as maid of honor. Bridesmaid was Miss Shannan Berry, sister of the bride of Muleshoe.

The maid of honor and bridesmaid wore identical gowns of pink satin with a scoop neckline which draped around the shoulders. Then the bodice was fitted with a dropped waistline that came to a point. The skirt was gathered and mid calf length. Their bouquets consisted of pink tiger lillies and pink roses, pink, gold and ivory ribbon were inset in the bouquet and extended down to the end.

Mark Gearz of San Antonio served as best man. Groomsman was Tim King, brother of the groom of Lubbock.

Usher was Shain Berry, brother of the bride, of Muleshoe.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the home of the groom's parents. Those serving in the house party included Melissa King, sister-in-law of the groom; Beth King and Patty King, sisters of the groom.

The bride's table was covered with an ivory table cloth with a picture of the bride and groom, in a gold frame, serving as the centerpiece. Gold candelabras were placed on each side and the bride's bouquet in front of the picture. A crystal bowl held the punch at one end of the table. The wedding cake sat on the other end of the table.

Following a wedding trip to Ruidoso, N.M. and Cloudcroft, N.M., the couple will be at home in Lubbock.

The bride is a graduate of Muleshoe High School and is a student at South Plains College in Lubbock.

King is a graduate of Joy Academy and is a student at Texas Tech University.

Out of town wedding guests included: Mr. and Mrs. J.T. Eubanks and Mr. and Mrs. R.B. Seaton, aunt and uncles of the bride, of Muleshoe; Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Smiler, uncle and aunt of the groom of Coppenco, Tex.; grandmother Joffree, Grandmother of the groom of Levelland.

grapher. He is a brother of the groom.

Wedding Shower Honors Jeff And Teresa Gordon

A wedding shower honoring Jeff and Teresa Gordon was given Tuesday night, May 28 in the home of Jo Ann Ellison. Barbara Damron presented the new bride a corsage.

Jane Netherland, Lisa Walser, Peet Shupe and Elaine Hedges served cookies, fruit plate and dip, nuts and punch from crystal appointments.

The serving table was covered with an ecru linen table cloth accented with a silk bouquet of spring flowers in a basket.

Out of town guests included: Gayle O'Brian, mother of the bride; Linda and Sharla Chester, Charlene Shafer, all of Frjona; Traci Helms, of Floydada; Karen and Jennifer Carter of Dimmitt; Dinna Foree and Lisa Massey, both of Lubbock. Charlene Shafer was the groom's first teacher.

The hostesses gift was an Oster Kitchen Center. The hostesses also gave the bride the centerpiece.

Hostesses for the occasion included: Susan Baker, Madge Beauchamp, Sylvia Burnett, Lynette Burns, Marge Cardwell, Ann Carson, Barbara Damron, Jo Ann Ellison, Juanda Fields, Waynette Fisher, Barbara Flowers, Frances Gardner and Elaine Hedges.

Texas Motorist Warned Of Increased Hazards

Mention the words "4th of July" and many activities come to mind that are traditionally associated with this holiday: picnics, fireworks, flags, and hot weather are just a few. There is one more item that is also traditionally associated with not only this holiday but others: traffic accidents. Yet, most people seldom give a second thought about traffic safety, especially during holidays and therein lies the problem.

"Many people still believe they are immune from tragedy on our highways", stated Major V.J. Cawthon, Regional Commander of the Texas Department of Public Safety. It's a fact, people will be killed and injured on our roads during this holiday period and you can bet none of them expected to be involved in a crash. The sad part is that most of these accidents could have been prevented by the motorist involved.

According to Major Cawthon, the Texas Department of Public Safety wants Texas motorists to be aware of the increased hazards present on our highways during holiday periods. When asked to give the primary factor in highway vehicle accidents, Major Cawthon stated, "After reviewing all of our statistics, I would have to say driving while intoxicated is still a tremendous problem on our roads. The statistics indicate at least fifty percent of all traffic deaths are alcohol related".

Anyone that drinks can be a problem once they are on the highway. Many of these drivers may appear to be driving fairly well until they get into a tight situation requiring fast thinking and reactions, but a brain depressed by alcohol cannot think fast enough to keep them out of trouble.

