OLDER MAN KILLED ON EASTLAND ROAD

WITNESSES SAY MAN WAS HIT BY A TRUCK

Head of Accident Victim Nearly Severed From His Body.

T. L. Cooper, about 65, of Olden, was instantly killed this morning about one mile east of Eastland when he was struck by a truck.

Mr. Cooper was a resident of Olden, where he was reported to be the operator of a grist mill. It was thought that he had been to Eastland on business and was returning to Olden when the accident occurred.

Both legs had been severed at the thighs and an arm was crushed.

The information about this Olympic is very interesting. Players will bid and play the same hands in every city.

The contest is for pairs in which the bidding and play of 16 especially selected hands, which can be bid and played by the average player as well as the expert.

Collapse of Administration Seen By Miller

AUSTIN, Oct. 11.—Collapse of the Hoover administration was seen by Roy Miller, director of the democratic campaign in Texas in the totals shown in the third straw vote summary published in the Literary Digest.

"Two hundred and forty-four electoral votes for the democratic ticket to a party 55 for the republicans is more than was expected at this stage of the campaign by the most sanguine democrat," Mr. Miller said Friday.

Mexico's anti-clergy movement continues to grow, with Archbishop Pascual Diaz, above, under arrest and the legislature of Vera Cruz demanding expulsion of all priests and confiscation of all church property.

REED SCORES TALK MADE BY PRES. HOOVER

DES MOINES, Iowa, Oct. 11.—Iowa's corn belt was the forefront of the 1932 political battlefield today as voters considered the Friday Democratic counter attack, made by former Senator James A. Reed of President Hoover's initial campaign address here last week.

The vitriolic Missourian and old-time foe of the president labeled Mr. Hoover's declaration that the country at one time was nearly forced off the gold standard as "absolutely untrue."

Disgruntled agriculturalists, who staged a protest parade on the occasion of Mr. Hoover's visit, crowded the auditorium to cheer the senator. The meeting was advertised as "No tickets—no traps"

Son of President Of Montgomery Ward Found Asphyxiated

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—Sewell L. Avery, Jr., son of the president of Montgomery Ward and company, was overcome by gas today in the family apartment and died while an igniter squad was attempting to revive him.

Police Lieutenant John Gary announced the belief that young Avery had committed suicide while dependent.

REPORT MADE ON RED CROSS ACTIVITIES

A report from the Ranger Red Cross headquarters shows that a total of 2,899 sacks of flour weighing 24 1/2 pounds each have been received in nine shipments and 42-pound sacks received have numbered 365. A total of 460 families have been supplied flour from these shipments, which totalled 88,910 pounds of flour.

The latest shipment was received on Monday of this week and consisted of 550 of the smaller sacks of flour. This shipment is expected to be the last to be received in Eastland county unless another appropriation of wheat for this purpose is made by congress.

The dates on which the flour shipments were received in Ranger and the amount of flour in each shipment follow:

Table with 3 columns: Date, 24 1/2-lb. sacks, 49-lb. sacks. Rows include April 13, May 9, June 2, June 15, July 28, Aug. 5, Sept. 12, Sept. 30, Oct. 10.

A requisition from Eastland county for cotton cloth has been forwarded to the Red Cross headquarters and is expected to arrive in Cisco within the next two weeks. The allotment for the county, of which each town will get a part, is as follows:

- 5,500 yards prisms, assorted; 1,500 yards birdseye; 4,600 yards cut flannel; 5,500 yards muslin; 2,000 yards ginghams; 24,000 yards total.

English Professor Of Baylor Dies

WACO, Oct. 11.—Stricken while driving with his wife and daughter, Prof. J. P. Simmons of the English department of Baylor University, died here today.

Doctors said the 42-year old professor died of high blood pressure and a heart attack. He is the author of six text books on English and civics.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 11.—The body of Dr. S. S. Baker, who resigned the presidency of Washington and Jefferson college more than a year ago after a student strike, was found in a field near here today.

