STILES WELL IN FLATWOOD AREA WATCHED

A shallow well three and one-half miles southeast of Eastland, Stiles et al No. 1 Lyeria, located in the Nancy Uesury survey, Eastland County, held interest of oilmen Saturday.

Pipe having been cemented at 1,368 feet, said reports, and cleaning out completed, drilling in was scheduled. A sand with a reported good showing of oil had been barely penetrated.

After completing an underreaming job, W. R. Ritchie et al were drilling on the Weddington farm, 12 miles northwest of Cisco, section 2054, TE&L survey, Eastland County, at a depth of 2,750 feet.

One mile east of Cisco, Hickok Producing and Development Company No. 1 Stamps, section 77, block 4, H&TC survey, Eastland County, was drilling at 3,990 feet.

A new operation for Eastland County was Alcoa Oil Company No. 1 Guy, section 23, block 1, H&TC survey, five miles east of Carbon, Eastland County, which at 1,000 feet was drilling. It is aimed at 1,500-foot pay.

Shut down in Eastland County were W. T. Lutten No. 1 Been, section 13, block 3, H&TC survey, three miles southwest of Carbon, at a low depth, and J. D. Cawley et al No. 1 Elzo Been, southwest of Okra, below 250 feet.

Reports on Stephens County wells were as follows:

Pitzer and West No. 2 Gonzalous, in the Breckenridge city limits, drilling at 1,000 feet.

PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITIES ONE YEAR TO GO

Ohio's Governor Bricker—likely dark horse.

The most likely "dark horse" in the race for the Republican presidential nomination right now is Gov. John William Bricker of Ohio. Governor Bricker inherited a mess when he became governor at the start of this year. His predecessor was Gov. Martin L. Davey, who rested Ohio to a heavy dose of spoils politics. Bricker has been busy cleaning things up ever since.

He has cut 4500 people off the state payroll, got the state back to a pay-as-you-go basis, and while cutting down on operating expenses, has found the money to increase such benefits as old-age pensions.

Like most Ohio governors, his background is law and politics. In his late 40's, husky and handsome, with iron-gray hair, he comes from the little town of Mount Sterling; says he is still a small-town man at heart, and proves it by going back to Mount Sterling every chance he gets.

Once a member of the state public utilities commission, he was rated an "anti-utilities" man. Later, he put in two terms as state attorney general, meanwhile he returned to private law practice and had a lot of public utilities as clients. He first ran for governor in 1936, lost in the Roosevelt landslide, but ran far ahead of his ticket.

He is not actively a candidate for the nomination; turns down speechifying invitations and stays in Columbus to do his job. If he does run he must tangle with Senator Taft, another Ohio contender.

HIS ASSETS: An excellent record (so far) as governor; ability as an organizer and as a campaigner; the political availability which is the good fortune of every Ohio governor; a pleasing appearance and personality.

HIS LIABILITIES: The country doesn't know him; Taft may take the Ohio delegation away from him; his record is still in the making.

HIS CHANCES: Fair, and due to get considerably better.

BOND IS SET FOR BROKER IN L.S.U. INQUIRY

BATON ROUGE, La., July 1.—J. M. Brown, New Orleans broker, charged with complicity in embezzlement of funds from Louisiana State University, was freed today under $15,000 bond.

Brown is charged with aiding Dr. James Monroe Smith, fugitive former president of the university, to embezzle the funds.

Dr. Smith's son-in-law and his wife's nephew previously were released on $7,500 bond each, charged with having helped him escape.

As the probe into the tangled affairs of the university continued, Theodore S. Landry, member of the L. A. U. board of supervisors, announced he had resigned because of other pressing official duties.

EXPECT EVENT WILL BE BEST HELD ON 4TH

Approximately 75 Are Entered in Beauty Revue On Tuesday

With approximately 75 entrants assured for the Eastland bathing revue Tuesday night, one of the climaxing events of a two-day celebration, fete officials Saturday said that is the greatest number to be attracted to such an event in West Texas in many years.

Not only were celebration officials jubilant over the bathing beauty event but were also optimistic over all activities crowded in the celebration calendar beginning Monday.

H. J. Tanner, secretary-manager of the Eastland Chamber of Commerce, said that the attendance for the July Fourth celebration is expected to be the largest recorded in the history of the events.

