STUDENTS RIOT IN ROME OVER ITALIAN PLANS

By United Press
ROME, Dec. 6.—Hundreds of students in Rome and Tunis demonstrated today in a renewal of Italian demands for French Tunisia and Corsica. "We want Corsica and Tunis. We want Djibouti," the Roman students cried in connection with French Mediterranean and African possessions. Police and troops held them away from the French Embassy. In Tunis other hundreds of Italian students paraded. Fascist songs were sung in the main streets, in what the Italian press described as "spontaneous and firm reaction against attempts of fanatics to demonstrate against our prestige." "Virginia Gayda, close friend of Mussolini, wrote that the French-German anti-war accord, signed in Paris today is a "new manifestation of European policy and a sign of clarification of international relations." The German-French accord is more significant, he wrote, because it comes at a time when Germany's new anti-Semitic measures reportedly are creating indignation in the democratic nations. "This reveals that this hostile movement by the democracies is only artificial," Gayda wrote.

Its purpose is to pledge both nations to outlaw war as an instrument for settling disputes. Hence the two powers agree to recognize their present frontier along the Rhine after generations of warfare and to negotiate all future troubles.

Protest of Nazi Savagery Is Reaffirmation of Faith

A significant thing has happened in American life during the last few days. For the first time in many years, there has developed an issue of vast importance on which the American people have shown themselves to be complete agreement—and have shown themselves also to be very much in earnest.

The newest Hitler pogrom simply turned America's collective stomach. The spontaneous, nation-wide chorus of indignant protests that poured forth was a revelation. Here, if nowhere else, was an issue on which all Americans think and feel as one.

On the surface, perhaps, there is nothing so very remarkable about all of this. After all, no decent people can enjoy the sight of a bully torturing an utterly defenseless victim. A crime against humanity and against civilization, when it is an easily recognizable as the one just committed by the Nazis, certainly ought to draw protests.

Yet that simple stand for ordinary decency and humanity goes to the root of the whole matter.

For this whole fight against dictatorship, against tyranny, against repression and regimentation in all their forms and for liberty, democracy and freedom—what is it, at bottom, but a fight for ordinary decency and humanity? Those are the first casualties under any dictatorship.

It is not decent and humane, for instance, to deny men the right to speak and think as they please, to persecute those whose race or religious convictions differ from yours, to arrest without warrant and imprison without trial, to substitute force for reason and to subject men to mental and emotional straitjackets. Yet every dictatorship begins with precisely those acts, committing them under the plea that necessity compels them.

And the noise that the dictators make, the apparent successes that they have won, often make us forget what their power is based on: a direct and simple offense against the most elementary principles of civilized conduct. So we actually get to the point where we can talk about the good things which this or that dictator has done for his people—overlooking the fact that is whole program is founded on a profound and unqualified wrong.

This new Hitler pogrom restores the whole picture to its proper focus. Here the real meaning of dictatorship—any dictatorship—is brought out into the open in such a way that no man can fail to see it for what it is. If we never realized it before, now we are compelled to realize it before, now we are compelled to realize that tyranny means a brutal and contemptuous denial of the most fundamental ideals of a decent and humane society.

That is why this spontaneous, nation-wide revulsion against the Nazi excesses is so significant.

It reveals that the American character simply cannot stomach the obscenities on which any dictatorship must be built. It shows that the ultimate defense of our freedom is something fundamental to the spirit of all of our people. This protest against the savagery of the Nazis is a reaffirmation of our faith in the American way of life.

The pathetic condition of Germany's military system now becomes apparent. They are down to their last red-haired spy.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX
NEA Service Staff Writer

THE "social season" is in full swing so let's be gay. Supper parties seem to please both hosts and guests and they don't require much fuss.

Use your dining room table as the buffet. One large hot dish, a salad, dessert and coffee is all you need to serve.

You will find it a far wiser plan to put most of your money into one delicious main dish, than to serve a bewildering array of pickles, olives, condiments and relishes. These will run up your costs just as high as a really exciting and unusual entree.

Try this party menu. It is simple and well balanced, yet really unusual. Use only white turkey meat, keeping the other parts for the family on the following day.

Southern creamed turkey de luxe, toasted cornmeal muffins, black currant jam, hearts of celery stuffed with watercress, raspberry ice and assorted small, rich cakes and wafers, black coffee.

Serve the hot, creamed turkey, toasted cornmeal muffins, jam and stuffed celery on the same dinner plate. This will save service and confusion.

Any fruit ice can be chosen, or else a chilled fruit gelatin dessert, if you prefer.

Celery With Watercress
To stuff the celery (which is a crisp and pleasing salad course), chop fresh watercress slightly and pack into cleaned and chilled celery. The cress is springy and will press against the celery and stay in place. It requires no dressing to bind it.

