The sale of cotton goods in El Paso has been materially increased as a result of a recent campaign staged by a daily newspaper in the city.

DAN SULLIVAN OLD SETTLER OF THE STATE

Made Fortune of $100,000,000 As a Merchant and a Banker.

SAN ANTONIO, Nov. 30.—Dan Sullivan, known as the richest man in Texas, died at his unpretentious home today.

Sullivan, reputed to possess a fortune of $100,000,000, was said to have been one of the richest men in the United States. He was 88 years old.

The aged man operated a small private bank, D. Sullivan & Co. Sullivan operated a wholesale grocery at Indianola, an early-day Texas town, by a storm-blasted century ago. After the disaster he moved here and without publicity amassed the greatest fortune in the state.

His will leaves the bulk of his property to his son, Dan Jr., who had conducted the millionaire's affairs for several years. $100,000 in cash was left to his children.

Only twice in Sullivan's career was he in the limelight. One of these was his unsuccessful prosecution of employees on charges of stealing $2,000,000. The other was an attempt to kidnap his wife, after the disaster in 1925. This was frustrated by his cooperation with officers.

He refused repeatedly to make a national bank of his little institution, which became a landmark standing directly across the street from the largest bank building in town. He was banker for many of the early-day cattlemen.

EASTLAND GAS SITUATION IS NOW DORMANT

The Eastland gas rate controversy is in a dormant stage as the week opens. The city has filed applications to Judge Wilson of the Federal court to set an early date for a hearing at which the city will attempt to have the injunction dissolved.

Since court is not in session at Abilene, it may be necessary to hold the hearing in some other city at the convenience of the judge. At least five days notice is necessary before the hearing can be held in order to give opposing parties time to get everything ready for trial.

No information has been given out by the gas company as to when it will start billing at the new rate schedule placed on file with the city commission last Tuesday.

Mansfield Bank Robbery Plot To Go To Grand Jury

FORT WORTH, Nov. 30.—When the Mansfield bank robbery plot case goes to the grand jury tomorrow, Roy Thornton will be the main witness against Schuyler Marshall Jr., ex-sheriff at Dallas; Herbert Scates, society man, and Bud Mace.

County officers said today that Thornton in a verbal statement had implicated all the men charged with robbery with firearms and kidnapping.

Assistant District Attorney Dawson Davis said Thornton and another witness, whom he declined to name, would be the chief witnesses. The former Dallas sheriff and Scates were in the Ellis commodity jail at Waxahatchie today, facing similar charges there, after making $20,000 bond here yesterday.

SHEPPARD PREDICTS A VICTORY

TEXARKANA, Texas, Nov. 30.—Were the presidential election held today the democrats would win practically every state in the union regardless of who the candidate might be, said Senator Morris Sheppard here today in an exclusive interview prior to his departure for Washington.

"The whole nation is sick and tired of republican misrule," Sheppard said. "The north is in as much of a revolt against the administration as the south. The Hoover administration has failed miserably in conducting even the ordinary business of the nation."

"The people of the United States are ready for a change. So determined are the people and so widespread the discontent that in my judgment if the election were held today the democratic candidate, regardless of who he might be, would carry practically every state in the union."

Utting that the south take advantage of the opportunity to name a southern man, Senator Sheppard suggested as possibilities Cordell Hull of Tennessee and Senator Joe Robinson of Arkansas.

WASHINGTON Merry-Go-Round

CONGRESS TO MEET INDEPENDENTS
HOOVER'S EDICTS

—BY DAVID WRIGHT—

Special Correspondent.

On the eve of the opening of the 72nd Congress, Death still holds the cards in the deal for the Speakership. The moving-down process has made deep inroads into the membership of the House since that midnight hour last spring when "Nick" Longworth dropped the gavel for the last time. Recollections of that night of fun-making will be worth both Republicans and Democrats who heard Speaker Longworth's farewell to the members and his comment that only Providence held the secret of what lay ahead.

As the lineup is now, "Jack" Garner of Texas will succeed his old friend. Garner has waited many years for this triumph, but for him the triumph will not be without a touch of sadness.

Garner will probably be the next Speaker, but even at this late day nobody can tell for a certainty. With so many aged men in the House the last week may bring changes to upset all calculations. The issue is in the lap of the gods.

