Agricultural Exhibits Make a Definite Appeal At State Fair

From FARM AND RANCH
 Every person who desired to be informed in crop production found the agricultural exhibits absorbingly interesting and definite in their appeal. They covered the whole field of agricultural crops and expressed genuine human interest with which agriculture abounds. The thousands who saw these exhibits esteemed 55 counties that displayed the products of their soils and the ability and skill manifested in their production. Every exhibit was a distinct contribution to quality and completeness, giving a picture of agricultural advancement throughout the length and breadth of Texas. To every county, credit is due both for arrangement and quality of products exhibited.

Grand Jury Reports

In adjoining counties. We have had evidence which shows to our minds that many business transactions have been done, which, while some may not be violations of the criminal laws, nevertheless are wrong in principle and obviously are not conducive to good banking, and protection of its depositors. We find in our investigation into the affairs of the First State bank of Carbon, which closed its doors a year ago, that its bank apparently was in a failing condition long prior to its closing and the knowledge of such fact was had by the banking department and some steps made at the time to get certain bad notes liquidated or put in a solvent condition, but it seems that nothing further was done about it. These bad notes aggregated approximately 90 per cent of the total capital stock, and we have been unable to get any explanation with reference to this, but the bank remained open some nine months after such discovery by the banking commissioner. We report the matters in the hopes that this is a parent indifferent and careless attitude may be brought to the attention of those responsible, and recommend that our state banking department, and especially the commissioner, exercise more care and vigilance in supervising the affairs of the state banks than seems to have been done here; that close examinations be made, and that bad paper be cleared out and absolute balances be demanded daily from one examination to another, as we believe the law contemplates.

We have visited the jail and found it in very good condition. Prisoners say they are being well fed and taken care of.

We wish to thank the county attorney, Joe H. Jones, and his able assistants, Wilbourne Collier and Grady Owen, for their efficient assistance and counsel during our term. They have saved this body considerable time and worry by having cases worked up and instruments prepared. We also thank the sheriff, Virge Foster, and his deputies, for their assistance and co-operation.

Respectfully submitted,
M. G. JOYCE, Foreman.

SHEPPARD TO OFFER THREE LIQUOR LAWS

By TOM MAHONEY, United Press Staff Correspondent, WASHINGTON, Oct. 31.

Senator Morris Sheppard of Texas will reintroduce in congress three bills aiming to place additional teeth in the prohibition law. Because of the length of the session, he believes the measures will be passed.

The bills to be sponsored by the author of the eighteenth amendment will punish the purchaser as well as the seller of liquor, will prohibit the making of liquor at home and will make its possession there unlawful. The second will make the use of the wine bricks illegal.

"Wine grapes, however, and not wine bricks are the problem," said Senator Sheppard. "The bricks are new and get a lot of publicity but they are only an eightieth of the amount involved."

His bill on this point will eliminate section 29, title 2, of the national prohibition act of 1919. This new reads: "The penalties provided in this act against the manufacture of liquor without a permit shall not apply to a person for manufacturing cider and fruit juices exclusively for use in his home, but such cider and fruit juices shall not be sold or delivered except to persons having permits to manufacture vinegar."

From section 33, Sheppard would strike out the following: "But it shall not be unlawful to possess liquors in one's private dwelling while the same is occupied and used by him as his dwelling only and such liquor need not be reported, provided such liquors are for use only for the personal consumption of the owner thereof and his family residing in such dwelling and his bona fide guests."

Senator Sheppard will make a trip to Texas before returning here for congress in December. He will visit his home at Texarkana and make the principal speech at the dedication Nov. 22 in San Antonio of the William Alexander Fraser chapel and his secretary, a Woodman of the World project, Senator Sheppard is treasurer of the organization.