When the guests arrive, serve canapes, nuts and tiny sandwiches, and chilled beverages. After

To make vegetable stock, simmer celery leaves, carrot, parsley onion and turnip together and strain. Melt butter, add flour. Mix well and slowly stir in the chicken or vegetable stock. Add celery and onion. Simmer for 15 minutes. Then add cream, mace, salt and pepper and turkey. Heat thoroughly. Serve on large, deep, hot platter.

$200,000 Project For NYA Planned

AUSTIN, Texas.—J. C. Kellam, state youth director, has announced approval of a $200,000 project to complete construction of a recreation and park area, the new federal fish hatchery and operations' headquarters at Buchanan and Inks dams on the Colorado river in Burnet county.

More than $100,000 already has been provided to begin construction of a hatchery to produce a million fish a year for LCRA lakes at Inks dam, to build the recently completed administrative building and to establish a National Youth Administration resident project, in which 144 young men are now living while assisting in clearance and construction on the site.

Mr. Kellam said that under his plan the National Youth Administration will advance its resident project from local to regional status. The NYA has recently completed and moved into remodeled quarters at Inks dam and will proceed immediately to expand its facilities to accommodate around 400 boys by the end of the fiscal year.

Boys on the NYA project will work half of each day for wages which will pay for their room, board and medical attention and leave them about $12 a month for incidental expenses. The other half of their time, under especially-trained supervisors provided by the vocational division of the state department of education of which James R. D. Eddy is director, they will study the fundamentals of vocational agriculture, elementary mechanics, woodwork, carpentry, metal work, and masonry.

Their work will tie closely into their training program. Mr. Kellam said. In the past, boys on this project have helped clear the work camp site at Buchanan dam and with the construction of the new administration building. Under the direction of bureau of fisheries engineers they have helped lay out and construct rearing-ponds for the hatchery.

On the new project they will build sewer systems for the LCRA employees' community and homes for caretakers and assistants. They will assist in the completion of the fish hatchery, and construct drives, picnic grounds and masonry.

Synthetic Scenery Urged for Museum

EL PASO, Texas.—Because vibration of the tramping of visitors' feet is damaging Southwestern

Indian ruins, Frank Pinkley, superintendent of Southwestern national monuments, is experimenting with synthetic scenery. Pinkley's problem is whether tourists will be satisfied with dioramas and scale models in place of the "real thing." Tentatively he has chosen the Betatakin ruins in

Arizona's Navajo National monument as the location of his proposed testing ground. The superintendent hopes to give added protection to the various ruins—some more than 1,000 years old—that are under National Park Service custodianship by exhibiting replicas and possibly models that could be displayed readily so visitors could see interiors. Several of the ruins are representative of the zenith of Indian civilization. Tours cause vibration and damage the structures, said.

SERIAL STORY

LOVERS AWEIGH

BY BETTY WALLACE

COPYRIGHT, 1938 NEA SERVICE, INC.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
JUDY ALCOFF—admiral's daughter. She faced a choice between two navy suitors.

JACK HANLEY—flying sailor. He faced a test of a patient love.

MARVEL HASTINGS—navy wife. She faced the test of being a good sailor.

Yesterday, Dwight asks Judy to forgive him, to pick up the broken pieces. But she tells him she is engaged to marry Jack!

CHAPTER XXVI
THE moment the words left her lips, Judy Alcott lost the triumph that had inspired them.

He said, "I'm sorry, Judy. Sorry I said those things. Of course I couldn't expect a girl like you to sit around and wait while I—"

She should have pushed him away. But she had hungered for his arms so long. To be close against his heart, to feel the rise and fall of his breathing, to have his pleading in her ears like this, was so sharply sweet, that for a moment she remained quiescent.

Without her own volition, words were tumbling forth. "You were always ambitious, Dwight. You wanted to marry a rich girl, you thought it would help you get ahead. You knew that my father's influence could help you, but you weighed everything carefully and in the end it seemed to you that Marvel's money could help more.

Bigger and better parties. Influence in Washington. She spoke of it! Her uncle's a banker, he has friends on the Naval Affairs Committee. You thought that would be an easier, quicker way than the road of merit. Oh, you were cold about it. You considered it from every angle!"

"That's not true!" he shouted. "Everybody knows it is true. Everybody knows that every single move you ever made, since you came into the navy, has been with the single thought of getting ahead."

"A man's a fool not to want to succeed!"

"Yes, but there are ways. And ways."

"I never did anything underhanded. I never used pull—"

"You wouldn't have hesitated, if you had had it."