INSULL GETS RELEASE FROM GREEK POLICE

By United Press. - ATHENS, Greece, Oct. 11.—Samuel Insull, former Illinois utilities executive, today was released, unconditionally, by Greek police. Authorities said Insull was "absolutely free" and could leave Greece whenever he desired.

Insull was taken to the most comfortable hotel Athens affords, where he can direct the efforts of his counsel to obtain his release. The United States, which has formally asked his extradition, will have to prove its case in the Greek courts.

Extradition papers, it was estimated, would not arrive here before two weeks at the earliest.

CHICAGO, Sept. 11.—The international melodrama that has followed the billion dollar kingdom of Samuel Insull, deepened today when the shadowy figure of Sir Basil Zaharoff, wealthy and mysterious Anglo-Greek financier, entered the picture.

The name of Zaharoff entered the Insull investigation in a manner typical of the little-known European who has been credited with being one of the half dozen wealthiest men in the world.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK

By EDSON R. WAITE, Shawnee, Oklahoma

HADDON IVINS, editor of the Union City (N. J.) Dispatch, says:

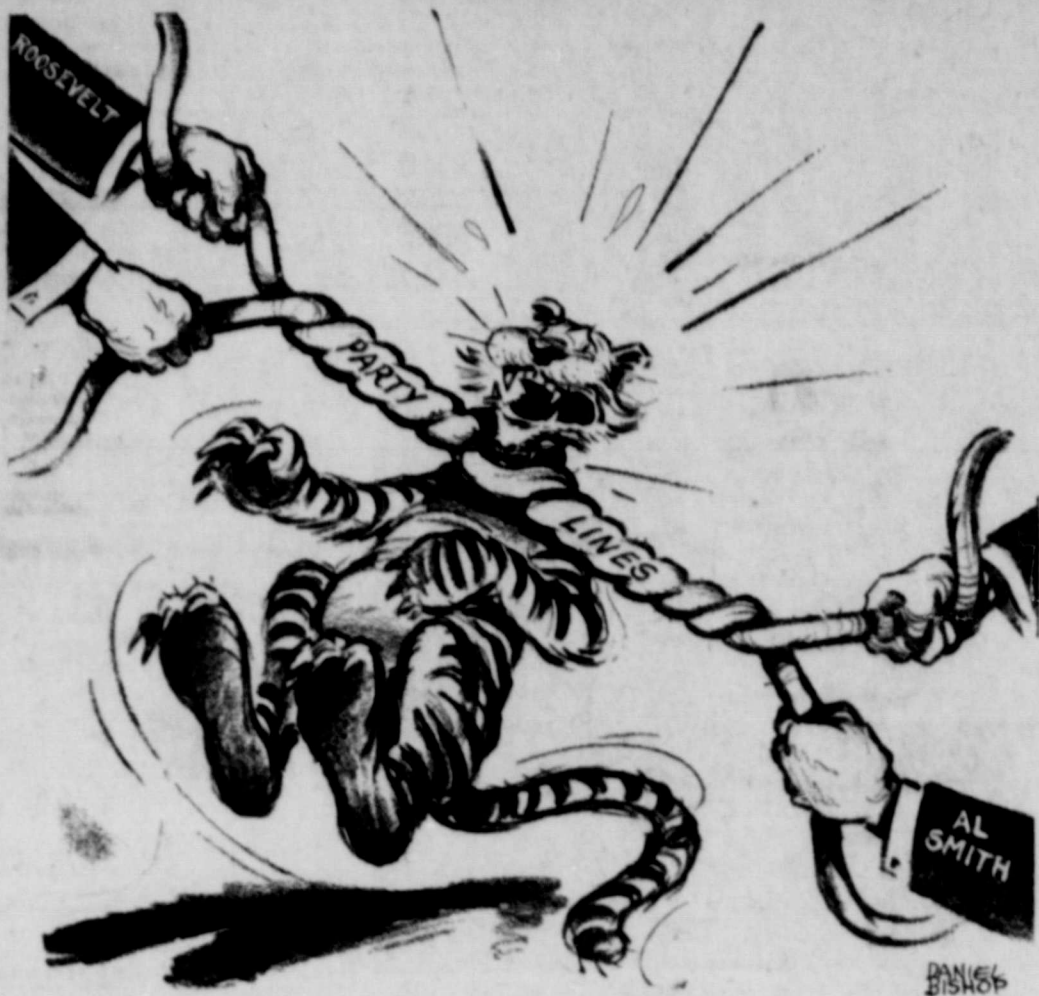

THAT the opportunities for advertising sporting goods for boys and girls have never been developed.

