THE GOVERNMENTS LOAN POLICY.

The federal government has announced a policy of ency in the collection of crop loans made to west Texas farmers, according to an announcement from the West Texas member of commerce officers at Stamford, which quotes Secretary of Agriculture Hyde in a statement that each loan will be considered on its individual merits, "granting extension time in part or all where repayment would work undue hardship." The policy is not only constructive but is obviously the only one that can be justified by the government's primary motive in making these loans available to the farm-

The individual farmer is not to blame for the present cultural debacle, and certainly an effort to assist him to secure a crop and provide a living for himself and his family would not now be turned into a penalty that would make it more difficult for him to survive. According to the statement approximately $2,500,000 has been loaned by the government to the farmers of 67 counties of west Texas. It is a happy consequence that the government is prompting its collection policy in the same spirit in which it prompted to provide the loans. Stabilization of the agricultural industry is the primary essential for stabilization of the nation's economic conditions and obviously the first and most serious effort of the nation should be turned toward stabilizing the farmer toward a condition of prosperity.

Secretary Hyde's desire that each loan be considered upon its individual merits requires that another step be taken to put policy into the most advantageous effect, the statement points out. That step is to resurrect the county loan committees which functioned during the granting of the loans.
It is patent that these local committees are the only official agencies which can determine with any degree of correctness the merits of the individual cases, and justice requires that the most sympathetic attention should be given each case.

CHRISTIANITY IN ASIA

Golden Text: Acts 14:27
The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Sept. 27, The Spread of Christianity in Asia. Golden Text: Acts 17:27.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of The Congregationalist

Our lessons for the quarter begin with the experience of Pentecost in which all the newest and richest experiences of the new religion are linked with all the richest experiences of the religion out of which Christianity developed. Pentecost, which we think of as a great Christianizing beginning, was of course a Jewish feast. All that is old and all that is new in religion are inseparably linked in all that is true. The new is not opposed to the old, as Jesus himself pointed out so constantly. The new in religion, where it is the true, is the fulfillment of the old.

WASHINGTON — The Farm Board, operating under the agricultural marketing law, finds that both the bad things and the good things which develop during its efforts toward agricultural relief are brought about by a law considerably older and more effective.

The law of supply and demand, which always enforces itself sooner or later, has booted the Farm Board repeatedly and discouragingly for the last couple of years. But now it is helping the board put over one of its most insistent policies by causing a reduction of wheat acreage which must continue if American farmers are ever to operate unfluenced by world conditions which have been growing steadily worse from their point of view.

Early in 1929 ex-Chairman Alex Legge first sounded the call for acreage reduction and the cry has echoed out of Washington ever since. Legge pointed out to the farmers that they would have to get their production down by about 25 per cent if they were to become independent of world prices and receive any benefit from the 42-cent tariff by eliminating the huge exportable surplus which has run around 200,000,000 bushels a year.

Last year a campaign was initiated to keep spring wheat down and in the summer Legge, Secretary of Agriculture Hyde and other officials led a loudly ballyhooed expedition into the west to preach curtailment. Legge got into some good fights on the issue, especially in Kansas, but the board kept on pounding away at it and reiterated the demand last March when it announced there would be no more stabilization buying.

But those constant adjurations had little visible effect and it remained for the law of supply and demand, creating a huge wheat carryover which brought wheat prices down to the lowest level since 1893 A. D., to turn the trick.

Legge tried to get the farmers to start off with a 10 per cent acreage cut, with gradual reductions thereafter, but the low prices, which have made all wheat growers—instead of only a large proportion of them—operate below production cost, appear to be achieving even more drastic curtailment than he proposed and failed to effect.

It now appears that winter wheat acreage down this fall will be at least 12 per cent less than last year, which would be the smallest acreage since 1914. That is on the basis of planting intention reports to the Department of Agriculture. Actual planting is usually slightly less than intentions declared by the farmers, although last year it was a little more due to certain abnormal conditions. Winter wheat planting continues until frost time and although there was a slight price strengthening in September there are no developments indicating that the acreage cut will not exceed 12 per cent. Reports on actual planting will be available in December.

