REACTION IS FELT TO MARTIAL LAW

ABOUT THIS AND THAT.....

The monthly mimeographed bulletin issued by Dr. H. B. Tanner, secretary of the Eastland Chamber of Commerce, has come to our desk for our enlightenment and it contains so many things of importance to the entire county that we are going to "lift" portions of it and pass it along to our readers. The bulletin this month is twice as lengthy as usual and we will have to take it in small doses. At the top is a neat drawing of a scantily clad young lady enjoying the wonderful climate of this section and the doctor goes into details about the climate as follows:

"For many years we have been bragging about this, not only mild, but equable climate. During the last six months many of the patriarchs of this vicinity have been obliged to leave for other parts of our country.

"The extreme heat they have had to endure accompanied by sweltering nights too damp to sleep, while mosquitos and flies made life miserable, this brought them to us for the delightful climate they left. As they write letters back here or straggle home for a breath of our clean air, while thinking of the sunshiny days and cool nights they all express appreciation of this blessing.

"Our climate is something that does not cost us anything and should be the first subject of conversation to every stranger we meet. Constant bragging of the glorious climate of California has made that region famous and prosperous. It will do the same to us if we wake up to the fact that we have the best place on earth in which to live in comfort and quiet enjoyment."

GRID WORK WILL START SEPTEMBER 1

Coach Eck Curtis of the Ranger Bulldogs said today that practice will be started for the 1931 football season on Sept. 1 and if possible a little earlier.

Several of the players are working in Tennessee this summer and football practice will be started as soon as they can return to Ranger, the coach said.

If it is possible for them to get off from their work before Sept. 1 an earlier date will be set for the beginning of the fall grid practice, though no word had been received from these players.

The coach has just returned from the coaching school at Lohbeck this week and has not had time to get very much information on when the players will be back home and has not set a definite date for the opening of the practice season.

The grounds at Lillard field have been kept in perfect condition this summer and the field is well sodded with grass, putting the field in better condition than it has ever been before.

Curtis is busy now checking over equipment and getting everything in readiness for the first day of practice and issuing suits.

Plans were made for the ensuing year. A budget was adopted. Each town represented, accepted a prorata share of the budget to be raised as each town thought best by Oct. 1, at which time another executive committee meeting will be held for a general check up.

Homer Brelsford Jr., president of the council, presided; C. E. May, Walter Maxwell and J. E. Matthews attended from Ranger; Russell B. Jones, Ross Elliott, E. R. Maxwell, Charles Brown, Harry DeLane, Leonard Deere, J. R. Hanes, and Stanley Duvall of Breckenridge; Frank Robinson and M. S. Sellers of Rising Star; Hugh White and E. P. Crawford of Cicco; Homer Brelsford Jr., Alex Clark and W. B. Crossley of Eastland.

Mr. Clark gave a report on the summer camp reading a letter of suggestions from Dr. T. H. Shelby of the extension department of Texas University who inspected the camp, while in session. Dr. Shelby spoke very highly of the camp personnel and congratulated them upon the success they had achieved in making the camp an interesting, happy experience for the scouts.

The Honeymooning Mackays

These smiling honeymooners from America posed for the cameraman on their arrival in London. They're Clarence Mackay, wealthy telegraph magnate, and his bride, the former Anna Case, famous American opera soprano. Mackay is a director of the Metropolitan Opera Company in New York.

Battle of Yangtze River Lulls After Two-Year Period
PEIPING.—For the first time in two years a lull has occurred in the warfare between American, British and Japanese gunboats on the Yangtze river above Hankow and Chinese bandits and Communists along the banks. Withdrawal of Communist armies to southern Hupeh and Kiangsi is responsible.

During the height of the warfare a few months ago American and British and Japanese gunboats were firing upon Chinese bandits almost daily, and for two months not a single vessel made the voyage without being hit. Casualties on ships were few, however, but those on shore probably ran into thousands.

A writer in the North-China Daily News, British newspaper in China, estimates that British gunboats alone fired more than 20,000 high explosive shells during a year of this intensive campaign, which blew away several hills in which bandits liked to hide and shoot at passing ships.

The American and Japanese gunboats were not far behind, and it is believed the Japanese probably fired more than the British. American naval reports show that gunboats fired almost daily during the height of the campaign.

The Yangtze patrol of the three navies has been cooperating for several years in keeping the upper Yangtze open to foreign merchant vessels. Gunboats have conveyed merchant ships on nearly all trips.