"Pull is an asset. Why shouldn't a man use it if he has it?"

"You're a climber, Dwight. You were always. Mother tried to tell me. Jack tried to tell me—but I was blind."

THAT hurt. He cried, "Oh, Hanley told you, did he? Just because he's a hardworking fool who's crazy about some dimwit idea that won't ever amount to a hill of beans. Six and a half million dollars for a dirigible that goes down in any little blow."

"Battleships cost sixty millions," she said. "And dirigibles don't go down in—"

"What do you know about it?" he cried, stung. "Only what he's told you."

She said despairingly, "We've come a long way from what we started with. I didn't mean to—"

to say what I did. Whether it's true or not, whether you realize it or not, doesn't matter. I'm engaged to Jack Hanley, and—"

"You're too proud to take me because I married her first," he said slowly. "That's all it is. You know so little of life, Judy! People all make mistakes. That's how we find out, in the end, what we really want. If you loved Hanley, you'd have married him long before I knew you. He's been hanging around you ever since he got out of the Academy."

"Let's not talk about it any more." She thought that Dwight had none of the sensibility that Jack had. Jack was always so careful in what he said, so considerate of her feelings. But Dwight barged blindly on, saying the things he wanted to say, not caring how they hurt.

SHE turned the key in the ignition. "Shall I drop you anywhere?" she asked.

"I wasn't going anywhere. I suppose I'll go back to the ship."

"Where is Marvel?"

"On Tennant's yacht, I guess. I don't care."

But that wasn't true. He did care. She said gently, "You turned to me because it was a salve for your pride, Dwight. I think you're still crazy about her."

"A moment ago you accused me of marrying her for her money."

But she knew that though this was true, it did not prevent him from really loving Marvel; from being affected by her beauty and her lure.

"I guess I'll get out here," he said, reaching for the door handle.

"Don't. I'll drive you to the pier."

She should have realized that it was better to let him go here. But she had never been one to foresee the sharp eyes, the delighted gasps, of other people. Gossip always caught her unaware.

So when they stopped at the pier, and Dwight got out, she did not notice anyone she knew. Yet the moment she reached home, her mother said to her, "Judy, I've just had a phone call from Mrs. Lane. She says someone on the station saw Dwight getting out of your car a few minutes ago. She says—"

"I suppose people are talking already!" Judy snapped. "Can't I even drop him off at the pier without other people leaping to the conclusion that he was making love to me?"

"Was he making love to you?" her mother asked, in a quiet voice.

NEW YORK—There probably never has been a country which had more problems than this one. That is understandable. But what is not understandable is that there should be so many problems, pressing problems, about which the country has no policy.

Take the railroads. A modern American railroad might itself be defined as a collection of problems. But the government hasn't a semblance of a policy respecting them.

Here is one consequence of that. The Delaware, Lackawanna & Hudson Railroad, like many another, cannot make enough money to pay its taxes to the state of New Jersey or the city of Buffalo. So it asks the Reconstruction Finance Corporation to lend it the money.

This sort of thing has gone on since the R. F. C. was formed by Hoover. Railroads have borrowed millions to pay taxes to states and cities. They have borrowed millions to pay rents on real estate. They have borrowed money to pay the rentals of roads they were operating. And the R. F. C. has accommodated them apparently whenever they have needed this help.

They have borrowed millions to pay interest on bonds and notes, oftentimes to bankers.

I recall protesting against this when the R. F. C. was first organized. The Van Swearingens borrowed $10,000,000 to pay a loan to the Morgans.

I was informed that the reason for that was a profound economic one. It seems that then—in 1922—we were in a depression because the banks would not lend money. This was the explanation given me by the wizards in Washington.

While it seemed rather terrible to have the government supply money to the Vans to pay off loans to the Morgans, the profound idea behind it was that this would pay money in the bankers' purse; indeed all the R. F. C. loans were achieving that end, and then presently the bankers would have so much money it would be borrowing a hole in their pockets. And they would start lending it.

The folly of that must be apparent by now. The banks have had billions poured into their pockets, but they haven't started lending yet—the pockets remain unburied.

When the R. F. C. paid taxes and rentals for other roads, I was told this was helping cities and states in trouble. The folly of that must also be apparent now.

The whole truth is that the government not only has no policy about the roads, but it refuses to even think seriously about it. Since 1931 the deplorable character of this problem has been apparent.

But as far as the government has gotten to dole out a few dollars every time one of those ragged vagabonds comes around looking for a handout, thus prolonging the agony, while the roads sink to new levels of distress.

Had there been a courageous facing of the problem in 1933 when that was possible the roads would be on their way to health now.

DINEHURST—Those here to see the professional golfers off on another winter tour, rush hear only of the biggest football weekend this section of the south has ever experienced.