There has been no "price incentive" for wheat planting since 1929, according to wheat authorities, and world wheat conditions indicate that there will be none in the near future. Those conditions prevented what would ordinarily have been a stimulation of prices because of the short spring wheat crop.

The effect of the cut in winter wheat acreage reduction this fall is discounted by the fact that the American wheat supply is now above 1,200,000 bushels, nearly enough to meet two years of domestic consumption. The carryover as of last July is 320,000,000 bushels and the carryover as of next July has been estimated at about 450,000,000 bushels, with domestic consumption placed at about 650,000,000 and export at 113,000,000. The normal carryover is something like 150,000,000 and to get back to that would require an acreage cut of about 50 per cent.

Filipinos Ask For Protection

By United Press. MANILA, P. I.—Appeals for greater protection of Filipinos residing in the Pacific coast states from what is described as racial violence and discrimination were contained in a memorandum received here by legislative leaders from the Filipino Broadway club of Seattle.

The memorandum said that race prejudice against the Filipinos has assumed serious proportions and makes their presence in the United States unpleasant and unbearable.

Acts of discrimination have increased and become almost daily occurrences, the memorandum said.

Because of this situation, the Philippine legislature was urged to send a Filipino labor commissioner to look after the interests and welfare of the many thousands of Filipinos, who are supposed to look after the interests and welfare of all Filipinos in the mainland.

Filipino leaders appeared indispensed to take any immediate step. There is lack of funds available to carry out any such project. There are already two resident commissioners in Washington from the Philippines, who are supposed to look after the interests and welfare of all Filipinos in the mainland.

Filipinos are confident that American authorities will not allow persecution of Filipinos in the United States as long as present relations between countries continue.

LONG FACES ARE STYLISH

By O. FORD.
There isn't MUCH wrong with REALLY. But we are about to ARE ourselves to death. A man is like a man. You take an axe man and let eight or 10 his friends meet him through day, each one asking him, what on EARTH is the matter with you? Boy, you look BAD." To the first he probably replies, "Nothing wrong with me; I'm FINE." To the second he replies, "Oh, I feel pretty fair." After that it is just a case of how MUCH he can stand and by the time he gets to the ninth or 10th he is saying, "I don't KNOW somehow I don't feel very well." And it is only a little while until he has gone home and is to bed with symptoms of everything from fallen arches to typhoid fever. Well, it works like 1 with a nation. We are so busy telling each other everything is going to be all right, that we are going to starve death, and making all the doleful predictions we can imagine, we are ABOUT to ACTUALLY get sick as a nation. It seems to me STYLISH to be a PESSIMIST. A favorite indoor sport seems to be making terrible prophecies. We have a keen delight in seeing which of us can think of the most DREADFUL predictions. We are told we are facing a TERRIBLE FUTURE. Well, maybe so. But sure is WARM enough NOW. If we could STAND a LITTLE cooler weather right now and suffer any, couldn't we? I heard a fellow say the other day, "Say, isn't this a DANDY life?" The man he addressed, scratched his head and looked up at the sky and said, "That is all right but just you get out TOMORROW." He didn't enlarge on that prophecy. He left the impression that tomorrow was going to be a NIGHT. WELL, WHAT IF tomorrow is a bed day, is that any reason we shouldn't enjoy a GOOD time when it comes along? And away there is ALWAYS a CHANCE they MAY BE WRONG, it because today is GOOD, it is not necessarily follow that TOMORROW will be BAD! any more than just because you feel GOOD today is a sign you are BOUND to have the STOMACH TOMORROW. A friend of mine the other day told me he had a little boy who is only years old. Upon hearing some of the things in the garage, she went in and found her very young son taken his clothes off and was wearing axle grease all over himself. Instantly alarmed and horrified she gasped, "WHY, BOBBY, what on EARTH are you DOING?" Grinning at her, he said, "I'm getting ready to be the BOOGER." Well, that's the way all seem to be. "Getting ready to be the BOOGER" to SCARE the other and ourselves. But they say styles change. Personally I will be glad when optimism becomes stylish again. I'm tired trying to be the BOOGER. I wish we could all get back in the harness and go to PULLING a little again for a CHANGE. I think what the country REALLY needs is LESS "go" and more "go" signs.