COTTON HOLIDAY PROPOSED

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 20.—The United States government will be asked to sponsor an international one-year holiday for the cotton fields of the world, it was revealed today at mass meetings in the cotton industry discussed a one-year holiday in this country.

The plan will be presented to the secretary of state by a delegation to be selected following adoption of the plan for an American cotton holiday by a conference here Friday. The delegation will leave for Washington immediately after that conference.

The international holiday plan was revealed by Gov. Huey P. Long of Louisiana, who suggested that American growers produce no cotton in 1932 as a means of reducing the world's cotton supply and thus increasing prices.

DECREASED OIL OUTPUT MAKES MANY JOBLESS

Oil Men Organizing Into Independent Ass'n in East Texas.

KILGORE, Aug. 20.—Governor Ross Sterling's army of occupation flourishing about in a sea of mud was of secondary importance today as legislators, private citizens and oil men reacted to the declaration of martial law.

The 1,200 troops living in comfortable tents equipped with electric lights and sanitary plumbing, settled down for an indefinite stay while outside the military zone ruled by Brigadier General Jacob F. Wolters, they were more important developments.

At Palestine, important railroad division point 100 miles south of the oil fields, the International Great Northern railroad laid off 929 workers who had been added to the payroll since the discovery of oil in the hilly regions of Texas near Louisiana. Railroad officials said decreased oil shipments caused the layoff.

Oil operators, producers and refiners expressed varying opinions as to the effects of the shutdown. A group of refiners, organizing themselves into the East Texas Independent Refiners association, voiced resentment at the invocation of martial law and went ahead with plans for protection of their interests.

Author of "MAD MARRIAGE"

©1931 BY NEA SERVICE INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
 Norma Kent, pretty 20-year-old secretary, is employed in a law office in Marlboro, middle-western metropolis. On her way to keep a dinner engagement with Bob Farrell, young lawyer, Norma sees a puppy in peril on its life in the midst of downtown traffic. A stranger rescues the dog and brings it to the girl. The stranger, a good looking, well dressed and introduces himself as Mark Travers. Norma refuses to tell him her name or where he can see her again.

She takes the puppy with her and meets Bob. They buy collar and leash for the dog and then dine at a favorite restaurant. For the third time Farrell asks her to marry him. Norma refuses, saying she wants to keep her association on the basis of friendship instead of love. When she reaches the baby apartment she shares with Christine Saunders, generally called "Chris," she finds her roommate has been crying.

Then you didn't learn your handsome hero's name?" Chris asked.

HOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
 CHAPTER II
 Chris, too, held a secretarial position. Her salary was larger than Norma's. For two years Chris had been the highly capable, confidential secretary of Bradley Hart, whose advertising agency handled half a dozen of the largest accounts in the city. Norma knew Bradley Hart by sight, knew Chris Saunders, answering admiration for the cynical, brilliant employer whose wife spent little time in Marlboro. More and more frequently lately Chris spoke of night work, lunches in the office, driving home in Hart's silky roadster.

Repeatedly Norma assured herself there was nothing to worry over. She tossed off her hat, moved toward the mirror to fluff her hair. As she turned again the light through the doorway fell all on the other girl's face. "Why, Chris," Norma exclaimed, "You've been crying!"

Chris turned sharply but not in time to hide the bright tear that glistened on her cheek. Norma caught a glimpse of tell-tale red markings about the other girl's eyes.

"What is it, honey?" Norma asked. "Tell me what's wrong?"

There was no answer. Chris's back was toward Norma. The slim, bell-shaped shoulders gave no evidence what was going on in the girl's mind. After a moment she smiled in level tones. "Nothing, here's nothing at all wrong."

Norma knew there was nothing to be gained by further questioning. The older girl disappeared through the doorway and Norma crossed the room. She picked up her hat from the table where she had tossed it, took off her coat and hung both away in the clothes closet.

The girl was troubled. Not half dozen times in the years she had known Chris Saunders had she seen her give way to tears. It was always Chris who listened to other people's difficulties. Chris who was capable, sympathetic, who made things come right when life was a hopeless snarl. It was Chris who had been a staunch friend to Norma at the time she most needed one.

Well, there was nothing to do but wait and hope—remembered Norma earlier in the evening. She stood to the chair where she had dropped the stray puppy. The puppy was not there.

Almost instantly she spied him, peering with awkward steps toward a pillow that had fallen from the davenport. There was an investigative tilt to the pup's nose, as if for exploration even in the way he bore his stub of a tail.

There was a dog out to see what manner of a place was this into which fortune had hurled him.

