Per J. E. Brannen

PER REQUEST, we publish the reply by Mr. Brannen, the same being a reproduction verbatim of his letter in answer to the editorial published in The Sudan News of the 2nd inst.

In the latter part of the letter it will be noted that he wishes this paper to set him right before its readers in regard to his appointment as postmaster at Littlefield.

He calls attention to the fact that his appointment was non-political, having received said appointment through the legitimate course of and having successfully passed the civil service examination required by the government.

From the orthography and general diction of the above letter, coupled with its general grammatical construction, we have concluded there is considerable room for improvement yet of the examining board connected with civil service examinations--at least as regards to qualifying candidates for postmasterships.

Panhandle South Plains Assn. Lets Contract For New Live Stock Building

Lubbock, Aug. 15 — Keeping a pledge made to the live stock exhibitors here last fall the Panhandle South Plains Ass'n has let a contract for a 90x130-foot building that will be used this fall—Oct. 1 to 6--as a live stock barn at the fair.

"The live stock department was filled last year with the biggest display of live stock that has ever been gathered in the Plains section," Dr. L. E. Barr, president of the fair association,
stated today, "and after the fair was over we made a pledge to the live-stock breeders who exhibited their cattle, hogs, horses, mules, sheep and other stock
that we would provide a new live stock barn for the 1928 fair.

"The letting of this contract is keeping faith with these exhibitors and we are expecting an increase in the number of entries in this department this fall. With this new building we can solicit the stock of any breeder in the southwest, assuring him that his stock will have adequate protection and barn facilities."

Fair officials are especially anxious that Plains stock breeders exhibit their stock here this year.—Garnet Reeves, Publicity Manager.

Great Men In Their Time

It cannot be denied that the outlook for the United States is puzzling. Our population, which has been drawn from all quarters,
has doubled in a few decades,
and this means that the supply
of that most uncertain element, human nature, has increased in direct proportion. Luckily, we have always been fortunate in having the right kind of men ready to handle each new difficulty. Hamilton was a great financier, but Mellon is also a master in his line. Franklin was a scientist who achieved much with the limited knowledge and devices he had at hand; but Edison, Whitney, Kettering, Laugmuir and dozens of other modern research workers have a capacity for technical reasoning that has never been surpassed. Morris showed wonderful skill in planning and financing that made it possible for us to carry on the Revolution; but Morgan, Baker, Lamont, Kahn and Reynolds are financiers who had no peers in the years gone by. But the present accomplishments of such men as Hoover, Ford, Young and DuPont supply emphatic proof that we have not entered a day

of industrial dissolution.

Doubtless we shall have our ups and downs, but who can say that a nation is going backward
when 46 per cent of the families own their own homes, when the people possess more than 20,- 000,000 motor cars and when 31,000,000 of the population are attending schools and colleges?
The present head of the nation commenced life on a farm, proving that within our borders the door of opportunity for the humble beginner remains wide open.

When the pathway to power is closed to the multitude, then we may look with dread toward the approaching tomorrow. If mass production and mergers start us
in that direction, we may well become scared.—Texas Outlook.

Large Shipment Of Texas Wheat

The fastest movement of wheat in the history of Texas, or any other state, was 19,345,900 bushels, according to rail lines of the Panhandle section of Texas from July 1st to Aug. 4 this year, says
The Plainsman.

These shipments comprise 13,- 342 carloads, of which the Santa Fee accounted for 9,608 cars.
Grain men estimated fully a million bushels still in shipping point elevators.

The first shipment brought $1.15 to $1.20, the latter 90c
a bushel.

Jackson A. Findley, of Sudan, Will Very Soon Qualify for West Point

We have the following from The Fort Logan, Col., Engineer
"And now comes Jackson A.
Findley, blue student, and pride of Sudan, Texas, to testify to the value of C. M. T. C. training.

Findley convinced himself that our recruiting slogan, "The Army Builds Men," is no idle myth:
and having convinced himself
he enlisted the first week of July
in Company E, 2d Engineers, Colorado Military Training Camp,
and is now about to qualify himself for the entrance examinations at West Point, and hopes to be soon appointed to the academy from the annual enlisted men's quota.

"I can very truly say that the
C. M. T. C. has benefited me from many standpoints," Findley said. "A young fellow can't help ing these camps afford, if he goes at it in the proper spirit."

Executive Tour Chevrolet Motor Co. Now On

With production in fourteen great Chevrolet factories running at a record pace for this period of the year and sales continuing at the highest summer level in the history of the company W. S.
Knudsen, president of the Chevrolet Motor Co., and R. H. Grant, vice-president, in charge of sales, left Detroit last week for a three-weeks' business tour of the entire western half of the United States.

In the course of the tour, which will include the leading business centers of the west, the Chevrolet executive will visit with Chevrolet dealers in each community, discuss individual dealer problems and study local business conditions as they pertain to Chevrolet.