If you intend on making a trip this holiday, Major Cawthon advises the following, "The best way to have a safe, accident free holiday is don't drink and drive, observe all laws and utilize safety belts."

Almost everyone will eventually be touched by the epidemic. Soon, large numbers of people will know personally someone who has died of the disease, the videotape noted.

The Muleshoe Advisory Board of the United Blood Services of Lubbock met at noon Thursday at Connie's Place to make plans for the next blood drive. The drive will be on July 11 in the American Blvd. Church of Christ from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m.

Another blood drive has been scheduled for Dec. 12 at the First United Methodist Church from 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. recourse, having nothing you can do. The task force that was formed had the videotape made.

The question was raised: Why does the Rotary believe you can put together a program and reach out to AIDS patients? Dealing with the mental anguish is a large part of the solution to this enormous problem.

Another reason Rotary is so active in its AIDS projects is because there are so many innocent victims of AIDS. These people become infected because they are given blood by way of transfusion that is infected with the AIDS virus.

An AIDS patient has to have support to conquer even a small part of their problem. He often doesn't have it. The incident was shown where the son in a family started having labored breathing as a result of his AIDS condition and 911 was called. The son was panicked as the ambulance drove up.

After the son died of AIDS, the family felt that this would somehow help more people understand the depth of the problem.

Another case of AIDS developed in an outstanding member of the Rotary Club in Los Alamos, California. He tested HIV positive after having a blood transfusion consisting of infected blood. There are many prejudices about who might contract AIDS, the videotape explained. Often those who would seem least likely are those who contract it. This member, Walter, did not fit the stereotype of the AIDS patient.

After one tests HIV positive the situation in any one patient can go directly to an AIDS infection in 2 to 4 years. The patient then starts taking AZT and usually experiences a loss of appetite and has no production of red blood cells. He turns anemic.

Walter was asked to join a support group and asked for support from his local Rotary Club. He was forced to sell his business and got continuing support from both the Rotary and his wife.

Several comments came from members of the Rotary club after the videotape was over. Barry Cowart, local veterinarian, commented that it is tragic when small children contract the virus after receiving transfusions. Cowart cited one such case locally.

Another member noted that AIDS is also a law enforcement problem. Explaining, he said that if a police officer gets in a fight with an offender and somehow the blood of the two men get mixed, a danger exists in that the officer could contract AIDS from this contact.

the group stated that they were organizing "Volunteer Plus." They are working through Glen Williams on chartering the organization.

The board unanimously agreed that they could see no problem in allowing the volunteers to use the machines and controlling the money.

Board member Bob Finney warned that the I.R.S. is more restraint now than they used to be. Mrs. Embry stated that they would have a CPA audit the books.

Mrs. Costen asked for the good of the community to keep all vending machines on one level, under one management. Murphy explained that a company was presently providing a machine and products and paid the hospital a commission. "They handle everything from loading the machines weekly to collecting the money," Murphy stated. "We are not in competition, we haven't duplicated anything."

"What about the money taken from Muleshoe State Bank?" Mrs. Ramage asked. "The money is still available to be used as you wish."

"What about the Memorial Fund, can it be handled through Volunteer Plus?" Mrs. Embry asked. "It depends on how the check is made out, there are several legal things governing Memorial Funds," Finney said. "We need to get with a legal firm and get back with you. I am afraid of problems with the Memorial Fund, maybe we should set-up trustees, separate from the hospital and Volunteer Plus. We all want the same thing we just want to do it legal.

Board member Tim Campbell said "We need to coordinate the two groups and work together for one goal." "We appreciate what you are doing and want to work with you."

In other business, Murphy stated that he had hired a collection agent with 12 years experience. "I have given her all accounts over 120 days old," Murphy said. "Some of these accounts are some insurance didn't pay, deductibles and etc. She has been instructed to look directly to the patient for collection."

When reviewing Muleshoe Health Care Center's records it showed to be operating in the red. "With all the Mandated Things and cost escalating, we can't possibly charge enough," Finney said. "We need an outsider to look at ways to save on expenses." Muleshoe Health Care Center now has seven beds available.

Murphy reported that all leans against the hospital had been released. He stated that he had been to the court house and gone through all records.

In other action, the board opened bids on a birthing bed, and accepted a bid of $8,297 for the newest version," Murphy said.