ALIEN REPORT Shows Exodus

By United Press.
SAN FRANCISCO.—With 40 per cent more aliens leaving San Francisco than arriving, figures at Angel Island immigration headquarters up to Sept. 1 showed a complete reversal of the immigration tide this year. Departing foreigners totaled 6,620 up to Sept. 1, whereas entries numbered only 3,732, according to J. R. Schaduel, Angel Island statistician. Normally, incoming aliens exceed those leaving the country through this port by 100 to 300, Schaduel said. Now each month shows just the opposite balance. San Francisco, however, showed not quite so heavy an exodus as for the United States as a whole. In July seven aliens left the United States for every three entering. Washington figures disclosed, but in San Francisco the ratio was six to four. Although deportation is the highest in the nation's history, departures from here were mostly voluntary. Orientals make up a majority of the aliens checked in and out by the local office of the immigration service.

THE ST. LOUIS OUTFIELD FEATURES BALANCE

OUTFIELD TAKE AL SIMMONS out of the Athletics' outfield and the Cardinals would seem to have the better of it. With Simmons playing his usual great game in the world series, the A's have the best outfield in baseball. Simmons is probably the day's greatest player and is at his best with the annual fall purse at stake. If Mule Haas can man his regular berth in centerfield, the Athletics will be well fortified there also, but if injuries keep him out, Mack will have to rely on either Roger Cramer or Jim Moore. Both are youngsters and have not exactly set the league afire this summer. Bing Miller, always dependable, will be in right. The Cards have more balance in their outer works with Hafey leading in both offense and defense. Pepper Martin, a youngster who has had a fine year, will be in center. This is his first world series as a regular. George Watkins and Wally Roettger can play right field well, while Orsatti and Ray Blades will fit in anywhere in the outfield when needed. Three of the Cards' outfielders bat right-handed, the other three swing from the left side. That should furnish enough balance to make trouble for Grove and Earnshaw.

SPEAKING of SPORTS
By GEORGE KIRKSEY
United Press Staff Correspondent
Many Big League Manager Changes Are Impending.

The 1934 major league season will end on Sunday and there are several managers who are quite likely to be missing when the teams head south next spring. It seems certain that "Uncle" Wilbert Robinson is doomed as manager of the Brooklyn Robins, but they have been trying to get Robbie out for many years and haven't succeeded yet. Public opinion, however, appears to have turned against him and it will take a miracle for him to get a contract for the 1935 season. When the Robins got off to a slow start this season thousands of fans signed a petition asking Robinson's removal but just about that time the club started a winning streak and Robbie was once more back in the good graces of the fans. Since then, however, the Robins have hit the dumps again.

Max Carey, former Pittsburgh and Brooklyn outfielder, has been mentioned several times as the probable successor to Robinson.

The status of the 16 major league managers appears to be divided into three classes as follows:

Fixtures:
Connie Mack . . . Athletics
John J. McGraw . . . Giants
Boggs Hornsby . . . Cubs
Gabby Street . . . Cardinals
Joe McCarthy . . . Yankees
Roger Peckinpaugh . . . Cleveland
William McKechnie . . . Brave
Reasonably Certain:
Walter Johnson . . . Washington
Bill Killifer . . . St. Louis
Shano Collins . . . Red Sox
Burr Shotton . . . Phillies
Donie Bush . . . White Sox
Doubtful:
Wilbert Robinson . . . Brooklyn
Bucky Harris . . . Detroit
Jewel Ens . . . Pittsburgh
Dan Howley . . . Cincinnati

Despite his ups and downs with the Cubs, Rogers Hornsby will manage the team again next season at a salary said to be $40,000. William Wrigley, who signs the pay checks, has implicit faith in Hornsby's ability to develop a winner.

Once during the season it seemed that Donie Bush would resign as manager of the White Sox, but later developments indicate that he will stay at least another year. Although President Frank Navin has said that he doesn't blame Bucky Harris for the poor showing of the Detroit Tigers, Harris may step down of his own accord.