Children are lovers of outdoor sports, along with camping, hiking, etc. They read newspapers, and if you don't believe children furnish a good market hark back to the days when you were a child.

The money supply was very meager in those times, as compared with the present—when times are normal—but boys and girls read every page of sport store catalogs, and then worked out ways of buying their attractive merchandise.

Newspaper advertising can develop a great field of selling that has hardly been scratched.

The Tie That Binds

THE FERGUSONS—MA AND JIM

EDITOR'S NOTE—Herewith is one of a series of six articles on James E. and Miriam A. Ferguson written by Gordon K. Shearer, staff correspondent of the United Press Associations and chief of the Austin bureau.

By GORDON K. SHEARER, United Press Staff Correspondent. AUSTIN.—The Ku Klux Klan, a silent but powerful factor in Senator Mayfield's election, had grown to great membership and power in the state.

Along with it came, hooded whippers and intimidation. A salesman was whipped and chained on the public square at Taylor, Texas. A red-headed boy had just become district attorney in that county, and his red blood was aroused.

Dan Moody vowed to bring the whippers to justice. His prosecution sent the first masked whippers to the penitentiary and focused statewide attention. He announced for attorney general.

The Klan must obey the law, was his topic. The candidacy of Mrs. Miriam A. Ferguson for governor, at first was treated as a joke, or, "old guard" and those who admitted her plucky fight for "Jim" Ferguson gave Mrs. Ferguson 146,424 votes—just enough to nose out Lynch Davidson of Houston by 5,216 votes and go into the run-off against Klan-backed Felix D. Robertson who led the first primary with 193,566.

With "Jim" and "Dan" for the time being, political friends and both harassing the Ku Klux Klan, its opponents swung their solid forces behind Mrs. Ferguson. M. M. Crane, who had prosecuted the impeachment charges, was for Mrs. Ferguson. W. A. Hanger, Governor Ferguson's chief counsel then, publicly supported Robertson.

An attempt to switch the campaign to one on prohibition was avoided with the usual Ferguson skill. Mrs. Ferguson issued a statement announcing she would veto prohibition legislation either "wet" or "dry."

Former Attorney General Looney's pamphlet on the breweries in Texas showed many of Ferguson opponents had their names prominently as well as Ferguson's. Texas biggest vote to date was cast, 729,770 votes cast in the run-off primary. Mrs. Ferguson had 413,751. But the fight was far from won.

Charles Dickson, San Antonio attorney, brought suit against Secretary of State Jeff Strickland to keep her name off the general election ballot. Dickson claimed a man and wife are really one and that through community property interest Ferguson would really be holding an office of emolument forbidden by the impeachment verdict. The court held Mrs. Ferguson eligible.

George C. Butte, University of Texas professor, and a relative by marriage of S. Lattimore, one of the senators who had voted for Ferguson's impeachment conviction, was the republican candidate for governor. Butte received 294,970 votes as compared to 422,558 for Mrs. Ferguson. The Butte vote was the high water mark of republican strength in Texas until the 1928 national election.

Texas had its first woman elected governor.

Mrs. Ferguson, however, was destined to be beaten to the honor of being the first woman governor in the United States. Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, whose husband had died while governor of Wyoming, was inaugurated Jan. 5, 1925. Two weeks later Mrs. Ferguson took the oath of office.