The board unanimously agreed that they should take bids on a surgical Laproscopic. "Dr. Dixon returned from Albuquerque, N.M. all bent on Microscopic surgery," Murphy said. This method of surgery allows surgeons to do gallbladder surgery, hernia repairs and historectomy through very small incisions. The advantage of this type of surgery is the patient can have surgery and be home in one to two days. "You can generally have these surgeries on Friday and return to work on Monday. This is a very rapidly growing technique and the doctors are being asked for it" Murphy said.

"If we don't convert to Microscopy surgery, we might as well get out of the surgical business" Dr. Dixon and Dr. Purdy agreed. The surgical equipment can be purchased for $46,265 and can be financed for 60 months at 8 1/2 percent interest. Murphy reminded the members that bids would have to be taken.

With no futher business, the board went into executive session.

"The excitement of secret discoveries of an old house, a passing expression of a friend or a stranger, or the quiet and glorious beauty of all nature has captivated me. I love to experiment with various medias, but seem to have found some preferences, according to the qualities of the media and what I wish to express or emphasize. I like to work with watercolor most because moods and visions can be captured quickly and the looseness and transparency of watercolor allows for great freedom of imagination, on both the part of the artist and the viewer."

Letter To The Editor

June 19, 1991

To the General Public:

Muleshoe Meals On Wheels, Inc. is again in need of volunteers to help deliver meals to senior citizens.

Following our most recent request, we received temporary help from a group of DECA students. We really appreciate the time they spent working with us. But since they are no longer with us, and due to losing a couple of other drivers for one reason or another, we are again short-handed.

We are presently serving meals to approximately 30-35 people, five days a week. The deliveries are divided into three routes, and we need enough volunteers so that no one is required to make deliveries more than once a week.

In addition to regular delivery drivers, we need volunteers who would be willing to be on call, to make deliveries on short notice. These would be called on to deliver when a scheduled driver can't make the deliveries for some reason. If we had several people on call, they could be rotated.

To volunteer, or for more information, please call Coris Wedel at 272-4187, or Sharon Plott at 272-3647, between 8:00 a.m. and 12:00 noon, or go by the Community Services office in the courthouse during those hours.

Priorities On Hazardous Waste

A neatness freak he is not. Entering Dr. Kirk Brown's office at Texas A&M University is like stumbling into a landfill; mounds of books, reports and memos from floor to ceiling are interrupted only by a narrow path to three chairs.

Tidiness in Brown's arena is reserved for the outdoors where the chore is maintaining pristine air, soil and water. Brown is an environmental janitor of sorts, pushing a metal broom across waste deposited generations ago.

"How do you weigh the present impact of a hazardous waste site on human health and the environment today versus the future impact?" Brown puzzles. "Suppose there are 10 million people living near one hazardous waste site and only 25 people at another. But 50 years from now there could be 10 million people living at the second site. How do you put a priority on the cleanup?"

That's what Brown and a dozen colleagues will determine as members of the newly appointed National Academy of Sciences Research Council Committee on Remedial Action Priorities for Hazardous Waste Sites.

"Our challenge is to suggest a method to determine which site to clean up first," said Brown, a soil physicist. "We have to develop the appropriate way to assess these sites."

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency lists about 1,200 industrial hazardous waste sites nationwide in need of cleanup. Twenty-six are in Texas and almost half of those are in Harris County around Houston.

Every time someone goes to dig at a site, we find lots more hazardous waste," said Brown, who has been chasing environmental pollution for about 20 years. "If historically there has been a known activity in the area that could have created hazardous waste, it shows up. People don't carry their garbage far."

He said many of the EPA-designated sites have as much as one million gallons of toxic waste and five million cubic yards of contaminated soil. That compares to 100 large tank trucks of liquid and 50,000 dump trucks of contaminated soil, he explained.

Waste is deemed hazardous by the government, Brown said, if it is industrial, contains toxic substances and is reactive, corrosive or flammable.

After federal laws tightened on industrial waste disposal in 1982, Brown said, a national search began to identify locations. The sites derived mainly from private industry and from the U.S. departments of energy and defense. Most are along the East and West coasts and in the Great Lakes regions. Some sites included city landfills and power plants. The dry cleaning, oil and auto industries also contributed, for example.

