CAPONE INDICTED FOR TAX EVASION

CAN RECEIVE 32 YEARS AS HIS PENALTY

Investigation By Agents Has Covered a Period of Two Years.

CHICAGO, June 5.—"Scarface" Al Capone was indicted today by a federal grand jury on charges of evading payment of income taxes on hundreds of thousands of dollars he wrested from people in Chicago rackets.

Simultaneously William F. Waugh, one of Capone's attorneys, revealed that he had approached the district attorney's office with negotiations to have Capone plead guilty to the charges.

With the indictment it was revealed that government agents conducted a two-year investigation into Capone's financial affairs from coast to coast, questioned 1,000 persons who had dealings with the gangster and called several hundred witnesses before this and other grand juries before rounding out their case against Capone.

The indictment charged that Capone took $915,552.95 in underworld profits during the years 1925-26-27-28 and 29 and that he owes the government $182,591.24 in taxes.

The indictment charges six separate felonies and two misdemeanors against the gang chief in a total of 23 counts, enough to remove Capone from the gangland picture to a prison cell for 32 years if convicted.

Capone was reported hiding in Chicago pending outcome of his attorney's negotiations.

The indictment characterized Capone as Alphonse Capone, alias Alphonse Brown, alias Al Capone, alias Al Brown, alias "Scarface" Brown, alias "Scarface" Capone, alias A. Capone, the last a new name for the gang leader.

It is among the last of the "big shot" gangsters the government hopes to put behind the bars from now until after the 1933 world's fair.

Court Room Is Bridal Chamber

HILLSBORO, N. M.—A court room off of the county jail was the strange bridal chamber of "Blondy" and his wife.

"Blondy" is J. A. Christian, 29, his bride was the former Helen Bennett, 21. After Christian was acquitted of liquor conspiracy charges in the cases brought against a number of Hot Springs, N. M., citizens, he was sentenced to a term in jail on a bootlegging charge.

But the sentence did not discourage Miss Bennett. They were married Feb. 21 in the county jail by Peace Justice Roy Connor, who gave the newlyweds an exclusive key to the courtroom as a wedding present.

Sheriff Pete W. Kinney then ordered a bed and other furniture moved into the room and the couple set up housekeeping.

Christian was made a trustee, and his bride became the chief cook at the jail. "Blondy" forgot bootlegging in his enjoyment of his bride's biscuits. His bride also cooked the meals for her "family," consisting of three other prisoners.

Every evening, when "Blondy" had carefully locked the other three up for the night, and Helen had scaped and polished the last dish, the honeymooners walked up the steps to their courtroom bed chamber.

Ship From Which 497 Were Rescued

This abandoned ship, the S. S. Harvard, might have been the watery tomb of 497 Memorial Day excursionists if it had not been for a prompt rescue effected in a foggy sea near Santa Barbara, Calif., by crews of government mine sweepers. Note the rope ladders by which the passengers descended when the ship went on the rocks. It was near this point that seven navy destroyers piled up on the rocks in 1923 with a loss of 22 lives.

ABOUT THIS AND THAT.....

This story is a year old but it is just as good today as it was last year.

Last year a man in a neighboring town saw a straw hat in a window that he wanted. He went in and priced it and the price was in line with what he had expected to pay. He asked for his size but the clerk couldn't find one to fit him.

"Couldn't you order me one?" the customer asked.

"Well, yes, I guess I could," the clerk answered "but then it would take several days to get it here."

"I don't mind waiting," the customer told him, "I want a hat like that if you can get one to fit me."

"Well, I guess I could if—"

The customer left the store, came to Ranger and found the same kind of hat. He went in and asked the price and it was the same as in the other store. But the clerk didn't have his size, either.

"If you don't mind waiting a couple of days I can have one ordered," the clerk told him.

Two days later the man was back and bought the hat. When he told us the story he said that he didn't intend trading with his local store any more than he could help because they didn't seem to want the business.

And Ranger gained another customer.

May Open Atlantic Flying Season

These two aviators hope to win the race to open the 1931 season of trans-Atlantic flight. They are Harold Gatty, left, and Wiley Post, who are ready with their Wasp-powered Lockheed monoplane to dash to Harbor Grace, N. F., there to refuel for the hop to Paris. Gatty, an Australian, is navigator for the team, while Post, cross-country racing pilot from Oklahoma, handles the controls.

YOUNG BOYS CONFESS SERIES OF ROBBERIES

Two boys about 12 years old, who were placed under arrest by members of the Ranger police department, have confessed to a series of robberies, burglaries and forgeries in the past few weeks. The confession implicate four other youths of about their ages.

Two of the boys, one of whom was being held in the city jail and the other under bond, were taken to Eastland this morning by a member of the police department for questioning by County Attorney Joe H. Jones. It was not known what disposition the county attorney would make of these cases and it was not known whether charges would be filed against them in Eastland.

The two boys confessed that they, with another boy, had stolen three horses from B. C. Whiting. At another time one of the boys with another companion took two watches from the Montgomery Ward store, according to the confessions.

One of the members of the young sextet recently took a watch belonging to Mrs. Morgan, the statement said. The watch was recovered within 30 minutes of the alleged robbery by Chief of Police Jim Ingram, who was notified that the watch was missing.

One boy is said to have forged eight checks, six on his mother and two on another woman. The amounts of the checks and the places where they were cashed is listed as follows: Citizens State Bank, $4.00; A. & P. Grocery, $4.00; Piggy-Wiggy, $5.00; T. & P. Service Station, $5.00; Post Office Grocery, $4.00; Texaco Service Station, $4.00; Mills Grocery, $5.00 and M System Grocery, $5.00. One of the checks that was alleged to have been forged was received by the Times from a grocery where it had been cashed and when presented at the bank for deposit it was returned.

Among the other robberies that were said to have been staged by the boys was at the old Liberty theatre. The boys said that two other boys broke into the theatre and took a quantity of rope and other equipment from the stage. Later they returned with a third boy and broke into the theatre again, the statement by the boys says.

The police department believes that a number of petty robberies that have taken place in Ranger in the past few weeks have been solved by the arrest of two of the members of the young gang, the statement said. The names of the alleged robbers by Chief of Police Jim Ingram, who was notified that the watch was missing.

To Be Deported After 50 Years

SEATTLE.—Fifty years or more of residence in the United States doesn't make one a citizen, and Chan Yee, elderly Chinese cook, must be deported to China. He failed to register, but his status was not discovered until recently, when his case was reviewed by a federal judge, and he was ordered deported.