Those who wish to obtain reserved seats to the bathing revue Tuesday night Saturday were reminded that the tickets to the inside of the swimming pool fence are available at all Eastland drug stores. Prices are 25 cents each and there are 400 reserved seats. It was again emphasized that there will be no reserved seat passes issued. Grandstand seat facilities at the bathing revue are free.

The officials also stated advance tickets to the bathing revue Tuesday morning at Lake Eastland are now on sale for 10 cent each at all drug stores. Those attending the boat races should go by the old golf course entry. The lake is southwest of Eastland and may be reached by going west from the square on West Commerce street then turning north to North Ammerman street. Ammerman street should be followed. At the end of the Ammerman continue east on the gravel road near the Lone Star plant, cross the railroad tracks. From the railroad crossing go north through the old golf course road and follow until the lake is reached.

3,000 ON WPA TO LOSE JOBS IN THIS AREA

FORT WORTH, July 1.—Three thousand of the 15,000 workers in this district will be laid off Works Progress Administration payrolls for 90 days to make jobs for unemployed, not on WPA rolls, Major Karl Wallace, WPA district director, said today.

Twelve hundred of those to be laid off are in Tarrant County alone, however, Wallace said.

The 30-day layoff will be made in compliance with the new $1,755,600,000 relief bill, signed by President Roosevelt last night, after it was rushed through congress to save the WPA from dying at midnight.

One of the regulations of the new bill is that workers who have been on the rolls for as long as 18 months must step out for 30 days to give jobs to those who have been on the waiting list for more than 60 days.

This provision was aimed at so-called professional relief clients.

Although the measure became effective today, Wallace said he had not received definite instructions.

HITLER IS TO VISIT DANZIG ON JULY 23

BERLIN, July 1.—Fischer Adolph Hitler is scheduled to visit Danzig on a German cruiser on July 23, it was learned today.

Hitler used a warship on his triumphant visit to Memel recently.

Diplomatic quarters were interested in seeing whether the German foreign office gives Warsaw the customary advance notice of the visit to Danzig, which hitherto always has been done in the case of official visits.

No serious developments in the Danzig situation are expected in the immediate future, it is indicated by the fact that German children still are being sent to East Prussia for vacations.

They presumably would not be sent if German authorities feared difficulties.

While Nazi partisans are not revealing details of their campaign for winning Danzig, well informed foreign quarters are convinced they will continue to make the most of any incident or friction in Danzig to try to induce the Poles to commit, avert acts, thus putting themselves morally in the wrong.

Monetary Powers Of President Are Swamped In Senate

WASHINGTON, July 1.—A senate filibuster swamped President Roosevelt's dollar devaluation authority and the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund at 12:01 a. m. Saturday, shortly after the house voted an arms embargo program that may kill neutrality legislation at this session.

The administration hopes to revive monetary powers in a senate vote at 3 p. m. Wednesday.

President Roosevelt heard the bad news at the white house. Packed galleries followed the show on Capitol Hill. It was the most spectacular night of this session.

Poultry Work to Be Seen Monday By Two Experts

County Agent Elmo V. Cook announced Saturday that W. R. Nisbet, extension animal husbandman for the extension service, and S. W. Clark, representative of the Texas Gulf Sulphur Company, Monday will take pictures of poultry feeding demonstrations being conducted by Wyman Blair, who lives between Cisco and Eastland.

Blair is conducting demonstrations in the control of coccidiosis in young poultry by the use of sulphur in feeding.

It has been reported that the use of sulphur in grain mash at the rate of five pounds of sulphur for each 100 pounds of mash will successfully control the disease in poultry.

Blair has cooperated with the extension service in poultry demonstrations and keeping of accurate records for many years.

Economics, 1900 and 1939

On the front page of a metropolitan newspaper recently appeared two articles whose contrast serves better than all the tomes of experts to accentuate the clash between economic thought of today and that of yesterday.

The first was an interview with a white-haired, spirited widow of 89, whose husband had been an early associate of John D. Rockefeller in the grain and oil business. When the husband died at the turn of the century, he left his widow stocks in the city's privately owned traction company, which had regularly paid 6% dividends.

"I lived on the dividend for a long time," she said. "But now there has been no dividend for two years. The city and the company are deadlocked over a new franchise. People complain about the street car service when there's a car every three minutes. We used to think ourselves lucky to have a car every 20 minutes.

"It used to be that I could get an able-bodied man to do my gardening. Now I have to take old men of 70. The young men don't want to work. Manual work is not good enough any more. People all want to take it easy."