Before leaving Detroit Mr.
Knudsen announced that production in the first seven months of the year to August first totalled 869,297 cars and trucks, breaking by a wide margin all former marks for this period and definitely indicating that the mil-lionth car built in 1928 will come off the production line early in September. More than 800,000
of the "Bigger and Better" model are now in the hands of owners.

Included among the cities to be visited on the executive tour
are the following and will be visited in this order: Chicago, Los Angeles, Oakland, San Francisco,
Portland, Seattle, Spokane, Butte
and Minneapolis. In Kansas City Mr. Knudsen and Mr. Grant will check the progress of construction work on the newest Chevrolet's production facilities up to 1,250,000 units annually.

The party will return to Detroit Sept. 1st, in time to witness the production of the millionth Chevrolet of 1928, about ten days later.

Recent Rains Has Made Vegetation Jump

From the appearance of the Sudan gardens, those who pass
this way since the rains will open their eyes at the varied production South Plains is capable of.
Those who have gardens in town and vicinity have pretty nearly everything in the line of vegetables on their tables and make a favorable impression on the tourist en route.

Of course there are other things essential to a growing town, but these will eventually come as the evolution of progression goes on—industries, etc.

We can recall an instance of a town some forty years old, and on the railroad platform was the inscription, "Town of So and So.
Population 750. Fine water. Five excellent churches." A visitor was being shown around and all the various churches pointed out to him, finally remarked, "Yes,
but where are your industries?"

The time was when local merchants, through carelessness and indifference, could freeze out the local paper by non-support, but that day is almost past. After he was frozen out, many times
they would then see their error and try to get another man to try the venture. But today, with the many big auto, tire and other manufacturers willing to buy space in the local paper, he can live almost without home support, for a while at least, and the day will come when he will be able to do without the home support entirely if need be. But that day will likely never come,
as the home people are learning
every day that advertising pays them handsome evidences. We now have several business men here that actually devote time and attention to their advertising and say it pays them.—Terry County Herald.

Tinted Coal Coming
Pink-tinted coal may be the latest fashion in anthracite if experiments now being made by a Pottsville (Pa.) producing company are successful. The object of the colored anthracite would be to give it a distinctive advertising feature and distinguish it from other coal. The paintlike substance is put on the coal with a sprayer, and it is said not to interfere with the burning qualities.

GREAT RESULTS FROM COMPOUND

Read How This Medicine Helped This Woman

Brainerd, Minn.—"I read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in a newspaper and I have got great results from its tonic action at the Change of Life. Before I took it I was nervous and at times I was too weak to do my household work. I was this way about a year. But now I do all my household and do chores outside also. I must say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done wonders for me and no woman should be without it. I sure can speak a good word for it."—Mrs. JIM SMITH, R. R. 7, Brainerd, Minnesota.

The Colfax Bookplate

At last Julia spoke, in a tone of fresh alarm:
"Charles, what are you going to do now?"
"I'm going to keep right after it; get that, will you?" snapped her cousin, defiantly. "And I'll see Ballard if I get a chance, too! Watch out! Maybe you can make yourself useful, after all."
Julia stared.
"I haven't an idea what you're talking about."
"Conciliation and expectancy forsook MacIvor's face."
"See here, are you trying to double cross me?" he demanded threateningly. "Do you realize what can happen to you if you don't explain this and whatever else I ask you to explain?"
The girl was frightened beyond the power of speech, so savagely did MacIvor address her, but his menaces had the exact opposite effect on her.
"See here," I intervened crossly "stop that!"
"I beg your pardon?" demanded Charles MacIvor, white with fury.
"What I mean is," I explained carefully, "that you are to stop frightening Miss Grosvenor. Do you see?"
"Who are you? What are you doing here?" he burst out. "No, don't wait to explain! I order you out of this house!"
"I know it's yours," I assured him pleasantly; "you said so, you know. But as your cousin has asked me not to leave her, I shall take her with me, and go, as you request. Miss Grosvenor, I hope you will refuse to transact any more business tonight, and come with me to Miss Burton's apartment."
I took her arm, and she let me, but MacIvor seized her by the other arm, and stopped our progress toward the door. He looked at me, however, first sharply, then fiercely. Then he flung her arm violently from him and set on me.
"You're that red-headed clerk at Darrow's?" he gasped hoarsely.
"You're in this, too, are you? We'll see about that!"
It is the regret of my life that I do not know what might have happened next. What did happen next was a knock, a gentle one, felt on the hall door. We were all startled; MacIvor rushed to the lamp and extinguished it; in the darkness we heard the French window open. But the next second he was back from the door, and a woman's voice whispered cheerily: "Signorina! Signorina!"
"It's only Ernesto's wife," breathed Julia, relieved. "Si, si subito, signora. Turn the light on, Charles!"
He did so, snatched his cup from the table, and withdrew into the rear room, closing the door. I stood in the back of the room. Julia went forward and opened the door, and in walked—I heard his voice in utter amazement—Mr. Almy!
"Sorry to disturb you at this hour, Miss Grosvenor," he said; "but your cousin is here, and he must come with us. Don't make any trouble, please. Where is he?"
But although resistance was plainly quite useless, Julia declined to betray her cousin in any way. She snapped her teeth shut, glaring defiantly at Mr. Almy without a word. He dashed straight at the door in the rear of the long room. At the instant he reached it at full impetus, it burst open so suddenly that he nearly lost his balance as Charles MacIvor stepped out on the threshold of the adjoining kitchen quite cheerfully.
"You're Charles MacIvor," said Mr. Almy, "and I have a warrant for your arrest."
"I was expecting you," said MacIvor, impudently. "I passed your men down in the street, you know. Well, what's the charge? Murder, or course?"
"Unfortunately," returned Mr. Almy curtly, "it's larceny. What did you do with those bonds?"
MacIvor's eyes opened wide, his face turned scarlet with rage. He hurled himself toward Julia and shouted:
"So you've double-crossed me twice. Don't expect me to save you again!"
There was a brief moment of confusion: Julia gave a choked scream and sank into a chair, hiding her face; two policemen rushed in and MacIvor vanished with them. Mr. Almy went up to Julia and spoke soothingly to her; she did not answer him, or move. Next moment I found myself out in the hall with him.
I explained in a sentence how it came to be there. Then he murmured:
"I'll see you tomorrow; Miss Grosvenor needn't be disturbed further tonight, and hurried downstairs. So I turned upstairs, since there was nothing more I could do for Julia just then, and my mind reverted to Nancy."