PRORATION IS URGED BY TWO BUSINESS MEN

LUFKIN, Texas, June 6.—A belief that East Texas will not receive any lasting benefit from the discovery of oil unless production is controlled was expressed in a statement issued today by W. C. Trout, president of the Lufkin Foundry & Machine company, one of East Texas' largest manufacturing establishments, makers of a widely used line oil well equipment. Mr. Trout said that the discovery of the East Texas field had proven to be a disaster to the oil industry as a whole unless quickly curbed. The statement follows:

Undoubtedly the discovery of oil in East Texas at this time has proved to be an economic disaster to the industry and unless production is controlled in an orderly way this great natural resource worth untold millions to the entire state will be wasted and the industry itself may be destroyed for years to come. Only by thorough cooperation and rateable taking of oil will we in East Texas ever realize anything from this discovery. The state should enact oil and gas laws that will stabilize the industry preventing waste of our greatest natural resource which is now threatened with destruction simply to satisfy a few get-rich-quick individuals that have no regard for the rights of the people or state. Orderly production is our only salvation.

TEAGUE GOES BACK TO HIS ORANGE GROVES.

Charles C. Teague has resigned as president of the federal farm board. He will return to California to engage again in the citrus fruit business. In his letter of resignation he declared that "during the last two years more progress has been made in cooperative marketing than has been made in any previous ten years." Speaking of the cotton and wheat price stabilization endeavors of the board the Californian said, "It has, of course, been impossible to be helpful under these most difficult and trying conditions without at times taking some chances of loss to the revolving fund."

Now, critics of the board and its policies say that government losses have been $90,000,000 and the board has 180,000,000 bushels of wheat on hand as a result of its stabilization efforts. As for the retiring member of the board he termed price stabilization efforts entirely justified and predicted benefits to agriculture and business "far outweighing any cost to the treasury." Now, the board is out of the grain business. Its policy was given the acid test and the opponents of the new system, known as the co-operative marketing act, are organizing forces for a tremendous battle, congressionally speaking, the coming winter.

A PROUD SIRE AND PROUD SON.

An honorary degree of LL.D. was conferred at Berea college by a college president father upon his son, a college president. Dr. W. J. Hutchins is president of Old Berea. Dr. Robert M. Hutchins is president of the University of Chicago. Commencement exercises marked the close of the celebration of the 75th anniversary of Berea college and was attended by the governor and all state officials, senators and members of congress and distinguished personages from other states. It is said the president of Berea is the first college president ever to confer an honorary degree upon his own son. It was a notable event, at least, and deserves more than passing notice in the press of the land. As for the son, he is one of the youngest and most popular college presidents of the United States and has been a fast traveler for a young man.

TEXAS GUINAM BARRED BY TWO NATIONS.

Texas Guinam has been barred by the British and French governments. Her white horse, her show girls and her queer lingo have been compelled to return to American shores. Publicity is the life of trade and "Tex" is a past grand mistress of the art of knowing how to break into print. New York practically banished her. She is old enough to efface herself. Clara Bow is another who has reached the end of her rope. A moving picture magnate lets it be known that Clara will never make another picture. It is thumbs down for her in the moving picture world.

A moth dies.

A COLLEGE COURSE FOR PENAL WORKERS.

A training for professional administrators of penal and correctional institutions and similar agencies has been announced by Harvard university. It is said the projected curriculum covers two years of theoretical and practical work and is to consist of pertinent courses at the law school and in other departments of the university. Col. Alphonse Capone and his great army of law violators are given warning that thoroughly trained experts are to handle them in future—that is if the colonel and his compatriots break into the jails or into the prisons of America.

COST OF LEGISLATION IN TEXAS.

A press correspondent with a nose for news and the pencil of a lightning calculator furnished an item that "if the average law enacted by the 42nd legislature is not worth $1800 the people of Texas are losing money." This is the way he figured it out: The cost of 131 days session was $650,000. About 500 bills (mostly of local nature) were passed, including those still on the governor's desk. That figures $1300 each.

Democratic government comes high. Civilization comes high. Isn't it worth the price? If it is not why not give the country back to the Indians?

LABOR LEADER RETURNS HIS VERDICT.

Mathew Woll is the first vice president of the American Federation of Labor and one of the ablest American labor leaders. Speaking of the recent International Chamber of Commerce convention held in the city of New York, Woll said that it "had faded into the dimness of history without a real idea having emerged from its sessions." As for the debt cancellation proposals advanced by European delegates the labor leader declared, "American opinion, in so far as it has been formed or expressed, is against cancellation, in part or in whole, of the war debt." His own viewpoint is that the European delegates to the International Chamber of Commerce convention came to "pull America down to the European level of living."

William Jennings Bryan, before his departure for the other shore, advised his fellow Americans to cancel all war debts. His appeal fell flat under American skies but it won tremendous approval in foreign lands. Bryan is very dead and there is not much life left in his very queer plan for the disposition of the money of his fellow Americans. Cancellation of all war debts would have meant that American taxpayers would continue to carry the load held high above them in the dark days of the World War.

Constrictor Rides North In Bananas

PHILADELPHIA.—A young emperor boa constrictor is making his home in the Philadelphia zoo after a journey from the jungles of tropical Brazil in a bunch of bananas. The snake caused a near panic when Philip Braverman, who operates a fruit store, unwrapped the cover from a bunch of bananas he had purchased from Brazil. The snake dropped to the floor and police were summoned who captured it and turned it over to C. Emerson Brown, director of the zoo. Brown said that it was a rare specimen and that he had never heard of a boa constrictor making the trip from Brazil in a bunch of bananas.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE
 Shawnee, Okla.

Gault MacGowan, managing editor of the Trinidad Guardian, (British West Indies), says: "Did you ever stop to think what Pharaoh would have charged to let you carve your name on one of his pyramids? Could you have got a square foot of space for the price of a dinner? You could not."

"The pyramids were there for a purpose—some say calendars for history—others just a personal advertisement—others a death notice. Whatever it was, none of the Pharaohs ever sold any space on their pyramids at bargain rates. When they told the world, they did not believe in telling them for nothing. If they could have put up a pyramid for a song, they wouldn't have done it. They valued those pyramids highly. They hadn't any newspapers."