Put it down for a certainty, though, that the Republicans first in line for the Speakership will not get it. Neither John Q. Tilson of Connecticut nor Herrington Smith of New York can win. It would be a forlorn effort for either of them to try. If the nominal party membership were evenly divided, Snell and Tilson would still be out of the running. The independent Republicans will block the way.

Two or three years the insurgents have adhered to the organization program of their party, but there are no signs on the horizon that they will do so this year. In other years they have had nothing to lose by sticking; rather, they have gained by protesting their commitment to the party.

Originated here three years ago by John L. McCarty, editor of the Dalhart Texas, the event has proved more popular each year.

The week is set aside for papers and readers of the paper to voice their opinion of the editor, his policies, or of "Cactus, Sage and Loco," the Texas columnist.

No strings are tied to the offer, and a writer need not sign his name, so long as he confines his criticisms to the paper or its editors.

All letters received during this one week will be published in a special edition the following week.

"Lynched"—But Didn't Give a Hang!

Now, the camera doesn't lie. So it must be true that Signor Dino Grandi was lynched in New York the other night. Look at him, with his black shirt and sword, as he dangles from the end of a noose while mobs cheer the grisly spectacle. But wait—

STERLING WON'T CALL A SESSION

By United Press.

AUSTIN, Nov. 30.—Governor Ross Sterling will not call a special session of the legislature to repeal the cotton acreage reduction law he said today.

The governor indicated he believes enough other states will pass similar laws to make the movement effective. He pointed out that Oklahoma is having a referendum on the matter and said he certainly will not call a special session.

Such a session had been proposed by Representative Lawrence Westbrook of Waco, former farm cooperative official.

STIMSON Declines to Make Comment On Jap Statement

By United Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Secretary of State Stimson declined to take any public notice of a reported Japanese war office statement which said either he or Ambassador W. Cameron Forbes had distorted an assertion for Foreign Minister Shidehara.

The secretary observed that enough had been said on the Manchurian situation and banned the subject in his morning press conference today.

Good Cheer Fund Committee Meets

A committee to work out plans for the Christmas Good Cheer fund met in the offices of the Ranger Chamber of Commerce this morning at 11 o'clock to work out plans for the fund for this year.

Several suggestions were offered and it was finally decided to put on a drive which will last but one day. This campaign will be staged on Saturday, Dec. 19, according to present plans.

All churches and civic organizations are to be urged to get their list of needy families in early in order to help the committee in preparing the baskets.

Teachers Return From State Meeting

H. S. Van Roeder and Mrs. Van Roeder of Ranger and Mr. and Mrs. George Robinson of Colony, have returned from the State Teachers association convention in Amarillo.

Saturday Morris Leveille got a lot of ideas and passed it along to Chief George Murphy, and he came to enmeshed over it that he could talk about that tomorrow—that and those Christmas lights, both were worth talk about, though.

The plan was to induce merchants of Ranger to decorate their store windows with some of the Christmas merchandise so as to give the town a better-dressed appearance. This idea would help lots of the town considerably, some of the old carnival posters in the window and replaced with attractive merchandise.

Mr. Tanner of Eastland got the idea about the same time and mentioned the merchants that driving city to do the same thing about the same time. There is no idea of a contest in the window and it might be worked up where a little friendly rivalry could be gotten up to see which in would present the most pre-arranged appearance over the Christmas holidays.

And there is no real reason why ideas should be followed out after holidays were over, changing decorations and displays in the windows from time to time.

One thing noticeable about the letter is that they think so many requests for things for the kiddies. The child life might look into some of these where children are in need of clothing and give Santa a ring hand.

We didn't make it ourselves, but merely acted as the messengers. We read the directions while the wife made the cake which turned out to be the id of Joe that is squirted into one puff. And, not knowing a one got the stuff into cream the other was to make it.

We find no other use for it than to eat it to the cut. The eat lived it, too, he said we got the recipe in page 274 and it was on page 1.

Joe denied being sick after eating some of the cake, but he did blame and blame to his wife that gave him a handful of indigestion tablets when we served him cake. If he didn't take them it got our fault.

And, he complained about the our tobacco in the street. He explained that, too. The Citizens School Tax committee is taking credit for aiding the collection of some back taxes this season and expects to pay the others to pay up as soon as possible so that the schools of Ranger may be kept open for the full 10 months.