PEEPING THRU THE KNOTHOLE

With BILL MAYES

So many people have offered suggestions about things to write in the "Peeping Thru the Knothole" column—things that do not pertain to sports—that we have almost been forced to discontinue our sport talk today and take up a few matters that need attending to over the city and the county. We do not intend to chronicle these requests in the order of their importance but will put them down as they come to mind.

In the first place "Andy" Anderson has delegated us as a committee of one to find out from Gipping Gus what became of the "Spirit of Mingus," the more or less disreputable wreck he drove around the streets of Ranger about the time a young man by the name of Lindbergh, or something of the kind, was chaffing an airplane by the name of "Spirit of St. Louis" over to Paris or some of those foreign cities.

The last time we saw the Griper he was hot-footing it down the street on the south side of the square in Eastland like he had a couple of bum dogs, so we believe the bus must have been donated to the Smithsonian Institute or Uncle Jake's Junk Yard. Anyway, the next time we get into communication with Gus we will make a report.

So many fans have asked us to put on a campaign to have the officials of the Ranger schools, or whoever it is who selects officials for football games, to secure the services of one J. Monroe "Bud" Sweeney for the refereeing job in the Ranger-Cisco game that it must be of some importance. Not having witnessed a tussle worked by the said Mr. Sweeney we know nothing about him other than that he is said to be the fairest and squarest official who could be obtained.

Mr. Sweeney, it seems, knows whereof he speaks and he speaks plainly and without hesitation when he is working a game and his decisions stand, regardless of the squawks. He is reputed to be one official who will give both teams a square deal and will make decisions as he sees them regardless of who is to blame. Ranger could stand a referee like that and could have used one in Abilene.

The next suggestion that comes to mind is that we give due praise, thanks and other expressions of appreciation for J. C. Patterson, county agent; Miss Ruth Ramey, home demonstration agent; E. H. Varnell, Ben Whitehouse and one Mr. Lloyd, initials unknown, vocational agricultural teachers, for the splendid work done in preparing the Eastland county exhibit at the State fair at Dallas.

The exhibit is now on display in the Boyd Motor company building in Ranger and will later be displayed in Eastland, Cisco and Rising Star and possibly Gorman.

Twenty-three crops were represented in the exhibit and three were classed as major crops, namely peanuts, pinto beans and milk. A perfect score was made on the peanuts and beans while the milk was docked five points.

The display was similar to the one which won second place two years ago except that it had a similar and neatness that was impossible with the large amount of produce that was featured in the former exhibit.

The Breckenridge Chamber of Commerce has unanimously passed a resolution of congratulations for the showing made by the Eastland county exhibit.

Still another suggestion is that we give a resume of the work done by the Child Welfare association of Ranger and a history of this organization.

This problem has been satisfactorily handled for us by H. C. Anderson, whose article along these lines may be found in another portion of this paper if Andy does not cross us up and fail to write it. If he does, we will print it tomorrow.

D. W. "Buz" Johnson is all burred up over a stunt the Carl Barnes Post of the American Legion is to pull off the latter part of the week, but he has sworn to secrecy until the time comes for giving it a little publicity. His first intention was to pull off his little affair on Wednesday but decided to put it off for a few days in order to work out a few more details. We will have more to say about this when the time is right or the moon changes or whatever it is "Buz" is waiting for.

Today being Sunday we have been asked to call attention to the fact that all the pastors in Ranger are preaching sermons today and are extending invitations to all to be present. At the same time you will be given a short but interesting announcement of the Child Welfare drive that starts on Monday.

The only other suggestion left now is that we remind the clients of this column that the hale and hearty lads will rascle and box at the Elks club building tomorrow night. An admission charge is to be affixed to the back breaking contest but the followers of the cauliflower ear may be witnessed in action at a nominal cost of nothing at all. The proceeds, if any, will be donated to charity in this immediate neck of the woods. With that off our chest we can write about other things Monday.