"Newspapers are the modern pyramids, monuments many of them to the wealth of the community. Two cheap advertising means that the editorials are cheap—an empty pyramid bedecked with handbills. The community is deprived of a progressively improving news service. It cannot have the pictures of local events to which it is entitled, and the newspaper cannot afford to pay its editor well enough to travel far afield on his annual vacation. And if the editor cannot take a regular vacation far afield, the community is deprived of an incentive to progress."

"The greatest stimulus to enterprise is the knowledge that the other fellow who started level in the race of life is forging ahead of you. And the only man who finds out what the other fellow is doing, and doesn't keep it a secret, is your local editor."

"Business firms who cry-down advertising rates are crying down the progress of their city. Some of the big stores are often the worst offenders in pressing for too-cheap advertising. Department heads who are getting to the top search the newspaper columns every day for new ideas on how to sell. But when it comes to buying space, some of them forget the service they expect to have thrown in with it. Newspaper space is a quality product. Every inch that is sold represents the granite generations of men in shirt sleeves have carved out of nothing. And if you hadn't got a newspaper you'd have to take a walk out to your local pyramids every time you wanted an index finger on the way to the stars."

DAILY WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—Before the Pope spoke, the question of distribution of wealth in this country was shaping up as an issue to which more and more were sure to be heard.

No one can measure the probable effect of a papal message addressed to the entire world, advising that it is "absolutely necessary to reconstruct the whole economic system" and "insure a more equitable distribution of capital and labor." But it obviously will stimulate interest in the United States, where the Progressives—notably Senator Borah of Idaho and Governor of Michigan in recent months—have often shouted against the markedly unequal distribution of wealth and income.

Plenty probably will be heard about it in the next presidential campaign and much, certainly, in the next session of Congress as a strong attempt is made to plaster tax increases on millionaires to help meet the treasury's billion dollar deficit.

Maybe you'd like to know the facts about the distribution of wealth in America. Well, so would a lot of other people. As with most other facts, you can do various tricks with those statistics of income published by the treasury every year.

Everyone knows, as the Pope says, that the rich have been piling up immense fortunes and that the poor are very little better off than they used to be. The year 1920 was a banner year for corporation dividends—the big profits of 1929 being distributed—but 6,000,000 persons were unemployed and perhaps 20,000,000 affected by their loss of jobs, other millions worked part time, and many others had their wages cut.

Such facts are incontestable, but then you get to such statements as Borah's that "three per cent of the people own 75 per cent of the wealth." Or, to be more liberal, he said that four per cent owned 80 per cent. Such a state of affairs

May Enshrine Famed Theatre

By United Press.
 CENTRAL CITY, Colo.—Famous actors again may bow into the wings of the Central City Opera house just as they did in the turbulent gold rush days when the playhouse was a center of entertainment for this section of the West.

Heirs of the original builder, Peter MacFarlane, have expressed a desire to make a shrine for drama of the granite theatre which was erected in 1878 when Denver was but little more than a village on the banks of Cherry creek and offered nothing in the way of entertainment except cheap dance halls and saloons. MacFarlane's heirs have offered the theater to the University of Denver. If the university accepts, a revival is planned. Central City is but 40 miles from Denver and may be reached in an hour or so by automobile.

Would Attract Tourists
 Bakers of the move believe that tourists from all parts of the world would visit the playhouse, once the Mecca for the stout-hearted men and women of an adventurous age.

The opera house has been dark for many years now. Rats scurry across the stage from which such stars as Edwin Booth, Joe Anderson, Emma Abbott, Christine Nielsen and Madame Janushek received the plaudits of hundreds of heavy booted miners.

The great John L. Sullivan once boxed an exhibition before its footlights as did James J. Corbett who dethroned the Boston Strong Boy.

When the opera house was built, Central City was booming. Thousands of men were attempting to wrest a fortune from the hills of granite. And at night when the sun dropped behind the peaks, the miners came in from the diggings to a hundred saloons and dancing halls.

Peter MacFarlane and a group of associates whose names are now a part of the legend of the old West, decided that this sort of entertainment was not sufficient and raised $50,000 for the purpose of building an opera house.

Claims He Was Custer's Scout

By United Press.

OKMULGEE, Ok.—Historians have recorded that not a white man escaped alive from Custer's massacre, but "Billy the Kid" contends there was at least one—himself. As he celebrated his 95th birthday here recently the veteran scout and pioneer, known in everyday life as J. B. Guntor, related how the color of his hair saved his scalp when the warring Sioux, led by Chief Sitting Bull, slew 300 United States cavalrymen on the Little Big Horn river in the Dakotas in 1876.

"I was wounded 14 times in that affair," he said, "and the Sioux threw me back into the maze of dead soldiers' bodies because they were scalping only black-haired men. I had dyed my hair with blood to make it red."

Custer's Fate Doubtful
 Guntor, or Billy the Kid as he said he was known to General Custer, Buffalo Bill, Kit Carson, and other famous scouts and leaders, was born in Arkansas in 1836. He left that state in early manhood to become a "part of the west." Later he joined Custer's ill-fated band as a scout, he said.

As to Custer's fate he did not know. Older historians recorded that Custer died at the hands of the Sioux. Recent recorders say Custer died by his own hands rather than by being captured by the Sioux.

Sitting Bull, so the recent accounts maintain, ordered his braves to capture Custer alive, and when the braves closed in on Custer he took his own life.

Billy the Kid claims he escaped the Sioux despite the fact the United States government will not recognize his application for a pension as a scout to Custer because he has no proof other than his own word.

"Federal officers told me that history said every white man died that day, and, that since I have no discharge from General Custer they cannot recognize me as a member of the troop," Guntor said.

Cornstalk Gas To Light Farms

By United Press.

TOPEKA, Kan.—Gas from cornstalks and sewage to light farms and cities and turn the wheels of commerce "sounds like a wild dream, but perhaps after all it will really work," the June issue of Capper's Farmer says.

Details are set forth in an article by Lionel K. Arnold of Iowa State college outlining experimentation of Dr. A. M. Buswell, University of Illinois scientist.

The article says Dr. Buswell has proved conclusively that gas can be generated in sizeable proportions from these substances. Dying of billions of bacteria is the basis for the operation.

Makes Marsh Gas.
 "He (Dr. Buswell) took some shredded cornstalks in the laboratory," Arnold relates, "flavored them with sewage and fed them to bacteria that had established a reputation for making methane, or marsh gas. He was not disappointed for they made great quantities of the gas."

