Introducing Our New Superintendent

With the opening of school so near at hand, it might be an advantage if we all knew the new head of our school system; therefore we show his picture on this page.

W. I. Wilkins is the name of this man. He is a native Texan, born at Salado in Bell County, a place as he says famous for four things in Texas History, the home of the first academy in Texas, lacking only three votes of having been made the capital when Austin was selected, and the birthplace of himself and Jim Ferguson. Mr. Wilkins was given his common school training in Texas rural schools and graduated from Killeen High School in Bell County. He received his first permanent certificate at old Denton Normal in 1913, did his junior college work in Meridian College, a Methodist institution in Bosque County. After that he entered Howard Payne College, a Baptist institution in Brownwood, where he had conferred on him his degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1924. Entering Texas Technological College in the summer of 1926, he was the first student to ask for graduate work there. He has written his master's thesis a requirement for the degree of Master of Arts on a prominent present day Plains subject, Pathological Conditions of the Plains Country. His work there is now all completed and on Friday of this week at ten o'clock, President Paul W. Horn will confer on him the degree of Master of Arts.

In his own field of work he has taught in rural schools, as high school principal, public school superintendent, and a college teacher. His college teaching was done in John Tarleton College at Stephenville. In addition to that he has spent all or a part of seven summers in the State Department of Education at Austin. His wide and varied experience as a school man give him opportunities for great good in our schools.

Mrs. Wilkins is also a teacher, and has charge of the low primary work for the coming year. Her special fitness for her work is attested by the fact that she has reared a family of her own. In addition to that experience she has had special training under the primary supervisors of the schools of Waco, Brownwood, Dallas and Houston, and has been a student in Meridian College, John Tarleton College and in Texas Technological College, and has a permanent certificate with over a dozen years of experience.

Issues of the paper in the near future will give an introduction of the remainder of our faculty-watch for these items of interest.

New Tailoring Firm

A deal was consummated this week, in which Conrad R. Lam acquired the interest of James Courtney in the Tailor Shop of Earnest and Courtney. The firm will be known in the future as the Sudan Cleaning Company. The advertisement of the new firm appears elsewhere in this issue.

Mr. Lam, the new member of the firm, is a cleaner of considerable experience. Having worked by the side of some of the best cleaners and finishers in the state, he has had ample opportunity to acquire the skill necessary to handle the many difficult problems which a cleaner has to deal with, such as the cleaning of ladies' silk dresses, pleating, alterations of all kinds, including the cutting off of coats, repairing of rents and tears, etc. Mr. Lam's duties with the band do not occupy his time in the mornings, and it is at this time especially that he will be on hand to supervise the operation of the plant.

According to one of the members of the firm, some new cleaning machinery will be installed immediately, and arrangements have been made with Henry & Key, Cleaners of Littlefield, to handle the overflow of cleaning that the smaller plant in Sudan will be unable to accommodate.

Thomas L. Blanton Arrays Mayfield and Stands for Connally

ABILENE, TEXAS, Aug. 21—A philippic in denunciation of hypocrisy and deceit in public life, perhaps never equalled in the political history of Texas, was delivered in Abilene on Tuesday night of August 7th, when Congressman Thomas L. Blanton, defeated in the July 28 primary, took to the forum in behalf of Congressman Tom Connally. The Abilene congressman, always a fighter, was in fighting good humor when he appeared before his home folks to lend assistance to his colleague, and his thirty minutes address that he delivered was packed with more political dynamite that has been set off under Earle B. Mayfield in all of the years of his career. Blanton talked from the book of records, offering proof of his assertion and defying Earle Mayfield to deny a single one of the array of charges of misconduct and hypocrisy as man and senator that he laid at Mayfield's door.

Blanton told his audience in detail of the celebrated night of revelry on the floor of the United States Senate February 22, 1927, on Washington's birthday, and he read a letter from Senator Neeley, democrat, of West Virginia, who presided on that now famous occasion, absolving him of any misstatement in the letter that Blanton wrote to Texas last winter. He told of other hilarious and bibulous occasions in which he charged that the junior senator from Texas was one of the star actors, and in each instance dared Mayfield to deny any portion of the charge he had made. Blanton waxed extremely sarcastic in his reference to Mayfield's poses as a teetotaler and Christian gentleman. In connection he recalled a night or drunken revelry on Friday, a day of sobering on Saturday and

Trades Day, Aug. 27

It Will Be A Big Day --- Fine Program On Hand

RODEO ATTRACTIONS

Trades Day for Sudan, on next Monday, August 27th is rapidly approaching.

The merchants of Sudan—in putting this over have not just one viewpoint of this occasion, but several.

It gives your home merchant a chance to show that he can place a commodity over his counter into your hands at a price you claim you pay for same in other larger towns—be it hats, caps, dresses, groceries, etc., or whatever commodity you may want.