Cleanup priority, set by different government agencies, has been inconsistent, Brown said. For example, some priorities were based only on which agency had funds available.

Brown said the national committee will review existing methods of ranking and attempt to develop one that "best spends limited resources in the most effective manner."

Cleanup of an EPA-designated site typically costs $25 million to $50 million, Brown noted. Cleanup often includes treating the surface of the area, excavating the soil and pumping out ground water for decontamination.

"These sites can expand through the groundwater flow," Brown added. "In that case, an appropriate ranking system could be used to recommend spending $1 million to $5 million to contain it and prevent a bigger problem. But at some sites, it will never be possible to clean them up."

Brown believes ignorance, not intent, played a role in creating numerous hazardous waste sites. Often when the substances were dumped, little was known about the materials' impact on the environment. Many times the government issued permits allowing owners to dump hazardous waste at a particular site.

"People used to think that soils were impermeable and that they could clean up anything dumped in them," Brown said.

"Ultimately, we have to have safe soil and water. We dare not poison our environment and let it for future generations."

The national committee plans to issue several interim reports during the next two years with the final paper due in 1993.

"As a result, federal agencies should make adjustments to how they have been assessing the cleanup priorities," Brown said. "But it still could take 50 years before all these sites have been cleaned up."

Senate Joint Resolution 42 proposes a constitutional amendment that would authorize the newly created county education districts to hold elections to exempt from ad valorem taxation a percentage of the market value of the residence homestead of a married or unmarried adult. The percentage exempted could not exceed 20% of such market value, and the amount exempted could not be less than $5,000. The amendment would also authorize county education districts to hold elections to exempt from ad valorem taxation not less than $3,000 of the market value of the residence homestead of a disabled person or a person sixty-five years of age or older. Finally, the amendment would authorize elections in county education districts for the taxation of certain tangible personal property exempted from ad valorem taxation by the legislature.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment to allow the voters of a county education district to adopt certain exemptions from the district's ad valorem taxation for residence homesteads and to provide for the taxation of certain tangible personal property."

PROPOSITION NO. 2 ON THE BALLOT

Senate Joint Resolution 5 proposes a constitutional amendment that would allow the legislature to pass general laws authorizing Texas Higher Education Coordinating Board or its successor to issue and sell up to $300 million of general obligation bonds to finance educational loans to students. The maximum net effective interest rate to be borne by the bonds would be set by law. The amendment would also authorize the legislature to provide for the investment of bond proceeds and to establish an interest and sinking fund to pay the bonds and provide for the investment of such fund. Bonds authorized under this amendment would be paid from the first money coming into the treasury in each fiscal year that is not otherwise appropriated by the constitution, less any amount in an interest and sinking fund established at the end of the preceding year that is pledged to the payment of the bonds or interest.

The proposed amendment will appear on the ballot as follows:

"The constitutional amendment providing for the issuance of general obligation bonds to provide educational loans to students."

Report From U.S. Representative Larry Combest

U.S. Representative Larry Combest (R-Texas) has helped introduce legislation providing disaster assistance to producers of all crops affected by damaging weather in 1991. As an original cosponsor of H.R. 2536, "The Disaster Assistance Act of 1991," Congressman Combest is taking early action as South Plains farmers tell him their concern for crops that are weathering drought conditions.

"I have heard from producers whose economic well-being is withering right along with their crops," said Combest. "We are all understandably anxious about the next day's weather coming over the horizon. Hot, dry conditions now threaten seedlings in the cotton fields. Later in the season, welcome rains could also bring pounding hailstones. These are the uncertainties producers deal with, but they should not have to suffer ruin at the whim of nature."

The crop disaster bill provides relief for cotton damaged by drought. Additionally, the legislation has the following provisions:

*Disaster relief to producers prevented from planting or suffering reduced yields (65 percent of target price for farm program participants; 65 percent of target price for farm program participants; 65 percent of loan rate for nonparticipants)

*Peanut, sugar beet, sugarcane and tobacco producers' disaster payments set at 65 percent of price support

*Soybean and other nonprogram crop producers would receive payments at 65 percent of the five-year average market price

"Dry, windy conditions like we have had on the South Plains during the past weeks threaten disaster for 75 percent of the dryland cotton in the Western and Southwestern South Plains counties," said Combest. "Although there have been recent scattered showers, some 880,000 acres on the High Plains still need a good rain for planting. I am going to remain hopeful about the crops in the 19th Congressional District, but still plan ahead by having a disaster bill in place and ready if it is needed."