"Sometimes these things that work so well in the laboratory fail miserably when tried on a large scale. So Dr. Buswell tried out the bacteria feeding program on a larger scale in a wooden tank in his laboratory. He had billions upon billions of bacteria eating up cornstalks and sewage and sending up gas which he burned in his laboratory burners."

Fried Eggs.
 "To show that it would really heat when burned, he fried eggs and boiled water over the flame." The writer presented the rhetorical question if enough gas could be produced to supply cities. The following computations were given as an answer:

From the results in the laboratory a ton of cornstalks will produce from 10,000 to 20,000 cubic feet of gas equal to natural gas for cooking. The average amount of gas used for cooking purposes is about 25 cubic feet a day. With an average yield of 1.5 tons per acre, enough cornstalks would be produced within an eight-mile radius to supply a city of 80,000 with gas.

Jesus Crucified

Text: Luke 23:33-46.

And when they were come to the place, which is called Calvary, there they crucified him, and the malefactors, one on the right hand, and the other on the left.

Then said Jesus, Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do. And they parted his raiment, and cast lots.

And the people stood beholding, and the rulers also with them derided him, saying, He saved others; let him save himself, if he be Christ, the chosen of God.

And the soldiers also mocked him, coming to him, and offering him vinegar.

And saying, If thou be the king of the Jews, save thyself.

And a superscription also was written over him in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew. This is The King of the Jews.

And one of the malefactors which were hanged railed on him, saying, If thou be Christ, save thyself and us.

But the other answering rebuked him, saying, Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation?

And we indeed justly; for we receive the due reward of our deeds; but this man hath done nothing amiss.

And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom.

And Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, Today shalt thou be with me in paradise.

And it was about the sixth hour, and there was darkness over all the earth until the ninth hour.

And the sun was darkened, and the veil of the temple was rent in the midst.

And when Jesus had cried with a loud voice, he said, Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit; and having said thus, he gave up the ghost.

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for June 7, Jesus Crucified. Luke 23:33-46.

By W. E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of The Congregationalist.

What happened on Calvary was the climax of the agony and the prayer in Gethsemane. But the steps leading to Calvary go back even far beyond the experience in the garden.

An earthly shadow fell upon the Babe of Bethlehem almost as he lay in the manger. There were evil men like Herod who feared the coming into the world of any one whose power and influence might affect their schemes of ambition and power.

There are babes that seem destined in the province of God to experience of trial and suffering through which they may serve their fellow men. In fact, it is a mistake to think even of the earthly life of Jesus from Bethlehem to Calvary as comprising the whole drama of the divine man in human life.

We cannot adequately appreciate the meaning either of the life or death of Jesus of Nazareth without giving to that life and death the eternal setting in which it is placed in the New Testament records.

In these records Jesus is "the lamb slain from the foundation of the world." He is the savior of mankind, fulfilling God's eternal purpose of redemption—a purpose that had already been partially expressed and of which the climax had been foreshadowed in the sacrifices of the saints and prophets of the Jewish race and the interpretation of their services and sufferings in many passages of Scripture, notably in such chapters as the 53rd of Isaiah, from which our golden text is taken.

It is impossible adequately to contemplate Calvary except in this setting of time and eternity. Even were we to think of that event in a somewhat narrow and earthly way there was more significance to it than to the cruel death of an individual man.

The world itself is witness to the fact that though men die their influences go on, and that frequently the causes for which men have died that seemed doomed and defeated in the very destruction of those who have died for them rise gloriously to life and triumph after their death. It has become a truism of Christian history that the blood of martyrs is the seed of the Church; but it is a truism also of the larger world of all life, Christian and non-Christian, that truth crushed to earth shall rise again.

The significance of Jesus, and of the cross upon which he died, is that all this mystic truth concerning life comes to its highest expression and fulfillment in him. The mystery is not explained; in fact, we are as far as ever from penetrating into the reasons for death and suffering, especially the death and sufferings of the noblest of men and women; but we come face to face with a supreme fact—the fact that the sufferings and sacrifices of the good do have some inevitable relationship to the salvation of the erring and to the progress of the world.

We do not know why it is that "without the shedding of blood there is no remission of sins," but that verdict is something more than a personal expression of opinion; it is a deep and acute observation of a prophetic writer concerning the facts of life.

To live in the light of the cross, to feel its reality, to share it in fellowship with Christ, means to awaken in our lives the power of the resurrection life. Paul very clearly and definitely associated the two experiences together. Perhaps our most dangerous tendency is to glory in the cross of Christ as something apart from ourselves, to glory in it with that somewhat selfish satisfaction in which a man who will not dare and risk anything himself accepts what it has

Use of Canned Foods Increases As New Standards Are Enforced

Public Said to Be Responding to More Rigid Restrictions by Increasing Its Purchases

By DR. P. B. DUNBAR
Assistant Chief, Food, Drug and Insecticide Administration,
Department of Agriculture

THREE decades ago—before the passage of the Federal Food and Drug Act—when the housewife donned her poke bonnet and went to the store for, let us say, a can of tomatoes, she was entering into a deal that had some of the marks of the long chance. She asked for what she wanted and she put her money down in good faith. Maybe she got what she wanted—that is the lid not.

I am afraid that I cannot say the whole canning trade in those days was notable for the quality of the foods it was putting out. And this sad state of affairs was not limited to tomatoes. The same general principle naturally applies to other canned foods: Corn, cherries, peas, pears, peaches, sauerkraut, shrimp.

Everybody knows that there are different qualities of canned foods, just as there are different qualities of fruits and vegetables and of the other food things that go into cans. There are also superior and inferior methods of doing the canning. This amendment, then, authorizes legal quality standards for all canned foods that are enclosed in hermetically sealed containers and marketed by heat—with two exceptions. The exceptions are canned milk and canned meat and meat products—not fish and poultry.

The amendment gives the Secretary of Agriculture authority to set standards of quality, condition, and fill of container of all canned food, with the two exceptions I mentioned. If a product falls below the standard of quality, condition, or fill established, it must bear a plain and conspicuous statement of such a nature as to advise the buyer that that food is below standard. The designation has been set. It is Below United States Standard—Low Quality. But Not Illegal.

These words will be the buyer's guide after a certain date, a period of at least 90 days after formulation of official standards.