Handicapped by poor material Dan Howley hasn't been able to make any progress with the Reds, and he also may relinquish the post at his own choice.

What folly, then, in the light of these things, to dose yourself with drugs of which you know nothing. Don't gamble—KNOW.

The genuine Bayer Aspirin tablets are made by a special process, under careful supervision of scientists in the Bayer Laboratories, with over 25 years of highly specialized experience.

So when you want SAFE relief for pain, cold or headache, ask for BAYER ASPIRIN. You have a perfect right to ask for what you want. And an equal right to get what you ask for.

WHAT IS IT WORTH TO MOVE DEAD COW?

READING, Calif.—What it is worth to move a dead cow out of a river? Five dollars, said Shasta county. The dispute arose when Coroner Souza said his duty did not extend to removing a dead cow from a river.

South American Revolts Are Just Form of Election

By United Press.
ST. LOUIS.—Some Latin-American countries resort to revolutions as a simple form of election and consider it the best method for making a political change, Charles H. Cunningham, former United States commercial attaché at Lima, Peru, said here recently. "There is a lot of blank shooting done in some of the revolutions, with shots being fired mainly for effect," Cunningham said. "During some of the revolutions in Peru foreigners were allowed to transact business as usual in downtown districts, but were warned to keep off of certain streets where fighting was going on."

Son Being Good In Order to Win Huge Inheritance

By United Press.
ST. LOUIS, Mo.—A queer legal tangle, involving two daughters and a son of a wealthy diplomat, a will, religion, and the ethical meaning of good behavior, is as far from settlement as ever here, despite a federal circuit court of appeals decision that held Vincent Kerens has no right (as yet) to $1,900,000. When Richard C. Kerens, millionaire, died, a will was disclosed that put his pleasure-loving son, Vincent, under restrictions of a "five-year good behavior plan." "The young Kerens had a reputation at that time for "bad behavior" and his father's will stipulated that his $1,900,000 share in the estate must remain as a trust fund until Vincent "of his own free will and desire passed five consecutive years of continued sobriety and good behavior."

The recent Appellate Court decision held a lower court had erred in deciding that trustees were right in agreeing that from 1923-1927 inclusive Kerens had fulfilled the queer clause in his father's will. But while Kerens, now 55, with a home in Chicago and a ranch in Texas, temporarily lost control of the fortune, all he has to do is be on "good behavior" for five years straight, to be victorious. A religious faith has a part in the many angles of the will case. Two sisters of Vincent have legally fought his attempt to share in the fortune on the grounds his divorce of his first wife and remarriage during the 1923-1927 period were not "good behavior" in the view of his father, a staunch Catholic. The lower court judge who decided in favor of Kerens differed with the sisters, while the appellate decision did not mention the religious argument.

The fact, however, that in 1923 Kerens made a sworn statement later admitted at variance with the facts of his being found in a Los Angeles hotel with a woman, was held by the appellate court as one reason he had broken "the five year plan." It also cited an agreement whereby his first wife, if she agreed to a divorce would receive $300,000.

As Hoover Warned Legion Against Bonus Demand

Thousands of World War veterans are shown above at the American Legion's annual convention in Detroit listening to President Hoover's plea to defer all financial demands on the government until after the depression, with the warning that an additional burden at this time would incur "grave risks." A closeup of the president on the speaker's stand is shown at the left. The warning was aimed at cash bonus and pension proposals advocated by many legionnaires, although the president did not mention these projects specifically.