As a member of the House Agriculture Committee, Congressman Combest will give committee members the latest assessment of the South Plains cotton crop during a Thursday morning hearing on weather damage to agriculture. The Agriculture Committee will also review current disaster programs administered by the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Congressional micromangers have been in the kitchen again cooking up their own concoction of foreign aid bills. The ingredients make up a $12,399,201,000 giveaway package next year for countries around the world. The outrageous cost to the American taxpayer is enough to make this indigestible, but we need to carefully examine the ingredients.

To begin with, Congress has decided to spell out how 68 percent of the money will be spent, without giving the President the flexibility to deal with other nations. Legislators are serving up billions of dollars to foreign countries, while failing to provide for the needs of Americans. At a time when our nation's deficit is at its highest--$318 billion--enormous sums are sent to other nations. For instance, $4 billion is sent to countries in the Middle East, $865 million to Eastern Mediterranean countries and $15 million to the Soviet Union's democratic governments. Additionally, through its version of foreign aid, Congress proposes to spend $20 million that will support the funding of controversial abortions overseas.

In 1993, economic aid to foreign countries will be set at more than $13 billion. It is obvious that efforts to reduce federal spending have failed. Despite the so-called budget "deal" of last year that would allegedly reduce the deficit by $500 billion over five years, the pot has boiled over to a five-year budget deficit projected at more than $1 trillion.

The solution? Shoo the cooks out of the kitchen and turn down the heat on the taxpayers. Congress stirs the pot with their own recipe for foreign aid and buys the ingredients with tax dollars. The $167 billion five-year tax increase took effect in 1990, with the recession starting soon afterward in July. The October budget "deal" brought the largest tax increase in U.S. history and unemployment to one-half million Americans.

Last week, I voted against this expensive foreign aid bill. Unfortunately, the House passed the bill, even rejecting attempts at a modest 2.4 percent increase instead of the whopping $630 million increase. The expense and questionable content of these huge omnibus foreign aid bills is the primary reason I vote against them. My efforts to watch your dollars do not stop at foreign aid. I want to directly help the taxpayers.

I am a cosponsor of H.R. 2257, legislation to repeal all of the tax increases from the 1990 Budget Summit Agreement. That "Deal" has left a bad taste in the mouths of the American people. They were led to believe that the taxes would be part of a budget reduction package, but the continued spending spree proves where the taxes have gone. The big spenders in Congress would be wise to turn the spending down to a simmer. The taxpayers are doing a slow burn over Congress' habit of dishing out generous portions of their hard-earned dollars.

Senior Citizens Want To Feel Needed, Useful

Seniors need self-respect; and they deserve our respect. They want to feel needed and they want a chance to contribute. They need role models their own age, people whose lives prove all the stereotypes are false. They need to be reminded that old age is not synonymous with decrepitude and worthlessness. In America today, we celebrate youth at all costs, and we undervalue age and experience. We disregard those people who have helped make our country great; we do not appreciate what they have done for us.

Who are the people who, by contrast, have done the most for older Americans? In Profiles in Caring

Who are the people who, by contrast, have done the most for older Americans? In Profiles in Caring: Advocates for the Elderly, Val J. Halamandaris has selected 18 people who, he believes, have done the most during the last fifty years to improve the quality of life for America's seniors.

Each of the people profiled in this book is in their own way a hero. Their individual achievements have been great and their collective impact vast. They helped shatter the myth that incompetence and disease are a natural state among the aged. In doing so, they liberated America's seniors and gave them freedom from fear.

"I invite the reader on a journey that took me more than twenty years to complete", says VAL J. Halamandaris, author, lawyer and expert in the fields of aging and health care. "No-one can read these profiles without developing a profound respect for these modern-day social engineers who helped stamp out the prejudice and injustice perpetrated against those Americans whose only sin is to survive to a good age. Their lives prove conclusively that one individual-one man or one woman -- can make a difference."