Secondly, to come in contact with you in a social as well as a personal profit-purchasing standpoint—for your own benefit.

Thirdly, in order to show you that if the business men of Sudan are expected to build up a real town—and it is a growing one—they must have your cooperation. This is not intended for a lecture or sermon, we simply wish to present the intrinsic qualities of the celebration.

In short, to get up a feeling amongst all of a Trade at-Home Spirit and incalculable benefit of keeping the dollars earned at home right here with us.

There are also several FEATHERED BARGAINS listed—see their ads. and premiums that go with them.

The Sudan Band will furnish the music and other features are listed in program form on the Trades Day page ad. and a circular of same can be had anywhere in the business district and on the grounds.

Monkey Or Man--Which?

Will be the subject of Evang. J. D. Boren of Big Spring, Texas and who is now engaged in a series of gospel sermons at Amherst.

Evang. Boren, will deliver this lecture at the high school auditorium at 3:30 P. M. Sunday the 26th. Every one is invited to attend. It will be FREE and NO collections.

Bro. Boren attended the Scopes evolution trial at Dayton Tenn. personally interviewing Clarence Darrow, Dudley Field Malone, Scopes, Dr. Potter, Bryan et al. Besides this he has written many articles for newspapers and in its connection a book, entitled "Monkey or Man."

Dean Leidigh, Texas Tech., Praises the Sudan Farmer

Dean Leidigh, Texas Tech., says the farmers of Sudan had wider interest, more widely diversified and more progressive, all of which promises greater success for the farmers of this community than in any community he could call to mind.

Oh, if they would only let you work. Wouldn't it be fine just to be able to work? Do you know the real thing that puts people in their little hospital cots with nervous prostration is not working, but trying to work and not being allowed to. Work never hurt anybody. But this thing of being in the middle of a letter and then rising to shake hands with a man who knew you when you were a boy and then sitting down and trying to catch the thread of that letter again—that's what gives one general debility.—Saunders Norvell.

Dr. W. H. Ford returned from a visit with his son Dr. Hugh Ford who resides at San Angelo, the latter part of last week.

Farm Bureau Begins Building Gin In Littlefield

Monday August 20, work begins on the Farm Bureau Gin at Littlefield. A great many members of Lamb County are enthusiastic over the prospect of this splendid plant and convenient location. It is not generally understood by all the members, but there is no one that can participate in the earnings of one of these gins except the grower member who patronizes the gin.

A member who would not gin his cotton at his own gin would be acting about like a man who would stop his own windmill from running and go haul water from a neighbors. It is hoped that especially every Bureau member will find out about the profit sharing plan of this gin and be on hand next ginning season with his cotton.

Of course a grower can get his cotton ginned whether he is a member of the Cotton association or not and at the customary price of other gins, but he could not qualify to participate in the earnings of the plant.

The Farm Bureau Gin Company will spend thirty thousand dollars on this plant together with the five acres of land purchased just across from the Santa Fe Depot. This gin will be equipped with the latest machinery for handling snapped cotton and should be ready to gin when the first bale of cotton rolls into Littlefield.—J. W. H.

Dr. Ford Appointed Health Officer

Dr. W. H. Ford was appointed City Health Officer at a meeting of the City Council last week. The doctor has now assumed his duties and its now good by hog pens, fly catchers, etc.

Christian Meeting Will Start Sunday

According to Elder W. A. Kercheville, pastor of the local Church of Christ, he will start a meeting at the school auditorium next Sunday at 11:00 A. M. Members and non members are urged to attend.

I. O. O. F. To Meet.

The members of the I. O. O. F. Lodge are requested to meet at the school house, Thursday night, August 23rd.

Baptist Meeting Closed

On account of the illness of Evangelist Morgan, who has been conducting the Baptist meeting, at this place, it was necessary to close the meeting Monday. Rev. Morgan was taken to his home on Tuesday. The meeting was well under way and much good was being done, and it is unfortunate that it was necessary to close at this time.

A hundred-point man is one who is true to every trust; who is loyal to the firm that employs him; who does not listen for insults nor look for slights; who carries a civil tongue in his head; who is polite to strangers without being "fresh"; who is considerate toward servants; who is willing to learn; who is cautious and yet courageous—Elbert Hubbard.

To The Farmers of The Sudan Community

During my brief sojourn in Sudan I have observed with much interest the progressive farming carried on by the farmers of this district. You are much in advance of other farming centers I have observed in recent travels over Texas and Oklahoma. The crops, so promising of a bountiful yield, testify to your skill as farm managers.

In a recent talk with the Dean of Agriculture at Texas Tech. Dean Leidigh stated that the farmers of Sudan had wider interests, more widely diversified and were more progressive, all of which promises greater success for the farmers of this community than in any community he could call to mind.

But we, as farmers of Sudan, must grow with our success. No matter how old one gets, he should never get too old to learn.