Why and where had she disappeared so suddenly?
Having no key, I knocked on the Burton door several times. There was no response. As forlorn hope I tried the handle, and it turned. Some one had slipped the catch. I entered the living room, the lamp on the table was lighted. Both bedroom doors were shut. On Nancy's I knocked, once, twice, three times. Again there was no response. In considerable alarm I made bold to try that handle, too, and it also turned. And there, in her little room, in her little bed, lay Nancy in the first correct sleeping position, a charming picture from the Land of Dreams.
But her unconscious mind functioned well; next instant an arm shot out, and on went the electric lamp beside her.
"That you, Constance?" she inquired calmly. "I know it's not manners, to go to bed before the company does, but the poor working girl needs her sleep. What kept you?"
"Don't you remember that man that came into Miss Grosvenor's apartment from the balcony?" I gasped.
Nancy sat up in bed, blinked, and appeared to reflect.
"Oh, yes, I remember him," she observed finally. "When I saw Julia served him, I knew there was no danger. Yes, I heard the revolver. No, I don't know he did not have it. He put up one hand to take off his cap, and the other was empty. I saw as much as that before I cleared out because I wasn't wanted. Whoever had it, he didn't, so there was no danger for you or Julia. Do tell me what happened?"
"That man was Charles MacIvor, Miss Grosvenor's cousin," I said. "I stayed because she asked me to; she was evidently afraid of him. They talked at some length regarding something he wanted to get that was not here. What finally happened was that the police, who had traced Charles MacIvor here, arrived and arrested him. He is charged with theft."
"Of what?"
"Securities."
"Well, if that's all, it's not important."
"What are you talking about?" I demanded, agape.
"A poor fish," replied Nancy sweetly, "named, as you prefer, Charles MacIvor or Brandon Tower. And now I will show you what he wanted."
With one bound she was on the floor, with one swoop she had turned back blankets, sheets, mattress. On the spring lay a small flat object neatly wrapped in an embroidered hand towel. She unwrapped the hand towel, and presented me with a worn brown calfskin volume, entitled "Notes on Medical Statistics in the Virginia Code."
"Take care of it next time, Constance dear," she warned me; "some body might steal it."
"But, Nancy! But how... where... why...?" I stammered.
gazing wildly at the returned wanderer. But the bound and the swoop had occurred in reverse order, as Nancy's red, red mouth slowly expanded to its full vertical measure. The arm shot out again, the light was snapped off.
"I'll call you tomorrow after I make the coffee," said Nancy. "Cheer up, tomorrow will be another day. If you sleep in that faith you will prevail. I always do. Good night."
The coffee was not made until a quarter past eight. The ensuing scramble to get off to Darrow's gave no time for inquiries until we were en route up Normandy terrace. Then I demanded information instantly about the filing of the law book. I learned that Nancy had taken it from my lowest left-hand drawer the sole time during the previous morning that my back had been turned on my desk; namely, just before she went out to luncheon with Mr. Diddin.
"But, Nancy, what right had you to steal it?"
"No right—nobody ever has a right to steal, don't you know that?—but a duty. Wilkey wanted it. It was my duty to keep her from getting it because I wanted it for Peter, and she wanted it only for a distant relative, her cousin."
"You are sure of that, are you?"
"Surely. I told her you kept it in your lowest left-hand drawer; and then I snatched it myself."
"But, Nancy, why?"
"Well, Constance, I'll tell you why," announced Nancy, suddenly serious as an instant. "You know I told you how that moron of a Brandon Tower—I mean Charles MacIvor, of course, why he worked as a shorthand teacher in a business college, and changed his proud name, is still hidden from me, though I'm going to find it out yet!—I told you how he changed the suitcases that time we went to Philadelphia?"
"I thought and thought about how he tried to get rid of me, until I began to wonder why he did it. Then I remembered that every time he did it, he grabbed that suitcase. Before we left the house, you know, he changed mine for Peter's, evidently I came downstairs too fast for him to get out of the door with it. He was going to try to leave the train at Trenton, I believe; if I hadn't come back from the full dinner he'd have succeeded. And he tried to clear out of the Board Street station. He even waited there until I was going, you know, not aware that Peter had come for me, and doubtless hoping for some last chance to grab the suitcase again. I wasn't the attraction, I'm convinced now."