DOG BITES FRIENDLY MAN

BY GUS L. COLEMAN, Editor Eastland Telegram

While other cities in the state are conducting drives for charity funds with a large measure of success, no concerted action seems to be contemplated by citizens of Eastland. At least, I haven't noticed any interest in it.

Eastland can't afford to take a "don't care" attitude about its unemployed. If some organization doesn't sponsor a drive for old clothes, somebody is likely to suffer when the weather gets wintry. If someone doesn't arrange for a few groceries to distribute where needed, there may be some hungry folks around here and they won't all be printers and newspaper folks. Some sort of a clearing house for getting idle men and odd jobs together for the benefit of both would work to the advantage of all parties concerned.

As Dr. Tanner says, "It's time to take off the mourning." It's time to do a lot of things. It's time we tried to get along without so much worry about money. Time we learned to do a little trading around with the thought of trading something we have for something we need, agree with the other fellow on a fair trade and make the swap. If we do something like that we put surplus manufactured goods and surplus foods into use, thereby increasing consumption and in turn making possible more labor. Therein lies the solution to the current depression, even if it does come from a guy who's not supposed to be an optimist. What have you to trade? I'll swap with you.

Something unusual in banking took place this week when the owner of a private bank in Austin notified all its depositors that it would not receive deposits in the future and requesting depositors to come and get their money because the banker wanted to close his bank and devote his time to something else. The bank has more than $100,000 on deposit and was patronized by students and teachers at the university. The depositors will reluctantly withdraw their money and get their money back. The man continue operating his bank. Such an announcement is so seldom made by a bank that it makes the depositor rather indifferent toward removing his account.

The grand jury didn't see fit to return indictments against certain persons under investigation. After looking over the evidence it was apparent to that body that the state could not convict the parties on such evidence as was presented. A grand jury is not a jury of opinion rather than criticized when it weighs evidence thus and does not return indictments promiscuously. The state is thereby saved considerable money on wasted prosecutions. The prosecuting attorney's money is saved as is the work of court dockets, and more easily kept cleared and justice is thereby speeded.

DRILLING WILL CONTINUE

AUSTIN, Oct. 31.—The Texas Railroad commission will continue to issue permits for drilling oil wells in East Texas as long as the applications are received in proper form and permits are due, Commissioner Lon Smith said today.

Reports that the field was to be shut down has not been circulated. Smith said the commission will continue to issue orders on all phases of operation except the amount of production.

Twenty-four-hour service will be provided at the air-weather station operated by the federal government at Abilene on the airways line.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER, SEA Service Writer

WASHINGTON—There has been plenty of amusement here lately for those whose taste for comedy is best satisfied when a distinguished dignitary sits on his plug hat or shows a busted zipper dragging on the floor.

So many people have gotten themselves all mixed up on public occasions in so short a space of time that one is almost driven to the conclusion that such a program was carefully planned.

Perhaps the situation caused by Senator Borah's interview with the French correspondents was not so funny because it threatened to spoil the Hoover-Laval conferences. But it seems to merit a Nobel prize for absurdity. First Borah was overlooked in the invitations to the White House dinner for Laval and only received a last-minute bid after newspapermen had seen the list and asked what he heck? When Borah spilled the beans by demanding revision of France's dearly beloved Versailles treaty, frantic French correspondents dashed to the White House to tip off Laval and Laval broke off conferring with Hoover to issue a rebuke to the chairman of our Senate Foreign Relations Committee. French correspondents rabled Paris that Americans were anti-French and suggesting that Hoover had put Borah up to the interview. The incident left every one sore—Laval, Hoover, the correspondents and Borah himself.

President Hoover's dignity stood the strain of the French premier's visit, but he had just been through a series of embarrassing moments himself. At Yorktown the wind blew his speech away and one sheet was lost so that he had to omit that part. At Annapolis his party sped by the mayor and an official welcoming committee waiting to greet them at the city line—for a reason rather difficult to convey in print.