Although I have a college education I hope to always remain a student and allow the farmer to be my instructor. I know that the farmers of this community can teach me many things. I hope that we may combine our practical knowledge with my scientific knowledge and thereby accomplish greater things.

Before the opening of school I hope to visit many of you and talk over your problems and plans for the coming year. Lack of time will prevent my visiting all of those whom I should like to see.

I should like to meet every farmer of the community here on Trades Day, Aug. 27.

Call on me to help me select your best poultry or stock to bring in on Trades Day.

If I can be of any help in helping to solve your problems or assist you in any capacity, I am at your service.

ROSS J. NEWTON, Instructor of Vocal Instruction, Sudan, Texas.

Announcement

On next Monday, August 27, I shall spend the day in Sudan and shall be anxious to meet every prospect for the football team. Those who have any question of their eligibility should meet the superintendent Saturday of this week at the high school office and go over with him their records. We want no mistakes as to eligibility.

On the morning of September 3, I shall want to begin a little intensive practice, working at eight o'clock each morning of that week.

Be sure and see me next Monday, and then be on hand one week from that date ready to start work. It will take this if we are to build a real team.

William Brown, Coach Sudan High School.

Revival Meeting

Rev. B. B. Freeman, of Monday, will begin a series of meetings at the Methodist Church, Sunday, at 11:00 A. M. and continue indefinite. The folks of this territory are cordially invited to attend these meetings.

Mrs. G. A. Foote and daughter, Miss Faye, are visiting in Amarillo this week.

J. W. Briscoe and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Briscoe spent several days at Carlsbad last week.

The Colfax Bookplate

By AGNES MILLER

"I cabled to England for some information; in fact, I did so on Tuesday, the day after you first showed me the bookplate." He drew from his pocket a blue half-sheet of paper, and handed it to me. "Just to make a beginning," he went on, "I assumed, from the medical bookplate, and from the frigate, that Colfax might have had some customer who had dealings with ships or doctors. So I cabled my secretary to find out what he could for me; that's his answer."

I read the cablegram: "Made through Colfax investigation stop family died out eighteen sixty-nine stop last member Richard Colfax son of Hugh eighteen hundred eighteen sixty-nine stop served Chile Dardanelles Crises stop no medical connection among family or clientele." "History's always to be taken into account in studying bookplates, of course," I agreed. "I am aware there was a Crimean war; I have even heard of the British fleet passing the Dardanelles in 1848. But I must be sure my ignorance as to what Great Britain was at war with Chile."

The captain most politely refused the opportunity presented to him to smile.

"She never was," he rejoined. "I believe, though, that a British fleet went to the aid of Chile when that country revolted from Spain."

"Then," said I, a little surer of my ground, but not quite ready to quote exact dates, "since those South American countries revolted in the early part of the Nineteenth century, that was . . . about the time, too, when Richard Colfax was beginning his naval career, if he entered the service in 1818. Suppose he served in that fleet you mention, suppose he made some sort of connection in this hemisphere: what about some ground, in that event, for there being an original American Colfax bookplate?"

"That's just what I surmised! I wanted to see if you'd confirm it," cried the captain, delighted. "Even if it's South American and not North, the point's worth looking into, and I'll do that at once."

A rapid search through reference catalogues revealed that Charles's "Notes" had been issued in an edition of three hundred numbered copies. The number of our copy, which appeared on the title page, was 239. But so far as I could go back in sales reports, a thorough search brought no trace whatever of Number 239.

However, this fact proved one thing, at least: Number 239 had very seldom changed hands. It had belonged to Judge Leavitt. Then why were the Grosvenor family so resolved to get possession of it? For the key? Was that connected with Charles MacIvor's offer of a "liberal settlement," the night before? Did he know of some treasure hidden under lock and key, to which he alluded? But why should a key belonging to the Grosvenor connection be concealed in a law book? There were no lawyers in that family.

No, there were not. And then, as I reread its title for perhaps the five hundredth time in the last six days, I suddenly got an idea. This title was: "Notes on Medical Statutes in the Virginia Code." And Mr. Grosvenor's father had been a doctor; a Virginia; he had practiced at a time when he would need just such a professional reference book; and the bookplate, real or counterfeit, was a physician's bookplate!

I nearly shot out of my chair and addressed the meeting—customers, browsers, clerks, collectors, all: "There you are, folks! Just give me time; I don't need eternity, after all," when suddenly my joyful emotions were one and all stricken with paralysis. For Mr. Case, who had hardly appeared in the shop all morning, though usually on Saturdays he was nowhere else, was just going past me out of the front door.

His pace was so quiet that it seemed almost stealthy. He passed within a yard of me, and did not notice me; I never had seen any face so terribly distraught as his. What in the world had happened to him now? Or what had he done now? I felt more upset, actually, than when I had seen him at my desk Thursday night; for now it would have been impossible not to pity him, what ever one's suspicions.

CHAPTER X

Shocks, Assorted.