"Then I wondered what there was in that bag he wanted. Not Peter's clothes, Brandon... or Charles... or what have you?... has stacks of awful ones, himself. But, knowing him, I knew his purpose in wanting it must be bad. And when he popped in through that window last night, and Julia addressed him as 'Charles'—and he saw me, dear one he saw me, if I did do a disappearing act—I knew he was her cousin who had been after Peter's book, and had tricked me, and gone around under an assumed name. And I felt sure he was after it then and there. So I hopped upstairs and took care of it. Now, do you see why, as you say?"
Even Nancy finally paused, breathless. I said:
"I don't see why you took the book out of my desk. You didn't know at noon yesterday that Charles MacIvor was Brandon Tower, or that he wanted the book at all."
"I knew Brandon Tower would be liable to come after that book any time, though," interrupted Nancy, implacably. "Before Peter went to that in. So, when I took my new work, I snatched that book up with the rest. He was looking in the law book section to see if it had been replaced there by any chance."

"What time did you see him doing that?" I asked thoughtfully.
"Shortly before I left at six o'clock."
"Then," I thought to myself, "Mr. Case explored those law book shelves at a time he thought himself alone; and not finding what he wanted there, made an attempt on my desk later! He couldn't have known which drawer it was in, of course. He must have just started to search the largest one when Charles MacIvor made his appearance. What was he doing there? Looking for the book, of course."
"So you see, Constance," concluded Nancy, accepting my silence as a personal tribute, "I saw you really had too much to do, with that catalogue and everything, so I took charge of the book temporarily to help you. And, of course, I had to help Peter."
"But exegesis of this obscure remark, as well as satisfactory conclusions for my own wonderings, had to be postponed. We had reached Darrow's. I hastened forth to my desk, to find it already occupied, by Captain Ashland.
"You said I could bother you any time!" he greeted me.
"I always mean what I say. So you've come down from Westchester to learn more about the index?"
"Gracious! business during the week-end? I've come on pleasure. You know that bookplate we were talking about the other day?"
I did not associate the Colfax bookplate with pleasure, but I nodded—intelligently, I trusted.
"You know that forgery rather took hold of me," confided the captain. "I wondered if I could find an original for the counterfeit."
"Oh!" said I (an expression I disapprove of, but I was struck all of a heap by the suddenness of the idea). "Why?"
"Because Colfax might have drawn a pictorial bookplate, even if he seldom did so, and I think the manner of execution of that drawing you showed me indicates that it must have been copied from a model. The conception of the design is masterly, but the copying is just a faint shade too careful; and whoever made the drawing was not quite craftsman enough to avoid that small slip in the signature. So I've decided to amuse myself trying to discover an original. You'll help me, won't you?" begged the captain. "Don't say you will if you can."
"I will because I can, then."
"Good! I spent yesterday unpacking I brought thirteen boxes of books with me. My reference library you know. Now the reason I unpacked them was... that bookplate! I say you haven't it around anywhere, I suppose?"
I plucked it out of the law book in such a way as not to reveal the key for Captain Ashland was of course not interested in the Grosvenor mystery—indeed, disliked it, I felt sure.
"I'll tell you what I've done so far," he said, "though it's not much. I believe my library has as good works about English engravers as can be found; yet I can't discover much about Colfax himself. But I found the exact date of his birth and death, 1789 and 1831. Then I found a descriptive list of all his engravings, and tried to identify this drawing with any one described, but he had drawn only a couple of pictorial plates both for and ladies libraries—no scientific instruments or warships—so that attempt was a fiasco."
"Warships? Oh, yes, that vessel is a frigate," I assented, noting again the characteristic three masts and broadside armament clearly shown in the fine drawing.
"And English-built?" declared the captain, "early Nineteenth century, when British warships were built very wide through the beam, like this one."
"I haven't any flag, though," I pointed out.
"I noted that; it's odd," agreed the captain. "Nevertheless, it's a British vessel, and Colfax had a personal connection with the British navy."
"That's a good thing to know!" I exclaimed, encouraged. "How did you find it out?"