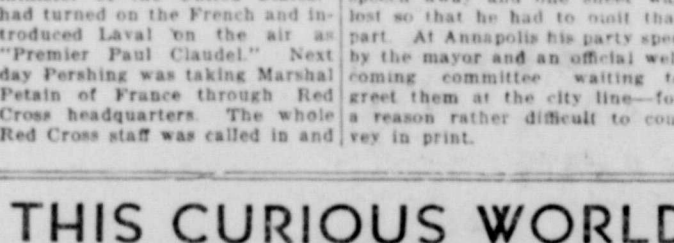

SOCIAL complications always cause more trouble and fuss here than anything else, however. It was Miss Josette Laval's desire to see the Princeton-Navv football game which stirred Princeton, the Naval Academy, the Pennsylvania railroad and the White House into excited activity and kept State Department protocol experts up until 3:30 a. m. to decide if Josette couldn't go to the game without breaking all the rules of the capital's social racket.

Finally Miss Laval couldn't make the train and a great heap of preparation went for nothing. Miss Reine Claudel, her friend and hostess went on to the game by error and is supposed to have been talked to by her papa, the French ambassador, when she got home.

Christian Science, Its Influence On Health, Character

A lecture on Christian Science given under the auspices of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, Eastland, at the city hall auditorium, Tuesday evening, Oct. 27, Richard J. Davis, G. S., of Chicago, Ill., member of the board of trusteeship of the Mother Church, First Church of Christ, Scientist, Boston, Mass.

The subject of the lecture was "Christian Science, Its Influence on Health and Character." Mr. Davis said in part: "The world as a whole, or at least the civilized part of it, is becoming increasingly acquainted with the fact that the teachings of Christian Science are healing the physically sick. In the lifting up of the diseased and heavy-laden, the truth of its teaching is being widely demonstrated. But it is important to emphasize this fact: Christian Science is not merely a health-giver, a system of therapeutics which make men's bodies well and thereby enable them to go along the same old material way. The fundamental purpose of Christian Science is the entire spiritual regeneration of human consciousness. It shows that there is an inseparable connection between physical healing and the regeneration of character; the two are absolutely joined.

Character Building Human beings seem to be a mixture of both good and evil qualities which they are said to have inherited either by heredity or environment. They are possessed of dispositions, either good or bad, according to the character of the predominant influences which drive home the fact that man's true being is mental, it is the realm of thought that correction must take place. This realization that all is not well within, that there is something to be remedied, requires a certain course of willingness to look what is to be one's character square in the face and enter upon an earnest, prayerful process of self-improvement. Mrs. Eddy expresses in a very remarkable way in "Science and Health" (p. 462): "Any man who conceals his faults from himself is mental self-knowledge. It consists in the dissection of faults to discover their quality, quantity, and origin. Are thoughts of sin or human? That is the important question. This branch of study is indispensable to the extent of error."

If you were going to build or rebuild a house, what kind of materials would you select for its construction? Would you not provide strong, firm foundation? Would you not demand that your timber of the best quality and able to stand the strain? And your bricks that kind of bricks would you select? Clean, firm, well-made ones, broken or crumbling bricks would do. And so, my friends, we in Christian Science have to rebuild our human character with spiritual qualities. We consciously select the best thoughts (character-bricks, if you will), to replace those that break down and will not stand the storm. What are some spiritual character-bricks which we, by reflection, incorporate in our spiritual nature? Love, joy, humility, purity, moral courage, and there are many others, and so with these may we rear that "house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

In Christian Science, it is important, in character building, not to look with longing and regret at the old bricks which are being cast aside, but rather to look with anticipation and joy at the new. When one gives up some erroneous thought, it is because one has found something better to put in its place. But if we look about us, how far most human beings are from that ideal of people who are the sons of God! Pursuit of material pleasure seems to consume a large part of their thinking. Many people believe that if they have a lot of money, houses, clothes, and automobiles, then they will be happy, that their cup will be filled to the brim, that then they will be satisfied and contented. But is this so? Will they be satisfied? Does materiality bring peace of mind? Not at all. Many of us know that some of the most refined and miserable people on earth are among those who are called the world calls rich. What is the trouble? What they still lack is the one needful thing—a knowledge of God.