I dispatched Captain Ashland a note as the clock began to strike noon; as it finished in walked Mr. Almy, looking even more alive than ever. But before he had shut the door, the telephone rang.

"Yes, Mr. Roberts," said I. "Yes, that is correct. It has turned up. It is here. Yes, details will be available when I see you. Wh-h-hat? Oh, certainly. Wait, Mr. Almy, please! Yes, yes, I understand; I will do so. What earthly difference could it make to me? All right."

I hung up. "Mr. Roberts has just inquired if you have arrived," I said to Mr. Almy with outward calm, inwardly I felt madder than a hornet, and dreadfully flat, owing to a mischief message just transmitted by Mr. Roberts. "He would like to see you at once in Mr. Case's office."

"I'll ask him if we may have it." "You needn't bother; he has gone out."

"Gone out?" "Yes, just a few minutes ago. And if you so desire, Mr. Roberts suggests my joining the two of you there later."

"Very well. We may have quite a session. I should be glad if you'd come as soon as you can, please."

Mr. Almy nodded and passed on. Then I took my bag, and from it I took Charles's "Notes," and from that I took the key. The bookplate and the key I then returned to the bag. I next rose and at random snatched—for I was growing less calm—a file of prints from one of the shelves near my desk, and ran through it searching for some medical bookplate of small value. A laurel wreath encircling a helmet with a Navarre-like plume boiling off one side and the inspiring motto INVICTUS, rather pleased my mood. I swept the pastebrush across it, and slammed it down on the first inside cover of the law book, entirely covering the marks of the original bookplate and the hiding place of the key.

Such, indeed, had just been my orders from Mr. Roberts. And their purpose? None other than to prepare the book for the hands of Miss Wilkes! For she would shortly appear to demand it. Mr. Darrow had been reached by her plea, and had viewed the offer of her cousin Magistrate Judges with favor. And I was to be the agent to deliver the prize to her. Mr. Roberts had even chuckled about it. Well, here she came. I could hear her whistles swaying in the gale.

"Oh, Miss Wilkes," I cried before she was half-way up the aisle, "isn't it perfectly glorious! You know what I mean." I waved the book coyly. "Sh-h-h!" I tucked it into her hand.

The techie was slightly less audible. Miss Wilkes' majestic countenance proclaimed that while she had much to forgive, she could afford to be magnanimous. If it was not, indeed, her duty.

"Now, you'd be the last person on earth to find fault with anyone for being overconscientious," I suggested blandly.

"Especially," responded Miss Wilkes, interpreting this remark as she was intended to, "one of my own 'graduates,' as I call them. Well, by-by! Be good to yourself!"

"The same to you," said I, feeling certain my wish would be fulfilled, and picking up my bag, I went to join Mr. Almy and Mr. Roberts at the rear.

"May we have the key and the bookplate, please, Miss Fuller," requested Mr. Almy, without preliminaries.

"Oh, do you know all about them?" I exclaimed, producing them.

"He knows what you told me yesterday," said Mr. Roberts. "And how did the lost book come to light again?"

I smiled, and both men, who were extremely serious, looked surprised.

"Perhaps," I began, "Mr. Almy has told you he met me in Miss Grosvenor's apartment last night? I had gone to stay with Miss Burton. The saving feature of the occasion, in a double sense, was Miss Burton herself. She stole that book!"

"Miss Burton stole that book!" ejaculated both Mr. Roberts and Mr. Almy, equally dumfounded.

I nodded.

"She took it at noon yesterday when my back was turned, to keep, as she thought, Miss Wilkes from getting it. Her brother had also warned her that 'Brandon Tower' had come to the shop, and she thought he wanted the book. You have heard of him, Mr. Almy? He nodded without looking up from the bookplate. "And do you know he and Charles MacIvor are the same person?"

That time I certainly got an effect. Mr. Roberts bounded out of his chair and repeated my "Wh-h-hat!" of a few minutes previous, while Mr. Almy laid down the bookplate and looked at me without moving a muscle. Then he said:

"Well, I thought so, but I was not certain. Thank you, Miss Fuller. How did you know?"

"Because Nancy Burton identified him. When Mr. MacIvor appeared through the window, she thought him Mr. Tower in search of the book and disappeared through the door to her own apartment. She hid the book under her mattress and went to sleep on top of it! She gave me the information when I came upstairs. But may I ask how you associated Mr. MacIvor with Mr. Tower?"

"I suspected a connection, from the account of Mr. Tower's efforts to get Miss Burton's, or rather Mr. Burton's, suitcase," replied Mr. Almy. "Most of this morning I spent trying to

"A Trigger!" I Echoed. "Dear Me, That Sounds Like a Gun."

Identify MacIvor with Tower, but without success. I admit, until your statement just now MacIvor sent last night for his lawyer, Mr. Ballard, and declined absolutely to talk. He has been formally charged with selling the stolen bonds, and is now out on bail. I tried to have Dibble identify him as the law-student customer, and also as the fellow Burton attacked here on Monday, but he couldn't do it. The passage of several days made him too uncertain."