With a sweeping movement the girl caught up the little animal, holding his head gently with one hand. It was impossible not to smile at his ridiculous, round-eyed solemnity. Norma seated herself, the pup on her lap, and regarded him thoughtfully.

Just then Chris entered. She had changed the black frock for an orchid negligee. Chris halted on the threshold.

"Well—! Where in the world THAT came from?"

Norma looked up, smiling. "Isn't adorable? Look—he likes to see buttons!" She drew the cuff of her blouse out of biting distance of those tiny white teeth.

"Adorable? Looks to me like a boss-between-a-breakfast-food-and-a-ball-of-yarn. Honestly, is it dog? Where, I repeat, did you get such an object?"

She was the old Chris again. No more now, no signs of them. Chris' w-pitched, throaty voice was entering, intensely warm-hearted. It was her pose to assume critical aloofness. Norma, knowing this, paid no attention to her railing.

"Don't you think Wowski would be a nice name for him?" she asked. "The poor thing was lost, Chris. He was all alone in the middle of road street with cars whizzing by and right I saw him as I was my way to meet Bob—"

Once more Norma told the story of the puppy's rescue. This time she gave full details and due credit to the stranger who had played the important part in the affair.

"Honestly, I was frightened when he ran right into the midst of those cars. It was a miracle he wasn't hurt. The minute he started to bark I—done a dreadful, reckless thing. It was the puppy I was thinking of, but just suppose the car had been injured—"

Chris Saunders leaned her head backward, shot a quizzical glance at her roommate.

"H'm?" she said quietly. "Was good-looking?"

"Not bad. To tell the truth he eat," Norma said contritely.

Chris ignored this. She sat down, one foot curled comfortably beneath her. "Then you didn't learn your handsome hero's name?" she asked, returning to the earlier subject of conversation.

"He said it was Travers. Mark Travers. Maybe that was just a stall, though, the same as saying he'd met me at the Palais Royal. You know," the girl admitted, "I sort of liked him until he said that. Oh, how I do hate pick-ups!" Norma pounded the padded arm of the davenport with a vengeful fist.

"They all do it, baby. Haven't you ever long enough to learn that yet?" Chris' tone was caustic again. "Travers—!" She repeated the name slowly. "Maybe your boy friend is old F. M. Travers's son. You know—the real estate magnate. Did the lad look like a millionaire's pampered son?"

"What should I know about millionaire's sons? Don't be silly. He was good-looking and what he did was brave but of course I'll never see him again as long as I live. Oh—"

"Proposed?"

"Marriage. Holy bonds. What am I going to do about it, Chris? I've told him three times that I just want to go on being friends but it doesn't seem to make any impression. Being seen getting well, different lately? I don't know what to do."

"Why don't you marry him?"

"Because I don't want to! Really, Chris, Bob doesn't seem to be the same boy lately. He's always getting sentimental and that starts an argument. Then the first thing you know we're fighting."

"He's in love with you, infant. He's in love with you and Bob Farrell's a young man lots of girls would give their eyeteeth to land—"

"Chris Saunders! Are you actually telling me I ought to marry Bob?"

Instantly the other girl objected. "Nothing of the sort! It'll be a far day when your little friend, Chris, starts telling anyone how to run their lives. I can't even chauffeur my own. I'm not telling you to marry Bob. I'm only saying a grade-A applicant, and—well, isn't it a rotten sort of life to be tied to an office day after day? Six days a week. Fifty weeks a year. Marrying a man like Bob Farrell would be a lot better than that. Sometimes I think I can't stand it another day. Sometimes—"

Here words broke. There was a pitch of hysteria in the choking tones.

"Why, Chris, darling! Chris, you mustn't talk like this!"

Norma caught the other girl's hand. "You're not yourself to-night," she went on. "You're all worn out and tired. It's because you've been working too hard lately! You've got to stop it. Why, honey, I can't have you feeling like this—"

Chris had turned away. She brushed one hand across her eyes and it came away moist with tears. There was no attempt now to hide them. Chris coughed.

"Oh, I'll get over it," she said with an attempt at carelessness. "Never mind about me."

"But I do mind. A lot! After all you've done for me do you think I'm going to have you feeling blue and miserable? Listen, let's plan to do something interesting over the week-end. Take a trip somewhere, maybe. We could be extravagant just for once. Where'll we go?"

Chris got to her feet. "We'll talk about it later," she said. "Think I'll turn in now." She moved toward the alcove where the studio beds stood, masked in day-time draperies.