Character and Healing Yes, I am sure my thinking could be improved and my character made much better than it is; but what has that to do with my body? I am not in good health and what I need is physical healing. Now there is a definite relationship between our thoughts and what seem to be our bodies. A man may say, "But my stomach is upset and out of order." Not at all. Your material stomach is not intelligent. It does not think. It does not know anything about the situation. "You have not to think for it. It is some kind of thought that is disordered and mirrored forth on the body. Therefore it is disordered thought that must be corrected.

It is also important for those who would be healed in Christian Science that an attitude be turned away from continuous contemplation of the material body and material symptoms and from the idea that physical healing is the one thing to be desired. What the world needs—what we all need—is spiritual regeneration, a complete change in our thinking and attitude toward life, even if it takes some time to accomplish it. But be assured that just as certainly as consciousness embodies thoughts of love, tenderness, forgiveness and generosity, and eliminates fear, hate, dishonesty, and resentment, the human body will reflect the good thought that is governing it.

When Christian Science declares that disease is unreal, some people are a little angry and resentful and not a little angry; and that, certainly, will not help the healing. Let me ask you in all seriousness, Do you want to be told that you have a real disease, that you are suffering and may shortly die? Do you want disease made real to you, fastened upon you? Why do you go to a doctor? To have disease removed, made unreal, and destroyed.

Christian Science declares that disease is unreal and bases its declaration on the scientific knowledge that an antidote can have no place in an infinitely good God and a perfect creation. It asks you to turn away from sense testimony and physical symptoms to that which you can spiritually perceive. To throw the weight of your thinking into the scale of "The Lord God omnipotent reigneth," and governs man and the universe in perfect harmony. Do you not believe that this is a healthier state of thinking than to keep thought riveted on disease or a so-called problem?

And that word "problem." People have too many problems. The very word itself may become an obstacle in healing because it builds up in thought the notion that one has many difficult things to face. And if we think of a situation as difficult, at once we have the fear that it may not be solved; thought becomes heavy and anxious in contemplation of it and we are disarmed in our struggle. At such a time, Christian Science shows us how we may avoid ourselves of one of God's most glorious characteristics—the quality of joy. If joy is one of the attributes of divine Mind, then, by reflection, it is an inherent quality in man's true character. If joy is present in thought, you have a quality that makes for healing in any situation.

Human Will In the last 15 or 20 years, various systems and books have appeared purporting to develop man's hidden powers, to give him personality and the ability to control or dominate situations in which he might happen to be interested. But Christian Science has nothing in common with any teaching emphasizing the development of the human will. No more forceful character ever lived than Jesus the Christ; no one ever made a more indelible impression on the life and thinking of the human race, and yet he said, "I came... not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me." And at another time, "Not my will, but thine, be done." Could anyone conceive of the Master teaching men and women how to develop their