"I had several purposes in mind in writing this book," Halamandaris says. "First, I wanted to capture for posterity the personality, the thoughts, the wisdom, and the achieve-

Health Care Rationing

A survey of community hospital officials throughout the U.S. reveals that 62 percent of them support the rationing of health care services, down from 75 percent of those surveyed six months ago.

Further, 42 percent believe that Federal or State government-mandated rationing of healthcare services is "very likely" or "probable" within the next five years. Six months ago, that percentage was 51 percent.

The surveys were conducted in May 1991 and November 1990 by the Estes Park Institute, Englewood, Co., a non-profit educational organization that treats the emerging issues in health care. The questions were asked of a total of 1,000 hospital management executives, medical staff leaders and governing board members from hospitals in 38 states.

A related question asked about the estimated 32 million Americans who do not have health care insurance. If health care is rationed by the government, 42 percent of hospital managers, physicians and board members believe access to basic health care programs will increase for these uninsured Americans. Another 39 percent believe it will stay the same.

If health care is rationed, 61 percent of hospital officials believe the percentage of the Gross National Product (GNP) spent on health care will increase. Another 33 percent believe it will stay the same. (It is estimated that 11 percent of the GNP is now spent on health care.)

Founded in 1960, the Estes Park Institute runs conferences and other programs dedicated to strengthening the relationships, roles and responsibilities of hospital administrators, medical staffs and governing boards.

ments of these 18 truly extraordinary Americans; second, this book is my way of paying tribute to these people for the sacrifices they have made and for devoting their lives in service to others; third, I want to help historians who one day will look back to see who it was that helped us make productive use of an unprecedented gift-- a one-third extension of the human lifespan, which is one of the hallmarks of the 20th Century.

"Fourth, I wanted to inspire young people to emulate the examples of those whose history is told in this book. As Albert Schweitzer reminds us, when it comes to education, example is not just a factor to be considered, it is the only factor that matters. Fifth, I wanted to give something back, to say thank you to these extraordinary people. All of whom taught me and some of whom loved me. Sixth, I hope this book will help focus and frame issues with respect to older Americans for the 1991 White House Conference on Aging, and for the balance of the 20th Century."

The common threads that unite the people profiled here represent some of the great secrets of the universe. Readers will find that these simple but powerful truths are common not only to the people who helped move aging from the back pages to the front pages of American consciousness, but also to the greatest people who ever lived on the planet. The lives of these extraordinary people remind us that, whether for individuals or for the nation, the solution to most problems and the way to salvation lies in the love and caring of one human being for another.

A well of water...

Many important events have taken place at the well. In days long ago it was a meeting place, where all came because of the necessity to obtain life-sustaining water.

Jacob met his beloved Rachel at the well. Moses met the daughters of his future father-in-law at the well in Midian. Much later Jesus Christ met a woman of Samaria at the well and said, "Whoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst: but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life."

The church of God today is a meeting place where many come to obtain this life-giving and life-sustaining water of which Jesus spoke.

The Church is God's appointed agency in this world for spreading the knowledge of His love for man and of His demand for man to respond to that love by loving his neighbor. Without this grounding in the love of God, no government or society or way of life will long persevere and the freedoms which we hold so dear will inevitably perish. Therefore, even from a selfish point of view, one should support the Church for the sake of the welfare of himself and his family. Beyond that, however, every person should uphold and participate in the Church because it tells the truth about man's life, death and destiny, the truth which alone will set him free to live as a child of God.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS
The Bailey County Commissioners Court will receive bids until 10:00 a.m., Monday, July 8th, 1991, for the purchase of fuel for all precincts and Bailey County vehicles. Purchases will be made through pumps with the use of cards and storage tanks at the precincts, which may need to be furnished. Bailey County is required to pay state taxes, but is exempt from federal taxes.

Separate unit bids will need to be submitted for regular and unleaded gasoline, and for diesel fuel. The bids shall reflect the percentage above wholesale cost of fuel per tank wagon. This percentage shall remain constant throughout the term of the agreement. Payment will be made from General and Precinct funds.

The Commissioners Court reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive formalities. Bids should be submitted to the County Judge's office, 300 South 1st, Muleshoe, TX 79347, prior to the above date and time.