"Why didn't you ask me to?" I demanded.

"You?"

"I can do it! After I had looked at him a few minutes last night in Normandy terrace, I recognized him, not only as that customer, but also as the man who came in here on Thursday night, whom I saw at my desk at a quarter-past ten, when I was standing up on the south gallery in the dark."

Mr. Almy pondered a minute in silence. Then he said:

"Well, as long as MacIvor was seen and identified here Thursday night, he'll have to come across with the rest of the story sooner or later. All you've told us is very unexpected and useful."

"I always felt Miss Burton to be rather an intelligent girl," observed Mr. Roberts, with his native tact.

"See here," broke in Mr. Almy, on this revised version, resuming his study of the bookplate. "The sixteen slits on this yellow slip do correspond to the slots on that cube in the picture, just as Miss Fuller noticed. I believe they could have been made by that instrument, for if I might venture a guess after looking at this very small picture, I should say there might be blades concealed inside it one for each cube . . . and what's this thing on top like a handle, anyhow? Is it a trigger, I wonder?"

"A trigger?" I echoed. "Dear me! That sounds like a gun. Now, I heard a gun last night—"

"Where?"

"In the Grosvenor apartment."

Mr. Almy pricked up his ears.

"Tell me about it," he ordered.

"You didn't mention it before. Why not?"

"It passed out of my mind; you'll see why. I heard it just after Charles MacIvor entered the room through the window. I heard this loud click, and not knowing who he was, of course, I jumped to the conclusion that he was a housebreaker, and armed. Miss Burton also recognized the sound in the excitement of all that had happened since, I forgot about the noise."

Mr. Almy had been listening carefully. Now he said:

"I wanted to see you not only about the matter of the returned law book, Miss Fuller; I am going to request you to accompany me this afternoon to Miss Grosvenor's. Especially in the light of these new facts you have reported, she must be urged to tell everything she knows about this mystery of her grandfather's death. She is quite plainly concealing information, and does herself more harm each day that passes."

"She's sacrificing herself," said I. "And if it's not for that wretched cousin of hers, I'm much mistaken."

But Mr. Almy said nothing further except that he would join me after luncheon for the visit to Normandy terrace, and I had risen to go, when the door opened without warning, and there stood Daisy Abbott, in her street things.

"Oh, pardon me!" she exclaimed. "I saw you going in here, Miss Fuller; I didn't know any one else was here. I thought you must be doing some special work, but ventured to interrupt you to say good-by."

I stretched my hand across the desk, beginning: "Good-by and good luck! Don't forget all about us!" when I was suddenly aware that Daisy's hand had dropped back to her side, that her eyes had fallen past my outstretched hand to the desk; that they were riveted on that much-handled yellow note, which had been lying unheeded for some minutes beside the bookplate.

"Where did that come from?" burst from Daisy's lips involuntarily, in a perfectly unearthly whisper.

"It fell out of a book in the history section. Why, did you put it there, Miss Abbott?" demanded Mr. Almy, vigorously, springing up. "Answer me!"

"Oh, dear!" she moaned. "I did wish I had thrown it away, afterward, but I couldn't find the book I put it in! Anyway, I did keep it. I knew it would be wicked to destroy it. He was always so nice, I couldn't believe it meant anything, really, especially when Mr. Case—oh, dear, and I thought I was going to get off all right, after all I've suffered so horribly this whole dreadful week!"

And Mr. Almy's adjurations to stop talking nonsense and tell everything she knew about that yellow note passed unheeded. She proceeded to go into the finest fit of hysterics I have ever been privileged to witness. Even Mr. Almy, when he and I set forth for Normandy terrace somewhat later, admitted that it was in its way a masterpiece!

"Moreover, they did us a good turn," he observed quite truly, alluding to the hysterics.

For when Daisy had ultimately been restored to coherence, her innumerable sobs and sniffs and tears brought the happy climax of a confession that she had been bad, but was good now.

"Well, then, if you're good now, you aren't afraid to tell me all you know about it, are you?" Mr. Almy asked.

"Oh, no, not you!" murmured Daisy, melted by his sweet virility, and seeing her game was up anyhow. "Well, the first I saw of it was when Professor Harrington gave it to me last Monday morning with that list of books he wanted written on it. He said he would look over fiction in the center aisle while I got the books. I brought him the first four, laying them on the table beside him with the list on top, so he could see they were just what he ordered, and said I would bring the fifth as soon as possible. It took three or four minutes to find; then, as I brought it down the aisle, Professor Harrington came forward and took it, and said as he had some classes to meet directly at the university, he would take all the books right along without wrapping."

"As soon as he had gone, I saw his list lying on the floor of the aisle, and picked it up to throw it away. I noticed it was all torn, but the professor is such a nervous man I thought he must just have been fussing with it while he was reading."