Gems of Peril by HAZEL ROSS HAILEY

BEGIN HERE TODAY Rich old Mrs. Jupiter is robbed and murdered during the engagement party she gives for her secretary, Mary Harkness. Mary's scapegrace brother, Eddie, was to have been admitted at the murder hour. No one knows this but Mary. She tells her fiancé, Dirk Ruyther, who hunts Eddie. He arranges a rendezvous with the boy but oversleeps. Bowen of the Star drives Mary there instead. Eddie is run down and killed as he crosses the street to meet Mary. Inspector Kane drops the case, believing Eddie the murderer. When Mary protests he tells her Mr. Jupiter and Dirk believe the same. Bowen tells Mary there is a race-track gambler called the Fly to whom her brother owed money. Bowen gives Mary a coat he found in the Jupiter house the night of the murder. It is her brother's. The Jupiter butler recognizes it as having been worn by a "gate-crasher" he ejected the night of the murder. Dirk forbids Mary to go on with the investigation because of the notoriety. Cornelia Tabor, Dirk's former sweetheart, behaves cattily at dinner at the Ruyther home. She is still determined to win Dirk.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVI Dirk drove the car out beyond the limit of the rutty cliff road into the small meadow which crowned the Point and turned off the engine. With a second turn of the wrist he turned off the lights. Then he turned and drew her to him, swiftly, surely, and with an air of complete possession. Surprise mingled with the ardor with which she returned his long kiss. Presently she asked curiously, "What did you want to talk about?" "This," he said, and she heard him chuckle. "What?" "And something else. Listen. How soon can you get ready to be married?" "This was surprise. "Why, I haven't bought anything yet," she stammered, "but there's lots of time, isn't there?" A month, surely. It was 66 days the last time I counted, but lately I haven't kept track. "I mean, how long would it take you to pack?" "Dirk?" "You could pack a toothbrush, couldn't you? And we could buy things here and there as we went along? There are lots of nice little shops for women's gawgaws in Bermuda—or would you rather go to Europe?" "We could make it—if we didn't stay too long." "But what's the hurry?" Mary's heart was hammering happily before the look in his eyes. "Let's get married tomorrow. I don't know why we waited this long, if it comes to that." "Well, aren't you the impetuous lover?" Mary quavered, trying to keep a light tone. "Why this, all of a sudden?" Dirk moved impatiently. "Oh, people have hacked at us long enough, and any more, I'm going to Europe." "If they spoil things for us. Look at tonight." Reviewing the miserable evening she had just spent, Mary thought there might be something in what he said. He seized her hands and gripped them tightly. "If we've got to quarrel, let it come after. I don't want it to spoil the beginning for us. Do you?" "No, oh, no." "Well, that's that, then. How's Saturday?" "That gives you time to shop," Mary nodded. It was a long time before they felt the need of words. "That's what I've been wanting to tell you all evening," Mary whispered, presently. "That we needn't hurry any more. I won't go to newspaperman again, if you don't want me to." Dirk felt magnanimous, too, apparently, for he laughed indulgently and kissed her. "I guess Mrs. Dirk Ruyther can be trusted to do the right thing," he said.

ed, "everything might have been all right. So you see, I've got my share to think on, same as you have." "This humilty was so new to the old man's manner that Mary could hardly credit her senses. It made it easier for her to know that he blamed himself, too. "Well—forgive and forget. That is all we can do." "Oh, I can forgive," Mary assured him earnestly, "but I can't forget—not till I've found out the truth." "Well, bless you, child, I won't stop you. Go ahead. But if you run afoul of Emily Ann Ruyther, don't say I didn't warn you." Mary laughed and snapped her fingers. "Oh, that for Emily Ann! Dirk's all that matters, and he's going to help me—let me go last night." At the recollection of what else he had told her last night, her eyes were stary and her lips smiled irrespressibly. "Everything all right between you, eh?" Mr. Jupiter was an excellent observer, and he saw his answer written in her face. "That's good." Stabbing her grapefruit thoughtfully, Mary wondered whether she ought to tell him of her plans. In a way, it was like "giving notice"—but then she wasn't employed here any more, really. At least, her only duties seemed to be playing cribbage and writing a few notes saying that Mr. Jupiter was sorry but he would be unable to attend, etc. Her salary was still paid regularly every week. Mr. Jupiter had insisted on that, since she was staying on merely to please him. But somehow she had a feeling that it might be bad luck to speak of it to a third person, just yet. The idea that she was to be married Saturday—tomorrow—was so new, so thrillingly imminent, that she was not inclined to let her heart be captured out of her room, for all the grief she had known here. "I suppose you haven't heard any more from Mr. Bruce?" she asked.