Vanity of Pakenham Brought His Defeat

The American forces under Andrew Jackson at New Orleans in January, 1815, inflicted severe losses on the British troops because General Pakenham, the British commander, insisted upon carrying out a set method of attack which did not prove successful against the Americans, points out Clifford Raymond in an article in Liberty.
"It was British tradition," continues the author, "that troops could take a position in frontal attack, carrying material for filling ditches and ladders for scaling walls. It was also in the history of British regiments in America that they had not done it on many occasions; but Pakenham, with his reputation to maintain, was convinced that he had to do it, even with Andrew Jackson animating the troops behind the breastworks.

"Pakenham died rallying the men," explains Raymond, "when they withered under the rifle and artillery fire. Before that fire, in 25 minutes the storm troops of Great Britain disappeared. There were 700 killed, 1,400 wounded, and 500 taken prisoners. The American loss was 8 killed and 13 wounded."
Night Winds in Mountains
A meteorological phenomenon found among the high mountains and noticeable in many places in Waterton takes national park in southern Alberta is the night wind from the mountain tops. During the heat of the day the warm air rises from the valleys, but at sunset a current of air from the peaks rushes downward, bringing with it the scents of pines and larches, and it may be of the flowers of some alpine meadow a couple of thousand feet above.

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All four care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

How He Knew
The family was discussing various downtown eating places and their merits, when young Elly, the News carrier's son, spoke up and said "Oh, gee, dad, there's a swell place in Sixteenth street, that's every bit as good as any downtown." Dad asked since when had he been sampling other cooking than his mother's and he answered, "Oh, I haven't eaten there. I've just smelt it!"—Indianapolis News.

Be Sure You Are Right

A way to know the right from the wrong
Is to reason out things as you go long.
But knowing and doing are two different things—
You must act when you know if it anything brings.
Our copy-book had a maxim that said,
"Be sure you are right, then go ahead."
That you should save you know is a fact,
But it profits you nothing unless you act.
The First National Bank has found that a man Must not only know but act on his plan.

Farm Bureau News

Farm Bureau Director praises Littlefield and Lamb county for interest shown in co-operative marketing.

Mr. M. Hudson and son, of Hale Center, spoke in Littlefield
Friday, August 1st, in the Palace Theater to an audience of between 250 and 300 people who were interested in the new marketing agreement which is being introduced at this time. Mr.
Hudson, jr., proved himself an excellent reader by the reading of the new marketing agreement to an attentive audience, after which the director answered a number of questions, making clear the changes in the contract which includes a daily or optional pool, so the members will not "have to wait for their money."
The members were asked to adopt the new contract and a great majority of them did, as 124 have been signed and sent to the Dallas office, with three days' soliciting. Probably there would have been five hundred more people at the meeting had the roads not been so muddy.

Mr. Hudson wanted to know how we get so many people out to hear him every time he came to Littlefield, which he said was the best interest shown in any place in the six counties of which he is director.

One Billion Meteors A Second Feed Into the Sun?

Contributed Article

Not long ago astronomers gave us the idea the gases from the earth kept the unquenchable fires of the sun going. Now a more recent discovery is that we are protected by an air blanket some where around 30,000 miles or more which protect us from the thousands of meteors tearing at terrific speed through unlimited space which otherwise would have destroyed all life on this planet long ago. These meteors cannot penetrate this powerful barrier of resistance and are eventually sucked in by the sun, adding a never-ending source of fuel for same.

Fragments of meteors occasionally do break through this barrier, as one did recently in Siberia, tearing the earth up hundreds of yards and killing outright 125 reindeer.

vard University, is the man who

Mayfield Afield On Farm Relief

Editorial Dallas Dispatch Aug. 4, 1928

Al Smith, Democratic candidate for President, has declared his opposition to the equalization fee portion of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill. It was because of this feature that President Coolidge vetoed the bill in the last congress.

Earle Mayfield, junior senator from Texas, voted for the McNary-Haugen bill, along with the republicans in congress who, knowing the president would veto it, voted for it, believing their vote would strengthen them with the farmer folks back home in the northern states. Mayfield has since, in his campaign speeches, defended his vote and declared his approval of the measure.