Almost within hearing distance of this widow's home, a young and vigorous Catholic priest whose parish and problems lie in a great industrial community, lashed out from a convention rostrum in an attack on the "cupidity of wealth."

"Accustomed to respond only to self-interest and profit," he declared, "ignorant or contemptuous of all notions of stewardship and social function, and yet living under hallucinations of moral grandeur, wealth daily perpetrates a horror of mass starvation and exposure.

"The poor who have no purchasing power can make no appeal to the cupidity of wealth. There is nothing for it to do except change the system of control. America must erect a system in which wealth will not have the only way."

Neither of these persons is important in the political fight which is raging over attempted reformation of our economic system. It is a struggle which Americans of this generation probably will see settled in their lifetime.

The millions of citizens who are identified with neither camp, but who seek only the right to live in peace, happiness and reasonable security, hope that in between these two contrasting points of view a solution can be found without resort to violent political upheaval.

One often wonders why fellows choose the U. S. Naval Academy in preference to college—until the annual look at that June Week color girl.

Termites have undermined a school in California. The teachers are looking for a boy who might have brought them into the building in a bottle.

SERIAL STORY

PAR IS LOVE

BY EDWIN RUTT
Copyright, 1939,
NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday's Royalton built Ronald Wilfrid's brother, so Ronald offers Roy $100 to teach Wilfrid the wrong lessons. "I didn't say I wouldn't," Roy replies, staking deeper in the chair.

CHAPTER VIII

"Well, then," exclaimed Ron excitedly, "will you? Come on! Speak up!"
"Don't rush me," said Roy. "I'm thinking. Your argument appears reasonable. Your brother tries to put one over on you. You forestall him cleverly. I really think you should be rewarded for your perspicacity."

"With-ut?" advised Roy. "I meant that I may do it."
"The fried fllet of sole come out and seized his hand. "You will? Gee, that's great."
"I will, on one condition."

"Any condition you like," cried Ron joyfully.
"Well, that is that you take this match a little more seriously. You'll have to give me your word to spend more time practicing. And you must be in bed by 8 o'clock tonight. Those are my terms. If you don't like them, I withdraw."

"Brother," said Ron heartily, "don't worry. I'm going off to practice so fast you won't be able to see me for dust." He paused. "Explain to Babs—Miss Ganning for me, will you? We were going over to town. But I see it's foolish. By the way, you might give me a few pointers on this game later. Good ones, I mean. But first, teach Wilfrid how not to play it, will you?"

"That," said Roy, "is the softest assignment I ever had. But see here, no tricks tonight! Sleep is important."
"If anybody sees me at 8:30," said Ron, almost gaily, "they'll think I'm Rip Van Winkle." And he departed with satisfying speed.

Roy waited till he was out of sight. Then he walked slowly toward the garage, well pleased with himself. Things were going nicely. Now if only... He paused in his ruminations. Babs Ganning slipped out of the garage door. She smiled up at him.

Roy gazed at her and his heart went up and down like a pump handle. "Well, did I come through?"
"Like a true Herring. Now are you coming to town with me?"
"I wish," said Roy fervently, "somebody would try to stop me."

"Dear—er—that is, Barbara, are you alone?"

entertain what he had come to look upon as perpetual guests, the twins, Ronald and Wilfrid Peyton. And, with the even four of them left, it seemed as if bridge or some lesser form of amusement would be in full swing presently.

Not so, however. Shortly after J. Pemberton's withdrawal an amazing phenomenon occurred. Mr. Wilfrid Peyton, setting down his coffee cup and shifting from one foot to the other, begged to be excused. He had, he said, a slight headache. He thought, perhaps, that he would be better off in bed. Whereupon he slunk from the room, leveling a vindictive and exultant glance at his brother as he went.

Phenomenon number two took place several minutes after Wilfrid's departure.

"I'm sleepy," said Ron.
"Mrs. Ganning started."
"Good heavens," she exclaimed. "What is the matter with you boys tonight?"

"Nothing," said Ron. "Er—that is, nothing, the matter with me. I'm just sleepy, that's all."
"Mrs. J. Pemberton Ganning was not the woman to brook shilly-shally and bubble-and-squeak."

Barbara shrugged. "Search me." "You don't suppose there was anything wrong with the food, do you?"