LEATHER CAPES POPULAR

Smartest of all are the colored coq feathers, made elbow-length like the coachman's fur capes of the '80's. E. A. Ringold Comments on Ranger School Fund and Taxes Now Due

In another part of this paper appears a statement of condition of the Ranger Independent School district as of Aug. 31, 1931, certified to Theodore Ferguson, public accountant. In commenting on this statement, E. A. Ringold, tax collector, said: "You will note that the liabilities, or indebtedness of the school district is $20,615.62 not including bonds. You will also note that there is over $30,000 due this school district in delinquent taxes, some of which is against the best property located in Ranger and owned by the leading citizens of the town and if these delinquent taxes were paid, the school district would be on a cash basis and amply able to pay its teachers and other employees. "Notwithstanding the property values of the district have been decreasing from year to year, there is still plenty valuation here to carry on the schools if the people of Ranger will take enough interest to pay up their taxes promptly. The board of trustees has effected a saving of more than $10,000 for the coming school term by reducing salaries and is endeavoring in every way possible to hold down the expenses of the school. "The corporations and out of town property owners are all paid up with but very few exceptions and it is regrettable that our local citizens who own their homes here and receive the greatest benefit from the schools, are the ones who are not paying up their school taxes. It is also regrettable that it looks as though the school is going to have to file suit against a number of the leading citizens of this community in order to force the payment of their taxes. Some of them are one year delinquent; some as much as four years and a close observation of the situation leads us to believe that a number of these delinquent tax payers have not done all that they could toward paying their school taxes. "For your information, the tax office is now preparing a list of these delinquents for publication in the near future and this will be for two reasons; first, a regular notice as is required by law and second, in order that the people of this community may know who is to blame for the schools not being able to pay its teachers at this time. "You will note from the report that the school owes the teachers one-half month's salary on last term and they have no money in the treasury at this time to pay them for the first month of this term, yet, this community is asking them to come here and pay their own board and other living expenses and teach the children of this community while many of the parents of these children make no provision whatever for paying their taxes and seem to think schools just run regardless of whether there is any money to run them with. "This office has repeatedly sent notices to the people who are delinquent but they do not respond with much interest and it looks as though unless these people will begin to take more interest in the financing of their school that the public school system of this community is bound to break down. Teachers are certainly not going to stay here and work indefinitely without pay."

Advertising Firm To Test Utah's Tobacco Law

By United Press.
SALT LAKE CNTY, Utah.—Utah's law forbidding tobacco advertisements on billboards, or in street cars, will be tested in the United States Supreme Court. Denied a rehearing after losing in the State Supreme Court, the Packer Corporation, outdoor advertising company, announced its decision to carry the case to the highest court in the land. The law was passed in 1929. Desiring to test it, the Packer Corporation continued advertising on billboards and in street cars. A complaint was filed and the case was tried in a district court. It won in the lower court, but lost the appeal. WAXAHACHIE—City will build large resort at hot mineral wells.

Depression Halts Coin Tossers of Niagara River

By United Press.
NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.—Tourists aren't throwing their money into Niagara river this year.

And, according to Tracey G. Levee, superintendent of the reservation police, the chief reason is the depression.

For years past a depression in a rock above the American Falls, off the north shore of Luna Island, has attracted the coins of visitors. Tourists found it amusing to try to toss pennies, quarters and half-dollars into the hole in the rock, over which a swift current passes. It required some skill to make the coins land in the hole.

In other years, as the season wore on, the depression collected quite a respectable amount of Uncle Sam's currency. When the "pot" looked tempting enough, some daring youth braved the rapids and scooped in the money. This year, however, the contributions to the rock have been almost negligible, and the reservation guards make it a regular duty to sweep off the rock with a long-handled broom.

"The coins are fewer, but times are harder," one guard explained, "and some people would risk their necks now for a dollar."

Woman Runs Two Homes; Husbands Are Unsuspecting

By United Press.
WORCESTER, Mass.—For more than two months, Mrs. Elsie Lavigne, 49, managed two homes without arousing the suspicions of either of her "husbands."

After 20 years as the wife of Henry Lavigne, the woman, mother of a 19-year-old daughter, secretly married James L. Tully, cable repairman, last June.

She then told her two mates that she was taking up practical nursing, and thus was able to divide her time between her two homes.

One day her real husband lost his job as a carpenter and, for the first time, became curious over his wife's work as a nurse. His investigation revealed Mrs. Lavigne's double life and resulted in her arrest on a bigamy charge.

This Fellow Really Was Waiting For a Trolley Car

By United Press.
BUFFALO, N. Y.—"I'm not kidding you," 12 policemen were told when they doubted a young man's explanation that he was waiting for a trolley car, at 3 a. m. The policemen, answering a burglar alarm, had found the young man crawling on his hands and knees over the cellar grating of a store.