Tom Connally, who is in the run-off primary with Mayfield, has consistently opposed the McNary-Haugen bill. Back in 1926, when it was the Haugen bill, before numerous amendments had been offered in an effort to make it acceptable, he opposed it. He continued to oppose it to the time that it was voted on and sent to the president for veto.

The McNary-Haugen bill is considered unconstitutional. It puts unlimited power in the hands of a small power to build up a bureaucracy which would have power to manipulate prices and which would have power to levy almost unlimited taxes on the growers under the guise of aiding them to get higher prices for their products.

Smith has not yet determined upon the methods of farm relief which he can approve, but he has studied the McNary-Haugen plan and, like Connally, is unalterably opposed to it.

The junior senator from Texas is in a bad way to help the cotton growers of Texas when he stands for a measure which has been rejected by a republican president and which is decisively condemned by the democratic nominee for president and when he has no plan of his own to offer.

Farm relief—farm relief that will extend to the cotton farmer of Texas as well as the wheat and corn grower of the north and west, is a vital problem to come before the next congress. It merits more study than Senator Mayfield seems to have given to the subject.

How much the prosperity of the cotton farmer is recognized as important to Texas may well be seen today when on every hand is being heard comment on the effect of the rains on the cotton crop. Given a short crop and a high price as a result thereof the farmer is still the loser. Given a full crop and a price below cost of production he is greatly the loser. Let the cotton grower lose and Dallas and all Texas suffers.

Better a farm-reared man like Tom Connally, who has himself drafted a farm relief plan, in the senate, devoted to a study of farm problems than a Mayfield who puts his stamp of approval on a project repudiated by the leader of the party with which it originates.

Progress.

At every crossing on the road that leads to the future, each progressive spirit is opposed by a thousand men appointed to guard the past. Let us have no fear lest the fairest towers of former days be sufficiently defended. The least that the most trained among us can do is not to add to the immense dead weight which nature drags along.—Maurice Maeterlinck.

Dangers.

Thirty-nine people in a year slip on soap in the bathtub and are injured enough to collect insurance damages. This is the record for just one company, the Aetna, which also pays damages to 506 injured in a year by tripping over rugs and 309 who fell down stairs. Sixteen golfers collected damages for being hit by golf balls and nine others for falling into bunkers. Five dancers had valid claims from colliding with other dancers.

Acorn Alcohol.

Up to the present time no industrial use has been made of acorns, but recent experiments show that alcohol can be made from them. Shelled acorns contain about 40 per cent of starch, which can be readily saccharified and then converted into alcohol.

Ask the man experienced in building---and he will tell you that the best materials are always cheapest in the end. Why? Because good materials resist both age and weather. Wherein so many fail, is the reasoning that the best always costs the most. This is true--because in lumber often more waste will be sawed from seconds than the saving hoped for--as compared to first grade material. Our yard is now completely stocked with first grade lumber. CRISP AND DELICIOUS

Scheme Didn't Work

An English druggist who attempted to sell medicated cigarettes as a cure for colds, nasal catarrh, asthma and bronchitis discovered that it could not be done. Cigarettes that contained coltsfoot, thyme, rose petals and lavender in addition to tobacco, are banned by the law against "adulterating tobacco," the court ruled, and fined the offender.

Plants Greatest Miners

Two University of Michigan experts, Prof. John E. Weaver and Dr. William E. Bruner, have discovered that plants are the greatest miners. The roots of a four-year-old rhubarb plant were found to occupy a cylinder of soil eight feet in diameter and eight feet deep, while those of a ten-year-old horseradish plant had mined to a depth of more than fourteen feet.

HOMEMADE PEACH ICE CREAM POPULAR

Time to Take the Dasher Out.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Time to take the dasher out of the ice cream freezer—and be rewarded by a first taste of the product you have helped to churn! Evidently these children, like all others, believe there never was a more blissful moment in the summer time than this. What extraordinary sharp ears the neighborhood youngsters develop when there's ice cream being made on anybody's back porch! They flock around so hopefully, all eager to help, on the chance of even a small sample of the delectable contents of the freezer.

Here's a recipe from the bureau of home economics for that most popular of all homemade ice creams—fresh peach. In some parts of the country you can make it as early as July and in others as late as October, depending on the state of the peach crop.

Peach Ice Cream.

2 cups single cream 1/2 teaspoon salt
2 cups soft cut peaches 1/2 to 1 tablespoon lemon juice, depending on acidity of peaches
1 cup sugar

Wash and pare the peaches, cut them in small pieces, cover with the sugar and let them stand for a short while. Press the fruit through a colander, so that a pulp is formed. Add the salt, cream, and the lemon juice if needed. Use a freezing mixture of one part salt and four to six parts of ice. Turn the crank of the freezer slowly. After freezing remove the dasher, pack the freezer with more ice and salt and let the cream stand for an hour or more to ripen.