Was there any relevancy in the fact that a few minutes later she turned to say over her shoulder, "Brad ordered a new car today. Twin six coupe. It's to have a special body."

It was not unusual for Chris to refer to her employer so familiarly. "Brad" was what everyone at the Hart Advertising Agency called Bradley Hart when they were not addressing him directly. As a matter of fact Hart's golfing companions, acquaintances at his two clubs and the men and women with whom he was seen at theaters and supper resorts called him "Brad." Chris Saunders, confidential secretary whose desk was just outside Hart's private office, who listed his appointments, mailed the checks for his bills, telephoned his orders to the florist, knew Bradley Hart far better than any of those others did.

Once more the puppy claimed

Getting Business Gloom Behind Us

By ROME C. STEPHENSON
 President American Bankers Association

THERE is such a thing as over-riding a depression just as there is of over-staying a boom.

R. C. STEPHENSON

Over-confidence makes the great man justly miss the turn in a boom, and under-confidence makes them miss it in a depression. A leading New York banker was asked recently when he could tell that the turn for the better had come. "About three months after it has happened," he candidly replied.

There is more significance in that remark than appears on the surface. As more and more manufacturers and business men realize that the turn has already come and that they are overstaying the time to adopt constructive policies, they begin cautiously to press their selling campaigns, to speed up their production, to enlarge their working forces and increase their commitments for supplies. It is the gathering weight of their influences that finally raises the pressure of confidence to the dynamic power of recovery.

The surest way to bring the nation out of the business depression is to raise the pressure of public confidence to the point of becoming such a dynamic force. It has invariably been the push of that force which has started recovery in the past, and it is the gathering power of this force which will start recovery from this present depression.

It is a favorable sign of the times that there seems to be general agreement that the bottom of the depression has been reached and all eyes are peeled and looking ahead for the first indications that the turn for the better is in sight. Who knows but what the first thing we know we will find ourselves looking backward instead of forward as we realize that the turn has already come. It is a rough and rocky road that runs across the bottom of the valley of business depression, and most of us are too busy steering the old Ford from bump to bump to be able to take in all the scenery. So who knows but what some important changes in the landscape are already taking place.

Bankers Favor Gradual Change

National Commission Believes Local Sentiment Should Govern Evolution in Methods of Conducting Banking.

If substantial changes are to be brought about in branch banking in the United States they should originate within the states rather than from Washington on interstate lines as proposed in "trade area" branch banking plans, a recent report of the Economic Policy Commission of the American Bankers Association declares. Such changes, it adds, "should develop by evolutionary rather than revolutionary stages."

"The extension of branch banking through state action would mean that states not now permitting state banks to have branches or else closely restricting them, would individually liberalize their laws as an expression of changing local desires and conditions, and this doubtless would insure a deliberate, evolutionary process," the report says. "The other method, that is, through Federal action, would mean a sweeping change for the country as a whole, for legislation granting branch banking powers to national banks in all states, regardless of local sentiment, would, of course, induce equivalent branch banking enactments in every state in the Union not now permitting or really wanting state banks to have branches. In order to keep them on a competitive equality.

"We find some bankers who feel knock. It developed that Mrs. Hawthorne was out of town for a few days. Until her return Bessie, the daughter, said the dog might have the run of the back yard and sleep in the basement. Meanwhile, she cautioned, Norma had better be looking for some other shelter for the pup because Bessie was quite sure that "mama" wouldn't like it.

She repeated the warning twice and emphatically. It was this warning that at noon next day sent the girl hurrying into the big gray stone building of the Marlboro Press. She inquired for the classified advertising department.

And with that the really amazing events of Norma Kent's life began.

Texas Leads With 1,100 Tourist Camps

By United Press.
 SAN ANTONIO.—Texas leads the United States in the number of tourist camps with a total of 1,100, according to T. A. Keene, secretary-manager of the Texas and Southwest Camp Owners' association.

California ranks second, but Texas leads with several hundred. Keene said of the 110 camps, probably 300 would be classed as A-1. The number of first-class camps, however, was increasing, he said. Camp owners who started their camps several years ago are renovating them and making them more modern to keep in stride with the new ones built the last few months.

POWER PROJECT IN CANADA IS AN OLD STORY

EDITOR'S NOTE: A combination of power projects and politics, of Canadian senators and utility magnates, has brought to the Dominion of Canada one of the greatest scandals in its history.

The Beaulieu power project, one of the greatest potential industrial developments in the country, is the core around which charges of graft, of the expenditure of millions, both to individual politicians and to party funds, have revolved for years.