Newspaper correspondents flocked to Temple, the Ferguson's home, sought signed articles. Mrs. Ferguson was photographed in the midst of her flock of chickens. She posed peeling peaches to can. Her recipes were demanded everywhere. Newspapers and magazines carried articles about her. Some feageneration removed from the prospect woman, has an innate dignity which makes her as much at home at the right of an ambassador at dinner as in a neighbor's front porch rocking chair. But she prefers the rocking chair. As wife and secretary, of the speaker of the house during the past busy winter she forwent all social functions save the necessary state occasions. The tasks of the vice president, however, are not as vast as those of the speaker. Mrs. Garner will have opportunity to indulge in a naturally friendly temperament, should her husband move to the other wing of the capitol. It is a good guess, then, that the society she will head will have a homely intimate quality unique in Washington.

Mrs. Garner Says Old-Fashioned Type Neighborliness is Need

To meet Mrs. John N. Garner in the inauguration. This time Mrs. Ferguson raised her hand and took the oath of office, while her husband stood admiringly by. Her inaugural address was a pledge to follow her platform.

"When I first came to Washington, afternoon teas formed our most important daytime function. Tea parties were always home parties. We have grown extravagant, here in Washington, in our idea of what is necessary in our social life. Society is not essential, though sociability is. Constituents do not send representatives to congress for a gay life; they send them to conduct the affairs of the nation.

"Many women believe their society activities are important to their husband's progress. This is often a commendable wife attitude, but it is ill-advised. I doubt if the social efforts of official wives are ever of material benefit."

Home is the center of the universe to this small, energetic woman. "In the crisis in which the world is suffering today I think the chief duty of women is this," she commented. "To make their home and their husbands as happy and as peaceful as possible. If

CALL of the WEST

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Stan Ball accuses Asper Delo, timber king, of crooked practice and of having men shot who try to check up on his activities. Ball says he is making a check and Delo tells him he will personally prevent it. Upon leaving Delo's office Ball saves Dona, Delo's daughter, from kidnapers. He slips away when he finds who she is, telling her his name is Stanley Black.

Dudley Winters, in love with Dona, goes with her to Three Rivers to persuade Delo to abandon the fight with Ball. He tries to get her to marry him on the way as a means of getting Delo to give up his plans. Dona narrowly escapes doing this by meeting Ball on his way to the timber camp. They find Ball accused of killing a ranger. Asper is wounded from ambush but refuses to stay in bed. Dona tells him she has just married Dudley to keep him out of the hunt.

Ball comes in for supplies and is captured by Swergin, Delo's big timber boss. He escapes after hearing Dona tell her father she is his wife. Dudley insists on real marriage but Dona holds back. She rides out to see if she can find Stanley Black, who, she thinks, is at Blind River. She meets him on the trail, not knowing he is Ball. He promises to rid the range of Stan Ball. On the way to camp Dona stops at a cabin and sees a glove she thinks is Stanley Black's in a Spanish girl's room.

Valuable records are stolen from the office and the clerk says Ball and Asper fled. Dona is furious and refuses to leave with Dona and Dudley.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIV

For the first time since their arrival at Three Rivers Dona and Dudley were now aware of Swergin's seriousness in the matter of capturing Stan Ball. All night after the raid on the main office men were riding and running about on foot. Morning found the entire camp roused for action, with the big timber boss handling his men as he would have on a river drive. Dudley found the whole thing intensely exciting. The plan was to comb Folly Mountain as clean as a swept floor. Not a foot of the high country was to be left unchecked. Every brown bear, cougar and mountain sheep was to be routed out of hiding. It was a little like a small crusade. Dudley could not quite realize that the whole thing was not just a colorful pageant. The heavy guns and the plentiful supply of ammunition added the grim touch necessary to dispel illusions; those guns were muzzle-loaded with real powder.

Dona went to see Carter. She found him outside his office door, sunning himself. Carter was slender with a weak droop to his shoulders. He lifted a pair of colorless eyes to Dona's as she greeted him. "You are Mr. Carter?"

The man recognized Delo's daughter but he did not get up. He nodded his head and continued to sun himself.

"I came to see if you were badly injured last night and to say that we are sorry. Father cannot get about just yet," Dona watched Carter rub a patchy growth of black hair on his chin.

"I reckon nobody ever had a closer scratch," Carter held up a bandaged hand. "I reckon the Timber Company owes me some extra for this." His pale eyes lighted a trifle as they fixed themselves on Dona's face.