Standards for canned peaches, pears, and apples already have been worked out, announced by the Secretary, and will go into effect May 18. Tentative standards for canned tomatoes, apricots, and cherries have been announced and, following official hearings and consideration by the trade, the consumer, and the Department of Agriculture, will become law. Standards for other canned foods are being worked out and will be officially announced as soon as possible.

Meaning to Buyer
Now, what will the enforcement of the canners' bill mean to the buyer? It will mean—

First, that quality and condition standards for practically all classes of canned foods except meat and meat food products, and canned milk, will be equivalently set by the Secretary of Agriculture.

Second, that a standard fill of containers for such products will be enforced. This standard of fill has been drawn up already, thus guaranteeing the housewife protection against stock-filled cans.

Third, that the buyer of canned foods will not have to worry about slack fills and no standards for these classes are formulated and promulgated about 1931.

(The foregoing is the full text of an address delivered in the National Farm and Home Show over associated stations of the National Broadcasting Company.)

inferior or below-standard product for the price she pays for a standard-quality or superior food. Canned goods falling below the standard will be conspicuously labeled: Below U. S. Standard—Low Quality but Not Illegal. Since the Food and Drug Act prohibits the sale in interstate commerce of adulterated, misbranded, or injurious foods, the housewife who desires a cheaper product for some particular reason will be perfectly safe in buying canned foods that bear this low standard label.

Quality Requirement Explained
The value of the canners' bill to the housewife, to the consumer, will be the assurance that the canned foods she purchases meet a definite, minimum quality requirement established by a Government agency. The amendment will not constitute a bar to the manufacture and sale of wholesome canned food of a quality lower than the standard, but such products will have to be labeled so that if the buyer wishes a less expensive canned food, she will be able to buy it with full knowledge of its character and, it is presumed, at a lower price. We in the Food and Drug Administration feel that a housewife with a limited budget should be enabled, under the terms of the canners' bill, to buy a substantial product within the reach of her pocket-book which will carry the nutritive if not the aesthetic value of standard canned food. Provided she reads intelligently the labeling required by the amendment to appear on the can.

Substandard Product Wholesome
It is not the Food and Drug Administration's conception of the purpose of Congress, in enacting this bill, that the labeling for substandard foods was intended to stigmatize unduly the article to which it is applied. The amendment makes it very clear that its purpose is to let the consumer know what goods are below the standard, but the substandard product will be wholesome and edible, even if not so palatable or so attractive as the standard product. If the food were unwholesome or inedible, its distribution would be illegal under the terms of the national pure food laws.

I might say, in conclusion, that if any of you want a copy of the canners' bill, together with standards formulated for canned peaches, pears, and apples, as well as of the legal label designation for substandard goods and the fill-of-container specifications required by the bill, you can get all this in a circular called "Service and Regulatory Announcements," F. D. No. 4. Write the Federal Food and Drug Administration, Washington, D. C.

Washington a Model Farmer

WASHINGTON.—Ample evidence that George Washington, through all his troubles as commander-in-chief of the Continental Army in the Revolution and his administrative duties afterwards with the new-born republic, remained at heart a farmer is existing throughout the numerous dairies which the first President filled from early youth to his final days.

The dairies indicate that Washington not only was a large land-owning farmer in his native Virginia, but was one of the most progressive agriculturists in the country at that time.

Advocated Crop Changes
An advocate of crop rotation, Washington imported new fruit trees and vines and even rare progressive agriculturists in the country at that time.

He tried alfalfa, then known as Lucerne; he also tried Siberian and South African wheat in order to find if the ground of Virginia would accommodate them and found that the grain imported for him from the region around

Cape of Good Hope, was very successful. Washington even carried his farming into the invention of a "barrel plow," combined plow, drill and harrow.

His agricultural work often interrupted by his duties in country, but he always returned to his farm lands.

cost some other man everything to procure. It should be remembered that the cross of Christ for Paul was not merely the cross on which Jesus had been crucified, but the cross upon which Paul himself was crucified in the world. "And I," he says, "that I should glory save in the cross of our Lord Jesus Christ by whom the world is crucified unto me and I unto the world."

If we shrink from the cross, if we feel that we can share the beauty of Christ's teachings but that we cannot share the fellowship in his sufferings, it is worth while to remember that Jesus himself shrank from the cross. He prayed earnestly that the cup might pass, and in the actual experience his agony was such that he felt that he had been forsaken by his Father. That his experience is inevitable for us, but in fellowship with Christ, in the fellowship that seeks to go with him to Gethsemane and Calvary, as well as to the quiet retreat for prayer on the mountain, and the pleasant sojourning through the fields and beside the lake, we find the power that upheld the Master himself and that enabled him to do the Father's will. It is still true, as Paul said, that we can do all things through Christ who strengthened us.

Stowaway Hid 9 Days Without Food and Drink

By United Press.
SAN FRANCISCO.—For nine days and nights a 16-year-old South Sea Island native boy lay without food and water in a canvas covered life-boat, a stowaway aboard the liner "Makura," bound from Papeete to San Francisco. The boat docked. Deckhands began inspection of the lifeboats. When they lifted the cover which concealed him, the stowaway was too weak to escape, too exhausted even to give his name. Much of the time Papeete had been in the boat a blistering tropic sun had beat down on his canvas-sealed, cramped quarters. He was removed from the ship on a stretcher, and taken to Angel Island, immigration depot. He was sent back to Papeete when the "Makura" made its return trip. When a gangster staggers a victim with a bullet, that is also red and reel sport.

SPEAKING of SPORTS

All a Mistake: Arlett No Rookie.

Buzz Arlett, elephantine slugger of the Philadelphia Nationals, must get a great kick when he picks up the newspaper and sees himself referred to as a "sensational rookie." If Arlett is a rookie then Jimmy Walker is a newcomer to politics and Bill Tilden is a novice at tennis.

Arlett is 32 years of age and has been in baseball for a long, long time. For thirteen years he slaved with the Oakland club of the Pacific league before getting a crack at the majors. He was a star all the time he was with Oakland but the big league scouts, for some reason or another, failed to give him a nod, until this season when the Phillies, seeking a man to replace Lefty O'Doul, bought the big boy in from the minors.

Arlett's shoes were not an easy assignment but Buzz tackled it with all the strength in his massive frame. During spring training he was anything but a star, and for a while it looked as if he was headed back for his beloved Oakland. But once the season was under way Buzz hit his stride. He cracked home runs with amazing regularity to take the intra-league lead in that specialty, and fielded remarkably well for a man of his size. He seems able to hit any and all sorts of pitching, high ones, low ones, fast ones, slow ones and curved balls. He is one of the few successful switch hitters in the majors. That is, he bats right-handed against southpaws and left-handed against right-handers.