Since the organization of the committee some 13 taxpayers of city have gone to the office of a school tax collector and have arrangements to pay up their school taxes on the installment plan and more than that number who paid in full might have done any; but it is likely that we are paying on the installment plan to do so by the ability given out by the committee on the condition of the schools.

The committee is to meet again tomorrow at 11 o'clock and it is likely that some new movement will be sponsored to keep the good schools going. It is likely that a been done already to make the effort pay forth worth the increase in the revenue of the schools more than $250 a month the next few months, but that far about of the amount needed, we payed alone amounts to at least $6,000 and it has been considered considerably since last year, making a saving to the taxpayer of about $1,100 a month.

21 SHOPPING DAYS TILL CHRISTMAS

Fire Chief G. A. Murphy of Ranger today issued a warning to all people using coal and wood for heating purposes to see their chimneys and flues were in good order before building big fires in the stoves and fireplaces.

The last three fires to which the department has been called have resulted from defective flues where the fire escaped from the flue to the roof, setting it on fire. Chief Murphy called attention to the fact that very few flues in the city were properly built and many had been used in many years, making them dangerous.

Photos Cause Adjuster Much Anguish

By United Press.

VER, Colo.—Love without a photograph, if any, is bad enough. H. F. Hartman, in charge of the postal claim office at Denver, after many years of hearing complaints.

But when sweethearts exchange by mail newly framed pictures, all gloom and ready for the day, there ought to be a reward. There ought to be a reward for the man who caught him fairly in a heap of broken glass and torn photographs.

But when a man's picture is sent by mail, it is not the picture that is broken, it is the man's heart. The young man had waited a long time for that photograph. When he saw it, he was disappointed. "When he saw it, he was disappointed," said the adjuster. "I don't blame him for feeling the way he did, but I am not the postoffice department. I just work here."

The Newfangles (Mom 'n' Pop) By Cowan

Gems of Peril by HAZEL ROSS HAILEY

When the Hoover's Gave Thanks

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Mary Harkness plots to ensnare The Fly who "frames" her brother, Eddie, with the murder of old Mrs. Jupiter and ran him down to keep him from telling Mr. Jupiter's aid, as does Bowen of the Star. Everyone else believes Eddie guilty, including Dick Ruyther, Mary's fiancé. He forbids her to investigate further. His family objects to the notoriety.

Bruce Jupiter and a questionable friend, Countess Louise, try to rout Mary, believing she is a gold-digger trying to steal Bruce's inheritance. They follow The Fly to Miami. Bruce quarrels with Louise over a diamond bracelet given her by The Fly as security for a debt. She says it is Mary's. Bruce makes her give it to Mary, who discovers it was stolen from Mrs. Jupiter the night she was killed. The bracelet is locked up as evidence.

Wearing the famous Jupiter necklace, Mary dances with The Fly. She is accidentally left alone with him with the necklace in her handbag. Under the excuse of protesting it is her, she puts it in his pocket. They do an exhibition dance during which he kisses her. Dirk, who has come to Miami with the party of Cornelia Tabor, Mary's rival, knocks De Loma down.

Dirk twists his ankle and faints. Mary, helpful above her own, calls the taxi. She is on the way The Fly skips with the handbag in his pocket but a policeman brings him back and makes him return the handbag.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XII

"Look in your pocket—it must have fallen out!" Mary appealed to De Loma.

Had he had time to extract the necklace and hide it somewhere, before the policeman saw him? She held her breath. "What must have fallen out?"

"Why—the necklace!"

His eyebrows went up. "But you told me Mr. Bates had it!"

Mary colored, but her eyes never left his face. The detective moved closer.

"Come on," he said, roughly, "fork up, if you've got it."

Smiling venomously, De Loma drew his hand out of his pocket and handed her—the ruby necklace. Almost dizzy with relief, she dropped it into her handbag again. The gaping bellboy and the waiter she said off, and they moved away unwillingly—fascinated watchers of the scene.

"Say," snapped the hotel detective, "I've got a good mind to—"

De Loma moved away with a gasp. He held up his hand. The consummate insolence of the man was astounding.

"It was only a joke!" he insisted. "She is too careless with her jewels—I told her so. I merely wished to frighten her a bit, off her eye, that's all!" His patient ingratiating air as he made this preposterous explanation of his actions was very nearly convincing.