"Certainly. Dad will see that you are properly rewarded," Dona could not help wondering where Swergin had collected so many odd characters. Carter was an oddity and no mistake. Of course only such men would stay and work under the lash of Swergin's tongue and fist. Three Rivers was certainly a camp of the old school.

Carter smiled a thin smile but foot. Morning found the entire camp roused for action, with the big timber boss handling his men as he would have on a river drive. Of course only such men would stay and work under the lash of Swergin's tongue and fist. Three Rivers was certainly a camp of the old school.

Carter smiled a thin smile but "You knew Ball—that is, before he started his fight against the Timber Company?" Dona was seeking information.

"Sure. Knew him for a strappin' big cowpuncher that rode a black horse."

"And you saw him last night?" Dona put the question abruptly.

"Sure I saw him." Carter returned Dona's smile with a defiant glance that fell as she met it. "He steps right in through the big window and goes for his guns." Carter made a shift and dropped his good hand to his side.

"And what did you do?" Dona bent forward, all interest.

"I went for the gun I have in my desk. Then he cut loose and shot my hand." Carter touched the bandage gingerly.

Dona nodded sympathetically. "Remember, I will see that Father rewards you." She gave him a smile and walked back toward the scene in the big yard.

Dudley was riding at a gallop looking for her. He plunged up and pulled his horse to a ploughing stop in front of grandstand style.

"Where have you been hiding?" he demanded.

"I was poking about," Dona smiled as she noted the flush of excitement on Dudley's face.

"The boys have all gone. I'll be back after a while." He bent and kissed her hand lightly, then galloped off in a great cloud of dust.

Dona waved to him until he had vanished. In her heart she half hoped Ball was all ready beyond the rim of Folly Mountain. If he were not there was little chance of his ever leaving the slope alive. With a little shake of her head Dona ran to her father's room.

Asper was sitting up. It was plain that he had been very busy giving orders, as the floor was tracked with boot marks and cigarette stumps. Dona crossed to his side and perched on the foot of his bed.

"You have been violating my orders again!" she shook a finger under his nose. "Do you want me to move in here and make you behave?"

Asper grinned. "I'm the usual ungrateful patient. When I get well I fire my loving nurse." He caught her hand.

"You are not well and you're not firing this nurse!"

"Doc says I can sit in a chair on the porch. Now, as a good nurse, you'd better help me out there." Asper proceeded to swing his feet over the edge of the bed. "My slippers, nurse!" he called, as though Dona were in the next room.

A tender smile spread over the girl's face as she ran for the slippers. Asper was nearly his old self again and would be well in no time. For a moment she was really happy and a great weight lifted from her heart.

Asper insisted on having his chair placed so that he could watch the slope of the mountain and the upper clearing. He was eager to get the very first news of the capture of Ball.

"They'll have him before noon, sure as shootin'," he rumbled.

Dona smiled and seated herself on the top step. She was eager to see what happened but she was not really anxious to have this huge succeed. A thought kept bobbing up in her mind that would not be still easily. Here were dozens of men going out to get one lone bandit. The odds against Ball were 100 to 1. He was a lone wolf, a killer, but that did not lessen the odds.

Dona's thoughts turned to the previous day and a cloud passed over her happiness. Stanley Black had been such a disappointment. More than a disappointment, Dona knew, though she refused to admit it. With white sunlight playing through the green needles above her head and a cedar bird (Continued on page 4)

CALL of the WEST

By R. G. MONTGOMERY

A rider appeared at the edge of the clearing and Dona roused herself. The man came down through the cutting at gallop. As he came into view of the corral below a dozen men leaped from the shade of the saddle house and ran for their horses.

"Run down to the corral and see what has happened," Asper Delo's voice shook with excitement as he called to Dona.

"Get him cornered and the gang is closing in on him. He was trying to make a break over the hill and into the cow country.

"Possibly," Dona met his gaze squarely. "But get your horse!" "O. K., ma'am," Malloy bowed stiffly and vanished into the saddle house.
