Another Battle to Win With the Help of War Bonds

There was a time when they thought they'd never make it over the miles that stretched painfully between them and home—these men who are fighting their way back to health at Halloran General Hospital in New York. They had other fights on their hands just a few months ago—the Japs on one side of the world and the Germans on the other. Somehow, they were marked with an enemy slug and got knocked out. They've a long way to go yet—a lot of them—facing physical handicaps that may not be overcome in a lifetime. They don't talk much about what they've been through. This Was The South Pasture

War sure changes things fast. Long as I can remember this was the Boss' south pasture—and now look. Almost overnight, instead of cattle, windmills and barbed wire, there are roads and barracks and soldiers as far as you can see.

All over Texas thousands of acres of quiet grasslands have been converted into military camps. Under the capable direction of Army engineers, civilian contractors have rushed to completion the flying fields, army training centers, rifle ranges and navy bases where thousands of our fighting men are being trained.

Essential to the very existence of these military establishments are the streets and highways that form the transportation system within and between them. Petroleum asphalt supplied by Humble has been used for constructing many miles of these strategic roads. Economical, serviceable, and easy to apply, Humble Asphalt is serving in war, as it did in peace, to make all-weather highways, streets, and air field landing strip- a reality in quick time.

Road asphalt is but one of the long list of Humble petroleum products that are in the fight on the battle front and the home front. High-octane aviation gasoline, Toluene for TNT, special fuels and lubricants for the machines of war and industry-all come from the same refineries, which for years have supplied you with Esso and Humble gasoline, Esso, 997, and Velvet Motor Oil for your car, your truck, and your farm and industrial machinery,