"Of course not. Those twins are dizzy, that's all."
"Their mother was a Rumford," said Mrs. Ganning thoughtfully. "Of course, one never heard of the Peytons. But... where are you going, Barbara?"

"Oh, just out," said Babs vaguely, hesitating in the doorway.

"Who do you think I am, the Duke of Wellington?"

"Well, of course, you may turn out to be Napoleon. It remains to be seen."
"Haven't I done pretty well already?"

"Passably. But I'm expecting greater things."
"But I ought to get a reward for what I've done to date. Think of it! I put the twins to bed."
"Quite an accomplishment. So you want—something on account?" Her lips were dangerously close.

"I not only want it, I've got to have it." He kissed her two seconds sooner than she expected.

"Like Robinson Crusoe before Friday came. The other members of the troupe are indisposed."
"Ah!"
"They stood me up in favor of going to bed. Are you having pity tonight on a poor lonely girl?"
"Well, I don't know. I really ought to see Haskerville. Family obligations, you know. But I might give you a few minutes."
"Sweet of you. Where shall we go?"
"Oh, let's wander over your governor's—ahem—father's estate. I want to talk to you about things."
"She took his arm and fell into step by his side. She radiated, he thought, a sweetness that should have made the flowers pack up and go bloom elsewhere. "I'm glad you're tall," he said. "Like 'em tall!"
"Uh-huh! And dark-haired."
"Not a blond hound?"
"Nope. Can't see 'em with a telescope. But I like violet eyes."
"How thrilling! Tell me about her."

HE told her. He was still telling her an hour later when they returned to the veranda and found a darkened corner. He would probably have continued his theme until the looming moon slunk out of the sky had she not injected a question.

"How are you getting on with your—deconstructive operations?" she asked.

"Pretty well," Roy said. "But I'm fighting a tough enemy. Time." "You'd better think fast, Captain Flagg."
"I'll break it up," said Roy savagely. "If I have to knock those two chumps on the head."
"Desperado."
"And how! Look here, Babs, this match mustn't be."
"Well, it's up to you. You've got a whole day and a night. Why, the battle of Waterloo took less than eight hours."
"Who do you think I am, the Duke of Wellington?"

"Well, of course, you may turn out to be Napoleon. It remains to be seen."
"Haven't I done pretty well already?"

"Passably. But I'm expecting greater things."

WHY MOTHERS GAVE GRAY

Held by Police in Murder Case

Twenty-five-year-old Stuart Nighwander, above, of Buffalo, N. Y., who came to Fort Erie, Ont., hospital with slashes on arm, is being questioned by police in murder of 13-year-old Henry Dodo, whose nude body was found trussed on outskirts of Fort Erie.

Black Hills Pioneer Relates Of Wild Bill Hickok's Demise

United Press Staff Correspondent COALINGA, Cal.—John Taylor, pioneer resident of the Black Hills who recalls the shooting of Wild Bill Hickok, famous two-gun frontier marshal, as clearly as if it had happened yesterday, is thinking of settling down now that he has reached the age of 88.

Still an active real estate operator, Taylor has a clear memory of the historic events in which he took part during a lifetime spent in frontier settlements. His friends say he can dive from the high springboard as well as the average youth of 20.

The most interesting of his many stories is the tale of the shooting of Wild Bill Hickok, whose feats are part of the Wild West of tradition and fiction, in Leadville, S. D.

While Hickok sat in a saloon playing poker, and Taylor stood talking to his friend, Tim Brady, on a nearby street corner, Jack McCall, a miner, entered the bar and shot Wild Bill. The two men had quarreled over a gambling debt.

A moment later McCall, gun in hand, came running down the street, to hitch his horse was fastened to a hitching post only a few feet from Taylor and Brady. A loose cinch and a slipping saddle prevented him from getting on the animal.

pursuit, McCall ran on down the street. His pursuers cornered him in a grocery in the next block, and for want of a jail, held him prisoner there until his trial the next day.

Taylor said he and others placed the body of Hickok on a door and carried it away for burial. The next day Taylor sat in the rude log theater while McCall was tried by a jury of miners without benefit of a judge. The miner was acquitted when the jury could not agree, but taken into custody a month later, he was tried and sentenced to death by a judge in Yankton.

Taylor's first contact with Calamity Jane, famous frontier dance hall hostess who later became his close friend, was in a Custer City bath house. He was in a tub in one room while Jane and a woman companion were bathing in an adjoining compartment. Through the thin wood partition, he said, floated some of the most colorful profanity he had ever heard.