Coins Valuable Only to the Numismatist

Coins and currency once valued at millions of dollars make up the collection of Cere C. Standford of Gregory, S. D. The currency is worthless now, except to collectors. The most valuable piece in the collection was taken from ruins at Pompeii. One piece of Austrian currency, worth at one time $500,000, is in the collection. In United States gold coins, Standford has $2 and 50 cents in single pieces, a 50-cent and 25-cent gold coin. He has United States paper money in 50-cent, 10-cent, 25-cent and 5-cent denominations. A silver piece in the collection is one of three peace medals given by the United States to Indian chiefs in 1871. He has an Egyptian coin with the pyramids stamped upon it. Money used in Hongkong has a Chinese emblem on one side and the English Queen Victoria on the other. Coins from the Philippines have Spanish inscriptions on one side and English on the other.

Not Much Demand Now

for Handmade Basket

The art of the osier, which is basket making, is one of the oldest of the handicrafts and was once a very important industry of England, but the statement is made that it will soon be exterminated unless some encouragement is given to the workers. German and Japanese baskets are displacing the product of the other countries where the art flourished first. A great deal of labor is required to cultivate the willows and prepare them for wicker work. The willows are cut with a short curved knife in the early months of the year. They are then soaked in running water for six months. This is known as pitting the willows, and it is necessary to take off the bark to produce white willows. The finished willows are then dried and straightened, when they are ready for the hamper makers and cane workers at the factories.

OUR LABOB-SAVING DEVICES

Reduces Labor Twenty-Five To Fifty Per Cent

(Contributed Article)

Many reasons are advanced for the present era of unemployment. The universal agreement is "stagnation." What causes stagnation?

Time was when anybody who could stand on two sound legs could get a job, but in this era of mechanical and agricultural labor-saving devices the cut in labor runs from 25 to 50 per cent—taking it even at his most conservative estimate—30 to 35 per cent—is alarming.

We are now in a state of over-production and under consumption—the old law of supply and demand.

Fifty per cent of the wage-earners of the United States are and have been out of steady employment for five years or more; there was an official canvass and statement of this made recently and at a figure far below this, but this was made at a time when a few minor occupations were in vogue, fruit picking and other seasonal occupations, one-third of whom were minors.

A wheat combine with three men and one boy reaped and delivered to car 1,328 bushels of wheat in three days, and all any ordinary individual has to do is to figure out in his own mind the cut in labor in just that one instance.

If 25 to 50 per cent. of the wage-earners can't buy through lack of employment the retailer sells 50 per cent less, and thus the wholesaler and so on until it reaches the factories, who find themselves with a surplus on hand which they can't unload and so closes it doors.

Our export trade doesn't consume the surplus and so it is still on hand. In other words labor should consume what it produces—and did at one time and does even now to a certain extent.

Then was conceived bills in congress to rectify this. The surplus raw production, as well as the unsold merchandise, is on hand still, of whatever commodity you may mention, and thus arose and was conceived the McNary-Haugen Relief bill, the illegitimate child of and cradled in the very lap of over-production

In short, this bill means this—that the producer is to be protected.

If that is a fact, why then there should be a "Right-to-work Compensation Act"—to reimburse labor for their days of idleness.

How many people ever read The Congressional Record? This record of congress and senate of the United States goes into every county of every state in the Union and should be perused by many voters. The debates on bills presented are instructive as well as eloquent and are made by men selected and sent there

Don't take our word for it.

Ask the man experienced in building—and he will tell you that the best materials are always cheapest in the end. Why? Because good materials resist both age and weather. Wherein so many fail, is the reasoning that the best always costs the most. This is true—because in lumber often more waste will be sawed from seconds than the saving hoped for—as compared to first grade material. Our yard is now completely stocked with first grade lumber. The Fall of Rome

The pomp and power of Rome is gone,
While other nations carry on.
Rome was wasteful, would not save;
To idle pleasures her time she gave.
Though she was rich she lived too high,
Decay set in, and she passed by.
And so with man who lives too fast,
He, too, will fall; he cannot last.

General Motors Adds Weather House to Proving Grounds, Milford, Mich.

General Motors proving ground, the 1245-acre outdoor laboratory near Milford, Mich., where cars are accurately measured to find out their performance ability, has in response to a demand for greater accuracy added a weather house to its many ingenious scientific checking devices.

It is for the purpose of evaluating precisely and impartially all makes of automobiles in the world. It is not a weather forecaster, but a weather "hind-caster," to use a term employed by proving ground engineers, and outside of the velocity indicator in the U. S. Navy the only one in existence in the world.

It has been in use several weeks, day night, under the direction of skilled meteorologists, and its reports are available to all General Motors divisional engineers, daily reports being also filed at Lansing with the Michigan state weather department.