The detective looked uncertainly at Mary. "Say is this guy on the level or not? If you say so I'll clear him a little, but I gotta go to the hard ware store yet!"

"There, now, Miss Mary," he said brusquely. "Everything will be all right. We'll fix him up. You and the gentleman climb out now and I'll take care of the young sun."

Mary scrambled up the gangplank, De Loma on her heels. To reach the pier, she found the Captain Hendricks came puffing up, sure-footed as a mountain goat, with the injured man a senseless burden in his arms. Mary ran along the deck opening doors until she found a cabin that was not occupied. The captain deposited his burden on the low bed and, stripping off his coat, prepared to make an examination.

"How was he hurt?" he asked curiously, as he raised Dirk and sipped off his coat, unfastening his collar.

"I think it must be his leg, Captain. He fell—"

"Got me a knife."

Mary ran swiftly down the deck, and down the gangway to the galley. In the drawer she found a butcher knife and hurried back with it. De Loma was leaning on the rail. She hailed a steward and told him to take the man's order.

"I hardly needed a knife so large," Captain Hendricks smiled, but he accepted it, and quickly cut Dirk's shoe laces, split the opening larger. Dirk turned and moaned as the captain tugged at the shoe.

"Bad sprain there." He ripped off the sock and disclosed an ankle already swollen and purple. "He'll be all right in a few hours, plenty of rest and he'll be all right." He rang for a steward and ordered a bowl of hot water and towels.

"Hello, our patient is coming to," he said as Dirk stirred uneasily. "Hand me the decanter, please. And a glass."

With his arm under the younger man's shoulders he raised him to a sitting position and held the glass to his lips. Dirk opened his eyes slowly and took the offered drink. Full consciousness returned and he looked around the room. His eyes lighted as he reached Mary, and she started forward eagerly. Then he looked hardened as he remembered the events of the evening and he lay back on the bed.

"You run along, Miss Mary," Captain Hendricks urged. "We'll take care of your young man for you."

There was on the verge of consciousness, she stepped out on deck but she did not think about her own feet. There was a light, and Mr. Jupiter's door and the door was to the cabin in his possession, with a breathless gasp of the evening's fright, and Dirk's failure to show up. Once the cabin door was locked up in the ship's life, she felt better. "The Fly get them now, if he can't," she thought.

"I've brought him on board, and I think he means to stay," she told him. "But to tell the truth, I've been frightened of him... he's a devil..." She closed her eyes

The golden text was from Jeremiah 29:8, 9. "Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel: Let not your prophets and your diviners, that be in the midst of you, deceive you, neither hearken to your dreams which ye cause to be dreamed. For they prophesy falsely unto you in my name: I have not sent them, saith the Lord."

Included in the service was the following from the Bible: "They have healed also the hurt of the daughter of my people slightly, saying, Peace, peace; when there is no peace."—Jeremiah 6:14.

The lesson-sermon also embraced the following citation (p. 101) from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy:

"The author's own observations of the workings of animal magnetism convince her that it is not a remedial agent, and that its effects upon those who practice it, and upon their subjects who do not resist it, lead to mental and physical death."

A THREE DAYS COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified croceolite which is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, croceolite is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to croceolite, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the croceolite goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed effective in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

"I suppose I'm like most people who read the newspapers..."

"I DON'T read all the ads, any more than I read the whole of any newspaper or magazine. But I do read a good many of them.
 "Recently I've been reading more than usual, and I certainly like what Chesterfield has to say and the way it is said. I would probably like the cigarette, too, but somehow I just haven't got 'round to trying it.
 "Come to think of it, I can't tell you why I smoke this other cigarette. It's more from habit, I suppose, than for any real reason.
 "I'd never thought about it before, but last night, at a party, I noticed eight of my friends—five men and three girls—who had changed to Chesterfields. They told me that Chesterfields are milder, that they taste better, that they just seem to satisfy.
 "Of course, cigarettes are a small thing, but, after all, they give me a lot of pleasure, and a cigarette like Chesterfield that you hear such good things about, must be good. Anyway, I've just bought my first package of Chesterfields, and I believe I'll find them just like the ads say—milder—taste better—pure—satisfy."