The old man's face clouded. Mary instantly regretting what she had brought up the subject. He put down his spoon, apparently abandoning his breakfast. "Not—line," he said slowly, lapsing into the weak, hoarse voice he had used ever since his wife's death. It was strange how quickly he seemed to change personality lately. When his mind was taken off his troubles he seemed vigorous, stalwart, every inch the forceful man of business. Whenever he thought of his dead wife or his lost son, he seemed to shrivel with age. His very voice became weak and querulous, and he had the look of a dying man. Mary thought, "I wonder if I ought to talk to Dr. Jordan about him before I go away." Responsibility tugged at the wings of her happiness. She must go—she had given Dirk her word. Some one could be found to take her place and keep him amused until Bruce came. That was another strange thing. What on earth could be keeping Bruce? She considered among her thoughts, as she sat there, stressing his father's ill health. But if his mother's death did not bring him, could anything else be expected to? Once more she dismissed the matter as something that did not concern her, and turned her thoughts to her own affairs.

She ought to go about her shopping at once, if she expected to finish today. She had a few hundred dollars in the bank—it would be enough. Time was the important thing. Mr. Jupiter was still staring at the tablecloth, fingering it absently, nursing his face too terrible and stern to bear. "What would you like to do this morning?" Mary heard herself asking faintly, and could have boxed her own ears. There might be fittings at seven, she couldn't nearly accomplish all she must if she waited until this afternoon. "Eh?" The old man came out of the brown study that enveloped

Almost instantly, it seemed, "a starched and stauque maid appeared with an envelope which she handed to Mary on a tray. (Beside her had been released to pursue the sort of histrionic career for which she seemed to think herself fitted.)

"Mary fumbled it open with one hand while holding fast to the receiver with the other. When she finally held up the crisp bit of paper it contained and saw the figure—$1000—and the signature, J. J. Jupiter, still wet in the corner, her joyful exclamation reached clearly the young man murmuring fatuous nothings into the telephone many miles away.

"Never mind supporting me yet—I'm rich!" she caroled gleefully, and told Dirk of the check. "Well, that's fine!" he replied with perfunctory heartiness. Such munificence rather dashed his worldly pleasure in turning over his worldly goods to his bride-to-be. "What are you going to do with it?" "Thank it!" "You will not?" "You'll come?" "Buy clothes," she amended happily. "And then buy some more clothes. And then buy a few more clothes." "That's better. Lunch with me?" "Oh, I won't have time. We'd dawdle and I've so much to get." "Better come. I'll be working late at the office, putting things in shape so I can leave. I may not get out until quite late." "But you'll come?" "I'll come! Wait up for me!" "You know I will."

She was to regret that decision about lunch, as she sat sipping a lukewarm, too-sweet drink at a crowded fountain after a hectic morning's shopping. It would have been delightful to be lunching on a cool roof somewhere with Dirk opposite. Shopping, even with a $1000 check in your purse, was terrible. Her feet hurt, her head ached, and she felt as if her eyes would never quite focus again. And there was more to come. At five she hailed the first taxi she saw, piled it full of bundles and climbed in gratefully. "Long Island," she told the driver and sank back against the hard leather seat. She closed her eyes as the cab wormed its way crookedly toward Queensboro bridge. That state of complete relaxation spared her the brunt of what followed.

All she remembered afterward was hearing a yell and a curse, and feeling herself swerved and careened wildly to the sidewalk, striking a flight of stone steps. Then she must have fainted, for she knew no more.

120 Guests Are Entertained At Halloween Party Given By Mr. and Mrs. Lanier

The home of Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Lanier, Pine street, was a scene of gaiety throughout the hours of Thursday afternoon and evening, reflecting a colorful panorama of Halloween splendor when Mrs. Lanier and members of Child Study club No. 1 entertained in honor of members of club No. 2 during the afternoon hours.