Here is a hypothetical instance of measuring an automobile's merits:

In checking back on the performance of a model by the engineering division they might find that on May 9th its gasoline consumption exceeded that of the preceding and following days, that a little more water

Adults Contract Children's Diseases

Adults can, and do, contract many children's diseases. And, usually, they suffer from them much more than children do. For instance, many adults contract worms, an ailment usually associated with children. Sometimes they suffer intensely and take expensive medical treatments, without realizing that worms are the cause of their troubles. Yet, the symptoms are the same as in children, loss of appetite and weight, grinding the teeth and restless sleep, itching of the nose and anus, and abdominal pains. And, the same medicine that surely and harmlessly expels round and pin worms from children will do the same for adults — White's Cream Vermifuge, which you can get at H. G. Ramby Drug Store.

was required for the radiation and fluctuations were noted in the speed, none of which effects would be noticed by the average driver.

The first aid they will call upon is the weather recorder.

In checking back with the graphic weather reports engineers might find that the wind velocity varied on May 9th between six and ten miles an hour, that on May 8th and 10th remained below five miles an hour throughout the day. Thus the engineers know in making their comparisons that the wind was a factor in the change and to what extent. In like manner they can determine what effect the rain, sunshine, humidity or snow had to do with performance fluctuations on any given hour of any given day. This definite knowledge is a vital help in developing new models and in adjusting old ones.

Five-Day Week Program

The five-day system is being talked over considerably in the east and tried in some places in that country, where the bread lines are and where the never-ending struggle between capital and labor is still on. The trouble is not over yet in the textile country and the miners' strike in Colorado and Pennsylvania still are yet fresh in the minds of the people.

It has become to be a stench in the nostrils of Liberty and all

Jim Ferguson Endorses Senator Mayfield In The Forum Is Charge

DALLAS, TEXAS, Aug. 21—Open rebellion against James E. Ferguson has been declared in all sections of Texas, where formerly his influence was counted the strongest in political matters, according to letters and telegrams of protest sent to him. Copies of some of the messages sent to Ferguson have been received at Tom Connally's headquarters. A big delegation of Jim Ferguson's friends at Houston sent him a telegram of protest immediately after he announced his support of Earle A. Mayfield.

A typical instance of the uprising against Ferguson is afforded in a letter sent him over the signature of J. H. Wharton, which was joined in by J. H. Atchison, V. D. Burns, John Phillips, Dr. J. A. Wilkinson, S. B. Hopkins, G. R. Mabry, J. W. Spinly, Ray L. Sewell, J. C. Sesson and H. C. Frederick, all of Blooming Grove. The letter follows:

"Dear Jim: During all these years, Jim, from the time you first announced for governor up until the last issue of The Forum, I have been with you teeth and toe nail—have most always thought you were right, and whether I was sure of it or not, to show my unflinching loyalty I have always stood for you and fought your battles in my home town and community. But when I read the last issue of your Forum, where you take the stand you now take to support Mayfield for senator, you and I have come to the parting of the ways. When Mayfield made his first race about five years ago and you fought him so uncompromisingly, I then read what you said about him—I heard what you said about him at Corsicana and I believed you were sincere and truthful about the matter, so I was with you there as usual.

Everybody knows that Mayfield is now the same kind of a man and the same kind of klansman that he was five years ago when you fought him so hard. He has not done or said one single thing to remove him from that position. His record is nothing to brag about and his conduct has been the same it has been all his life, that you so piteously exposed while he was making his first race. He has aided and abetted the klan at every secret opportunity, and this is a well-recognized fact; and now you have the nerve to come out and openly espouse his cause and to ask your friends to let you deliver their vote for him. You CAN NOT DO IT this time, Jim, for we are at the parting of the ways.

Now, Jim, you have a perfect right to vote as you please at all times, but when it comes to asking your friends to follow you on this jump—it is too much. We believe in sticking to the Democratic party and in voting consistently, and we are for Tom Connally as long as he is in the race. Not only that, but we are asking all our friends that we can get in touch with us on the proposition, and it would surprise you, Jim, to know how many of them feel just as we do.

Those of us who have stood by you so long and so faithfully had reason to expect better treatment of you than to have you try to deliver our vote to the Ku Klux. We are surprised and chagrined and can't imagine what in the world is the matter with you."

A great deal of the joy of life consists in doing perfectly, or at least to the best of one's ability, everything which he attempts to do. There is a sense of satisfaction, a pride in surveying such a work—a work which is rounded, full, exact, complete in all its parts—which the superficial man, who leaves his work in a slovenly, slipshod, half-finished condition can never know. It is this conscientious completeness which turns work into art. The smallest thing, well done, becomes artistic.—Wm. Mathews.

WELL-BRED HENS PROVE CHEAPEST

Hens with good breeding often produce two dollars worth of eggs in a year more than hens with poor breeding, aside from their increased value as breeders, according to experiments on the Cornell poultry farm at the college of agriculture at Ithaca, N. Y.