COTTON FABRICS USED FOR DRESS

Attractive Garment Designed for Hot Weather.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Any of the firmly woven printed cotton fabrics might be used for this attractive dress for a hot day, designed by the bureau of home economics. The material used was a soft English print, but zephyr, percale, lawn, or broadcloth, all of which are made in delightful printed patterns, would give good results. The collar line is round and low enough for warm weather. It is finished with a binding of the same plain material as the tie, and matching one of the colors in the prints. The set-in sleeves are short for comfort, but not extreme. The cuffs and belt are also bound like the neck.

Front fullness in the waist is made by a yoke of little tucks. Below the low waistline four plaits give ample width to the skirt. The long flat tie and large pearl belt buttons give a touch of tailored trimness.

Soup Without Meat Stock Made From Vegetables

Soup without meat stock can be made from vegetables and rice water, with meat flavor supplied by salt pork. Those who cook rice frequently will often have on hand a sufficient amount of the water that has been drained from it to make this good soup. The bureau of home economics describes the method of making it:

1 pint rice water 1/2 cup finely chopped celery
1 cup milk 1 carrot, medium tops
2 size, grated 1 rounded tbs. salt pork, diced
2 tbs. butter 1 onion, chopped very small
1 fine

Cook the salt pork in a skillet until very crisp and then remove it. Add the butter to the pork fat and then the onions, celery tops, and carrots and cook for 5 minutes, stirring to keep them from becoming too brown. Heat the rice water and milk in a saucepan and stir in the cooked vegetables. Season with salt and a small amount of pepper. Allow the soup to stand for an hour or more to blend. Reheat and, just before serving, add the crisped pork.

Nut Biscuits Make Treat for Luncheon or Supper

An easily made treat for luncheon or supper, in combination with preserves or cream cheese or both, is nut biscuits. These are ideal if served hot, but you will find that any leftover biscuits will not go begging. If your household includes one or two active boys who come around in the middle of the afternoon or at the end of a game of tennis or baseball, looking for a little extra snack to restore the energy they have given out. Make some, too, for the picnic lunch. The directions are from the bureau of home economics.

2 cups sifted soft-wheat flour 1/2 cup ground nuts
4 teaspoons baking powder 1/2 cup milk, or enough for soft dough
1/2 teaspoon salt

Sift the dry ingredients and cut in the fat and nuts. Add the milk and stir from the center with a fork, until a soft dough is formed. Toss the dough on a lightly floured board, and press into a sheet about one-fourth inch thick with the palm of the hand. Cut in small rounds, brush the top with butter, and place one round over the other. Bake in a quick oven until lightly brown. Serve hot with marmalade or cheese and jelly.

Valuable Minerals Are Contained in Spinach

Spinach should always be cooked as little as possible, so that its vitamins will not be destroyed. All the liquid that cooks out of the leaves should be saved and served, for in it are dissolved some of the valuable minerals which the spinach contributes to the diet. Everyone is familiar with the story of the little boy who was sure he could "taste the iron" in his spinach, so it was scarcely necessary to warn the good cook to wash spinach thoroughly, through five or six waters, lifting it each time from the surface of the pan so that any grit will sink. Cut off the roots before the first washing because considerable grit is held at the base of the stems. The bureau of home economics gives these directions for cooking spinach:

Wash the spinach through many waters and when all grit has been removed, drain well and chop the spinach very fine. To each pound of spinach melt in a saucepan three or four tablespoonsful of butter and when lightly browned add the spinach. Cover the pan a few minutes until the spinach has wilted, then remove the cover, add the salt and cook for eight or ten minutes, stirring frequently. For children, serve on crisp toast to conserve the liquid.

Broiled Liver Is Most Excellent for Change

Liver need not always be fried. One of the best ways of cooking any kind of liver—beef, calf, lamb, or hog liver—according to the bureau of home economics of the United States Department of Agriculture—is to broil it under the flame of a gas oven. For a family of six, buy about a pound and a half of liver, cut in slices a quarter of an inch thick. Wipe the slices with a damp cloth. Place them on a greased baking sheet and put it under the flame of the broiling oven. Cook from eight to ten minutes, turning frequently. When done, sprinkle with salt and pepper, pour over it some melted butter, and serve at once. Good vegetables to serve with broiled liver are: Baked onions, baked tomatoes, green peppers stuffed with an onion, tomato and bread crumb mixture, spinach, kale, or cabbage.

The Easiest Way is the "FAULTLESS" way

Nothing to add except boiling water

Every laundress knows that "SOMETHING" must be added to lump starch to make a perfect boiled starch.