"Honest, I'm not kidding you," the young man pleaded. "I dropped my car fare down the grating, and I haven't any more money. I'm only waiting for a trolley car."

The policemen helped the young man find his car fare, and sent him home.

Pageant Lauds Wielder of Ax

By United Press.
SOMERSET, Pa.—"Tony Beaver," mythical character, known and loved by lumbermen wherever an ax is chipped into a tree, was created in actual life here by the combined efforts of a pageant writer and an actor.

In a natural amphitheater, the prodigious "Tony" himself, his character and that of the equally extraordinary "Johnny Inkslinger," were portrayed for the Allegheny Hableland association music festival held here Sept. 5 and 6.

An audience from eight counties in West Virginia and Pennsylvania—comprising the plateau famed for maple sugar and syrup, potatoes, buckwheat cakes and blackberry jam—applauded the feats of the timberman's traditional hero.

It was "Tony Beaver" who logged the Tableland and "Johnny Inkslinger" who figured it took "Tony" seven years, four months, two weeks, five days, 17 hours, four minutes, and 46 1/2 seconds to take a log of the Tableland, following, as he did, "the sippin' and slidin' of Eel river as she traveled all over the plateau country."

"Nobody but Tony Beaver could 'a' done it," the tradition continues, "an' even he couldn't 'a' done it if it hadn't been for Babe, the blue ox, who wuz born the year of the blue snow and measured 47 ax handles and a plug o' tobacco between the horns."

"Johnny Inkslinger," the time-keeper of bunkhouse tales, is the lad who saved 229 barrels of ink the year of the ink shortage by remembering not to cross his t's and dot his i's.

GUILTY LIPS by LAURA LOU BROOKMAN Author of "MAD MARRIAGE" ©1931 BY NEA SERVICE INC

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Pretty Norma Kent, 20-year-old secretary, marries Mark Travers, son of F. M. Travers, millionaire real estate dealer, in spite of the father's threats to disinherit Mark.
The story opens in Marlboro, middle western metropolis. Mark tells his expensive roadster to get money for the honeymoon and he and Norma go to fashionable Blue Springs. After two weeks their money is gone, partly due to Mark's gambling. With $500, borrowed, the couple return to Marlboro. Mark sets out on a round of tasks seeking instead of hunting work. When their funds dwindle again he and Norma move to a cheap apartment.
Mark gets one job and loses it. Then he becomes a floorwalker in Blossomdale's department store. In spite of poverty the young couple are happy. After a few weeks Mark's father sends for him, offers to take him back into his business organization if Mark will prove he can make good. His first task involves a business trip to France. She begs him not to go but in spite of her protests Mark departs.
Norma, treated rudely at her father-in-law's home, slips away leaving no trace of her whereabouts. She takes a room in a cheap lodging house. Chris Saunders, her former roommate, helps Norma find a job as secretary for Frederick Stuart, literary agent. Travers receives a report from detectives who say they have "found the girl."
NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXXIII
Working for Frederick J. Stuart was not at all like working in Brooks, Welliver and Brooks' law office. Norma found her new tasks easier. The letters were never complicated and there were no difficult, unfamiliar words to spell. Stuart dictated at rapid-fire speed but Norma could transcribe her notes leisurely. This was fortunate because her short-hand was more accurate than her typing. Occasionally her employer asked her to read a manuscript and tell him what she thought of it. This was fun, though Norma never had any means of knowing what he thought of anything. He said little and spoke only of anything but business and seemed an indefatigable worker.
All sorts of people came to the office - old men, eager-faced young women, housewives, a youth in a purple overcoat who announced himself as a poet, prosperous-looking individuals and others who seemed impoverished, a playwright whose dramas were unusually successful and whom Stuart told Norma was perpetually bitter because the world would not recognize him as a novelist.
In spite of herself during the first week Norma was interested. She liked to speculate about these curious people, which ones had manuscripts that would sell, which were slaves of the pitiful illusion of talent.
A good part of the time she had to herself. Stuart was out of the office some times for entire half days. Then all she had to do was receive visitors and take messages.
Each morning when she awoke Norma was grateful for the work which somehow would fill the hours until evening. Her days became exact replicas of one another. She arose at 7:30, dressed, righted her room and boarded a downtown car. She breakfasted at a cafeteria across the street from the office, arrived there at nine or a little earlier and sorted the morning mail. Her lunch hour was from 12:30 until 12:50. She worked until five, dined at an expensive restaurant and rode back to the rooming house on the street car.
Occasionally she spent an evening with Chris. Twice Dorothy put all three of them out to a motion picture theater. Norma knew she was not good company for the others and preferred to be alone. She could think of Mark when she was alone, plan for the glorious time when he would be back again. In memory she relived some funny incidents she and Mark had known together. She would estimate the difference in Marlboro time and that in France and try to imagine what Mark might be doing at particular hours. While she was eating breakfast it was well into afternoon wherever he might be. When she left the office at five it was late evening for Mark.
She spent hours composing carefully worded letters which she mailed to his Birmingham address. Scrupulously in these letters she avoided mention of how she was spending the time. She said nothing about Mark's parents, yet gave no hint that she was not with them. She wrote Mark that she missed him, that she was eager to hear all he had been doing, impatient for his return.
That letters for her had reached Mark's father's home she never for a moment doubted. It was harder for her because she could not receive those letters and yet she had brought this herself. Because it took so long for a message to cross the ocean she did not think Mark would consider her own letters strange or be surprised if he asked questions that were not answered. Everything would be explained when he came back.
There was one real joy to look forward to each day. Norma saved it until the last moment before she got into bed. Then she took the fountain pen that had been crossed off that day on the calendar. The row of inky crosses grew impressively.
Norma discovered that, whereas she had thought of crosses as burdens the first day she looked at that calendar, the black marks less you're waiting for a check! It'll pass before you know it." The girl smiled. "Remember," she said, "when he does come you are going to be our first dinner guest."