By MAX BUCKINGHAM, United Press Staff Correspondent.

OTTAWA.—The Beaulieu power project, involving a monopoly on the swift waters of the St. Lawrence river and the potential billions of horsepower imprisoned in it, is an old story in Canada. It goes back, in fact, to the year 1800, when the Sieur de Beaulieu built a mill on the St. Lawrence river, and later constructed a "feeder" from Lake St. Francis to the mouth of the stream.

From that feeder, built by the at-seeing Seigneur of Beaulieu, has come a modern development, involving corporations and government in a tangle of contracts, money payments and charges of misuse of funds unparalleled in Canadian history.

R. O. Sweeney, an engineer of wide capabilities, and one who has no hesitation in voicing his belief that political influence is essential to any great undertaking, is the head of the Beaulieu syndicate and the genius behind the proposed development of the power project.

Dominion Approval.

After overcoming bitter opposition to his program from the Quebec government, he came to Ottawa to obtain the dominion approval, necessary for the complete development of his scheme, since the dominion controls all navigable rivers, and without federal approval, the Quebec government's sanction would have been worthless.

In March, 1929, the dominion government granted the concession, but permitted diversion of only 40,000 cubic feet of water a second, as against the 200,000 cubic feet demanded by the Beaulieu syndicate.

Between March, 1929, and the summer of 1930, there were a number of reorganizations of smaller power companies, mergers, absorptions and dissolutions. In the end, the Beaulieu syndicate obtained its grant.

Open Charges.

Last year, however, Robert Gardiner, a progressive member of parliament, made open charges that the concession had been obtained irregularly. In May of this year he repeated his charges. A special committee of the house of commons was appointed to investigate.

This investigation just has been concluded. It corroborates vigorously the five principal men of the Beaulieu organization—Sweeney, Senator Wilfrid Laurier McDonald, Senator Donald Raymond, Senator Andrew Haydon, and R. C. Henry, former deputy minister of Railways and Canals.