Taylor was in Philadelphia when he joined a band of adventurous men who were among the first to enter the Black Hills territory.

A Man With a Great Opportunity

Text: I Kings 11:26-31, 37-40

BY WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

WE have seen how, despite the splendor of Solomon's reign and the glory of his building projects (especially the Temple), the people felt the burden of maintaining all this magnificence. Here and there were indications of revolt, that never broke out effectively, however, until under Rehoboam, Solomon's son.

Much of this discontent seems to have found its center in Jeroboam, the son of Nebat, a servant of Solomon, who turned against his master. Jeroboam is called "a mighty man of valor." It is recorded that he was industrious and evidently ambitious.

Solomon apparently trusted him and gave him large responsibility. From what occurred later on, it would seem that Jeroboam was not moved entirely by the motive of righting the wrongs, but that he had an ambitious and ulterior motive in trying to lead a revolt against Solomon.

WHEN the prophet Ahijah found Jeroboam in a field and tore a new garment into 12 pieces, giving 10 pieces to him, he prophesied that Jeroboam would rule over 10 of the 12 tribes of Israel. The prophecy so fitted in with Jeroboam's schemes of ambition that he became active in his opposition to Solomon, with the result that he had to take refuge in Egypt, for Solomon sought to kill him.

Here in Egypt Jeroboam hid his time, but we shall see him in a later lesson returning to Palestine when Rehoboam became king and taking an active part in the expressions of discontent that led to active rebellion and the overthrow of Rehoboam, with the division of Israel into the Northern and Southern Kingdoms.

There was a man with great opportunity, a commoner with kingly power and greatness in his grasp, whose personal ambitions coincided with great need in the kingdom for a leader to give the people justice and establish a common welfare.

Jeroboam might have become even a greater man than Solomon, but Jeroboam loved power too much and justice too little, and we shall see how he also failed in the day of his opportunity.

These lessons emphasize the human elements that in some form or other have been present in all history, and that are not absent even from an American democracy where we have no kings. Here in our own history we have seen men who have served their masters with treachery in their hearts, and who have professed to become leaders of popular causes where the chief concern has been for their own aggrandizement and power.

Here also innumerable men in the ranks have had great opportunity for greatness, but it is the exceptional ones who have risen above their love of power and the schemes of personal ambition to find the real greatness in identification of their aspirations with the common cause and with the true service of the people.

BRUCE CATTON IN WASHINGTON

WASHINGTON—The feed-stamp experiment is slowly picking up speed.

Originally it was to be a six-city experiment. Now, with the plan in operation in Rochester and Dayton and due to open next in Seattle, the Department of Agriculture people have stopped talking about six cities. Instead they're saying "several" cities, probably will keep on going from one city to another without stopping at six.

Significance of this is that it could foreshadow quite a change in approach. Under the first plan, results in the six "guinea pig" cities were to have been carefully weighed and tested before the thing was carried any farther. Officially, the weighing and testing are still in the cards; but by proceeding gradually, without any limitation on the number of experimental cities, the line between purely experimental work and full-speed-ahead might be awfully hard to see.

Incidentally, you can look for a new wrinkle in the game soon. The orange stamps (which clients must pay cash for) may be dropped entirely in one or more cities, and only the free blue ones used. Theory has been that orange stamps were needed to make sure that the relief clients didn't simply fill up on the free "surplus" commodities, and divert their ordinary food expenditures into other channels. By doing without the orange stamps in certain cities, results there could be checked against the results where the orange stamps are being used—and thus the department could get a pretty good line on the extent to which the whole scheme actually does increase food consumption.

Private talk among navy men here is to the effect that the loss of the British submarine Thetis may be another sacrifice to traditional British conservatism.

No one offers any criticism of the Wheeler-Lea bill (which stands a good chance of passage) would put them under the Interstate Commerce Commission, and their rate advantage over the railroads would probably vanish. They hope that if the Bland bill gets through first, the ICC menace may disappear around the bend.

Difference between investigating Communists and investigating Fascists is explained by a member of the Dies committee: It's easy to find plenty of ex-Communists who will come in and tell all the dirt—but so far the committee hasn't been able to dig up one ex-member of one of the shirt organizations who will volunteer to give away secrets. The committee has no idea why this is so but does know it works out that way.