The lovely decorations and appointments of the afternoon affair were repeated for the evening function, honoring the young people of the Church of Christ, Ross, Bryan, and Cosmos, with pointed pot plants, afforded a background of exquisite color.

Soft rays from floor and table lamps together with rosy hued bulbs in the chandeliers cast shadows over the floral setting. The dining table laid with a cloth of lace and centered with an ornate bowl held a massive cluster of daisies bowing in harmony with other golden toned yellow and vivid orange. Bits of black and green intermingled added more color.

Games quite in keeping were played. One of unusual interest was that of "What Would You Do If You Were In a Graveyard?" The winner of this game composed of questions relative to the occasion, was won by Miss Nedra Head.

Each party member was greeted at the door by a frankish witch who later proved to be the popular Miss Gladys Murray. Her costume was one of outlandish make-up.

Broomsticks, owls, goblins and jack-o-lanterns were effectively used about the entertaining room.

Mr. and Mrs. Lanier were assisted in entertaining this host of guests by Mrs. C. O. Bolin, Mrs. D. W. Nichol, Mrs. Jerry A. Lindsey and Mrs. F. A. Wagner.

EAGLES WIN FROM MAVS BY 21 TO 0 SCORE

Eastland's Mavericks put up a stiff and determined fight Saturday against their heavier opponents, the Abilene Eagles, only to lose by the score of 21 to 0. Although outweighted the Mavericks were not outplayed in defense though the offense was stronger as far as the Eagles were concerned.

Estes Burgamy was the main stem of offense, while C. Allison at center was the outstanding star on the defense. The way he got through the bulky and supposedly impassable mountainous line of the Elephants to stop line plays was worth the admission price to the game.

Mackall, T. A. Jones and R. Brown showed up well in the offensive play behind a line that performed miracles throughout the game.

Outweighed almost 15 pounds to the man, the line of the Mavericks held in a way that was surprising to see, stopping the famous "Sad Sam" Jones, plunging Abilene fullback, in his tracks time after time to hold his track yardage for the day to almost nothing.

One of the most sensational plays of the game came in the last quarter when Burgamy stood behind his own goal line and passed to Taylor for a 28-yard gain. Here the advance stopped, however, and the Eagles soon took over the ball carrying assignments written in their books by Coach Mayhew.

The first Abilene score came in the first quarter when Pool, side-stepping and jumping from one side of the line to the other, carried the ball for four yards and the first score. Gaines Davis, beefy Abilene guard, kicked the goal from placement.

Eastland's defense then tightened and Abilene was held helpless for the remainder of the first and the majority of the second quarters, when, near the last few minutes of the second quarter Sam Jones made one of his few gains of the day when he plunged over the line on his third attempt. Wyatt drop-kicked goal.

Cogdell, substitute halfback, accounted for the final score in the last period when he stepped nine yards to the goal line after two completed passes and considerable gaining by Wyatt placed the ball in scoring position.

Twice Abilene made bids for another score, the Maverick line stopping their opponents four straight times within the five-yard line. Allison, Maverick center, was largely responsible for the failure of the Elephants to score during these two attempts.

The Mavericks made no serious bid to score, though they were dangerous to the Eagles at all times and on several occasions had them worried, but they could not get far against the beef trust that blocked their progress.

Abilene accounted for 15 first downs to seven for the Mavericks, five of which were made in the last half, while Abilene made but five in the same period.

The Mavericks probably furnished the Eagles the toughest defense against which they have had to play this season to date and the wonderful showing made in this department was responsible for keeping the score as low as it was.

A Just Obligation---

When you secure a loan at a bank you give them your note to show that you are obligated to them for that amount, it is your contract to return the money borrowed on a certain date, and is only just and right that you pay your note on the due date. While in the past we have been able in some cases to make extensions in time on notes but now we are going to have to insist on payment. We do not doubt your honesty but our business demands a liquidation of all loans as they mature.

We as your co-operation in this matter.