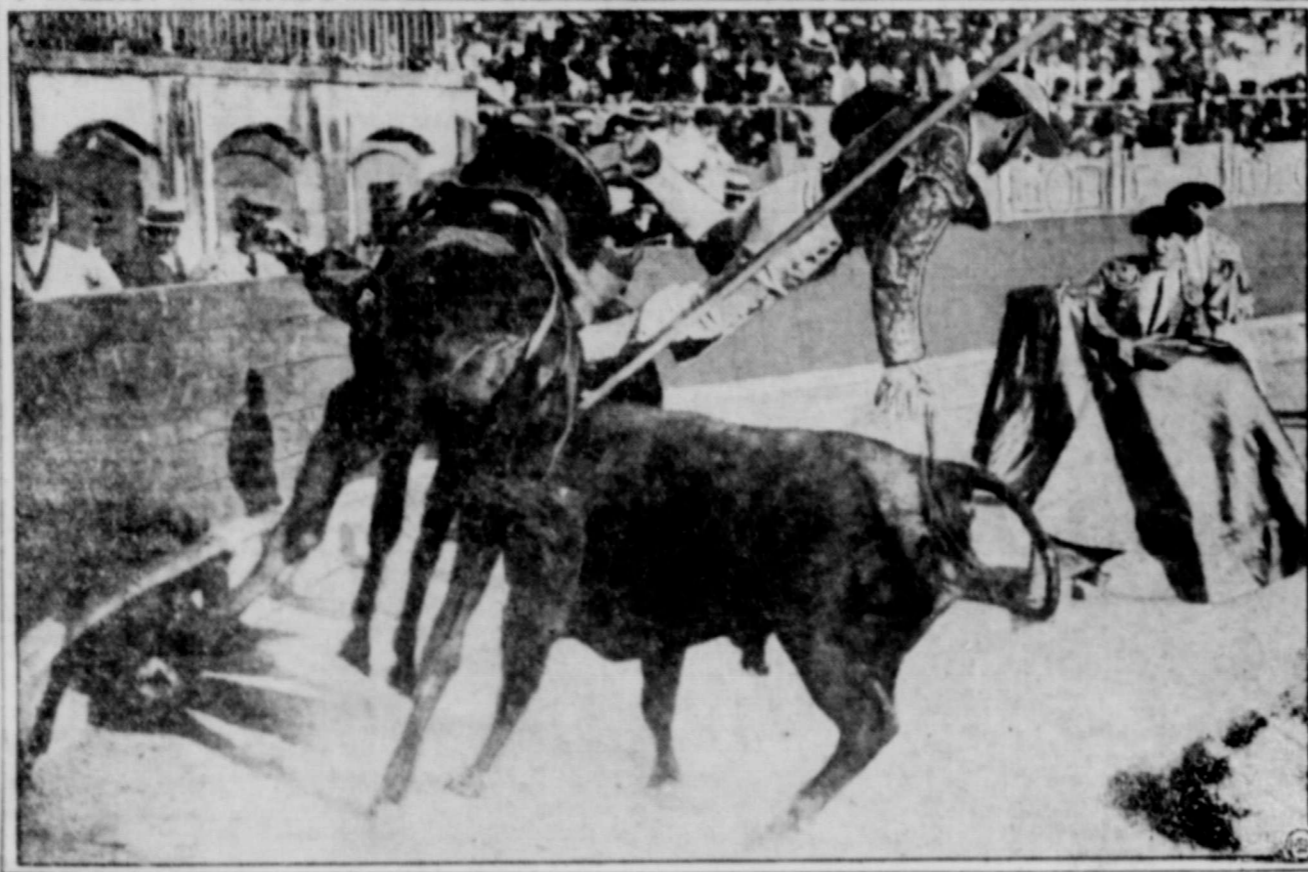

The report censuring the activities of these men was so vigorous that Prime Minister R. B. Bennett announced that the Beaulieu concession would be cancelled, that new act of parliament to protect the small investors would be passed, and that the project would be taken over and controlled by the government.

MADDENED BULL TURNS THE TABLES ON HIS TORMENTORS

This exceptional action picture of a bull-fight in Madrid, Spain, shows how the bull reversed the usual procedure by charging the picador's horse and tossing the picador to the arena. It wasn't planned to happen that way but even a harassed bull may sometimes do the unexpected. Note as the picador falls he is dropping his pike, which he was using to irritate the bull.

Buffalo Hunt To Be Staged In West Texas

By United Press.

GOODNIGHT, Tex.—The last great herd of the "Monarchs of the Plains," survivors of a shaggy legion that once roamed the western United States in immense numbers, soon will disappear, unless public sentiment intervenes.

The famous Goodnight herd of wild buffaloes will be disposed of by means of a huge hunt, in which Will Rogers, Tom Mix and other celebrities have been invited to take part.

The hunt will be held in November, on the famous Goodnight ranch of Armstrong county, established in 1876 by Col. Charles Goodnight, pioneer cattleman of the Texas Panhandle.

In the early days of the Goodnight ranch, one of the largest in the west, only a few buffaloes roamed the plains country. At the suggestion of Mrs. Goodnight, the colonel roped and corralled three calves, a bull and two heifers.

From those progenitors Goodnight bred the huge herd, which at one time numbered more than 7,000 head. Recently the herd has been thinned out until about 200 animals grazed peacefully on the Goodnight lands.

Not only will the buffaloes be disposed of, but the Goodnight ranch also will be broken up. The ranch comprises 40,000 acres, lying two miles west of Clarendon, and adjoins the JA ranch, also established by Goodnight and now owned by the estate of Lady Aldair of London.

While several of the younger buffaloes will be sold or donated to zoos, the majority of the herd will be hunted down and slaughtered in old-time western style. The choicest specimens will be sold to big game hunters, who will be permitted to have the meat, head and hide.

Since the buffalo is a fierce fighter, cowboys experienced in "riding herd" on them will accompany the hunters. Indian braves from the Kiowa tribe also will attend the hunt and one of their number will be allowed to slay a buffalo with bow and arrow.

THE MAULER

AGAIN there is talk of Dempsey returning to the ring. But we're all getting so used to that story that it doesn't cause any more reaction than an occasional "Oh, yeah?"

Should Dempsey come back now, after four idle years, he would be beaten by second-class heavyweights. And, while there aren't many illusions left in the prize fight racket to which one might respectably cling, I want to remember as my last vision of Dempsey the half-crouching killer who stood over Gene Tunney at Chicago.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

EVERYBODY laughed when John McGraw, picking his all-star team last winter, put Lou Gehrig on first base. . . . It isn't quite so laughable now. . . . In a recent double header against the Brownies Lou drove in nine runs. . . . He tripled three home. . . . homered three more in. . . . singled another one home. . . . and homered again with a man on the base. . . . as far as glory is concerned Lou hasn't had his share. . . . because the Bambino baited just ahead of him and begged the public applause.