Was Once Pitcher

Arlett spent his first five years with Oakland as a pitcher and by his own admission was quite a flinger. He won 100 games during his pitching days, turning in 29 victories during his best season. His lowest number of wins for a year was nineteen and he explains this "lapse" by the fact that he got off to a bad start that year, losing his first eleven starts.

"I wouldn't go back to pitching," he says, "even if my arm regained its strength and cunning. I like this business of playing every day too well."

The big slugger regrets that he did not reach the majors before the "rabbit" ball passed into the discard. He believes he might have set some sort of a home run record had he been up when the ball jumped over the fence on the slightest provocation, or with no provocation at all.

EAGLE PASS—200 carloads material will arrive here soon over Southern Pacific railroad for use by P. & L. Co. in building $1,000,000 hydro-electric plant, nine miles north of city.

Cessna Aircraft, and the Swallow Company, were reported concentrating on low-priced ships. The most general expression of those connected with these companies was that they saw little hope for any considerable increase in demand within the next few months.

In Kansas City little building is done, although the American Eagle Aircraft company is expected to begin operations here soon. Other companies reported themselves doing most of their business in small planes, and added that they believed a return to normal times in other industries would bring a great increase in business for manufacturers of aircraft.

Ships Favored

Kan. K. K. Shaull, of the Traveler's committee of Curtis-Wright, told Press that most of the new being done was in planes, priced from $1,000 to $10,000. There is little larger ships, he said, Wichita plants, including

Seeks to Collect Estate of Former Al Capone Aid

By United Press.

WARSAW.—Poland may be a long way from Chicago, but Al Capone's connections, or rather former connections, have reached here.

One Jean Zuta, of Lida, appeared at the United States Consulate not long ago and asked for a visa. He wanted to go to Chicago to collect an estate of $3,000,000 which his brother, Joseph, had left, he said.

After making inquiries, the consulate learned that a Joseph Zuta had been murdered on the streets of Chicago last year. He was reported to have once been one of Capone's right hand men.

The consulate declined to grant Jean his visa, stating that he could collect the inheritance through Polish officials.

Students Joist in Armor for Fair Ladies Favor

CHESTER, Pa.—Armor-clad knights from the Pennsylvania Military college will tilt with lance and shield for the favor of the fair ladies of the Mary Lyon school during the annual commencement week.

The Mary Lyon girls, garbed in the romantic costumes of the days of King Arthur and his knights, will cheer the tourney. The winner of the joust will have his "fair lady" crowned queen by Major General William G. Price Jr., commander of the 28th division, Pennsylvania national guard.

WALKING IS POSTMAN'S HOBBY

PHOENIX, Ariz.—A survey of hobbies of Phoenix men disclosed that C. W. Ritter, 61, a mail carrier, enjoys nothing better than a good walk in the evening after he has walked all day delivering mail. "I've walked a distance equal to five trips around the world in the last 38 years," Ritter said.

OLEAN, N. Y.—The "Rainy Day Railroad" has been bought by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad for $50,000.

The "Rainy Day Railroad" operates on the Kusahequa line only on rainy days. It runs through thickly-wooded land, and fear that dangerous fires might be started, resulted in a law prohibiting operation of the railroad except on rainy days.

Canal to Connect Texas-Louisiana

NEW ORLEANS.—Following a 20-year fight by leaders of the intracoastal canal in Louisiana to clear the route in Louisiana to the Texas line, right-of-way has been granted by the government through Terrebonne parish. Only a few short strips in Jefferson parish, right outside New Orleans, now remain to obstruct clearance of the entire route.

When Hoover Called for Revival of Spirit of '76

"The peculiar significance of Valley Forge in our American annals should strike us all with especial force in this particular moment of our national life. The American people are going through another Valley Forge at this time..." Thus spoke President Herbert Hoover during his Memorial Day address at Valley Forge, Pa., and here you see the Chief Executive as he spoke earnestly to some 20,000 persons assembled at the historic site where General George Washington and his ragged Continental troops triumphed over hardships during the darkest hour of the War of Independence. Radio microphones also carried his voice to every part of the country as Mr. Hoover called on the nation to be steadfast in the adversity of the current depression. "We are still fighting this war of independence," he said. "You each have your special causes of anxiety. So, too, have I."

Cactus Bootleg Industry Grows

PHOENIX, Ariz.—A new bootlegging industry is thriving in Arizona as a result of a state law prohibiting the removal of natural growing demand for the desert type garden, composed of flowering cactus plants.

Many of the numerous cacti species may be purchased at any floral shop, prices ranging from 25 cents for a small prickly pear to several dollars for larger types. The explanation usually given by a florist is that the plants come from private lands where cactus is the major industry. A survey by the Arizona Industrial Commission, however, shows that there is no law against sale or possession.

The sum involved in the sale of cacti is estimated from $100,000 per year to nearly a million. This range indicates that one guess is as good as another. Many Arizonians make a living dealing in bootlegged plant life.

NOTED AIR EXPERTS IN ARMY CORPS

WASHINGTON.—Under the impetus of the five-year expansion plan adopted by Congress in 1926, the army air corps has been steadily strengthened, in the view of war department aviation experts. While holding still more planes and officers are necessary for a well-rounded military air defense, the corps, in summarizing its achievements of the last few years, pointed to what it considers rapid progress both in technical equipment and skill of pilots.

Under the five-year plan, adopted in 1926 but not put into effect until 1927, the air corps was to have 1,800 "servicable" planes, 1,650 regular officers, 550 reserve officers on duty each year and 15,000 enlisted men in 1932. The material program has gone forward according to schedule, construction of which was delayed until 1933 because of an anticipated treasury deficit at the time the 1932 budget was drawn up.

Lacks Sufficient Planes
According to the present schedule of increases, the air corps will have 15,000 enlisted men in 1932, but is likely to be short 200 officers, because Congress has not provided for them. Also, the air corps has lacked sufficient planes to keep 550 reserve officers on duty constantly, officials said.

Air corps officers take particular pride in the technical advances made in fighting ships during the last two years. In 1929, they point out, pursuit planes had a high speed of 165 miles per hour; now it is 192. Ability to climb, one of the prime requisites of a combat plane, has also been increased. New pursuit ships can go up to 30,000 feet, compared with 21,000 two years ago.