This means that if a poultryman can get low-bred chicks for nothing he could afford to pay one dollar a chick for high-line birds, and still make $1 more a year on each bird than from the low-line birds.

Poultrymen at Cornell point to these facts as evidence that a baby chick costing ten cents may be dear, while a chick costing fifty cents may be a good investment, if the higher priced chick comes from consistent high-producing stock. Trap nesting, pedigree hatching, and progeny testing must be used to obtain consistent high records.

The records of the hens range from 175 to 302 eggs. Seventy-five per cent of the pedigreed flock laid more than 200 eggs in one year. The males are from hens with pedigrees of 225 eggs to 302 eggs. One pen of 35 pullets on the experiment farm averaged 86 eggs a bird during the four winter months to March 1, or about 22 eggs a bird a month. These eggs were produced during the season of high prices, which is not true of birds that do not have good breeding, the department says. The number of birds that have laid 200 eggs has increased from 38 in 1921 to 179 in 1927.

Cheap but Ideal Floor Favored for Henhouse

A cheap but ideal floor can be put in a chicken house by filling in about eight inches of cinders, gravel, or crushed rock and covering it with about two inches of rich cement. The porous material under the cement will break up the soil capillary and tend to keep the floor dry. The filling should be tamped until it forms a solid base for the concrete.

Hollow tile forms a more satisfactory base for the concrete and only one-half an inch of cement is needed to cover it. Tile is more expensive than the other filler, however, and sometimes much harder to get. It should be laid in a layer of sand so the surface of the tile can be made as smooth as possible before the cement covering is put on.

A slope of four inches in twenty feet from the back to the front of the house will tend to keep the litter evenly distributed over the floor. This slope will practically eliminate the disagreeable task of scratching the litter out from under the dropping boards of the ordinary house. There is no better time of the year to put a floor in the chicken house than just before the pullets are put into their winter quarters.

Profit on Goslings Is Made During Holidays

The best profit on market goslings (young geese) is made on those marketed at Christmas and New Years, as a general rule. Turkeys have the call at Thanksgiving. It will not do, however, to neglect the young geese and unless they are kept growing at top speed they will not be large enough to be most profitable when they are wanted for the holiday tables.

Sometimes we read that these young geese will obtain all the food they need in the fields and that they will live and grow if they have nothing but grass and whatever else they can find among nature's stores.

Give Clean Water

Clean and fresh water is as necessary to the success of egg production as is a correctly balanced ration. The man who goes to a lot of trouble with his feeding but is just indifferent with his watering, may expect trouble. Water is one of the chief constituents of an egg and it is required by the hen just as much as a human being requires water to drink. It should be given several times each day, especially in summer.

Must Have Feed

The Purdue university poultry department summarizes the general treatment of the farm hen as follows: "Hens won't live on hopes and prospects. They must have feed, and plenty of it. The hen does not get enough to eat in summer. The fields, barnyards and feed lots will furnish the hen little else but grains and green food. These alone and in their present insufficient quantities will not be sufficient to produce good egg production."

Humble Toad Classified as Friend of Farmer

The lowly toad is of great value to the farmer, according to the Department of Agriculture. The eating habits of toads give them an important place in nature, says a statement by Remington Kellogg of the bureau of biological survey. Although they are indiscriminate in their appetites, the obnoxious insects eaten by the toads more than compensate for the harm done by preying on those that are beneficial.

Toads are great gourmands, and in the course of a season eat untold numbers of insects, many of which are highly destructive to plant life. Large numbers of crop pests are destroyed by the toads. Meal time with toads often begins before sunset and continues throughout the greater part of the night; hence the food contains a mixture of diurnal and nocturnal organisms. In their night warfare on insects the toads take the place of the ground-fed insectivorous birds after these have ceased their activities for the day.

"Gold Star Mothers"

There seems to be no official interpretation of the term "gold star mother." The Gold Star Mothers' association defines such a mother as one whose son was killed overseas during the World War or who was killed on the sea while serving in the war. The American War Mothers' association defines a gold star mother as one whose son has died between the dates of April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1920, from wounds or disability incurred in service during the war.

Who Will Donate Peacock?

An obituary notice of a peacock, which had been a friend of the bishop of Worcester, England, and his family for some years, recently appeared in the Diocesan Gazette. The appreciation, written by the bishop, closes: "May I add that his disconsolate widow, being of the verum et mutabile sex, would, as she tells me, welcome another partner if any one has a peacock to spare."

It Didn't Work

In a certain Indiana rural school, the teacher noticed that one youngster was not paying very close attention so she decided to catch him. She asked him which part of the story that he had just read he liked best. He studied a moment and said: "The part that Mary just told."
The teacher was not to be outdone and told him the class could listen to it again. "Well," he said, hesitatingly, "I don't know. I didn't hear what Mary said."