Two to One

THEY were trying to find a horse to beat Twenty Grand I mean, by "they," the vast crowd of sports followers who want to see a new champion arise and beat the old. They found the horse in Mate.

Now, Twenty Grand in defeat, takes on some of the same sort of popular affection that Dempsey gained when he lost to Tunney in Philadelphia. "They" are hoping the gallant Whitney horse can come back just as "they" hoped that Dempsey would knock Tunney into somebody's lap in Chicago.

The score at present between the pair is two to one in favor of Mate, winner of the Preakness and the Arlington. Twenty Grand's score was earned in the Derby.

Suppose Max Schmeling had been gone through six hard fights since then. Do you think he would be tired? Twenty Grand has done something of the sort, and you know, after all, a horse is flesh and muscle and bone and that is mortal. After a rest at Saratoga the Whitney entry should recover much of his speed and stamina. And the Travers in August might find Twenty Grand tying the score.

McGraw Is Mad

LOOK out for those Giants now. McGraw is mad.

"I welcome the suspension," said John the other day after Clarke had chased him for protesting a decision at first base. "I welcome the fight. A few more breaks like this and the Giants will win the pennant. We have been too damned complacent but we're fighting from here in."

Empire Clarke, according to press box observers, missed fire badly on his decision that Fullis was out at first. It was that that Chick had beaten the throw by a step and a half.

McGraw carried his fight to President Heydler after the three-day suspension was handed to him. "We've had trouble with that Clarke for two years," said McGraw. "He stole a game from us in Pittsburgh. He robbed Fullis of a hit and the league president backed him up. Instead of trying to rid the league of umpires who are incompetent, the president pats them on the back but slaps me in the face with a three-day suspension."

And was Mr. McGraw's face red when he said it!

Tylerites To Vote On Bus Service

TYLER—A special election to determine whether or not the people of Tyler want city bus service and to elect a city commissioner to replace H. F. Curtis will be held Sept. 14.

Leonard Bruck and Tom Butler, Tyler business men, applied for the bus franchise through the city commission several weeks ago. The franchise was passed by the commission and is now to be voted on by citizens before going into effect or being rejected. Bids will be accepted Aug. 24 for five traffic lights which will be installed at busy sections here.

Penny Beggars Live On 25 Cents a Week

asking for their one penny. Oddly faithful to the sum of 1-cent, they will carefully count out the change if given a nickel or any other coin larger than a penny. Every clothing store, book company or bakery shop makes its weekly contribution to the "mendigos del centavo."

The old women accumulate about 25 cents on their Saturday aim pilgrimage. They live on this sum all week.

DUMAS—Excavation under way preparatory to erection of $150,000 school building.

Skipping rope in the surf is just one of the strenuous training methods adopted by Mrs. Eva Coleman, young widow of London, in preparing for an attempt to swim the English Channel. She's almost ready to take the plunge, and hopes to establish a new speed record for the crossing. Mrs. Coleman is the mother of an 8-year-old girl. Yes, she's doing it "for the kiddie."

Making the Cheaper Cuts Tasty

By Jane Rogers

THE whole secret of making any one of the cheaper cuts of meat tasty lies in finding a good recipe and in faithfully following all its directions. If this lesson has been well learned and taken to heart there is no reason why round steak, chuck roast and all the other less expensive cuts of beef and lamb should not have just as much appetite appeal as the more costly roasts, steaks and chops.

The most important of all the points to remember is that the seasoning should be just right. All of the seasonings used should blend together into a harmonious whole, and their total effect should be to bring out and point up the full, rich flavor of the meat. In this connection, it is wise to take a hint from European cooks who long ago learned that a small amount of sugar, used as one of the seasoners, serves to blend the flavors of all the other seasoners and helps greatly to accent the natural meat flavor.

It is true that the cheaper cuts take longer to prepare than their more aristocratic relations, but added minutes in the kitchen are compensated for by more nickels, dimes and quarters in the pocket-book at the end of the week. In hot weather especially, when no woman can be blamed for not wanting to spend more time in the kitchen than she has to, there may be a temptation to postpone use of the cheaper cuts until cooler days arrive. If it is necessary to economize this may mean a decided cutting down in the family's meat ration.

This is not as it should be. Few foods contain so many of the necessary food elements as meat.

It is an almost complete food in itself, containing water, protein, fats, carbohydrates, minerals and vitamins. A substantial meat dish is an excellent source of the energy every active person requires, in summer as well as winter. Here is one that is economical, appetizing and easy to prepare.