Simultaneously, armament has been made more deadly. In 1929, pursuit planes carried two 30-caliber machine guns capable of firing 2,500 yards. Now a 50-caliber gun has replaced the smaller kind, bringing greater destructiveness. A 50-caliber bullet is no larger than one finger; yet it strikes with a force of five tons.

Bombs Also Improved
Bombs, too, have been improved. A new super-sensitive fuse has been designed, capable of exploding on contact with surfaces as light as an airplane wing. Modern pursuit pilots, instead of coming within close range of a bomber formation and exposing themselves to machine-gun fire, can bombard bombers from a safe altitude, officers point out.

Bombing planes now carry six men, speed 150 miles per hour and carry 4,500 pounds of bombs. More, they carry a veritable arsenal to fight off enemy attacks—four machine guns, advantageously mounted to fire at nearly any angle.

Better Pursuit Ships
Meanwhile, experimenters in the field and laboratory workers are striving to make war in the air even more deadly. They are concentrating their energies particularly on attack planes. Before the end of 1931, air corps experts expect to see attack planes of increased speed and terrific power of destruction. It is estimated one squadron equipped with the new ships, will be able to fire 68,400 rounds of ammunition per minute and drop two and one-half tons of bombs.

Also, before the end of the year, the air corps expects to perfect a new two-seater pursuit plane so arranged that a gunner sits with his back to the pilot and controls a machine-gun that protects the plane from rear attacks. Such a defense is now impossible.

Perfect Airships
Progress is expected, too, in observation planes. Officers expect to see adoption of a long-distance reconnaissance plane equipped with two 600-horsepower engines and with a retractable landing gear, giving increased speed.

Changes in the air corps' organization are planned. The war department is working out a system under which there will be a bombardment wing on both coasts, an attack wing in the Central South, a general headquarters unit in Michigan, and two observation groups, one of the east coast and one in Texas.

Free Wheeling!

Walter Hofer isn't driving an auto just now, but he's brushing up on the free wheeling idea in an attempt to beat the record set by Jerry a tall, that was ridden from Brownsville, Tex., to New York in eight months. Hofer hopes to push his sister, Margaret, 18, in this wheelbarrow over the same distance in seven months. Before leaving Brownsville, he waggled a sign that he could do it.

THE MELODY GIRL
 BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES
 BEGIN HERE TODAY

Beryl Borden, secretly in love with Tommy Wilson, knows that she would never be happy with her half-sister, Irene Everett, and tries to prevent their marriage.

Irene is jealous when she fails and Beryl secures a radio contract. Beryl's voice wins her new friends but she cannot forget her hopeless love though she goes to parties with young Prentiss Gaylord. Irene learns Prentiss is rich and tries to win him from Beryl. He is susceptible, takes her driving and to dinner.

Tommy's aunt dies and he loses both money and job through her husband. Tommy tells Irene his bad luck and she breaks the engagement. When Prentiss asks her to marry him she accepts. In despair Tommy drinks heavily and Beryl finds him. She tries to cheer him up and tells Irene that she must either go back to Tommy or confess to Prentiss how heartless-ly she has acted. Irene promises but plans to outwit Beryl. After receiving a telegram from Prentiss asking her to marry him that day she slips away and meets him. They are married and Irene telepho-nes home to tell the news. The parents are elated over the wealthy son-in-law. Beryl knows that Irene has evaded the truth.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXIII

The morning following Irene's wedding day was beautiful. It was one of those crystalline mornings when earth and sky seem to call to all living creatures to be joyous.

The house was strangely quiet when Beryl opened her eyes after a night of fitful sleep. She glanced at her watch. Her mother would be about the house soon. She thought uncomfortably of the day that was ahead of her, dreading conversation with the family. Yet if she said nothing she would be thought sulen.

Beryl arose and picked up a hand mirror. What it told her stirred her sense of humor until a faintly mocking light showed in her eyes.

There was her excuse. With a throat like that silence would be forgiven. She would not need to discuss Irene's marriage when she did not know what she thought about it. Beryl possessed that rare faculty of being able to laugh at herself.

She knew it was best for Tommy not to marry Irene, and yet she couldn't help feeling bitter toward her sister. She knew that in any conversation concerning Irene she would rail against her while at the same time she must admit Irene couldn't have done a kinder thing for Tommy Wilson than to become Mrs. Prentiss Gaylord.

Beryl turned to the window. What a day! She supposed the bridal couple would drive to Oakdale in the black and chromium roadster.

What a morning to start on a honeymoon journey! It wouldn't be necessary to travel in a black and chromium roadster. A slim boy beside her... the words "man and wife" still ringing in your ears... a boy with the brown of woods in his eyes and the touch of the sun in his hair... a laugh-ry home after you told me what had happened and found him act- ing natural enough."

"What do you mean, natural enough?"

"Well, he wasn't doing anything—just lying on his bed. You didn't expect he'd be doin' a tap dance, do you?"

Beryl ignored the sarcasm. "Then what happened?" she snapped.

"Then the messenger boy brought the note and I took it up to Tommy."

"Did you stay there while he read it?"

"No, I came down to think about something for supper and while I was doing it Tommy left. He didn't argue about it. He just left."

"Who was the note from?"

"I don't know, but I guess it was from Irene."

"Yes," Beryl agreed, and her voice grew more caustic. "I guess it was. Irene would do a thing like that."

She went home then, and sent for the doctor.

"You might as well have come in to see me," he scolded her. "I saw you driving around in your fresh air bus."

The doctor's tone was good natured, but there was graveness in his eyes. His voice changed as he decided to tell her the truth.

"Seriously, Beryl," he said, "I must warn you that your con- dition is going to put you to bed for a few days at least. And I'm going to call Dr. Auguston from New York. He's a throat special- ist—a good one. I want his opinion."

Beryl looked at him, suddenly really frightened. "Do you think it's anything really serious?" she asked quickly. "Anything... per- manent?"

The doctor hesitated for a mo- ment. Then, "Beryl," he said sud- denly, "you're a sensible girl. That entitles you to hear the truth. I hesitated about alarming you, but I think it best to warn you that you have some of the symptoms of a rare throat malady. Little is known about it. I have never en- countered it in my practice, but I believe Dr. Auguston knows as much about it as any man living."

