Football Overweight

That Louisiana football coach who was shot by the father of a lad whom he had dismissed from the high school football squad can be written down as one more victim of football's much-discussed "over-emphasis."

Any man who would become so disturbed over his son's failure to make the football team that he would go out and shoot the coach must have become more or less unbalanced on the subject, of course. But is he, in that respect, so very much different from the rest of us?

Any nation which commonly permits football coaches to get more pay and fame than university presidents themselves, which lets a schoolboys' game become an expensive, over-ballyhooed sport that is shot through with the very spirit of professionalism, and judges its colleges by their football teams rather than by their scholastic achievements-isn't it, also, more or less unbalanced on the sub-

The officials who have care for the public purse and reduce expenditures are the ones who are making the highest contributions to their communities.

Letters From Our Readers

To The Editor: Just an idea. May I express it? One of our old friends neighbor and family moved to N. M. last winter and the 20th of Nov. this mother and little boys went out in the pastor to pick up what they call chips in N. M. real clost to there house. So they saw a rattle snake, So she sent one of the boys after a hoe to kill the snake with She got the hoe, struck at the snake and it managed to get into a hadger hole or den. So she war at a loss to know what to do. So after studying the case real close she decided to get water and try to dround the snake as it was so lost to the house. So her and the ittle boys got a tub some cans and buckets and carried water from the windmill. So they began to pore the water in and filled the hole full. So pretty soon up come a prarie runner and one rattle snake. So she killed them as they was nearly drowned. So they pored in moe water. So up floated 2 more rattle snakes. So they killed them and poured in more water. Then up come I rattlesnake. So she killed it and poured in more water. So pritty soon up floated 2 more rattle snakes. So she killed them and pered in more water but no more snakes come. That make 6 rattle snakes and one racer. Now my ide is this lets pore water in all the badger holes and juse see how many snakes we can kill. If they will set the day we would like to go and help them count the makes after they are dead. - A READER

THIS CURIOUS WORLD By William Ferguson

THE timber of Alaska is confined principally to the Tongass and Chugach forest reservations. The Tongass, located in he southeastern part, contains about 30,000 square miles. Because of the inferior quality of Alaskan timber, and the distance to markets, the lumbering industry has not thrived there.