Chili-Con Carne
Slice, fine, two onions. Cook slowly in four tablespoons fat, in covered kettle. When the onions are soft, and just before they begin to brown, add one and a half pounds round steak, cut into small cubes. When meat starts to fry, stir in from one to three tablespoons Chili powder, mixed in a little water, two teaspoons sugar and one teaspoon salt. Add one quart hot water and one-half cup tomato juice or tomato purée. Simmer until meat is very tender and the stew is of a thick consistency. Serve with corn, hominy, or a salad.

Grand Duke Says Aid For Germany Now Necessary

By United Press.
PARIS.—Grand Duke Alexander of Russia, cousin of the former Tsar, just back here from New York, has the firm conviction that if the nations are to live in peace they must help one another, and it is obvious that if Germany is left to sink, all of central Europe will be affected.

The Grand Duke has spent five months in America, during which time he has been writing his memoirs. He was accompanied on his tour by Colonel N. de Grikslewski.

An American magazine has contracted with the Russian nobleman for a series of articles on the present European situation, which he will write during his visit to France.

"I am lecturing on spirituality," he said upon his arrival here, "and my aim is to convince humanity that it is given over to gross materialism. There is nothing else. There is an aim and a goal to life. There is something higher and more uplifting.

"People have, or take, no time to think I intend to combine the sorrows of Russia and my own experience into a story to be written as convincing proof that there is a need of spiritualizing the children and the masses."

RUBBER BAND BLINDS YOUTH

By United Press.
MEMPHIS.—Edward Toombs, 8-year-old kindergarten student, has lost the sight of one eye because he was playing with a rubber band. The youth was "shot" in the eye with a story to be written as convincing proof that there is a need of spiritualizing the children and the masses.

Grand Duke Alexander expects to remain in France about two months completing his magazine articles and beginning another series of lectures. He expects to visit America again next year, but has not decided upon the exact date.

Police Will Guard Legion Convention

EL PASO.—The doughboy had only the M. P.'s to contend with during the war but legionnaires who attend the Texas state American Legion convention here Aug. 21 will be chaperoned by three varieties of police.

The regular police, a special police force recruited from each legion post and 30 non-commissioned officers from Fort Bliss will be on duty during the convention, Asst. Police Chief T. R. Burnett announced.

"There just ain't no peace for a soldier, even when he gets out," Burnett said he expects no trouble from the 5000 legionnaires but the extra officers are for any emergency that might arise with the city crowded.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY SISTER MARY NEA Service Writer IF you use left-overs cleverly to the best advantage, you often can make the concocted dish so attractive that the original is quite forgotten.

Hot sandwiches are excellent to serve when another hot dish is not provided. Left-over meat finely chopped and added to left-over gravy is served on plain bread to make an "open sandwich."

Left-over meat and gravy is attractive served in nests of mashed potato. Macaroni, noodles, rice and spaghetti combine well in a crisp green salad with this type of meat.

Camp Fire Girls Met Wednesday Camp Fire Girls met for the regular business meeting Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock, at the Methodist church.

Spending Day At Lake Cisco A gay little party of Eastland's young ladies went early this morning to Lake Cisco for a day's outing of swimming, hiking, and boating.

Entertained On Fifth Birthday Mrs. J. C. Patterson entertained Thursday morning with a picnic at Lake Eastland, for her son Fred on his fifth birthday.

Those enjoying the outing were Thomas Harrell, Cone Johnson, W. A. Gunn, Jimmie Watson, Neal Patterson, Elizabeth Ann and Mary Jane Harrell and the honoree Fred Patterson.

Other countries, and the Orient will start buying the foreign goods it wants. It has been pointed out repeatedly that Chinese merchants as a whole are not worried at all about the silver situation unless they have a business which positively requires imported goods.

Frankly, Chinese and Japanese leaders will state, they view the wild outcry in the United States and Canada for silver stabilization as largely an expression of the selfish interest of silver producers in those countries.

A great deal of nonsense is being talked about silver and the slump in exports to the Orient. There is a slump in exports everywhere because of the world economic depression.

To Fly Again

The air route to Europe still lures Ruth Nichols, society aviatrix, who was hurt when her plane cracked up while en route to New York.

Arrangements have been made for a Pullman City of 25,000, a Steamer City with 5,000 inhabitants and a huge billet with 5,000 cots under one roof.

Persons walking through a clump of trees at a street intersection have heard the warning scream of half a dozen of the birds and been driven at a run from the scene.

Officials attributed the attacks to annoyances suffered by the birds from boys violating their nests and molesting their eggs and young.