The shadow in Beryl's eyes deepened. "Is it—dangerous?" she breathed.

The doctor shook his head. "We do not consider it incurable," he said, "but it can give endless trouble, especially to a singer. Until I have Dr. Auguston's advice I want you to stay in bed."

Beryl stirred impatiently. "But I can't stay in bed," she protested. Then, seeing a look of annoyance on the doctor's face, she added quickly: "Could you get Dr. Auguston today?"

"Possibly," the doctor said dryly, "but I expect you to under- stand that we will be fortunate to get Auguston at any time at all. His fee, by the way, may seem ex- orbitant but he's worth it; every penny."

Beryl sighed. "Yes," she said. "I've heard of famous specialists."

The doctor got up to go. "I'll send for him at once," he said.

Beryl stopped him at the door. "You haven't seen when a girl throws him over," the doctor re- plied. "It's a pity girls like Irene aren't all born in China."

Beryl sat up with a jerk. "What kind of trouble?" she cried.

"The kind a guy like Tommy usually gets," the doctor said. "You're in trouble with the Larkin boys."

Beryl flashed him a faint smile of gratitude for placing the blame where it belonged. But his impli- cation of weakness on Tommy's part needed refuting, she thought.

"Tommy's all right," she pro- tested. "All his bad luck came at once."

"In," the doctor returned dryly. "Someone had better dig him out pretty quick."

"Yes," Beryl agreed. "Someone had."

The doctor shook his head. "Not today," he said warningly. "You ought to get up, if you don't," he added gravely, "the consequences may be serious for you."

"Will you let me know if Dr. Auguston is coming today?"

The doctor promised and de- parted. Mrs. Everett, who had been on an errand during his call, appeared to ask Beryl what he had said. Beryl did not tell her all the doctor had hinted at. Instead she asked a question of her own.

"Do you know what Irene said to Tommy in that note she sent him yesterday?" she demanded.

"Who told you she sent him a note?" her mother evaded.

"If she flirts with Tom's wealth in Tommy's face—" Beryl began heatedly, but her mother cut her short.

"She did nothing of the kind," she declared. "It was just a sweet little note to ask him to try to forget her."

"I can imagine," Beryl remark- ed bitterly. "So sweet it would drive him to drink. He probably thought he'd lost an angel."

"Irene is a good girl," the moth- er asserted. "You ought to think of all she can do for you!"

Beryl did not answer for a mo- ment. Then, "If you mean my career," she said slowly, "I may not have one. Our medico is sending for a genie to find out."

Two Girls Walk 12,000 Miles In Testing Shoes

LIVERPOOL, Eng.—Two girls here have walked 12,000 miles in four years, doing one of the strangest jobs in the city.

Each day, Peggy Davies and Phyllis Robertshaw, appear at the offices of a shoe manufacturer and are sent out for a stroll wear- ing new shoes. They return at night and the footwear is sent to a department of experts for ex- amination.

There defects are noted and the shoes and boots that wear the best are carefully recorded. It was ex- plained by a company official that this was the most practical method of testing their products.

CONVICTS THANK BARN.
 HILLSVILLE, Va.—Collapse of a barn here during a heavy storm resulted in good fortune for six convicts who had taken refuge there from the rain. The barn fell, pinning their guards to the ground, while the convicts escaped. They have not been found since.

States Give to Forestry Funds

WASHINGTON.—Virtually every state and territory contributed last year to amass almost $7,300,000 for expenditures on state fore- stry, fire control, extension and reforestation, the forest service of the agriculture department here announced recently after complet- ing a summary of state and terri- torial expenditures last year.

State forest work has shown a total gain of $4,000,000 in the last two years, forest service officials pointed out, and has been success- ful in extending fire protection and reforestation to several mil- lion acres of forest lands. In the past year over $2,500,000 was spent by the states for fire protection and upwards of $1,000,000 for reforestation projects. During the same time $2,500,000 was spent for additional purchases and maintenance.

Cotton and Milk Leading in Cash Returns of Farms

A group of urbanites were asked to name the most important farm product from the standpoint of cash income. "Wheat," they replied. "The newspapers are full of it." "That's wrong. Cotton is first. What's next?" "Wheat," they said. "Wrong again. Milk is next. What's third?" "Wheat."

The cash income from eggs and chickens, five-year 1925-29 average, was $11,445,000 or 2.13 per cent of the cash income from all farm commodities. The cash income from wheat averaged $790,120,000, or 7.39 per cent of the total, says the U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Practically 60 per cent of farmers' cash income from agricultural products is received from cotton, milk, hogs, cattle, calves, eggs, and chickens, according to computations by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics. Cotton and milk vie for first place as cash income products, the income from cotton lint and seed being estimated by the bureau at $1,450,157,000 as an average for the five-year period 1925-29, or 14.59 per cent of the cash income from all farm commodities, and the cash income from milk at $1,453,646,000 or 14.52 per cent of the total. The five-year average total is computed at $10,008,450,000.

Two Methods of Making. Fill glasses full of coarsely cracked ice or one-third full of crushed or shaved ice. Pour tea on ice, taking care not to touch the glass with the hot tea. Serve with sugar and lemon. Freshly brewed, well-made tea poured at once over ice is not at all the same beverage that is made very strong by over-steeping, is then cooled and weakened with water and finally served with a piece of ice to thicken. The first is clear with a delicious fragrance and taste, while the second is cloudy with a bitter, pucky taste, no matter how much.

MENUS FOR THE ENTIRE FAMILY

MOST adults seem to feel that the "cup that cheers but not inebriates" is essential to their comfort at least once a day, and as the weather grows warmer a glass of iced tea does much to cheer and comfort and can do little harm to the average well person.

Children should never be allowed to drink tea in any form. If the little of ice and accompanying lemon and sugar of iced tea should prove too enticing for children at the family table, a glass of lemonade should be provided for them.

If you would serve your iced tea as fragrant and sparkling as the hot beverage, choose the brand with care and make the infusion according to rate, allowing twice as much dry tea for each cup of water as for a hot drink.

Make the tea exactly as if it were to be used hot. That is, scald the tea pot and when thoroughly heated, pour out scalding water. Put tea in tea pot and pour over freshly boiling water. Let steep not longer than five minutes.

The favoring substance and stimulating properties are quickly extracted by boiling water. The short period of steeping produces a fragrant, delicately flavored beverage, mildly stimulating to some persons.