Carnegie Tech and Pitt are scheduled to play against two of the tobacco triangle's best teams in the space of three days.

Bill Kern's Tartans meet North Carolina State in Raleigh on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 24.

The Panthers clash with Wallace Wade's Blue Devils in Durham, just 25 miles from Raleigh, on Saturday, Nov. 26.

While the N. C. State-Carnegie game will not attract more than 20,000, which is more than the Raleigh Stadium will hold, the battle between Duke and Pitt will undoubtedly set a new attendance high for southern football. Duke has installed thousands of temporary seats to enlarge its stadium which normally seats 35,000.

Duke already has the record of the biggest football crowd in Dixie history. It was established when 42,888 watched the Blue Devils upset North Carolina's previously unbeaten Tar Heels in 1935.

DOWN here the fibers come in large numbers from points as far away as 350 miles.

Many Pittsburghers came to Durham a year ago, when the Panthers climaxed an unbeaten season with a 10-0 triumph over the Blue Devils. There was a crowd of more than 40,000 in the stands that day.

Never before in southern football history have three of the nation's top-ranking teams been scheduled to play during so short a time. Pitt, Duke and Carnegie Tech are ranked in the first 10. Football followers of the tobacco triangle are not so sure that the Pittsburgh delegations will go home entirely satisfied.

Carnegie Tech, the team that beat Pitt, has no brother in N. C. State. While the Wolfpack has met with varied kinds of success this season, it will be loaded for its final game.

The Wolves, coached by Williams (Doc) Newton, have such outstanding performers as Ed (Ty) Coon, as fine a tackle as there is anywhere, and Art (not of the Pittsburgh Pirates) Rooney, a whiz of a halfback.

PITT'S Panthers come to Durham once wounded. They see in wrecking the Blue Devils a chance to regain a lot of lost prestige. They may have the ammunition with which to do it, but there are lots of folks in this section stringing along with Wallace Wade's boys.

There will be plenty of All-America timber on show in this game.

Duke's Dan Hill is one of the finest centers who ever dug cleats in football turf.

Mad Marshall Goldberg, Pitt's great back who was held pretty much in check by the Blue Devils a year ago, will be back, and with him will be Dick Cassiano, Curly Stebbins, and Jack Chickernoe.

But Duke also has backfield threats.

If Eric Tipton, a triple-threat, had not been injured early in the season, he would have been a sure bet for anybody's All-America. In Bob O'Mara, the Blue Devils have a fullback of ponderous power who runs over instead of sidesteps.

The Duke-Pitt game looms as one of the bitterest battles fought since the time of...

Chesterfield Names All-America Team

A week before Eric Tipton of Duke punted his team to its 7-0 victory over Pitt, Eddie Dooley, the uncus football forecaster and commentator, who has been broadcasting weekly for Chesterfield cigarettes, picked Tipton for the Chesterfield 1938 All-American football team.

That Dooley's picking of the Duke star on his own team was fully justified, was amply borne out by Duke's prompt bid and acceptance to the Rose Bowl after its remarkable unbeaten, untied and unscorable season.

Chesterfield's All-America football team, as chosen by Dooley and announced recently over his nationwide hookup, is being hailed by coaches and critics as one of the most representative teams of a year. The team was chosen by Dooley in collaboration with more than one hundred leading coaches.

No eleven of previous years' teams more line power and scoring punch, more hard running backs and aggressive forwards than the MONTREAL—The Trans-Canada Air Lines' new Montreal-Vancouver air express service is resulting in closer business relations between Eastern and Western Canada and in the development of new commercial markets, a survey discloses.

Goods that once took several days to cross the country are now being flown from coast to coast in 25 hours, and the fast service is expanding and the exchange of products, particularly those that are perishable, between the east and west.

The principal shipments eastward at present are delicate flowers from British Columbia, such as gardenias, which formerly were imported from the United States.

Firemen Removing Many Fire Hazards Throughout City

The Ranger fire department is doing much to prevent fires which might start from grass fires in the city, by burning grass off vacant lots in the residential sections and in places where a fire might do damage.

Grass has already been burned, under the supervision of the firemen, over a large portion of the eastern section of the city, in some instances where the tall grass presented a decided fire hazard.

Anyone who has grass near their home, which they would like to have burned, has been requested to see that the grass has been cut from around houses, garages, fences or other places where it might start a fire, and the firemen will then burn it.

Fire Chief G. A. Murphy stated today that this work was being done in order that the excellent and the general B. T. U. convention held in Dallas today, Rev. and Mrs. Wilson Atkins and Mrs. W. W. Mitchell accompanied him to Dallas and attended the convention.