MIKO, THE HUMAN BEAST

"That's a promise. I won't forget."
They had reached the car stop and a street car was heading toward them. Norma turned. "I'm glad to have seen you, Bob," she said. "Hope you have a fine Christmas."
"Thanks." Farrell looked at though there were something more he wanted to say but the car was almost there. Another minute and it had stopped with a noisy clang. Norma's "Goodbye" came to him over the heads of half a dozen men and women.
She forgot about the meeting almost instantly. Norma was tired. Another day gone; another cross on the calendar. She was too weary to smile at the agreeable thought.
The red-haired girl at the desk in the Cromwell Detective Agency headquarters glanced up. "You back?" she asked. "The man who had just entered."
He wore a plaid overcoat. His black hat was at an angle on the back of his head. "The boss in?" he demanded, ignoring the question.
An affirmative nod was the answer. In three strides the newcomer had almost reached the door marked, "Stanley E. Cromwell, Private."
"Say! You can't go in there!" the girl's voice stopped him.
"Well, why not?" he asked. "I've got a client. Said he didn't want to be disturbed."
"Listen, Mary, this is hot! I've got to see the boss. Right away! Tell him I'm here, will ya?"
The girl touched a button, spoke into the telephone receiver. "Mr. McHugh's here, Mr. Cromwell. He wants to see you about something he says is important."
There was a pause. She looked up at the man in the overcoat, nodded as she put down the instrument. "He'll see you in J. C.'s office."
The man called McHugh disappeared. A moment later a square-cut, heavily built man emerged from the private office and entered another beside it.
"Well," he said briskly as he shut the door, "what's it about?"
McHugh spoke excitedly. "Listen, boss, it's that Travers case. I've got everything! The whole works."
"What do you mean, everything?"
McHugh stuffed one hand into a vest pocket, pulled out a folded document. "You said the old man wanted evidence for a divorce, didn't you? Well, I've got it! Enough for any court in the world. Here's her police record!"
He flung down the document. Top-most was a photograph, unflattering but unmistakable. It was a picture of Norma Travers.