The United States Department of Agriculture in Farmers Bulletin 1099, "Home Laundering," says—"The following is a good general receipt for making Cooked Starch:

1 to 4 tablespoons starch, according to stiffness desired
1 cup (1/2 pint) cold water
1/2 teaspoon borax
1/2 teaspoon paraffin or white fat
1 quart boiling water

Make a paste of the starch and the cold water; add the borax, the paraffin or fat, and the boiling water. Boil the mixture, stirring it thoroughly, until it is clear, or for about 20 minutes. Remove any scum that forms and strain the starch while hot.

But who wants to go to all that trouble?

FAULTLESS STARCH is already prepared. Our formula, we believe, will produce better results than the above. We know the materials we use are the purest we can buy. They are carefully blended to bring out the best results in starching.

That is why FAULTLESS STARCH users in more than a million homes agree that the "Easiest Way" is the FAULTLESS way. One trial will prove it.

Prehistoric Skeletons

Skeletons of prehistoric animals have been unearthed in fossil beds recently discovered near Redington, Neb. One of the specimens is believed to be the skeleton of a mammoth. The skull is about four feet across and seven feet long. The complete head weighs 1,100 pounds. The five-foot jaw bone of another unclassified fossil was found. Further evidence of prehistoric life was discovered in the way of shells and prints of vegetation. The fossils were obtained from beds that are believed to have been the banks of an ancient river.

Oxen Got Homesick

City life proved too much for a yoke of oxen brought to Franklin, N. H., to take part in the centennial celebration. They yearned for their usual life on the farm in Sanbornton, from which they never before departed, so much that a veterinarian who was called in after the oxen took sick ordered them back to the farm.

Tiger Face on Auto

With eyes that flash green lights and with teeth of steel, the replica of a tiger's head has been mounted on the radiator front of an automobile made in Germany for hunting in India. The feature is expected to aid in running the car through the jungle as well as being an attractive ornament.

The new rule for making jelly jell use PEXEL

always this never this

PEXEL will surprise you with its speed and economy in making jelly. Does not change the color or flavor of your jams or jellies

USE any fruit you wish—the one that failed before. Add PEXEL to the juice and bring to boil. Then add sugar. Bring to full boil again. Skim. It's finished. Pour into glasses. You've made the most delicious jelly in all your experience—and it will jell by the time it is cold.

In addition to making jelly jell, PEXEL is economical and saves time. Cuts out the long boil. Makes more jelly because fruit juice, sugar and flavor don't go off into steam. Time and fuel are saved. Countless tests show that PEXEL repays the 30c it costs from one to three times.

PEXEL is different too! Made entirely from pure fruit. Tasteless, colorless, odorless—absolutely. A powder—not a liquid. Keeps indefinitely. Equally effective with bottled fruit juices or unsweetened canned fruits.

Get PEXEL from your grocer. Only 30c. The recipe booklet in every package gives easy-to-follow directions and accurate tables. The PEXEL Company, Chicago, Ill.

A few examples of how much jelly PEXEL makes:

4 1/2 cups strawberry juice, PEXEL, 3 cups sugar make 11 glasses jelly.

4 1/2 cups raspberry juice, PEXEL, 3 cups sugar make 11 glasses jelly.

6 cups currant juice, PEXEL, 10 cups sugar make 14 glasses of jelly.

4 1/2 cups grape juice, PEXEL, 7 cups sugar make 10 glasses of jelly.

Why do you do it?

Why pay 50 cents for only a half-pint can of liquid insect-killer, when you can get just as much Black Flag Liquid—the deadliest insect-killer made—for only 25 cents. Black Flag is sure death to insects—Black Flag comes in two forms—Liquid and Powder. Both are sure death to flies, mosquitoes, roaches, ants, bed bugs, fleas, etc. Powder, 15 cents up.

(Money back if not absolutely satisfied.)

Claim Cure For Pneumonia
Has Been Discovered

A positive cure for pneumonia has been perfected, Prof. R. C. Borden, director of the American Institute of Homeopathic Research, Chicago, announced. The treatment, developed by members of the institute, will be ready for dissemination to the medical world late this year early in 1929, Prof. Borden said. He made the announcement in an address to the Illinois Homeopathic Medical Society.

The institute has treated 3000 cases with the new method and now is organizing its data. Until that has been finished the nature of the treatment will not be made known, Prof. Borden said.

Is Santa Clause
in the Tire Business

We lose a sale occasionally because of a long trade, and we always ask the buyer if his old tires were worth what he got for them.

Invariably he says, no. We ask you what's the answer?

Is Santa Claus in the tire business? Is the dealer merely practicing? Or did his big, tender, overflowing heart just get the best of him?

No foolin'--what's the answer? Is Christmas a continuous event, or is someone keeping the doughnut and selling the hole?

We allow you for your old tires only what they're worth. We charge you for our fine new Goodyear only what they're worth. You get a square deal and so do we. And as long as we're in our right minds nobody'll get anything different.
